The three-year-old child of Anthony Cutler, of Vineland, had one arm crushed in a gate Monday, on which companions were swinging. The four-year-old son of A. R. Dodge fell while at play and fractured the right jawbone.

Five chairs found in the possession of Edward Parker, colored, by the Camden police, were identified Monday by Rev. M. B. Headley as having been stolen from the African Union M. P. church, and Parker was sent to jail for three months in police court.

TALKS ON ILLUMINATION

William C. Hubbard Lectures on Natural and Artificial Light.

BEFORE MEN'S ASSOCIATION.

He Dwells on the Proper Care of the Eyes—Describes Some Modern Inventions for Lighting by Means of Electricity.

"Light and Illumination" was the subject of an interesting lecture given before the Men's Association of the Baptist church last night, by William C. Hubbard, of this city. He is the general agent for the Cooper Hewitt Company, of New York, and has made an exhaustive study of the subject. He said he based his remarks on the text, "And God said, let there be light, and there was light." Continuing Mr. Hubbard said in part:

"This command," said Mr. Hubbard, "was spoken in the beginning," when all was seemingly chaotic and nebulous, and whether that was 6,000 or 6,000,000 years ago we know not, but we do know that light was then first created for our solar system and that radiant energy has existed since. On that first day or period, God divided the light from the darkness calling the light day and the darkness night and man has been so accustomed to light since that he takes this great blessing for granted, the same as he does air, earth and water.

"Light is described as a phenomenon of wave motion, independent of the sense organ which betrays its existence to us, or more simply, light is the thing we recognize by the sense of sight. Light is radiant energy transmitted through the air and either in wave lengths of from 1-33000 of an inch for red to 1-65000 of an inch for violet light. A beam of light travels through limitless space at the rate of 187,000 miles per second, namely-a distance equal to over seven times the circumference of the earth, during the swinging of a pendulum.

"But light is not illumination. We can have the sensation of vision without seeing any object, but we cannot see an object without the agency of light. The sensation of vision is the process of seeing things.

"Good illumination involves three essential points—the right quality of light, the right quantity of light and the right use of light. The difference between light and illumination is the difference between cause and effect and illumination may therefore be defined as utilized light. The incandescent type of light has opened vast fields because of its safety and ease of control. The Welsbach has introduced economy heretofore unknown; the commercial production of calcium carbide makes the generating of acelytene the most highly luminous of gases, simple and inexpensive in quantity.

"The proper care of the eyes necessitates some knowledge of the manner in which they perform their work. Americans have been charged with caring as little for their eyes as they do for their stomachs. The increasing use of eyeglasses is convincing evidence of the careless use of eyes. The eye is the counterpart of the photographic camera in its general structure and operation, though, as we shall see not as accurate in its operation as the finer made lenses. Treat your eyes as you would your photographic plates and you will fulfill all requirements for their proper care. Three dont's—don't under expose, don't over expose and don't let the light shine into the lens. Keep the light source out of the direct range of vision.

"The new light sources are nearly all excessively intense. The familiar incandescent lamp for example has a loop of fine carbon wire, which can be seen only by close scrutiny, yet this filament becomes intensely bright by the passage of current and gives out sixteen or more candles. Notwithstanding the greater convenience, cleanliness and heat of the electric lamp, many cling to the oil lamp for reading and close application. They say that the lamp light is easier on the eyes. As a matter of fact the light itself from an oil lamp, gas flame or incandescent electric lamp are practically the same. The reason that a light from an oil lamp or gas flame is easier on the eyes is that for an equal quantity or volume of light the flame source is not nearly so bright or intense, therefore when the eye encounters the light direct it does not receive such a strain.

"It may be stated as a fact in artificial lighting that most modern light sources are too bright to be used uncovered where light is to be used for careful vision. They should be enclosed in some kind of globe, which will diffuse the light or placed so that the eyes cannot see the source of light.

"Let us glance briefly at artificial light sources. The fagot is probably the earliest known and longest used. The candle and vegetable and animal oil lamps were used in Bible times—mineral oil and coal gas are modern, while electric lamps have not been used commercially over twenty-three years. Considering only the electric, the illuminants may be divided as arc, vacuum, vapor and non-vacuum lights; or point sources, line sources and surface sources. The arc lamps are divided into three general kinds—carbon arcs, both open and inclosed or long burning flaming arcs in which the carbons are impregnated with metallic salts, rendering their highly luminous and burning about one inch of carbon per hour and metallic arcs, which burn arc electrode of Titanium oxide, lasting about 100 hours—the light being better quality than either of the other two.

"The Tungsten is the last of the live sources of light. Its filament is the metal tungsten—a rather rare material, which is suspended in loops different in manner than either the carbon or tantalum lamps. On the purity of the metal depends the quality of the light given. The total output of the incandescent lamps noted is over fifty million per year, a million a week on the average."

In conclusion Mr. Hubbard spoke at some length regarding the mercury light, now produced in colors and gave an interesting description of its many uses. An informal discussion of the subject and a social time followed.

JACOB KELLER DIES; LIVED LONG IN BOROUGH

Jacob Keller, one of the oldest residents of the borough, died Sunday morning at the home of his son, Charles Keller, on Harrison avenue. He had been in poor health for several years, suffering with kidney trouble, but not until Friday was he confined to his bed.

Mr. Keller was seventy years old and had lived in the borough forty years. He was a clothing cutter by trade, but had been in retirement during the last fifteen years, living quietly among his children. Three sons and one daughter survive him. They are Herman, Charles and Frank Keller, and Mrs. George Bremmer, all of the borough.

CONGREGATION GIVES $800 TO CLEAR CHURCH DEBTS

A generous response to the pastor's appeal for contributions resulted in $800 being raised at the First M. E. church Sunday, that sum being needed to clear up the debts for the conference year just closed.

Rev. Dr. McCrea explained to the congregation at the morning service the condition of the church treasury and asked for donations. They came in liberal numbers and sins, but it was still $87 short of the required amount when another appeal was made at the night services. The sum was raised in but very few minutes and now the church begins the new quarter entirely free from debt.

STYLOGRAPHIC PEN INVENTOR IS DEAD.

George Fletched Hawkes, widely known both in New York city and in northern New Jersey as a manufacturing jeweler, died Sunday at his home in Elizabeth. He was 77 years old.

Mr. Hawkes was born in Boston, lived in Jersey City several years ago, but had made his home in Elizabeth for twenty-seven years. Up to two years ago he conducted an establishment for the manufacture of gold pens at 13 John street, New York, and before that on Nassau street. He was the inventor of the stylographic fountain pen, and several of his inventions have been adopted by the Waterman Company. He was awarded prizes at the Philadelphia Centennial in 1876.

About two years ago Mr. Hawkes sustained a paralytic stroke, and since that time his health had failed, although he was fairly active up to a short time ago. He was associated with the Elizabeth Enamel Cloth Company, and was connected with various fraternal organizations.

DRUNKEN PRISONER IS SEIZED WITH FITS.

Some liquor which Thomas Trotter took on while being entertained by some friends Saturday night drove him into a series of fits in a police court cell after his arrest for refusing to go home, when told to do so by Chief Kiely on Front street, he acted so violently in his iron cage that Dr. Lufburrow was summoned by the police to calm him down. The police say he had about twenty fits in rapid succession at shortly after midnight.

Trotter appealed to Chief Kiely late in the evening with the request that he arrest a man who had struck him in a near-by saloon. The chief observed that he was intoxicated and urged him to go home and forget his grievance. He became excited and his arrest followed. At his hearing before City Judge Runyon at session of court Monday, Trotter was truly penitent and told of a job he had at Asbury Park. He has only been sober since July and this is the first time he has fallen off the water wagon since he was arrested two years ago. The Judge heard his appeal for "one more chance" with favor and suspended sentence on condition that he leave town and get on his new job.

SERMON ON "BEING GOOD"

Rev. S. C. Kemble Tells Monroe Avenue Congregation That It Pays.

HONESTY IS BEST POLICY.

If It Did Not Cost to Be Good, a Rascal Would Be Honest, He Says.

In answering the question "Does it always pay to be good?" Rev. Charles S. Kemble at the Monroe Avenue church Sunday, took the following text, from Hebrew xi-6, "For he that cometh to God must believe that he is, and that he is a rewarder of them that diligently seek him."

Referring to the deep seated conviction voiced by Cato, "If there's a God above us, he must delight in virtue, and that which he delights in must be happy," most men have an uneasy feeling that somehow God does not make his existence as plain as he might.

"He hides himself, so wondorously as though there were no God. He is least seen when all the foes of men are most abroad."

Many secretly sympathize with Ingersoll's bold challenge, "If there were a God he could have written on every blade of grass, on every leaf, on every tree where all might read it unmistakably 'There is a God.'" But a moment's thought will convince us of the futurity of all such demands for a God so manifest that we could walk by sight and not by faith. If God's existence were just as obvious as that of the sun in the heavens belief in him would have just as much moral value as belief in the sun; bad men and good would see him with equal clearness. Now perception of him is just in proportion to purity of heart. It is equally true of the effort of intellectual theists to demonstrate the existence of God. It cannot be demonstrated as incontrovertibly as that the angle of a triangle are equal to two right angles. If it could be so demonstrated its acceptance would have the same moral value on the perception of the adequacy of any other geometrical demonstration.

So, "he that cometh to God must believe that he is and that he is a rewarder of them that diligently serve him."

If God's hand was so clearly manifest in giving property to every one who served him that none could question the wordly expediency of serving him the reproach of Satan would be more universal. "Does Job serve God for naught?" Or put in our modern garb—

"It's easy to be righteous when the profit comes that way:
It's easy to have virtues if the virtues only pay.
But the saints are few in number who go on through thick and thin.
Being righteous when, unnoticed, they might make it pay to sin."

Which is being interpreted, that men will not serve God unless it pays, that men follow Christ only for the sake of the loaves and the fishes.

The story of Job was written to disprove that accusation. The losses endured by many a good man through his very virtues are allowed for the same reason as Job's trials that honesty may be tested to see if God through purely selfish motives. "Honesty is the best policy," but if it never cost anything to be honest the most unscrupulous rascal would also be honest from policy. It costs something to be honest that honesty may be shown to be not a mere policy but a principle.

PROCEEDINGS IRREGULAR; HAURAND'S LAWYER WINS.

An opinion handed down by Judge Parker, of the Supreme Court, reverses the Elizabeth district court in the case of Carrie L. Schorb and Josephine A. Mason against Henry Haurand. The case has to do with proceedings started by the two women against Haurand to compel him to vacate the East Front street building now occupied by E. C. Westcott, in 1907.

Action for unlawful detainer of the property was begun at Elizabeth, but after judgment was given, Francis J. Blatz, as Haurand's attorney, took the case to the Supreme Court on certiorari, requesting that the judgment be set aside as irregular, claiming that the notice served on Haurand was deficient. He contended that ejectment proceedings should have been instituted by the women, who are the joint owners of the property. The claim that Haurand was holding possession unlawfully was denied.

Meiosh and Morten, of Jersey City, represented the plaintiffs.

Explanatory.

The great ocean liner, was limping into port.

"You see," lamely explained the captain, "the injury is in the ship's forefoot. It got on the wrong tack."

Scowling at the reporters who had come on board from the tug, he nervously paced the bridge, after the manner of all great captains.—Chicago Tribune.

REV. HOWARD SUBSTITUTED FOR FULTZ AT Y.M.C.A.

David L. Fultz, the former baseball star and hero of the football field, did not appear Sunday afternoon to address the Y. M. C. A. men's meeting, thus disappointing a large audience of expectant young men. A letter received this morning from him explained that a death had occurred in the family. The communication had been delayed by the mails.

There was sufficient consolation, however, in a speech by L. R. Howard, pastor of Hope chapel, who obligingly consented to talk in the noted athlete's stead. Miss Etta Raybert sang several solos.

Rev. Mr. Howard declared that no man is really his own master, it matters not how influential or powerful he might be in financial, political or other circles. Business interest would direct his course and demand his several vocations; his time would not be his own and every man was virtually a slave. Likewise, a man was not master of his own character, being subservient to environment.

Then there were other things having a tendency to enslave a man, such as prejudice, pride and the opinions of others. The speaker declared that to accept Christ as the real master and to become subservient to His wishes, following Him as a leader, would make the battles of life easier and temptations would be more easily overcome.

INSPECTED SUGGESTED SEWAGE PLANT SITES

Mayor Samuel Townsend, W. J. Butterfield and Charles W. McCutchen, of North Plainfield; Councilman F. E. Mygatt and Street Commissioner A. J. Gavett, of this city, and Mayor Harry Swackhamer, of Dunellen, took a trip Sunday afternoon to the western part of North Plainfield to inspect the property in that vicinity considered available for sewage disposal purposes.

Three farms were visited, the one owned by Kraemer, the Sovolack farm at Sebring's mills and the Porter farm, which is just over the line in Bridgewater township. Each of these tracts has been considered desirable for a sewage disposal plant and it was with the idea of deciding upon the best situation that the trip was arranged.

None of the members of the party would talk about the matter today. It is known, however, that the borough and city officials believe that the Sebring vicinity would make an ideal location for sewage beds. It is said that Mayor Swackhamer, of Dunellen, has changed his original views considerably. The plan as now outlined is to also include Scotch Plains and Fanwood, making five municipalities that would bear the cost of installing the system and expense of maintenance, estimated to be about $250,000.

A conference of the representatives of the five towns will be held soon to further discuss the proposition.

It is said that the North Plainfield township committee will take no action regarding the proposed installation of a plant in that territory until after the township voters have expressed their views at the polls. There appears to be strong objection in the western end of the township to the scheme. The owner of the Kraemer farm is among those who are making an objection. He now claims that had he known of the purpose for which an option was obtained to buy his land he would not have given it.

MAKES THINGS LIVELY FOR TIME ON PARK AVENUE.

In the course of a "booze fight" which landed him in a police court cell after he had tried to wreck a candy store and a lunch wagon, Charles Morton, who came to town from Westfield Saturday night, took occasion to mix a cock-tail in a local drug store late Saturday night. He wandered into the store, and taking a fancy to the mixtures there, ordered "half a glass of selzer." When it came, he pulled a flask from his hip pocket and started to make a cocktail. He was ejected.

Morton is a "village out-up" and as he was "out for a night of it," he went to the Park avenue candy store and practised fancy rights and lefts on piles of candy on the counter. Again rebuffed, he went to a lunch wagon near-by and sought to entertain himself in the kitchen end thereof.

Patrolman Morris Higgins led him to headquarters, and Monday he was punished by a fine of $5.

Sunday-School Conference.

Many Plainfielders attended the conference of the Elizabeth branch of the New Jersey Sunday-school Association of the Episcopal church held in Trinity church parish house, Elizabeth, Saturday afternoon. The whole conference was given up to a study of Sunday-school Work. Rev. Henry Hale Sleeper, pastor of Grace church, Elizabeth, made an address.

RACING HAY CARTERS TELL JUST HOW IT WAS

Things looked pretty black for John Lenk, Arthur Brokaw and John Copley, three hay carters haled before City Judge Runyon at the city court Monday, when Harold Hansen, who swore out complaints against them about a week ago for colliding with his rig on West Front street, took the witness stand and told how the three, driving loads of hay, swept down on his light rig at top speed and wreck his wagon. According to Hansen's story the three were all hilariously drunk" and were tearing along the road, side by side, leaving him no space to pass. The sight of the "chariot race of the hay carters," when the three wheeling hay mows swept along the highway, gave Hansen's horse a severe nervous shock and it backed around collided with one of the carts, fell and smashed the shafts. Hansen jumped and was uninjured. He said that none of the trio stopped to help him.

But then the hay carters told their story. It developed that the three were on their way from North Branch, and that their wagons were heavily loaded. Cooley said he had a 4,800 pound load on his wagon. But the men swore they were not "loaded." Each told of his past performances in a way that made it certain that all were walking the straight and narrow way past all booze shops. They said all three wagons were going slowly, for the horses were "dead tired." The wind was blowing heavily, and as Cooley's load had shifted, they were keeping on the lee side of the road. The hay blew in front of the drivers and they could not see far ahead. They stopped as quickly as possible, seeing that Hansen's horse was scared. And then, after the accident, they said that Hansen had sworn at them, so they refused to stay and help him.

After each side had told the story of the accident, Hansen started his rebuttal, and a three-to-one vocal argument started under His Honor's nose which kept the court-room air vibrating until Judge Runyon found opportunity to announce that the case would be adjourned until a witness which Hansen had mentioned could be brought to court.

TWO WHEELMEN RACE HILLY ROAD ON WAGER.

An argument between two bicyclists Saturday afternoon was settled by the disputants mounting their wheels and grinding out eleven miles over the hilly undulating roads. At the end of the race, George Simon, who made a good showing in the road races last year, was obliged to acknowledged the corn, for this once, anyway.

Mayor Townsend, E. S. Burd, who is in training for the coming season's racing and expects to always finish well up in front. He covered the distance in 33 minutes finishing something like a half mile ahead of his adversary. The race started at Somerset and Dunellen streets and extended to Warrenville and back to the starting point.

One spill was recorded, Simon having struck a rut on the outward trip, but he escaped with twisted handle bars and the loss of but little time. Burd generously dismounted when he saw his rival's plight and waited until he was again in the running.

Mrs. Mary E. Taylor Buried.

The funeral of Mrs. Mary E. Taylor, who was run over by a railroad train at Dunellen Friday, was held Monday afternoon in that borough. Services were conducted at the residence of her daughter, Mrs. Thomas Rafferty, the Rev. E. C. Dutcher officiating. Interment was made in South Plainfield cemetery. The pall bearers were Christopher Huff, George Huff, Andrew Love and Stillman Randolph.

—Mr. and Mrs. G. Elmer Volk, of Elmwood place, will soon remove to the borough.

Necessity Past.

Congress had been asked would it cease do something for the Delaware.

"Delaware," repeated the members, with a puzzled air, "what's that?"

"It's a river that Washington once crossed," explained an advanced representative of the people.

"Well, he got across all right, didn't he?" responded the inquirers. "What's the use of improving the river now?"—Philadelphia Ledger.

ICE PRICE NOT TO SOAR

Business Men Interested in Project That Will Mean no Scarcity of Commodity.

CONCERN'S CAPITAL IS $100,000.

If extensive plans now under consideration materialize, Plainfielders may be able to purchase ice this summer for thirty cents a hundred, while the wholesale price will be twenty-five cents a hundred. A company is now being formed and stock is being subscribed for by many business men and other residents of the city. John D. Lolzeaux, William R. Codington, John E. Dunn and Fred Endress are promoting the scheme and already $20,000 has been secured toward carrying out the project which will cost $100,000.

The plan is to issue and sell $50,000 worth of common stock and $50,000 worth of preferred stock. The proposition is to erect a modern hygeia ice plant on the Loizeaux property on Madison avenue, adjoining the railroad, formerly known as the Hetfield property. The capacity of the plant will be fifty tons a day and it is proposed to award the contract to F. W. Wolf, of New York, the system to be the latest and most approved.

In addition the company proposes to install large coal pockets and retail handling channels. This will be done after the ice plant is installed and put in running order. There will be a meeting of those interested in the project tonight when it is expected to definitely decide on plans. If the contract is awarded at once, Mr. Wolf agrees to erect the plant and have it in operation by June 1.

One of the attractive features of the proposition is that all stockholders will be given a discount of ten per cent. on their bills for ice and this will bring the cost within a very reasonable figure. The proposition has been received with great favor by all who have been interviewed on the subject and the promoters feel confident of success.

AGED WOMAN KILLED SAVING GRANDDAUGHTER

Mrs. Mary E. Taylor, who was killed by a railroad train Friday at Chestnut street crossing, Dunellen, by living up to the motto she saved that of her grandchild, the six year old daughter of Thomas Humble.

The woman, who is seventy years old, accompanied by the little girl, was picking up coal along the tracks of the Jersey Central, when a westbound fast train bore down upon them. Mrs. Taylor thrust the child out of the way but was herself caught and the entire train passed over her body. The horrified engineer put on the brakes and backed up to the spot, but Mrs. Taylor already arrived but life was extinct. The body was taken to Walter G. Runyon's undertaking establishment, and later identified. It had fallen between the rails and escaped being mangled.

It is believed no responsibility can be laid to the railroad company. The officials of the road ordered an investigation which was begun immediately.

The child which accompanied the aged woman had remained at a safe distance after being pushed out of the engine's path by the grandmother, and thus escaped uninjured.

Funeral services were held Monday. She leaves two daughters and a son, Mrs. Christopher Huff, Mrs. Frank Randolph and Thomas Humble.

BOYS ARE GUESTS AT Y. M. C. A. BANQUET

Forty boys of the Y. M. C. A. were given a banquet Thursday in the association parlors by the boys' work committee of the Ladies' Auxiliary. The boys so honored were those who had brought in new members since December, together with the new ones.

The committee in charge of the banquet comprised Mrs. Nelson Y. Hull, chairman; Mrs. C. E. Steiner, Mrs. M. E. McGrath, Mrs. G. W. Rittenhouse, Mrs. J. M. Lewis and Miss Swain.

Rev. George A. Warner, of Holy Cross church, made a speech in which he impressed the young men with the importance of fair play in sports, and denounced petty grafting practiced by some boys who take an interest in an organization only at times when they can get something out of it and without putting anything in.

Herbert E. Parker, secretary of the Y. M. C. A., made a talk on the subject of character, explaining the type of boy the association is trying to cultivate. It's aim being to inspire manliness and self reliance.

Addresses were also made by Charles B. Batcheler, boy's work director, and George L. Listman, physical director. W. Rankin entertained the youthful guests with feats of magic and sleight of hand tricks.

NEGROES SHOULD NOT BE ALLOWED FRANCHISE

That the Constitutional amendment, enacted just after the Civil War was closed, was an almost fatal mistake so far as popular and good government is concerned, was the point made by Frank Bergen, chief counsel to the Ft. S. C., at the Friendly Sons of St. Patrick dinner.

"The Fifteenth Amendment was a mistake," said the speaker. "It gave the right of franchise to people who have not proved their claim to it. Our newly sealed President, whose double we have with us tonight in the person of General Collins in physical make-up, as well as horse sense, has stated that the Fifteenth Amendment should nullified if it is not abrogated. Lincoln gave his best efforts for the liberating of the negro, but he made a fatal mistake in that he did not intend to regard the colored man as his social equal. He stated that certain rights of the negro should be respected, but that he did not feel called upon to accept him in social intercourse. This is a big problem, but we are going to realize that the famous Fifteenth Amendment should never have been adopted."

Mr. Condict spoke on "Progress," in various fields of invention during the last decade and urging the desirability of progress in everything, especially in spiritual matters. He also spoke of the union with the church and pictured the ideal Christian life as the life to strive for and to make progress toward that goal.

Mr. Webster spoke in a similar vein, urging his hearers to live for things which go for permanent satisfaction, arguing that it was worth while to do that instead of enjoying one selfishly. Rev. Mr. Howard spoke upon the "Aspect of Life as a Fight," giving several practical illustrations. Mr. Travell talked about the experiences of a man who suffered failure many times before succeeding, urging the boys to stick to what they are doing provided it is right. The club now has a membership of forty with new ones being added each month.

DISTRICT COURT JUDGES PLAN AN ORGANIZATION

Judge William Newcorn, of the District court, this city, was toastmaster at an informal dinner given by a number of the judges of the District courts throughout the State at the Trenton House, Trenton, Thursday night. The object of the meeting and dinner was to discuss matters of legislation and other things pertaining to their office. Toasts were responded to by all of the judges present.

One of the objects of the gathering was to discuss plans for a permanent organization, there being none at present. The matter will be taken up more fully later on. The menu card was in the shape of a law book, laying down certain rules and regulations as to what a man should eat, and provided that the things mentioned in the book would be permitted on the date thereof. Judge G. W. Macpherson will appoint a committee to arrange details for organization.

REALTY CONCERN BUYS NEW BRUNSWICK PROPERTY

The Lebanon Milling and Producing Company, of which Ira L. La Rue, of this city, is president, has purchased a large business property on Baron street, New Brunswick, having a frontage of 40 feet and being 144 feet deep. Extensive improvements are planned and the property will be converted into two stores.

At present real estate is booming in New Brunswick because of the possibility of the passage of Senator Silzer's bill which would permit vessels of large tonnage to enter that place. The plan is to cut off the canal at the Albany street bridge, causing a deeper waterway to be made and the entrance of large vessels.

RUN A DEUTSCHE MARKET

EATABLES AT THE BOOTHS.

Dressed as Dutch Girls, Young Women Appease Appetites of the Hungry Crowd.

An old "Dutsche Market," not at Dem Haag nor at New Amsterdam, but at Trinity Dutch Reformed church Sunday-school room, attracted a goodly number of people Thursday. As a result the Young Women's Mission Band, under whose auspices it was conducted, realized a snug sum for missionary effort. That the transformation of the spacious room into a typical market scene was complete was guaranteed as the moment one stepped in the front door. Scattered about were the booths of various shapes and for various purposes. Behind these booths were the market people, not little fat and ruddy face maidens but bright eyed young women garbed as Dutch girls whose persuasive arguments induced the customers to part with their coin in exchange for good things to eat. Many dishes to be found on the average dining table in Holland were to be found here and there and were almost as varied as the American dishes.

On entering the market, the patron was given a dish and napkin, and was allowed to make his own selection as he passed from booth to booth, tables being provided where they could enjoy his repast. On these tables were neat menus artistically decorated by Miss Emma Ryno. It was a unique affair, well planned and skillfully managed. The entertainment committee consisted of Miss Mabel Wilson, chairman, and the Misses Etta Hayhurst, Lillian A. Force and Edna Dilts and Mrs. F. S. Cutter, Mrs. A. R. Cole, Mrs. George Mantz, Mrs. Lorenzo Townley, Mrs. Harry Cooke and Mrs. Cora Ryno. These were the booths and their managers:

Krewson; bread and butter—Mrs. H. C. Van Emburgh, Mrs. A. B. Davis; pie and cake—Mrs. Harry Cooke, Mrs. A. B. Cole; coffee—Mrs. T. E. Woodruff, Miss Jessie Hoxsie, Miss Cecelia Anderson; ice cream—Miss Mabel Wilson, Miss Charlotte Wilson. Miss Ethel Vail, William J. Trembath; candy—Mrs. F. S. TRINITY'S DUTCH ARMS HAS JOLLY GOOD TIME.

The Dutch Arms, the men's association of Trinity Reformed church, held an enjoyable and profitable business and social session in the lecture room of the church Friday night. It was decided at the business meeting to make the regular April gathering, Friday night, April 16, a "ladies' night" affair.

During the social part of the evening, the men were entertained with phonographic selections by H. V. Lough. Refreshments were of humorous and classic characters and pleased the members. Later refreshments were served. About seventy-five men were present and the meeting was one of the most successful since the club was organized.

Italian Mission Growing.

Interest in the Italian mission is increasing steadily and the members now want the place open every night. They are learning English rapidly and are very anxious to make progress in everything. At the meeting last night twenty Italians were present and arrangements are being made to hold a musical. The Sunday morning services are well attended and all enjoy the preaching of Rev. Antonio Mellno. Hymns are sung in Italian and English. Steps are now being taken to form a quartet to assist in the singing at the various meetings.

HERE IS A FRENCH DAINTY.

Chicken en Casserole Popular with Our Gallic Cousins.

Select a plump spring chicken; clean it and truss it as for roasting. Place in a casserole two tablespoonfuls butter, a carrot and an onion (both cut into slices), two bay leaves and a sprig of thyme. Set the casserole on top of the stove for about ten minutes or until the vegetables are lightly browned in the butter. Pour in then a pint of well seasoned consomme, cover the casserole closely, put it into the oven and braise the chicken for three-quarters of an hour. Ten minutes before the time is up, add two tablespoonfuls of sherry or Madeira and cover again. At the end of three-quarters of an hour drop into the gravy a dozen or more of small potato balls which have been cut from the raw potatoes with a Parisian cutter, and then brown, or saute in butter. At the same time, add an equal number of French champignons. Season gravy with pepper and salt and leave the cover off the casserole that the chicken may have a fine browning. Remove it from the oven, sprinkle finely minced parsley over chicken and send it to the table in the casserole.

COFFEE IS DISPLACING TEA.

Takes Place of Latter Beverage at Afternoon Functions.

The number of alluring coffee sets as Christmas presents point to the fact that this drink is becoming more fashionable than tea for the afternoon.

This is a German and a Dutch fashion, and a palatable one. Americans are coffee drinkers, and are quite willing to add another cup to their usual supply. Just how healthful it is is left for the doctors.

Certainly afternoon tea is as indigestible a thing as most people can drink. It takes off the appetite for dinner and creates as much nervousness as coffee.

The afternoon tea habit, however, has never gotten a strong hold upon any large class of people. Whether the afternoon coffee habit will must be left to the future.

To all men, and to the majority of women, it is a far more palatable and stimulating drink than five-o'clock tea.

At any rate girls are serving it in fashionable parlors, people at the restaurants are drinking it, and all sorts of ware is being made up into afternoon coffee sets.

The person who knows good coffee knows too much to make or serve it in anything except earthen or china ware. The metal coffee pot is injurious to the taste and should be avoided.

Doughnuts.

Required: One pound flour, dried and sifted, one tablespoonful of caster sugar, one saltspoonful of salt, half pint of hot milk, one ounce of butter, half an ounce of yeast, one egg, fat for frying.

Put the sifted flour into a basin, add to it the sugar and salt. Into another basin put the hot milk and butter. When the butter is dissolved and the milk only lukewarm add half an ounce of yeast. Make a hole in the flour, stir in the liquid by degrees, adding an egg, and beating the whole till the batter is quite smooth. Stand in a warm place to rise for an hour and a half. Heat some frying fat till it gives off a blue smoke, drop in a spoonful of dough and fry a light brown. Drain and scatter sugar over.

Frozen Tomato Salad.

From a can of tomatoes take all the large pieces of pulp, press them through a sieve and season highly with salt, pepper, a little tarragon vinegar and a few drops of onion juice. Put this mixture in the freezer as for an ice. Take out the dasher, work down well in the can, repack the freezer and put in the cellar for a couple of hours. Grate or chop fine some English walnuts. Serve the frozen tomato in a bed of lettuce leaves and sprinkle thickly with the walnuts. Serve with mayonnaise in a bowl.

Jellied Apples.

Peel and core firm, tart apples. Put them over the fire in just enough water to cover them, sprinkle them generously with white sugar. Cook slowly at the back of the fire until the apples are tender.

Take them out and arrange in a bowl. Bring the liquid left from them to a boil and add to it a tablespoonful of gelatine which has been soaked for half an hour in a very little cold water. When this is dissolved pour all over the apples.

Orange Cake.

Required: Three ounces of caster sugar, three ounces of butter, three well-beaten eggs, the grated rind of an orange, half a pound of flour, one teaspoonful of baking powder.

Cream the butter and sugar and then add the eggs. When thoroughly beaten, sift in the flour with the orange rind and baking powder. Beat well and then place in a greased tin and bake for an hour.

Cold water, a little ammonia and soap will take out machine grease

VETERINARIAN INSPECTS THE BOROUGH DOG

Dr. Lewis S. Pocock, veterinary surgeon, was appointed by Mayor Samuel Townsend Friday morning to inspect all of the dogs in the borough suspected of having been bitten by the rabid canine which was shot a few days ago following its sensational run through the streets.

Dr. Pocock will be able to recognize the symptoms associated with the approach of the disease on their first appearance, signs that to the layman would hardly be noticed. All dogs under suspicion are locked up by their owners and will be subjected to close watch for several weeks. No new cases have as yet been reported but the authorities are determined to forestall, if possible, the occurrence of such occurrence. Tuesday, which endangered the lives of several citizens and spread more or less consternation over both sides of the brook.

One of the first indications of a approaching hydrophobia in a chase of moods, the dog will become regardless; his eyes will appear bright and an unquenchable thirst will be followed by a swelling of the throat, which will develope to such an extent that the dog will be unable to drink water. This occurs during the latter stages and causes the animal to start on the inevitable rampage.

DR J. ACKERMAN COLES' GIFT TO OLD NASSAU

Dr. J. Ackerman Coles, of South Plains, has just announced an endowment for Princeton University, whereby Clio Hall, the sister organization to Whig Hall, which was founded as a literary and debating society by James Madison, President of the United States, is the beneficiary. His gift provides that the accumulated interest on $1,000, a sum of $160, shall be applied every four years for the purchase of a portrait bust of George Washington, to be cast in bronze at the Bartedienne foundry in France, from the model made from life by Jean Antoine Houdon in 1788.

The bust is to be given to the member of Clio Hall, or the Cliosophic Society as it is formally called, who in the opinion of the judges selected by the society shall after the delivery of a patriotic address, be judged most worthy of receiving the prize.

It is the expressed wish of the donor that one of the judges be the president of the university and that the contest be held in public. Both the Cliosophic Society and American Whig Society are secret organizations occupying two white marble buildings on the campus known as Whig and Clio Hall. Arrangements are under way for the first contest to be held shortly.

BANQUET FOR MISSIONARYS

A banquet was given in the parlors of the Third Presbyterian church, Westfield, Thursday night, in honor of Dr. William M. Schultz, who will go to China to do missionary work for the church. The dinner was held under the auspices of the forward movement committee of the church, and covers were laid for about one hundred and twenty-five. M. B. Dutcher acted as toastmaster. A brigade composed of about sixty boys who are members of the congregation gave a drill under the command of Colonel W. Lee Stryker.

Speeches were made by E. B. Sturgis, of Scranton, Pa., and Robert E. Speer. The former spoke on "The Busy Man's Place in the Mission Business," and the latter took as his subject, "What Are Foreign Missions Doing?" Other remarks were also made by Rev. Dr. E. B. Cobb, pastor of the Second Presbyterian church of Elizabeth, and Rev. Dr. William I. Stearns, the pastor of the Westfield church. The affair closed with benediction.

Since the church has been engaged in the work it has sent three representatives to the missionary field. They are: Rev. J. McCarrell Leiper, at Big Laurel, N. C.; Rev. P. S. Curtis, at Corea, Japan, and Miss Helen Snyder, at Anasco, Porto Rico.

COP DISCOVERS RED HOT STOVE AS FIRE BREAKS OUT.

While patroling his beat in the West End at about 9 o'clock Friday night, Patrolman Sedenquist saw that the stove in the Plainfield avenue grocery store of Councilman W. W. Wilson had burned to a red heat, and realizing the danger of fire, notified one of the clerks who lives in the neighborhood. As the two entered the store, a gross of matches stored there flammed up and officer and clerk had a lively time quenching the flames. There was no loss, and the fire was properly dampened for night before the men left the store.

SHE RECOVERS HER CHILD

Mrs. J. Martial, with Aid of Squire Hand, Gets Her Offspring Back.

SCENE AT GRANDMOTHER'S.

Justice of the Peace Hezekiah Hand played a prominent part in an elaborately worked up plot for the recovery of four-year-old Beulah Smalley, who was taken from the home of her paternal grandmother, Mrs. William Hoppock, of Scotch Plains, Thursday afternoon, by her mother, Mrs. Jennie Martial, of Somerset street. The foxy "Marrying Justice of Union County" was really responsible for the success of the plan, for he unassumingly displayed his official badge as court officer when Mrs. Hoppock and her seventeen-year-old son George, sought to rush past film from the room and take the little girl away from its mother. Mrs. Martial made a quick "getaway" down the stairs with her little daughter, who was but partly dressed, in her arms. The Judge placed himself squarely in the doorway of the room, where he had been engaging Mrs. Hoppock in conversation, and unusually reminded the two as they sought to push him aside, that any such action would be an assault. And mother and child are now really at home in Mrs. Martial's house on Somerset street.

Walter Smalley, who is Mrs. Martial's husband, is serving a three-year term in the Essex County jail for bigamy, for he left his local wife and family last September and married seventeen-year-old Kittie Eustis, of Westfield. He was sentenced by Judge VenEyck about two months ago. Business is said to have existed between the deserted wife and Mrs. Hoppock, her mother-in-law, since the Plainfield woman testified that she was the wife of Smalley, showing her marriage certificate at the trial which culminated in his commitment. There were three children, and the two younger ones, Beatrice and an infant son, have been living with their mother on Somerset street. Beulah was with her grandmother, at Mrs. Hoppock's home on Park avenue, Scotch Plains.

Since Smalley's commitment, Beulah's mother has made several attempts to get the child. On each occasion she was prevented from taking the little girl, and has recently been refused admittance to the house altogether. Yesterday, it is said, that for she has again assumed her maiden name, went to Judge Hand at the suggestion of her attorney, and the two worked up the plan for Beulah's recovery. They went to Mrs. Hoppock's apartments together yesterday afternoon.

At the suggestion of the Judge, Mrs. Martial "laid low," according to the story, while the shrewd justice, who is not known to Mrs. Hoppock, entered her apartments and demanded service on such enthralling subjects as the tariff, and Roosevelt's chances against the African okapi. It worked. Mrs. Martial soon found the little girl, who was playing about the rooms, and engaged her in conversation. At the psychological moment, the mother concluded to leave the house, and carried the child, who had been sitting on her lap, along with her.

It is said that Mrs. Hoppock and her son, George, who is a burly lad, made a dash for the doorway when they heard Mrs. Martial descending the stairs and missed little Beulah. The Judge, who was politely taking leave, managed to block most of the doorway, and when the two rushed at him, calmly "flashed" his badge, and started to quote Blackstone on assault.

"I got out all right myself," said the Judge, "when they found out who I was, and I guess it's a good thing to get the little girl back with her mother again. Her legal home, you understand, is with her mother anyway."

Sunday-school Elects Officers.

The Sunday-school of the First Presbyterian church elected these officers at the annual meeting Wednesday night: Superintendent, L. H. Gates; assistant, A. V. Searing, Jr.; second assistant, Mrs. Harry Williams; secretary, Russell Bond; assistant, Edgar George; treasurer, Jesse Lounsbury; superintendent primary department, Miss Ella Lounsbury; superintendent home department, Mrs. E. W. Poinier; pianist, Miss Clara Van Fleet. Freeman Shotwell tendered his resignation as treasurer after a service of fifteen years. It was with regret that he gave up the office. The school numbers 270 and 34 officers and teachers.

"No," said the fair but frigid maid, "I wouldn't marry any man on earth."

"That's all right," rejoined the practical youth. "My airship is anchored on the roof and a friend of mine who is minister will gladly tie the knot above the clouds."

And seeing that her bluff had been called there was nothing left for the fair maid to do but fall into his waiting arms.—Chicago News.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Prayer Meeting Topic For the Week Beginning March 23, 1909.

By REV. R. H. DOYLE.

The importance of reading the best books upon any subject in which we are interested need not be emphasized. The student of history takes great delight in poring over the standard works of history, and so it is with the student of literature, philosophy or any other subject on which information is to be found in books. What is true of other subjects should also be true of missions, both home and foreign. If we are deeply interested in missions we should read the greatest missionary books and biographies upon the subject. And if we are Christians and not interested in missions there is all the more reason for our reading such books, that missionary interest and zeal may be aroused in us. Every disciple of Christ should be interested in missions, and nothing will so readily tend to develop this interest as the reading of the best missionary literature.

The missionary literature of today is especially worth reading. There was a time when missionary periodicals and books were most uninteresting. They were about as dry as the bones in the vision of Ezekiel. But the dry bones have been revived, and there is no more interesting reading in the world today than the stories of missions and missionaries. Their pages contain wonderful events, stranger, indeed, than the best fiction. Nowhere can more interesting reading be found than in the accounts of Christ's disciples in their work of evangelising the world in accordance with His command. The life of John G. Paton among the cannibals of the New Hebrides can not be excelled in its thrilling incidents and for the miraculous account of the way in which God kept him and gave him power among these barbarous peoples. What is true of Paton's life story is true of many others. One has only to need feel in danger of ennui in reading such missionary biographies.

The benefits to be derived from reading missionary literature are also of importance. (1) Information. Ignorance is the cause of much missionary indifference. The reading of first class missionary literature will dispel this ignorance and with it the indifference. No one can read the life of William Carey or of Judson or of Henry Martyn, etc., without having the keenest interest in missions aroused in him. If he can, there is something he lacks as a disciple of Christ. (2) Inspiration. Missionary literature is conducive to great inspiration. It inspires us to increased interest in the advancement of Christ's kingdom and awakens in many hearts a strong desire to devote themselves to the life of the missionary. The reading of the life of David Brainerd by Jonathan Edwards led to many immediate instance that led one of England's greatest missionaries to go to the foreign field.

Missionary literature is popular today. Many books have been written upon it. The task of selection is hard and hence should select the very best. First among all stands the Acts of the Apostles. Among the best of the others are the biographies of Livingstone, Moffat, Paton, Martyn, Carey, Judson, John Elliot, David Brainerd, Marcus Whitman, "Beach's Geography of Missions," "Barnes' Missions Before Carey," "Thompson's Morrivian Missions," "Pierson's Miracle of Missions," "Presbyterian Foreign Missions," "Presbyterian Home Missions."

Let each Endeavorer strive to read at least one missionary book who has not done so. If this is done and something interesting of each book is told at this meeting, it will be instructive and inspiring.

BIBLE READINGS.

Isa. 61, 7; Nah. 1, 15; Matt. xxvii, 19, 20; Acts 1, 1-8; xiii, 1-3; xvi, 25-34; xvii, 10, 11; xix, 17-20; xxvi, 27; Rom. x, 12-15.

The First Hypnotic Stage.

A widow was lamenting to a friend the fact that her three sons had all gone to sea. She lived far from the coast, and her boys had never seen the ocean until they left home to become sailors. On the wall of her cottage hung a picture of a ship in a storm, with the sailors clinging to the rigging. Pointing to this picture, the visitor said, "That was what made your boys sailors." Children, as Tolstoy says, are in what psychians call "the first hypnotic stage"—that is, they are easily impressed. The picture on the wall had been a constant suggestion to the boys to become sailors. The influence of our surroundings at home on business is infinitely more potent in forming the character of our young people than all our moral axioms, our "don't" and our "do." In spite of apparent difference a careful analysis of our children's character will often reveal the fact that they are more or less faithful reflections of our own acts and thoughts and the environment in which the young people have grown up. It is the same with a Christian Endeavor society. Endeavorers copy the church and the pastor. They do it unconsciously. Hence one might almost formulate a law—thus, a going church, a going Young People's society—that is, if there is one, and there should be in every "going" church. A poor society ought to lead us to say, "The young people reflect the spiritual condition of the church" I have yet to see a vigorous church that cannot get good work out of a Young People's society. The church makes the society by an inevitable law. The relation of the two is worth pondering.—Ripple in Christian Endeavor World.

Communications, Etc.

From Muhlenberg Hospital., Plainfield, as follows:

February 9, 1909.

Mr. S. Rusling Ryno, Clerk of Board of Chosen Freeholders of Union County:

Dear Sir—Replying to your favor of February 1, which was presented at a meeting of the Board of Governors held last night, I beg to state that the by-law recently adopted, authorizing an increase in the number of governors of Muhlenberg Hospital, provides that the additional member shall be designated by your Board of Chosen Freeholders. This by-law was so framed for the express purpose of placing upon your Board of Governors a representative of your body who should be chosen by it. It would defeat our plan to secure your name if the appointment at this matter were the appointment to be made on our suggestion. Will you therefore kindly make your designation at your convenience and oblige

Yours very truly,
Board of Governors Muhlenberg Hospital.
By HOWARD W. BEEBE,
Secretary.

Freeholder Cladek moved that the communication be received and that the Director appoint a member from this board, as requested, which was so ordered. Director King thereupon designated Freeholder Harvey Doane, of Plainfield, to represent this board on the board of governors of Muhlenberg Hospital.

From the County Jail as follows:

Honororable Board of Chosen Freeholders, Union County, N. J.:

The grand inquest in and for the body of the county of Union for the term of January, 1909, having inspected in a body the Union county jail, begs leave to report that they have found same in most excellent sanitary condition, the prisoners well cared for and in the best of health, and they heartily commend Warden Dodd, Under Sheriff Dodd and Mrs. Dodd, superintendent of the women's jail, for the excellent aministration of their respective offices.

CALVIN B. ORCUTT,
Foreman.

On motion of Freeholder Jones, received and placed on file.

The following communication was read:

Plainfield, N. J., Feb. 27, 1909.

The Union County Board of Chosen Freeholders:

Gentlemen—The subcobmittee of the U. C. Co. which approached the Board of Freeholders some months since, with reference to the establishment of a workhouse or farm for short-time offenders in the jail, still feels the need as pressing as it formerly. Though no report has been received from the committee appointed by your body, it has been learned that the purchase of the farm is the main objection to it.

It is true that to change the present system would require an expenditure of time, effort and money. But is it not worth while to make a start? The present method of caring for these prisoners involves a large annual expense, and in no way nothing of the burden on the community in caring for their families. In the long run, might not the inauguration of the system prove a financial gain to the county? A farm would seem to have some decided advantages over a workhouse. It would be impossible for a man to come broken down physically, mentally and morally in a wholesome condition of life with air and sunlight, with the healthful exercise which the result of their labors might accrue to the benefit of the county, and where they might be better fitted to engage in honest and profitable work after their release.

The committee would ask you to give this important matter the same thought and consideration which is given to other matters in the county, more in evidence perhaps, but not more reserving of attention. Unless many would like to take the initiative in a movement which must come sooner or later throughout the State, for at the present time the county jail system neither publishes gradually of reforms, as is evidenced by the number of times short term offenders are returned to the jails.

I am very truly yours,
ELIZABETH TIFFANY,
Chairman.

MRS. DEXTER TIFFANY,
MRS. E. E. WILLIAMSON,
MRS. CHARLES E. RYDER,
REV. CHARLES L. COODEN,
Committee.

Freeholder Swain moved that the communication be referred to a special committee of five to report not later than the May meeting of this Board. The motion was adopted. The Director appointed as the said committee Freeholders Cady, Krouse, Crane, Cladek and Garrison.

Hoboken, N. J., Feb. 27, 1909.

Honorable Body of Chosen Freeholders:

Dear Sirs—About two years ago the Morris County Traction Company laid a second track past my place at Springfield, N. J., a distance of about 1,000 feet. In so doing they destroyed my entire driveway to the road. The paving people reflect the spiritual condition of the church" I have yet to see a vigorous church that cannot get good work out of a Young People's society. The church makes the society by an inevitable law. The relation of the two is worth pondering.—Ripple in Christian Endeaver World.

east of my house on my property there is a drop from the track to anywhere from 10 inches to 15 inches. This is a space between the track and what should be curb and should be filled in. There have been two serious accidents at this spot by means of the stream not being filled in, and in the summer season weeds grow up and it is impossible for vehicles to see the effect. This is on the county road, and it seems to me up to the Freeholders to have it remedied. An early reply would be appreciated.

Yours respectfully,
PERRY E. HALL,
Per R.

On motion of Freeholder Jones received and referred to the County Road Committee and County Attorney.

Elizabeth, N. J., Feb. 6, 1909.

Board of Freeholders:

Gentlemen—I herewith wish to announce my resignation as bridge tender, expiring March 1.

Respectfully yours,
FREDERICK LAUSCH.

On motion of Freeholder Krouse received and resignation accepted.

Reports of Committees.

By the Committee on Jail Inspection:

Elizabeth, N. J., March 1, 1909.

To the Board of Chosen Freeholders:

Gentlemen—Your Committee on Jail Inspection would respectfully report that it has inspected the jail, the jail yards and the warden's house, during the month of February, eighty prisoners were committed; eighty were confined in the jail March 1, sixty-one; fifteen were discharged.

All parts of the jail were found to be in a clean and sanitary condition, with the exception of the witness room in the jail leading thereto. The prisoners are now at work cleaning these rooms, calcimining the walls of the witness rooms and the jail proper. When this work is completed the rooms will be light, *cheerful and a more healthful at*mosphere will prevail.'

Your committee finds the jail for the month of February, 1909: Charles W. Dodd, salary, $125; Fanny Dodd, salary, $3; Charles J. Drake, salary, $60; Mrs. Frederick Krouse, salary, $60; R. T. Potts, provisions, $66.28; Hildebrandt Co., groceries, $79.62; Central Beef Co., meats and provisions, $97.80; J. D. Brokaw, fish, clams, etc., $17.16; F. Leppeny, shoes, $21.20; Henry J. Schmidt, drugs, $16.45; W. C. Dubois, milk, $7.72; W. Dodd, sundries, $6.45; A. E. Force, material (aprons) cotton, etc., $15.96; M. C. Van Arsdale, rubber boots, $9; total, $534.13.

On account of unforseen expense incurred for preparing the cells in the jail for padding, your committee requests that an extra appropriation be allowed for the work done.

Respectfully submitted,
JOSEPH PERRY,
J. HERVEY DOANE,
JOHN H. STEPHEN,
Committee.

Freeholder Jones moved that the report be received, filed and request granted, which was so ordered on roll call by a unanimous vote.

By Committee on Surrogate's Account:

To the Board of Chosen Freeholders of the County of Union:

Gentlemen—Your Committe on Surrogate's Account respectfully reports: That we have audited the books and vouchers of the Surrogate for the month of February, 1909, and *find them correct, and the net re*ceipts in that office amount have been turned over to the County Collector.

CHARLES A. SMITH,
WILLIAM H. GARRISON,
BRADFORD JONES,
Committee.

Dated March 3, 1909.

On mention of Freeholder Jones received and placed on file.

By special committee:

Elizabeth, N. J., Mar. 4, 1909.

To the Board of Chosen Freeholders of the County of Union:

The undersigned, the special committee to whom was referred the communication of Mrs. Emily H. Williamson under date of February 3, 1909, respecting the admission of patients to the Elizabeth General Hospital and matters of making appropriations by this board for hospital purposes, etc., beg to report:

1. That the reports of this board show that there was appropriated by this board for hospital purposes for the year 1908 the sum of $20,000, which was divided between the hospitals of Elizabeth and Plainfield—Elizabeth, $14,750, and Plainfield, $5,250—that the amount appropriated for the Elizabeth hospitals was divided as follows: Elizabeth General Hospital, $9,000; St. Elizabeth Hospital, $3,750; and Alexian Brothers' Hospital, $3,000.

2. We find that all these hospitals are also supported in addition to the sum appropriated by the county, by the respective cities in which said hospitals are located and by private subscription.

3. That a large proportion of the large proportion of the patients who receive treatment in the various hospitals *were indigent patients who are un*able to pay the expense of such treatment. That we have been able to learn, such patients who are treated at the various hospitals who are able to pay are required and do pay for such care.

4. Prior to the receipt of the communication of Mrs. Williamson respecting the difficulty of securing admission of indigent patients to the Elizabeth General Hospital occasional rumors have come to this board intimating and suggesting that there was difficulty in getting patients admitted in the Elizabeth General Hospital unless pay for their treatment was guaranteed from some source. Your committee therefore thought it wise to make further investigation regarding the matters in connection with it, and accordingly, this committee has had two sittings, to which all parties having cause for complaint and the hospital board were invited. These hearings were attended by many, and this committee was represented by the County Attorney and the hospital board by F. J. Faulks.

We have not gone into the form of a trial, but the statements of those who appeared before the board were taken without oath and a stenographic report of such report made, which tenographic report is hereto attached and made a part of this report.

We find that in cases coming from municipalities outside of the city of Elizabeth it has been the custom of the Elizabeth General Hospital to take up on a guarantee from the poormaster from the municipality wherein the indigent patient resides to pay for treatment given such indigent patient and that these poormasters were in the habit of paying for such treatment. We feel that this should not be. That the various hospital authorities should treat indigent patients without regard to what municipality they come from, if residing in this county, without being paid for by the poormaster of the municipality. We also found that the impression did exist that it was difficult to secure the admission of indigent patients into the Elizabeth General Hospital who could not afford to pay, but your committees hope that, thanks to Mrs. Williamson's letter which caused this investigation, this impression is now dispelled.

We believe that patients who are able to pay should be required to pay, but that the Board of Governors should be denied the benefit of the hospital for the reason that they are unable to pay.

Some of the complaints brought to the attention of this committee, upon investigation, were in the opinion of your committee, groundless. We believe that the Board of Governors of the Elizabeth General Hospital are gentlemen given to conducting the affairs of the institution in a praiseworthy and unbiassed manner and are doing noble work, and your committee is of the opinion that the cause for the impression relative to the rejection of indigent patients has occurred largely perhaps through overzealous employes at the hospital seeking to guard against imposition upon the hospital, pay interest on the part of the hospital authorities to refuse admission to the deserving poor.

Your committee feel that all patients claiming to be poor should be admitted upon application, and any investigation as to the financial condition of the patient should be made after such admission.

Your committe beg to recommend that inasmuch as the county of Union is appropriating a large sum of money annually for the support of the various hospitals throughout the county, with a probable increase in the near future, it would be advisable for the Director of this board to appoint a special committe of five members to visit the various hospitals to the support of which moneys are appropriated by this board, at various times as, in their opinion, may be required and to whom all complaints against hospitals should be made after the same investigate such complaint and report to this board; and further that it be understood between this board and the hospitals liable to receive this board contributes funds that patients residing outside of the City of Elizabeth, but *residents of this county, be admit*ted upon their application, being paid for by the overseers of the poor of the municipalities where such patients reside, unless the municipalities, in their discretion, deem to pay for their indigent patients, which they are allowed to do by law.

We further find that the sum appropriated by this board to hospitals is placed in the general fund by the hospital authorities for their support; that the cost of maintaining patients is not charged directly to this fund.

Your committe further recommend that a copy of this report be sent to Mrs. Emily H. Williamson with the thanks of the board for her interest in the county poor patients and to the Elizabeth General Hospital and other hospitals in the county to whom this county contributes funds.

HENRY KROUSE,
W. H. GARRISON,
N. R. LEAVITT,
Committee.

AS A PART OF SPEECH.

Only a preposition? Nay, a woman's more than that
When it comes to being a part of speech, she's on the job there pat;
For speech and every part of it is woman's natural field,
And we all know that any man, rest all assured, she'll yield;
She'd not give her perogative to dwindle in one word,
A little unimportant one, which last should not be heard.
Oh, no! Of all the foolish talk, that is a little peach,
To say a woman's only but the meanliest part of speech.

She is a noun—or just as good, for person, place or thing
Are other than doing work for her or something to her bring;
She is a pronoun, for she stands for each male noun to boss,
And when it comes to adjectives, what woman's at a loss?
An adverb, too, she qualifies what other men do not,
Or what he is or how he acts—but why the list pursue?
Except to say she is a verb—the cause for this pursuing.
'Tis very clear where woman is, there's always something doing.

A proposition? Only that? Yes, that and all the rest,
That man had ne'er monopoly of speech must be confessed,
Just see how silent he is now when urge on charge is heard;
He trembles 'fore a suffragette, afraid to say a word.
No, woman's not one part of speech, she's the whole blooming nine,
And man is but a rushlight snuffed when she's prepared to shine.
She is the Properest Noun of all whenever she set fit,
In fact, to put it in a word, poor woman—she is "It!"

TRUTHFULNESS AND THE CHILDREN.

One of the principal duties of a parent to a child is the duty of absolute truthfulness. No matter of mother, under whatever circumstances, can ever find justification for the slightest deviation from this rule. Indeed, is it beholden to parents to "set a watch before their mouths and to keep the doors of their lips."

To promise a believing little child something impossible of fulfillment is a sin. To exaggerate, state falsely, unduly emphasize, speak deliberately what is not true for whatever ends are faults that may destroy the *character of the child, wholly inno*cent as he is for deception.

Tell the absolute truth to your children, and the time will come when for your return you will see in their eyes that clear, steadfast look of honesty that will cause them to be prime places of worthy confidence and dependence and able to receive the confidence of their friends.

The entrance of the father into his child's life is a distant milestone, and it will be set in all probability about the time of his fifth birthday. To bring her little child to his father's heart is one of the deepest joys ever met with in all a woman's life, and many times, as she watches them together she thanks God that her son has for his father a noble and honorable man. Neither has she fear for his future. The love of his father will compass him about as time goes on and make him, even from himself.—The Doctor's Wife in Philadelphia Press.

FOR THE HOME DRESSMAKER.

To remodel last season's sleeves for now is not so difficult a task as it has frequently been in other fashion periods. Three new sleeves there are that have grown right out of last year's sleeves. If they were long and fairly full, cut a long leg o'-mutton model, open down the top of the outside arm; face both of the edges and decorate them with row of buttons; under this opening insert a long strip of tucked chiffon cloth to match the yoke.

Now, if it is necessary to piece your goods, do so without a fear, for you can conceal the piecing in the folds of a rather closely fitted monostrare sleeve. This is a very acceptable model right now. Many of them have a frill down the outside. When the material is scant the fullness is pushed part way up the arm, and the lower part of the sleeve is a close fitting lace cuff.

Again, another method is to use a tucked tulle lower sleeve, with a long sleeve cap falling over it to the elbow—the cap being a "left-over" from last year's gown, and either gathered at the outer edge with a band or galloon to finish it or bordered with a narrow crocheted basa fringe.

The Christian Endeavor Society of Wilson chapel, Watchung, has elected these officers for the year: President, Ephrain S. Ackor; vice-president, Ray W. Schrope; secretary, Miss Theresa E. Schmidt; treasurer, Miss Sadie Bodenheimer.

Thomas Niles, of New York, has been the guest of Mr. and Mrs. George T. Hughes, of Watchung.

John Herman, of Somerville, has been visiting his son, John Herman, Jr., of the borough.

A SWEET VOICE IS WELL WORTH CULTIVATING.

American girls are too often most lastly the subject of criticism abroad because of their shrill, rapid speech and laughterd, and it is a cause of regret, that, in finishing "finished" this matter is not considered more important to the parents and instructors of the young American girl.

The debutante who is not blessed with good looks and has no particular talents to attract attention can cover a multitude of sins by cultivating a clear low tone of voice, which is a balm to wounded ears in the midst of the usual drawing-room buzz.

There is such a lot of noise and clamor in the streets nowadays that one is continually trying to overvoice the racket, but a loud voice does not necessarily carry well, as is proved in using the telephone, and no girl should allow herself to talk or laugh loudly.

Now one need not go to the other extreme and cultivate an apparent drawl. That is worse than the screech.

There is nothing so irritating to the listener as a drawl which is not natural. The soft, Southern drawl we all love so well in our Southern cousins is not to be acquired in our harsher Northern accents, and it is a mistake to make an attempt to imitate it.

But one of the most important matters to force into the head of the young society woman is that she must talk neither too fast nor too slow, that she must not talk loud nor cut off her syllables.

THE NEWEST UMBRELLAS.

The correct size for women this year is twenty-six inches.

Colors are fashionable, and dark red, dark green, taupe and odd looking grays are the most popular.

To have a harmony, or an interesting contrast, with the gown, dull-looking old rose and catawba shades may be had, with long handles decorated in gold, silver and ivory.

Long, slender handles of silver are neat and suitable to any time of day and any costume.

Models of pearl handles or insets are out of favor, having given place in most cases to ivory.

There are also handles of carved teakwood, as well as handles of more eccentric design; carved animal heads, for example, with mock jewels for eyes.

The rodsand ribs of the umbrellas for women are so fine that when the umbrella is closely rolled it can hardly be distinguished from a walking cane.

Umbrellas for men are very handsome this season. Although men usually prefer the hook handle the straight one is newer.

These hook handles are especially serviceable, and not expensive when made of gunmetal.

CLEANSING LACE.

Delicate white laces may be cleaned with calcined magnesia after a recipe of Madame Modjeska's. *Spread the lace on a sheet of writ*ing paper, sprinkle it on both sides with magnesia, place a second piece of paper over it, put away between the leaves of a book for three days, then shake off the powder, when the lace will be found perfectly clean. Laces are given a creamy tint by putting strained coffee or powdered saffron in the rinsing water until the right cream of ecru tinge is procured. White silk laces are soaked in milk over night, then doused in warm soapsuds repeatedly and finally pulled out and carefully pinned down while damp. Laces must be dipped, gently squeezed, and clapped between the hands until day or nearly so. They may be whitened by letting them stand covered with soapsuds in the sun, repeating the operation several times.

A Child of Nature.

It was a primitive home in the Tennessee mountains, where the kitchen range is still a thing of vague and distant future, Cindy, the capable, buxom and barefoot, performed her duties on the hearth of the yawning fireplace, and deftly raked the coals around the barber where the corndodgers were browning. A glowing ember, unseen by all save old Rodd, rolled up on the hearth as Cindy stepped forward with the pot-hooks and he sounded the warning:

"Sis-ay, Cindy—"

"What, pa?"

Frank Grant, of the borough, conducted the gospel meeting at Wilson chapel, Watchung, last night.

The annual meeting of the Watchung Sunday-school Association will be held April 1 at Wilson chapel, when officers will be elected.

Rev. Dr. Richard Campbell, of the borough, preached at Warren chapel yesterday morning and evening in the absence of the pastor, Rev. J. O. McKelvey.

"The Country Postoffice" will be given at the Monroe Avenue M. E. church, March 30-31. In the meantime the thirty participants are having as much fun at rehearsals as they expect the audience to have at the entertainment.

Mrs. Willard Cook, of Prescott place, who has been under treatment at Muhlenberg Hospital, has entirely recovered.

ACKERMAN BILL PASSES

Upper House Approves Union County Senator's Employers' Liability Measure.

ONLY TWO NEGATIVE VOTES.

The Father of the Proposed Law Makes a Strong and Convincing Speech.

The feature of the State Senate session Monday at Trenton was the passage, after much debate, of the Ackerman employers' liability bill, one of the measures in which Governor Fort has taken a great deal of interest.

The senators tried in various ways to amend the measure, but none of the amendments fitted the situation, and when the final vote was taken the measure, known as senate No. 1 passed the upper chamber, and, it is said, has a fair field in the house before it.

All of the labor unions favor the measure, believing it a fair thing between the man who labors and the employer who hires.

The principal speaker on the bill was Senator Ackerman himself, and his remarks, which follow, give the gist of the measure. It is important, for it is the only legislation of its kind in New Jersey since improved machinery, and the increasing danger to employes, came into general use. Senator Ackerman said:

"New Jersey is a great manufacturing State. Great care must be exercised to protect its prestige. We must not place ourselves at an industrial disadvantage. The industries of New Jersey are classified in 88 different lines, having 2,152 establishments with 76,761 partners and stockholders. The total number of persons employed is 280,280, or 13 per cent. of the population of the State. The capital invested is $629,549,849 with an annual payroll of $144,740,069, giving an average yearly earning per employee of about $700, which earnings per employee is exceeded only by one State in the Union and that is New York. The figures are from the last annual report of the Bureau of Labor & Industries. In theory I might favor a more radical bill than the one which I introduced, but the question is would such a measure be practical or of advantage at the present time to the interests of the people of New Jersey. We must not impose regulations on the industries of New Jersey greater than those already borne by the other States, particularly neighbors like New York and Pennsylvania.

"Senate Bill No. 1 is a step in the right direction, and we may safely take additional steps when the other States have done likewise.

"If we proceed along with advanced or radical measures the result would be to drive many of the manufacturers and their employees from the State. Who would knowingly advocate such a result? Suppose New Jersey should adopt expensive regulations for New Jersey employers—what would be the effect? Would it not add to the cost of manufacture? And unless the other States had the same regulations would not New Jersey enterprises be at a disadvantage in competition with say New York or Pennsylvania? Would there not be a prompt exodus of small manufacturers to other States, the larger concerns following at the earliest moment? What would the people of New Jersey think of the members of the Legislature whom from the want of foresight or caution blocked enterprise and forced idle mills and workshops? I believe that owing to the changed relations between employer and employees arising largely from the logical formation of corporations and the introduction of modern and dangerous but necessary machinery that a change in the old Common law doctrine is a necessity, looking at the question from the viewpoint of the safety and good of society.

"Some might say, why have any liability law at all in New Jersey? Let the other States enact laws on the subject thus forcing their industries to come to New Jersey.

"Would this not be a selfish and short-sighted policy? Shall New Jersey become notorious for a fixed plan of offering as little protection as possible to defenceless employees?

"No State can enjoy permanent prosperity by denying the rights of justice and equity. Perhaps my bill does not go far enough considering the advanced laws passed on this question in Great Britain and other foreign countries, but we cannot with fairness to our citizens go faster than other States but we may with entire safety to all interests adopt a similar law similar to that now in force in the State of New York.

"The City of New York is famous for the extent and variety of its small manufacturing enterprises, (and is growing at a tremendous pace and it is estimated that by 1950 it will have a population of 19,000,000) if they can successfully stand the operations of an employers liability law, what sound argument can be advanced to deny the same measure of justice to the employees of New Jersey? An employers' liability is either under the Common law, or by reason of some statute. Under the common law the master or employer must furnish a reasonably safe place in which the servant is to work; he must keep the machinery in a reasonably safe condition; he is bound to use diligence in selecting fellow-servants and he must warn his servants of defects and danger which he knows to exist, but which may not be known to the servant.

"Referring to this measure the employer is now liable for negligence in respect to the above matters. This bill does not aim to affect the Common law liability as it now exists, except in one particular. Under the common law a master is not liable for injuries to a servant caused by the negligence of a fellow servant; this bill aims to make the employer liable for negligence of a fellow servant who stands in the position of a superintendent. If the employer always acted as superintendent, then there would be no need of a law of this kind; but when the employer puts someone in his place, as is usually the case, then it stands to reason that the employer ought to be responsible for the acts of this man. To accomplish this purpose is the aim of this bill.

"Let us build for the future and so dispense justice that our institutions will firmly stand the final test of a crowded and dense population."

FRELINGHUYSEN FIGHTS SCHOOL MONEY HOLD-UP

Senator Frelinghuysen, Republican leader, on the floor, last night at Trenton went on record against Senator Leavitt's bill to hold up the school moneys for six months after they are due for distribution, thus losing over $200,000 to the school districts. He will go into his reason for opposing the measures, which was up for adoption as a committee substitute for a somewhat similar bill introduced by the same Senator.

"The financial question can be taken care of without this measure," he declared.

Mr. Leavitt, in speaking for the measure, said that it was designed to set a specific date on which the money might be distributed.

"Does not this bill simply let the State have the use of this money for six months?" asked Senator George S. Silzer, pointedly.

"It may have that effect," admitted Leavitt. The matter of adoption was allowed to go over.

ALLEGED FIRE BUG ACQUITTED IN COURT

Peter Jannelli, who was charged with arson in setting fire to a barn at Summit, was acquitted of the charge in the Union county court, Monday after a trial last two days. The trial was before Judge Atwater and the defendant was represented by J. Henry Crane.

The boy was accused by his employer of setting fire to the latter's barn because he had reprimanded and discharged him. The States also produced a written confession obtained from the boy soon after his arrest. The accused testified that the confession was obtained through fear and threats and although he had endeavored to tell the truth, the detective had distorted his statements in an effort to convict him.

The accused admitted being in the barn, lighting his pipe and throwing the match on the floor, but denied positively that he had any intentions of setting the barn on fire. Mr. Crane made a strong plea to the jury for his acquittal. The jury was out about an hour and brought in a verdict of not guilty.

FORM HOLY NAME UNION

Patrick J. Ryan Elected President of Union Co. Organization of Catholics.

ST. MARY'S IS REPRESENTED.

Society's Delegates Await on Elizabeth's Mayor to Protest Against Some Moving Pictures.

Father B. M. Bogan, Michael D. O'Keefe, John Gallagher, Patrick Dever, Michael Watson, John Traynor and Daniel J. Walsh, of this city, attended a large gathering of the Union county members of the Holy Name Society in Elizabeth Monday. The objects of the meeting were to form a permanent Union county unit.

These officers were elected: President, P. J. Ryan, of Elizabeth; vice-president, Thomas J. McGinna, of Rahway; secretary, William Gedney, of Elizabeth; treasurer, John J. Scully, of Elizabeth.

The meeting was addressed by Father Bogan of this city; John Seelman, and E. J. Flannery, of Jersey City, officers of the Diocesan Union. The principal object of the union will be to discourage all immoral influences, to promote reverence and will tend to the uplift all forms of entertainment and to secure greater veneration for the Son of God. The addresses of the evning were all of that character and it is believed that a strong union will result for the good of John's whole county. There were in all 110 delegates present.

While the Holy Name Society was in session a delegation from that body as well as other Catholic societies were in conference with Mayor Mravlag at the Elizabeth City Hall for the purpose of protesting against some of the moving pictures shown at the theatres and nickelodians in Elizabeth. The basis for much of the protest was against showing pictures portraying monks and nuns and priests serving communion and blessing themselves. These pictures were considered sacrilligious and should be stopped.

Rev. J. A. Dillon, of St. Mary's church, stated that the theatre was no place for the exhibition of some of the rites and usages of the Catholic church; John F. Martin, another member of the party, stated that the Catholic societies had no desire to interfere with the business of theatres and moving picture places, the only desire being to eliminate those features which have a tendency to bring the church into disrepute.

The managers of all the theatres and moving picture places in Elizabeth, were present and assured the Mayor and the entire delegation that they would do all in their power to produce only such plays and pictures as would meet with the approval of the general public. Mayor Mravlag stated that while no doubt some objectionable things crept into moving pictures there were others that might lead to different opinions from different persons and he was not sure but that the city authorities had jurisdiction in such cases. He felt sure that the managers would do all in their power to please the public, and in fact would welcome suggestions.

SOLEMN REQUEIM FOR MISS MARGARET TOWNLEY

The funeral of Miss Margaret Townley, who died Sunday, was held Monday, when services at her late home in the New Madison were followed by solemn requeim mass at St. Mary's church at 9 o'clock. Rev. B. M. Bogan, the rector, was the celebrant. Father Daniel Hogan acted as deacon during the celebration, and Father Vincent Sciolla was the subdeacon. Father Bogan took occasion to speak impressively of the loss of the young woman, and favorably known as she was to so many.

Among the mass of floral tributes was a large cross of white flowers. The pall-bearers were Monroe Staats, Edward O'Loughlin, Thomas Kilbride, John Brown, Iran Hunt and Lawrence McCloud. Interment was in St. Mary's cemetery.

Only One Bid Received.

Under the suspended rules of the adjourned meeting of the Common Council, Monday, bids were received for furnishing the city hay, straw and oats, but only one was presented, that of Joseph Harrigan. He offered to sell the city five hundred bags of oats at $1.62½ a bag, hay, $18 a ton, and straw, $24 a ton. Mr. Harrigan stated that he had been supplying the city with hay, straw and oats for sometime and the prices quoted were the lowest obtainable at this time. The fire committee was a little disappointed over the lack of bids. The one was referred to that committee.

Surprised on Her Birthday.

A delightful surprise party was tendered Miss Henrietta Giles at her home on North Front street Friday night on the occasion of her birthday anniversary. There were about thirty guests, and the evening was passed with games, music and dancing. A feature of the supper, served late in the evening, was a large birthday cake, presented by Miss Giles' brother, Elmer. Vocal solos were rendered by Miss Utzinger and Master James Huff.

FIRE APPARATUS BIDS CITY FATHERS' ROUTINE

Thirteen Offers Submitted for Equipping the New East End Fire House.

COMBINATION WAGON WANTED.

Lowest Bid $1,495—Committee to Meet on Friday Night to Decide the Matter.

Thirteen bids were presented at the adjourned meeting of the Common Council Monday from different concerns that want to sell the city fire apparatus with which to equip the new East End fire house. Although the Councilmanic fire committee had practically decided not to purchase an automobile apparatus two or three bids for that style were submitted. All of the bids were accompanied by specifications calling for capacity of chemical tanks from thirty to sixty gallons, both single and double.

The committe believes that the cost of apparatus will come within the $1,750 which it does not want to exceed. Although not decided last night the bid of the American LaFrance Company, of New York, was considered the best. That concerns figures were $1,495 for practically every bid extra price was added for rubber tires. The bids which were as follows, were referred to the fire committee:

Robinson Fire Apparatus Company, New York, $1,957; Combination Ladder Company, New York, $1,354, $1,399, $1,299 and $1,349 according to capacity of chemical tanks and equipment, and $5,000 for combination hose and chemical carriage of automobile type; Accurate Fire Extinguisher Company, Newark, $1,529; James Boyd & Brother, New York, $1,430; Woodhouse Manufacturing Company, New York, chemical and hose wagon, drawn by horses, $1,970; Webb fire engine, chemical and hose wagon, automobile type, $5,150; Webb fire engine, combination chemical and hose wagon, automobile type, $5,000 complete; J. G. Ware & Son, Pittsburg, Pa., horse drawn chemical and hose wagon, $1,135, $1,235, $1,495, $1,-696 and $1,895 according to equipment; Fitzgibbons, Crisp Company, of Trenton, chemical and hose wagon, drawn by horses, $2,187; Knox Automobile Company, Springfield, Mass., chemical and hose wagon, automobile type, $4,500, two years guarantee; Zanesville Chemical Company, hose and chemical, drawn by horses, $1,385; American LaFrance Company, New York, chemical and hose, drawn by horses, $1,495; A. F. & C. F. Stewart, Rochester, N. Y., chemical and hose, drawn by horses, one thirty-five gallon tank, $1,699; two thirty-five gallon tanks, $1,600, rubber tires $200 extra; Green Motor Car Company, Bridgeport, Conn., automobile type, two thirty-five gallon tanks, $6,500.

The Councilmanic fire committee will probably meet Friday night and go over the various bids and make a report at the April meeting of the Common Council.

WHICH WILL WIN, THE BIG OR THE SMALL HAT?

The fight in millinery is between the large and the small hat. It is conceded by both sides that nothing eccentric is to be allowed, but certain milliners insist upon one size of hat and find arrayed against them another set who insist upon the large picture hat.

One French writer of leading authority says that the large hat is winning out among the best houses who are making spring millinery. "The hat that was thrown out of the back door by the fashionables now returns through the front door," is her way of phrasing the situation.

The hat that is advocated by the milliners who are fighting for small ones is cone-shaped and not very high. It is trimmed with a scarf of gauze or chiffon taffeta, and has a cluster of tiny oranges at the side. This is to be worn with a severe black veil, closely pinned at nape of neck and top of hat.

Those who are going in for large hats advocate a flat sailor almost in second empire shape, with immense osprey or curled feathers.

It is especially significant that neither of them advocates the eccentric turban in any of its shapes.

Glee Club Concert Planned.

Under the auspices of the Men's Club, a concert will be given at the First Presbyterian church Thursday evening, April 29, when entertainment will be furnished by the Philadelphonian Glee Club, of Elizabeth. The organization comprises thirty members, and an attractive musical program is to be presented. The proceeds of the affair will be used for new church hymnals. This will be the last appearance of Miss Anna L. Case as the soprano soloist at the church, for her resignation takes effect, May 1.

Clara Bogan.

Clara Bogan, the two and a half year old daughter of Mrs. Theresa Bogan, of West Third street, died at Muhlenberg Hospital Friday night from scarlet fever. The funeral and burial were held Saturday and were private.

APPOINTMENTS ARE CONFIRMED

Will Purchase Another Fire Horse —The Street Department's Requests Are Granted.

In a communication from Dr. McBride, Mayor of Paterson, received by the Common Council at its adjourned meeting, Monday, the local governing body was requested to assist in securing the passage of assembly bill No. 350, providing that State school money be distributed to all school districts at once. It was referred to the public affairs committee and later, on Mr. Mygatt's motion, it was referred to the finance committee authorizing co-operation with the Paterson officials.

William R. Codington, attorney for the Mutual Land Improvement Company, petitioned the Council to lend its aid in macadamizing several streets in the Netherwood district, it being the purpose of the company to develope and improve the adjourning land and erect several fine dwellings. The company offered to furnish the stone if the city would do the work. The matter was referred to the street committee.

Mayor C. J. Fisk appointed Fred A. Kelderling and J. C. W. Andrews as special policemen. Fred Breen and W. J. Kitchen as poundkeepers, and the nominations were confirmed. Kelderling and Andrews are employed as dog catchers.

The bids of N. B. Smalley & Co. for furnishing crushed stone and that of the Watchung Stone Company for furnishing culverts and crosswalks, were accepted in accordance with resolutions offered by Councilman W. L. Gloak, chairman of the street committee. These bids were the lowest. The resignation of Arthur Taylor as superintendent of the city alms house was received and accepted. It is to effective April 1.

Councilman Taylor offered a resolution which was adopted, appropriating $325 for the purchase of a new horse for fire headquarters. He explained that the fire committee had secured two horses, one for the No. 3 house and the other for headquarters. The one at No. 3 house was not satisfactory and will be returned. At a previous meeting $360 was appropriated for a horse and another one will be secured.

*In accordance with another reso*lution by Mr. Taylor, 300 feet of one inch hose for chemical engine service was purchased at forty cents a foot from the Voorhees Rubber Manufacturing Company. Mr. Taylor explained that a dozen or more bids were received and the one decided upon seemed to be the most advantageous.

WANT DOG ORDINANCE AMENDED BY COUNCIL

The Plainfield Kennel Club communicated with the Common Council Monday, asking that it be given a hearing before that body in reference to suggesting certain changes to the dog ordinance. While the body was in session, a delegation from the club was holding a conference with Mayor C. J. Fisk. Those present from the club were A. G. Hooley, R. L. Mackenzie and A. L. Wilmerding. They suggested that provisions be made for issuing a kennel license to those owned by members. It was favorably received by the Mayor and later by members of the laws and ordinance committee who joined the conference.

It was explained by the dog fanciers that their only desire is to afford protection to thoroughbred dogs. The laws and ordinance committee will take the matter at more length and announce a decision in the near future.

NELSON WOMAN INDICTED

Middlesex Grand Jury Finds True Bills Against Atwood Weldy and "Wife."

TAKEN TO NEW BRUNSWICK.

Pair Will Probably Be Arraigned on Tuesday—To Answer for Murder of Weldy's Brother.

Implicating Annie Nelson, arrested here Sunday night, as an accomplice in the murder of Allen C. Weldy, the New Brunswick liveryman, who was killed in an New Brunswick street on October 18 last, the Middlesex county grand jury yesterday returned indictments against her and Atwood Weldy, whom she says is her husband. Police Chairman Charles Oliver, who caused the arrest of the Nelson woman here, came to this city today and took the prisoner to New Brunswick. Atwood Weldy is now in jail there.

Justice Bergen will be at New Brunswick on Tuesday and the pair will probably be arraigned at that time. It is expected that at that time a date will be set for the trial.

Chief Kiely said today that he had talked with the Nelson woman, but would say nothing about the conversation. Rev. Lawrence R. Howard, pastor of Hope chapel, spent about an hour in her cell with her yesterday and he likewise refused to discuss the matter. New and what is said to be convincing testimony, it is said, has been secured against Weldy, against whom the grand jury found no indictments when he was first arrested in December. At that time his alleged wife was held only as a witness, but when brought to trial she will be charged as an accomplice. She is said to have been living with Weldy in New Brunswick at the time of the murder and it is alleged that she and her alleged husband jointly planned the crime, the motive for which was robbery.

Atwood Weldy, who is a brother of the murdered man, has been transferred from the New Brunswick jail to the Middlesex county jail, where the Nelson woman is held, by Detective Oliver today. It is understood that the authorities will keep the man and woman apart until the trial.

When arrested here, Annie Nelson told Chief Kiely that she and Weldy had never been married, but stated that she considered herself his wife. She has been living with friends in this city since the murder was committed last October, and Atwood Weldy has frequently visited her here.

THIS GOOD SAMARITAN SAYS HE GOT "STUNG"

Because he tried to be a good Samaritan, and gave lodging to Fred Stilliger, of Grant avenue, who was "locked out" Saturday night, Harry Snyder, of Manson place, is $ly $10.60 and had Stilliger haled before City Judge Runyon today, charging him with stealing it from his rooms last Monday morning. Stilliger was held under $100 bond to await the action of the grand jury. He was taken to the county jail this morning.

According to Snyder's story, Stilliger came to his house about midnight last Saturday night and asked if he might sleep there. He said that he had been locked out of his Grant avenue house. Snyder gave the man a place to sleep and Stilliger also spent Sunday there and slept there Sunday night. The two men started off together Monday morning, when Stilliger said he was going to Dunellen.

At about 10 o'clock in the morning, Stilliger came back to the Snyder home, according to the story of a woman who lives in the same house, and, saying that he had left his watch there, asked permission to go upstairs and get it. The woman heard him walking around through the various rooms. When Snyder returned home, the money, which had been left under a mattress, was missing, and some small change had been taken from the bureau. Snyder swore out a warrant for Stilliger and the man was arrested by Patrolman Andrew Saffron yesterday afternoon.

DEFER HEWITT CONTEST

Argument Against Probate of Millionaire's Will to Take Place Monday.

LOCAL COUNSEL IN THE CASE.

As counsel for Mrs. Charlotte B. Arnot, of Elmira, N. Y., a sister of the testator, John B. Stanchfield has obtained a postponement of the contest to set aside the will of Frederick C. Hewitt, of Oswego, N. Y., until Monday. Mr. Hewitt died two months ago and when his will was offered for probate at Oswego it was found that his entire estate, estimated at four millions, was bequeathed to charitable, educational and art institutions in and near New York city. Among the beneficiaries he named was the Netherwood Fresh Air Home, of this city, which was given $100,000.

Among those who have joined with Mrs. Arnot in the contest to prevent the will being probated are Mrs. Tunison B. Hewitt, a widow, who claims to be a sister-in-law of the wealthy testator and her two sons, James Hewitt and Tunison Hewitt, who have filed caveats as alleged nephews. The relatives have banded together to make a contest on the ground that Hewitt was not of sound mind when he made the will in question four years ago and had not recovered his mental faculties at the time of his death. Mrs. Arnot, his own sister, was not left a penny and neither were his other blood relations. W. Nash Jr., as counsel for the Plainfield relatives, will attend the hearing before the special surrogate, Frank A. Bell, of Oswego county, as will also Winfield Scott Angleman, who represents the Netherwood Fresh Air Home.

Frederick Hewitt was a bachelor. During his younger days he was captain and owner of a seagoing vessel. He accumulated his riches by ships during the Civil War.

PLAYED "HOOKEY" TO SEE MOVING PICTURES

Seven-year-old Julius Richards, one of the seven children of Ike Richards, of Somerset street, was hailed before City Judge Runyon at the session of court today on the complaint of Miss Adelaide Ball. It appears that the boy has the moving picture mania, and "cuts" school every afternoon he can get money to watch the films roll by. Ike told the Judge that he had to give most of his time to his business, and couldn't keep very close watch over the boy. He said the little fellow was unmanageable.

Weeping copiously, little Julius told the court how he had been prevented from going to school by larger boys, and said that one of these habitually stole money from his family that the two might go to moving picture shows. The Judge recommended corporal punishment by the father and Julius' sister will be his custodian to and from school each day. The father was given to understand that the next appearance of the boy at court would mean the payment of a fine, and Richards promised that there would be no more complaints.

GEORGE COOTE HURT BY PREMATURE EXPLOSION.

George Coote, of Watchung, met with a painful accident yesterday afternoon while attempting to blow out stumps with dynamite at the Rose hill farm. The young man's left hand was so badly mangled as a result of the explosion that at the hospital it was found necessary to amputate two fingers and a thumb.

It is supposed that Coote in trying to fix one of the sticks under a stump, either cut the fuse too short or ran it a sudden jar thus causing an explosion before he could get out of the way, and that one of the large fragments struck him on the hand.

FOUND "NEGRO BILL" DEAD IN HIS CABIN

"Negro Bill," a well known character in this city and vicinity for at least thirty years, was found dead in his cabin on Mountain avenue by James Myers, of the Watchung Spring Water Company, early this morning. The aged negro had been ill for a long time and was being cared for by Myers who took him provisions every day. When Myers arrived at the cabin this morning he found the man lying in his bunk as if asleep, but upon trying to arouse him found that he was cold and stiff. A hasty examination showed that he had been dead for some hours. As soon as the death was reported at the water company's plant word was sent to the police of North Plainfield *and to the coroner, Dr. Long, of Som*erset county.

To many people "Negro Bill" was well known as a fiddler of no mean ability. His occupation was that of farm-hand, doing odd jobs for those living near him.

BROTHER WANTS SHARE OF L. E. HART FORTUNE

Before Judge Atwater in the Union County Court, today, a contest is being heard in the will case of Lemuel E. Hart, who died at his home on West Front street a short time ago, leaving an estate valued at $100,000. Mr. Hart was survived by a wife, but no children. He also left two brothers and three sisters to whom he bequeathed from $1,000 to $2,000 each.

Levi Hart, of this city, one of the brothers, through his counsel, Winfield S. Applegate, filed a caveat against the probate of the will and the argument is being heard today. Codington & Swackhamer represent the executors of the estate. The estate left by Mr. Hart includes many fine properties in this city. The bulk of the fortune was left to the widow.

The fair given by the Women's Auxiliary of the Y. M. C. A. for the benefit of the athletic field fund was held in the Y. M. C. A. auditorium yesterday afternoon and evening, and a goodly sum was netted. Ever since the proposed project was first suggested general interest has been taken in it. The auditorium was trimmed with palms and cut flowers, while the many booths were decorated with green and white. At the fancy article tables those in charge were Mrs. Albert C. Zabriskie, Mrs. J. K. Roundy, Mrs. Robert A. Meeker, Mrs. Thomas Osment, Mrs. J. H. Manning and Mrs. John M. Lewis. Those at the book counter were Mrs. Harry C. Runyon, Mrs. H. V. Hubbard, and the Misses Ethel Titsworth and Florence Hawkins. The candy booth was in charge of Mrs. Charles Dayton, Mrs. L. M. French, Miss Margaret Swain and Miss E. A. Palmer. LENTEN RECITAL CHARMS

MISS GOOLD THE SOPRANO.

Vladimer Dubinsky 'Cellist with Mr. McIntyre as Pianist—At Mrs. Stephen A. Ginna's.

The song and 'cello recital given at the home of Mrs. Stephen A. Ginna, on Watchung avenue, yesterday by Joseph McIntyre, comprised several features which made it one of the most delightful musicales of the season. The charming home was thronged with lovers of music who never seemed to tire of the fine program. Mrs. Edith Chapman Goold, soprano, and Vladimir Dubinsky, 'cellist, were the assisting artists, with Mr. McIntyre at the piano.

In the selection of the program, the artists displayed excellent taste, it being of such a varied character that the large audience found much to please them. The opening number was Handel's "Sonata in G Minor," for piano and 'cello, and in the various movements the rendition was perfect. The harmony of the two instruments perhaps was never heard to better advantage and the possibilities of each were fully shown.

Mrs. Goold, whose appearance here was the first in a long time, delighted all. She sang groups of French, Italian and English songs and they were so arranged that the interest was held until the very end of the musicale. In the first group of songs, perhaps, her singing of Puccini's selection from the program, "La Boheme," was the best. She has a voice of great range, sweetness and purity and showed that she was entirely familiar with her work. The rendition of "Stars with Golden Sandals," by Franz, was pleasing. Other numbers in this group included "Maman dites moi," Old French; "Un doux Lien," Delbruck; "In dem Shatten Meiner Locken," and "'Tis Spring," by Wolf, while for an encore she sang "All in the Summertime," accompanying herself at the piano.

In his 'cello work, Mr. Dubinsky again proved himself a favorite. This artist never fails to meet every expectation and yesterday his playing was greeted with a storm of applause. He handled his instrument with a master hand and in a faultless manner. His numbers included "L'Adieu," Davidoff; "Madrigal," from "L'enfant Prodigue," and "Tarantelle," Popper, and in conclusion he gave a charming encore.

The program closed with five numbers by Mrs. Goold, the best of which was "My Mother Bids Me Bind My Hair," by Haydn. In this selection her singing appealed to everyone and won for her much applause. "Come Lassies and Lads," Old English, was full of life, while the other two numbers, "But lately in Dance I Embraced Her," by Arensky, and "Ecstasy," by Rummel, and an encore, afforded Mrs. Goold excellent opportunity to display her voice.

As for the work of Mr. McIntyre it was of the highest order. He accompanied Mrs. Goold and Mr. Dubinsky in a manner that added greatly to the charm of the numbers and made the musicale the decided success that it proved to be. The patrons of these two Lenten affairs at Mrs. Ginna's home fully appreciate Mr. McIntyre's efforts and he never fails to attract real lovers of music wherever he appears.

Will Live at Cape Cod.

Mr. and Mrs. Salmon C. Baker, of West Fifth street, who have been residents of Plainfield for a great many years, have decided to leave this city early in the summer, when they will make their home at Cape Cod, Mass., where they own a fine residence. Their present home will be occupied by their son, Albert Baker, and he will lease his home on West Fourth street. Mr. and Mrs. Baker have many friends here who will regret that they are to leave Plainfield.

Always the Same Result.

Miss Carrie Egel, of the borough, lost a gold watch, advertised the fact in The Daily Press. A. M. Nichols, of 228 Plainfield avenue, a reader of this paper, found the watch, saw the advertisement and returned the timepiece to the owner yesterday.

Pierce's New Office.

BIG CONCERN FORMED

Plainfield Supply Co. to Deal in Ice, Coal and Lumber Here and Elsewhere.

CAPITAL HALF A MILLION.

Business and Real Estate of Natural Ice Company and McDonough Brothers Is taken Over.

Articles were signed this morning for the formation of the Plainfield Supply Company, whose capital stock will be $500,000 and whose business will be to deal in ice, coal and lumber at both wholesale and retail. The concern has acquired the real estate and business of both the Natural Ice Company and McDonough Brothers, both here and at Bear Creek, Pa., where a lake of some sixty acres was recently purchased.

The concern proposes to enter into competition with the Lake Hopatcong Ice Company, controlled by the Brady brothers, and will dispose of its commodity all along the lines of the Jersey Central as far as Atlantic City. In like manner it will sell lumber through the same territory, buying outright direct from the mills and not selling on commission.

It is proposed to erect a large ice house on the hygeia plant grounds where it will store the natural product from Bear Creek. The artificial ice plant is now being overhauled at an expense of $20,000, and when the improvements are made the concern will be in a position to supply ice not only here but through a large territory now almost exclusively covered by the Hopatcong company. The hygeia output will be forty tons a day.

Those who are interested in the half million dollar concern are the McDonough brothers, Andrew H. Wilson, Harry H. Coddington and Harry Titus, all local men.

The articles of incorporation of the company were filed by Attorney George W. Bird at Elizabeth today. According to the plans William Titus will look after the coal and ice business outside of Plainfield, and Patrick McDonough will attend to the sale of lumber outside of the local territory, while Andrew H. Wilson will have charge of the company's ice business in Plainfield.

The mild weather of the past winter is responsible for the reorganization of the business as conducted by the Natural Ice Company on a more extensive scale, and the company now feels assured that in the future it will be in a position to meet the demands for ice, as well as coal and lumber.

SPEAKERS FOR UNION GOOD FRIDAY SERVICE

Rev. Dr. J. S. Zelie, minister of the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church, who was appointed a committee of one to arrange for a special musical service to be held in his church on Good Friday in place of the former plan of having several ministers speak on "The Seven Words of the Cross," has decided that the musical service is not practical and that the program will be as in days gone by.

The entire program has not been arranged as yet, but Dr. Zelie has made the following selection of speakers for the service: Rev. Dr. Abel C. McCrea, Rev. John Y. Brook, Rev. Ora J. Shoop, Rev. Dr. Charles E. Herring, Rev. J. W. Musson, Rev. Charles L. Goodrich and Rev. Edwin Shaw. The music will be appropriate to the occasion. Rev. Dr. J. A. Chambliss will preside and other ministers not mentioned will have parts assigned to them. The change in the program is a great disappointment to many who anticipated a change this year.

Adjourned Teachers' Meeting.

The adjourned teachers' meeting of the Sunday-school of the First Baptist church was held last evening at the home of Miss Serrell, of Union street. Ernest K. Powlison resigned from the office of secretary and Raymond Carver was elected to fill the vacancy. The resignation of B. J. Shreve, librarian, was received, *and Robert Sherwin, assistant librar*ian, was elected to the office. Discussion of matters of interest to the school was followed by refreshments and a social half hour.

Watson Was Down and Out.

Patrolman Saffron found Malachi Watson helplessly drunk on East Second street early yesterday afternoon and had him transferred to a police court cell. Watson, who lives on Grant avenue, has never been arrested for drinking before, and City Judge Runyon suspended sentence.

DO YOU WANT A HUBBY?

Any Plainfield Lassie Longing for One Only Has to Consult "Lord Mayor."

CHANCE NOT TO BE MISSED.

Model Young German—Says So Himself—Writes Mr. Fisk from Tubingen to Help Him.

When Mayor Charles J. Fisk opened his official mail this morning, he found among it a letter addressed "To the Lord Mayor of Plainfield, U. S. N. A., Amerika," and postmarked Tubingen, Germany. "Umph," said the banker-mayor after the epistle had been translated for him, "I am not a shatchen but I believe that every man should be married and I would like to help this fellow along. Any girl that's pining for a fellow to marry can have this man's name."

In an appeal to the "lord mayor of Plainfield," the subject of the Emperor William in question says:

"In all German newspapers at the present time, it is stated that there is in your city such great need of young men that marriageable ladies are prevented from fulfilling their highest destiny. In order to slightly relieve this situation and personally because I have few women friends from whom to select a loving wife, may I trespass upon your very great kindness in helping me to become acquainted with some marriageable lady?

"I should prefer a young, pretty and amiable lady (or widow) and should like to have a photograph in case such a lady may be found. I, myself, am twenty-four years of age and am of good family. I am of good appearance and of education and without any vices, a medical student, and a Catholic but liberal in my views.

"This is, of course, making a great and selfish trespass upon your Excellency's kindness, but I did not know whom else to plead to or turn to and beg that you will pardon my presumption. Should one of the far *famed American girls consent to cor*respond with a man on this side of the ocean, I should be under a great obligation to you in advance for your praiseworthy kindness."

The matrimonially-inclined German youth enclosed some postage stamps for a reply, but the "Lord Mayor" would not say whether he intended to answer the letter. He did say that it was the first time that he ever heard of a scarcity of young men in this city and that in his opinion there was an ample supply of a very good quality to answer all requirements.

TEACHERS AND PARENTS DISCUSSED PROBLEMS

The Parent-Teacher Association met at the Franklin School, last night, and discussed the question, "The Advisability of Detaining Chil*dren After School Hours.*" There were many opinions on the subject, but no decision was reached. Many of the parents present expressed the idea that some other form of punish*ment should be adopted for infraction* of rules, but in the opinion of Dr. H. M. Maxson and several teachers it seemed to be the only one that had proved satisfactory in the past.

The discussion brought out the point that where a child is repeatedly detained after school hours as a penalty for disobedience he is likely to become hardened to the punishment and eventually show a "don't care" spirit. This was admitted to be true by the teachers, yet they had been unable to find any other means of reprimanding the child. It was also brought out that children were often detained for trivial matters and it seemed to be difficult to decide where to draw the line. It was agreed that the discussion had been helpful even though it had been found impossible to recommend any other method of punishment.

Another interesting feature was an informal talk by William D. Murray on "Children's Rights." This subject in a measure had a bearing on the first question considered, and Mr. Murray presented many helpful suggestions which should prove of benefit to both the child and the teacher.

TROLLEY MEN'S BIG TIME

Public Service Railway Employees Hold Jolly Smoker at Car Barns.

A BANG-UP ENTERTAINMENT.

Jolly Bunch Have a Royal Time—George Luhr Acts as Motorman for the Affair.

Knights of the controller handle and the bell rope to the number of about two hundred gathered at the West Dunellen car barns Thursday on the occasion of the first annual smoker of the Public Service Company employes of this city. With them were delegations of gong pounders and "step lively" artists from Elizabeth and New Brunswick, who arrived on special trolleys, lavishly decorated with flags, and declared that the Plainfield wearers of the "P. S. R." were bully good hosts.

The affair may properly be described as a "large time." It snowed, of course, and the wind howled through the sheds outside the social hall, but there was no "pay-as-you-enter" apparatus at the door, and there was "lots of room up front." Supervisor George Luhr ran the thing and acted as "starter" for a series of fourteen vaudeville acts which served to royally entertain the men 'til early morning. The rule about "smoking on the last three seats only" was not enforced, for the committee, which was headed by Mr. J. Darwood Smith, and George Powers, passed out "T. D.'s" and tobacco almost before the guests could shake the snow off, and later good Havana cigars were circulated and the blue haze settled even thicker.

A bunch of the company's "big men" from Newark, Elizabeth and New Brunswick were "among those present," and a rattling good talk was served up by N. W. Bolan, of Newark, the superintendent of transportation, early in the evening. Mr. Bolan urged "the boys" to cooperate with each other as employes and pointed out that lots of trouble was caused by spreading tales about their fellow workers because of a feeling of jealousy. "The company," he said, "considers every man it takes on a good man until he proves himself otherwise, and the best interests of the men are gauging more and more consideration at the central office and all along the line." He went on to show that the position of each and every man was fully appreciated and the officials knew of his hardships, and he substantiated this statement by saying that all the officials today are men who have worked their way up in railroading by experience in all departments. He said that he realized the criticism brought to bear on Public Service employes as well as all trolley men and the police are told of an effort that is being made by the publicity department of the company to educate the public to the fact that even motormen and conductors are human. Mr. Bolan's talk was essentially democratic, and he got the long hand-clap when he finished.

It was along after midnight that Supervisor Luhr, who was acting as announcer for the program, mounted the platform and said: "We now have a few remarks from George Luhr." His talk teemed with the democratic spirit of the ranks, and his narration of his experiences as car driver in New York city more than a score years ago brought the whistles and shouts of applause. When he finally announced the next act, the smokers stood up and howled "What's the matter with George Luhr?" and the roar of response had the volume of veracity.

The program of entertainment comprised fourteen numbers, and wound up a fast three-round bout between two Bound Brook lads, Matthews and Kelly, "both members of this club." It was all Matthews from the first time-call, but it was a feature of the entertainment for all that and every blow was cheered with enthusiasm. The dancing numbers by colored men from this city and New Brunswick made great hits, and so inspired the audience that Martin Phalen and Peter Kelly, two wearers of the "P. S. R.," mounted the platform and patted the boards in a genuine Irish jig to music that set everybody's feet twitching. The Mandy Minstrel troupe, of New Brunswick, worked a lot of local gags in a clever show and "Bennett, the Butt-in Magician," put on an act of mystery. The Black Diamonds, a colored quartet marshalled to the scene by "Skinny" Wilson, appeared collectively and individually in an assortment of vocal and instrumental harmony and footwork that made the rafters ring. A Hallet & Davis piano was used.

The committee had an abundance of refreshments on hand and freely circulated sandwiches, ice cream, coffee and "soft stuff" along with the smoke.

Among the out-of-town trolley men who attended the affair were N. W. Bolan, superintendent of transportation; W. B. Graham, division superintendent, of Newark; William J. Ramsey, superintendent of employment, of Newark; Supervisor James McCabe, of Elizabeth; Supervisor Thomas B. Burke, of New Brunswick; E. A. Faverell, claim agent, of Elizabeth; A. Wolf, night receiver, of Elizabeth; Division Superintendent J. J. Gettings, of Elizabeth; Frank Southard, road officer, of Elizabeth, and J. Hentershot, road officer, of New Brunswick. The local committee for the affair comprised Supervisor Luhr, W. J. Davenport, George Powers, Albert Carpenter, Patrick Columbus Marron, Martin Van Buren Lantz, Joseph Dwyer, Daniel Carroll, Michael J. Walsh, Thomas Dorgan, Patrick McCullom, Thomas Orr, Michael J. Nevins, Albert Lindaberry, William Wooden, James McCullom, George Weber and Hugh Higgins.

This is one of the largest amusement companies of the kind in the country, carrying more than thirty-five separate attractions.

The proceeds from the carnival will be used to purchase land for a permanent baseball field, as Crescent Oval will not be available after this season, plans being adopted to cut it up into building lots. David B. Martin as president and captain of the club will have general supervision of the affair. Among the attractions will be "A Clinton Avenue Tent" to be in charge of the women friends of the ball players. The Graybill Company carries a uniformed brass band with its attractions.

FUNERAL SERVICES OF EUGENE M. LA FORGE

The funeral of Eugene M. La Forge was held from his late home on Morris street, New Brunswick, at 1:30 o'clock Thursday afternoon and from Masonic Temple at 2 o'clock. The temple was crowded with friends of Mr. La Forge, members of Union Lodge, No. 19, F. & A. M.; Goodwill Council, No. 32, Jr. O. U. A. M., and the Ancient Order United Workmen. Rev. Linn E. Wheeler had charge of the services, after which the Masons held their Masonic rites in the temple. There were many beautiful floral tributes.

Mr. La Forge, who was a brother of Mrs. Alfred A. Fleet, of North avenue, died Monday afternoon at his home in New Brunswick, not having regained consciousness since he was stricken with apoplexy the previous Tuesday while erecting a monument in the potter's field cemetery. He was born in this city and learned his trade as marble cutter with the late Andrew Vanderbeek, where The Daily Press office is now located. He was born in 1848 and moved to New Brunswick thirty-two years ago and engaged in the marble and granite business. He owned the large marble yard on Neilson street, at the foot of Paterson. He had served as a member of the New Brunswick Board of Education and was a prominent lodgeman.

Mr. LaForge was progressive; a warm friend and a man of the high est integrity. He is survived by two children, Miss May and Frank; also his brother, Morrell La Forge, of Somerville, and a sister, Mrs. P. A. Van Fleet, of this city.

MISS BUSHNELL'S WEDDING ON THURSDAY, APRIL 15.

Mr. and Mrs. John Bushnell, of Central avenue, have issued invitations to the wedding of their daughter, Miss Helen Frances Bushnell, and David Allen Roberts, of Moorestown, N. J.

The affair which will be one of the brilliant social functions of Eastertide, will take place in the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church Thursday afternoon, April 15, at 4 o'clock. Re-planting Somerville Trees.

Thomas Hand, of South avenue, has secured the contract for re-setting the row of shade trees along Main street, Somerville, and is now at work there with a gang of men. The Boroughfare has been re-graded and it is necessary to lower the curb and sidewalk to conform with the new street level. This necessitates the re-planting of the curb row of large shade trees. Mr. Hand has recently finished setting out a lot of trees for State Senator Joseph S. Frelinghuysen's country home at Raritan and but a short time ago supplied and planted many shade trees for the J. B. Duke estate near Somerville.

E. D. CUTTING PRESENTS THE "DIXIE MINSTRELS"

The Dixie Minstrels entertained a large audience at the Y. M. C. A. auditorium Thursday with one of the best performances of that nature of the season here. Elmer D. Cutting is at the head of the troupe of vocal artists which has pleased audiences in the city before.

The jokes of the end men were breezy and set forth in a creditable manner, as was evidenced by the unsparing applause, and their songs comprised the latest hits of the year.

Harry Blimm sang "One of Them Has Anything on Me," using the names of local celebrities. Each verse was puntuated with noisy applause. He hit the public censors, told things about Mayor Charles J. Fisk and "Neal" Lawrence, and did not forget "Jim" Martine.

George Case singing "You're in the Right Church but the Wrong Pew" was one of the good things, as was Hugh Rickett's "I'll Be Back in a Minute, but I Got to Go now." Miss Messersmith sang "Meet Me in Rose Time, Rosey," and Elmer D. Cutting, "As Long as the World Rolls On."

Other musical achievements were: "Yankee Doodle's Come to Town," by Hugh Rickett; "Sweet Alice," Down in the Old Cherry Orchard," by John Hall; "Garden of Dreams," by Master A. Martin; "Any Old Port in a Storm," by Joseph C. Martin; "Almost Home," by Fred Miller; "Great Scott, I Miss You," by "My Brother Coming Now" by John Todd.

One of the most laughable features of the entertainment was the Dixie quartette in a comic song. William Briggs, as a clown with his big shoes; Tuxithis, and Cooper and Hall, in a song and dance specialty, were pleasing.

An afterpiece, written by Joseph Martin, entitled "The Last Room," was presented with this cast:

Jones, showing expenses of $776.75 for the year out of a total of $800 raised.

O. B. Leonard presented the following statement of expenditures for the year to the various objects: Foreign mission, $710; home missions, $405; State convention, $325; temperance, $108; Muhlenberg Hospital, $100; Baptist Home for the Aged, $75; aged ministers, $65; New Jersey ministerial education, $60; Salvation Army, $50; Y. M. C. A., $33; Sunday-school, $40; evangelist, $25.

Doctor's Topic "What is Life?"

Dr. J. Wilbur Buchanan spoke on the topic "What is Life" at the Men's club of the Church of the Heavenly Rest Friday. Despite the storm, about sixty members were present. The speaker traced animal life to the lowest, protoplasmic form, beyond which he stated that scientists could go. He said that the germ of all life was God-given and dwelt as some length upon man's responsibility to God for this gift. At the conclusion of the address, several selections were rendered by Dr. Buchanan's orchestra of eleven pieces. Refreshments and cigars concluded the evening's entertainment.

For Shore Train Service.

W. D. Thickston is circulating a petition among the local patrons of the Jersey Central's shore route summer service asking the road's management to restore its 1907 schedule or one as convenient for the local patrons. In that year, a train left here at 4:12 in the afternoon, which connected with a train from Newark at Elizabethport getting the passengers to the shore in time for dinner. A year ago this train was taken off. The return service in 1907 was also much better than now. The petition will be sent to General Passenger Agent Hope.

Highly Practical.

TO ENLARGE CLUB HOUSE

Plainfield Country Club Votes Special Issue of Bonds to Make Improvements.

APPROVE ARCHITECT'S PLANS.

Proposition to Increase Dues Defeated—Description of the Improvements.

The Plainfield Country Club Thursday voted in favor of an enlargement of the clubhouse and a new bond issue, in consequence, a directors' meeting of the board of trustees. President Leighton Calkins, stated that all but $200 of the money necessary for the club extension has been subscribed. The trustees appointed a building committee consisting of John P. Stevens, chairman; Percy H. Stewart and George S. Clay. The plans submitted by A. L. C. Marsh, architect, were approved. The work will begin this month with the idea of opening the enlarged clubhouse on Decoration Day.

In the meantime the assembly room and locker rooms will be in commission, but only light lunches will be served during the work of enlarging the kitchen. The club is now about to enter upon its brightest and most successful season. New members are joining rapidly in order to take advantage of the reduced initiation fee.

The purpose is to pay for improvements in the future by the sale of bonds, recommending an increase of dues to $25 or even $50, if necessary. But the majority approved of the plan of the trustees and to pay for improvements by selling bonds. Alexander Gilbert also spoke against increasing the bonded debt, recommending curtailing the service of the club and not making any improvements at all. Messrs. Ladd, Lounsberry, Wherry and Murray spoke strongly in favor of the plan which had been recommended.

The club ought to have its golf course, it is said, in good playing condition early in April, except, of course, for the putting greens, which are being seeded and top dressed with loam. But the fair greens will all be rolled in a week, almost a month earlier than usual, and the tennis courts are being put in shape. The enlargement of the clubhouse means for one thing that the new dining-room, which will be about thirty-five feet square, can be thrown open, sliding doors into a large assembly room, for dances and special occasions. There will be two entrances into the present inside dining-room, one direct from the driveway, and one from an extension at the rear, where the office is now located.

There is to be a large serving pantry, twenty-four feet by fourteen, an enlarged kitchen and cellar, and rooms over the kitchen for servants. Another year the locker rooms may be improved and the club will then have an adequate clubhouse in all departments. The golf and tennis committee are planning an active season, and the schedules of competitive events will be out in about three weeks.

A. H. DURAR FIRST IN Y.M.C.A. MARATHON RACE

A. H. Durar won the five mile marathon race on Saturday and the championship of the city for boys under sixteen. He went the distance in 36 minutes, 25 seconds, finishing one hundred and fifty yards ahead of Andrew McDonough. Ray Conley was third, crossing the tape fifty yards behind McDonough.

The race was held under the auspices of the Y. M. C. A. Physical Director George L. Listman being in charge. It was open to all boys in the city within the specified age and out of sixty-five entrants, forty started in the race.

N.P.H.S RECEIVES CUP WON BY BASKETBALL TEAM

Following the chapel exercises Friday morning, R. J. Conroy, captain of the victorious N. P. H. S. basketball team, presented the interscholastic championship cup to the High School. Principal Benjamin J. Phelps received the cup and responded with a few remarks. He said that the season had been profitable for North Plainfield High School and that the pupils of future years ought to look on this cup and be inspired by the fact that it was the first championship brought to North Plainfield High School, and the team that brought the championship deserved the glory and honor of the fact, that they were the first to bring home an honor of this nature. He further said that the scholarship of the players had been satisfactory and up to the standard required.

Superintendent H. C. Krebs called on Miss Ida Englehardt to explain a package he held in his hand, and she responded, presenting to Miss Trembath a belt buckle with the thanks of the girls for the aid and help that she had been to them during the past season. Miss Anna McGuinness then presented to Miss H. T. Stahlberger a cut glass bon-bon dish with the thanks of the Sophomore and Freshman girls for the coaching she had given them for the season 1908-09.

The final part of the program was Mr. Krebs and he presented to George E. Webster a handsome loving cup. This cup was the gift of the championship team for the coaching he had given them for the season, his aid having been needed to "coax" them to victory over the championship. Mr. Webster thanked the boys for their loyal support and their gentlemanly conduct on the floor, and their willingness to do as he said and not look for personal glory.

GOLDEN RULE CIRCLE HOLDS TEA AND SALE

Under the auspices of the Golden Rule Circle of the King's Daughters, a successful cake and candy sale was held Thursday afternoon at the home of the president, Mrs. Anna M. Most, on Myrtle avenue. Considering the disagreeable weather the attendance was large and the Circle will realize a good sum to meet its pledge in support of the King's Daughters work in the city.

The home was attractively decorated for the occasion, the prevailing color in the dining-room being yellow, through the use of daffodils. Tea was served here, Mrs. Isaac P. Runyon and Mrs. Charles L. Moore pouring. They were assisted by other members of the Circle. Those who presided at the cake and candy table were Miss May G. Steiner and Miss Clara Van Fleet. The officers of the Circle are as follows: President, Mrs. Anna M. Most; vice-president, Miss May G. Steiner; secretary, Miss Nettie Bauerwachs; treasurer, Miss Clara Van Fleet.

EDWARD HOWARD GRIGGS GIVES INSTRUCTIVE TALK

Professor Edward Howard Griggs delivered his postponed lecture at Vincent chapel Thursday afternoon, under the auspices of the Ladies' Aid Society. He discussed at great length the life and achievements of Paracelsus, the sixteenth century philosopher and mysticist, as presented by the poet Browning.

Taking Browning's interpretation of Parcelsus' character through the five periods of his life, he began with the boyhood ambitions, which he designated as the arrogance of youth, and traced his career to the untimely death, emphasizing the manner of the world in spelling its heresy to flattering attentions, only to cast them aside in the end.

The lecturer endeavored to show what the true character of Parcelsus really was; and to express appreciation of his fertid imagination and powerful convictions, as well as his honesty in declaring truth as demonstrated when he laid bare his methods and threw off the cloak of mystery which had surrounded him and his work.

Parcelsus was born about the year 1490. His father was a physician and the boy entered the university at Basel at the age of sixteen. He later prosecuted researches in chemistry while yet a young man, filled with the fiery spirit of youth. This was followed by a period of investigations in mining, where he learned the nature of rocks and physical properties of ores, minerals, and metals, after which he went wandering over Europe picking up what knowledge he could, thus acquiring a great store of facts which gave to him unquestioned superiority to his contemporaries. Paracluse's doctrines were confirmed by his success in curing a mitigating disease with which the regular doctors were powerless to cope. A growing jealousy culminated in his leaving Basel and he later became a wanderer on the face of the earth, to meet with a violent death, the true facts of which have never been known.

HAROLD COOK FOUND "NOT GUILTY" BY JURY.

Harold Cook, a local young man who has been on trial at the Union County Court on a serious charge preferred by Jessie A. Smith, also of this city, was acquitted Thursday. The case was on three hours. It is reported that during the first hour and a half the jury stood eight to four for conviction.

When Louis Stahl resumed the witness stand Thursday afternoon he told of remarks passed by Cook in the witness room Thursday when the latter said, according to Stahl:

"When I get on the witness stand, I'll lie." Repeated questioning by Samuel Schleimer, of counsel for the defendant, failed to shake Stahl's evidence.

Grover Marsh, of this city, stated that what Cook said was: "When Miss Smith was on the stand she lied."

The latter at one period of his testimony admitted that he lied on Wednesday to Chief of Police Kiely, of this city, but later denied this. The Smith girl was on the stand for a short time Thursday afternoon, but because of her weakened condition only a few questions were asked her.

There was an exciting word battle between Mr. Schleimer, C. Addison Swift, the prosecutor, and his assistant, Walter Hetfield, on the refusal of the two latter to give Mr. Schleimer the original complaint in this case. On the order of the court Mr. Swift finally gave up the document, but said he would not admit it was the original complaint—that it merely purported to be the complaint of Jessie Smith.

The funeral service of John Harding was held at 9 Friday morning from St. Mary's church, where there were a large gathering of relatives and friends. Rev. B. M. Bogan conducted the service. There was a large number of floral tributes, including set pieces from Watchung Council, Knights of Columbus and the T. A. B. Society, of which Mr. Harding was president for two years.

Improving Crosswalks.

Under the direction of the Councilmanic street committee, Street Commission Gavett is having a number of crosswalks reset in the business section of the city. This will eventually be done in other parts of the town. This work has been more or less neglected during the past year or so and many of the crosswalks are buried out of sight, making street crossing difficult in bad weather. In some cases it will be necessary to lay new walks, the others having passed beyond the useful period.

ONLY ONE CHANGE IN OFFICERS

Reports Show That Much Has Been Accomplished Within the Past Year—300 Present.

All of the old officers, with the exception of the second vice-president, were re-elected at the afternoon session of the Women's Presbyterial Society for Home Missions in the Presbytery of Elizabeth, which was held in Westminster church Elizabeth Friday. For the office of second vice-president Mrs. W. W. Casselberry, of Dunellen, is succeeded by Mrs. Stains, of Westfield. The other officers are:

President Mrs. Augustus S. Crane, Elizabeth; first vice-president, Mrs. I. C. Pierson, of this city; corresponding secretary, Mrs. Gideon E. Ludlow, Westfield; recording secretary, Miss Catherine N. Reeve, Basking Ridge; young people's work, Mrs. Adrain Lyon, Perth Amboy; freedmen, Mrs. J. Anderson Frazer, Elizabeth; literature, Miss Laura Vanderbeck, Somerville; treasurer, Mrs. J. Edward Keron, Elizabeth. While there was no definite decision as to the holding of the next session, Metuchen will very likely be the place.

The meeting was a success from every standpoint, and the various reports submitted showed that much had been accomplished during the year past.

The program for the afternoon session included a conference on Young People's Work at 1:15, hymns, scriptural readings and prayers. The Rev. S. R. Spriggs, of Alaska, gave an interesting talk on Work at Point Barrow. Mrs. Augustus S. Crane, the president, told of a recent trip to Porto Rico, explaining the missionary work there, and also giving an entertaining talk on the island and its natives. *Reports of the various com*mittees were submitted and received and the meeting was closed with the offering of benediction by the Rev. William B. Hamilton, of Hope chapel.

There were about 300 women in attendance and they were entertained by the Elizabeth members. The Elizabeth Presbytery includes Elizabeth, Westfield, Dunellen, Metuchen, Plainfield, Rahway, Basking Ridge, Bethlehem and scores of smaller towns.

At the morning session Miss A. Alwood, of Basking Ridge, led the devotional exercises, which was followed by an address of welcome by Mrs. R. S. T. Cissel. Mrs. Augustus S. Crane responded in behalf of the society.

Mrs. Gideon E. Ludlow, of Westfield, reported as corresponding secretary, telling of what had been accomplished by that branch of the work. Mrs. Adrain Lyon, of Perth Amboy, secretary of the Young People's Work, reported that that work was in a flourishing condition.

An interesting report was given by Mrs. J. Anderson Frazer, of Elizabeth, secretary of the work for freedmen. She told of her recent trip through the Southland, where she had a fine opportunity to observe the work which is being done for the freedmen. Miss Laura Vanderbeck, secretary of the literature department, gave an interesting report as to the work of her department.

According to report by Mrs. J. Edward Keron, the treasurer, the total amount received for the Woman's Board during the year ending March 15, was $6,222.68 and for the Freedman Board, $800.51, making a total of $7,023.20. This is an increase of $396.68 on the account of the Woman's Board, and $295.29, making a total increase of $638.97.

Greetings were received from some of the early officers of the society, among whom were Mrs. John Allen, Mrs. John Leggett Miss May White and Mrs. J. H. Owens.

FIGHTING FOR A SLICE OF TEN MILLION ESTATE

Mrs. Warren Marsh, of Arlington avenue, who was a beneficiary under the will of her uncle, John P. Packard, who died at Santa Ana, California, about six months ago, will attempt to break the will. The estate is valued at $10,000,000 and Mrs. Marsh was bequeathed $10,000, while the bulk of the estate was left to two cousins, Edward Winslow Packard, of Salt Lake, and Theodore P. Shear, of New York. Mr. Shear died about a month ago, leaving a family.

Mrs. Marsh, who is represented by her brother-in-law, Corporation Counsel Cryan A. Marsh, alleges that her uncle was of unsound mind and unduly influenced when he made his will and she seeks a third of the estate. Mr. Packard made his vast fortune in mining ventures. He was never married. He spent most of his last years at Salt Lake iCty and Marysville, California. After his death his body was buried at Albany, N. Y.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Prayer Meeting Topic For the Week Beginning April 4, 1909.

By REV. S. H. DOYLE.

Topic—Life lessons for us—from the book of Proverbs.—Prov. viii, 1-17. Consecration meeting.

The book of Proverbs was written by Solomon, the son of King David. Solomon wrote three books of the Scriptures—the Song of Solomon, probably when he was young; Proverbs during manhood and Ecclesiastes when he had reached old age.

A proverb is a short, pithy saying setting forth a moral or spiritual truth. It was peculiarly suited to Hebrew poetry, which is largely composed of comparisons and contrasts. Oriental sages were fond of using the proverb or parable, which is really a proverb enlarged. Solomon chose the proverb in which to express his philosophy of life. The Psalms and the Proverbs bear an important relation to each other and express the different characteristics of the authors, although they were first and last men. The Psalms of David are largely devotional, while the proverbs are practical. David lived closer to God than Solomon and was therefore better qualified than Solomon to be the psalmist of Israel. Solomon, on the other hand, was more a man of the world and better understood the practical affairs of men than his father and was therefore the better equipped to be the poet of practical admonition. In these facts we may learn a useful life lesson. Devotion, close living to God in the inward life, comes first in our lives, but it should be followed by the practical application of inward feelings and principles to the outward life. As the Proverbs follow the Psalms, the practical should follow the devotional.

The book of Proverbs has been divided into three divisions:

First.—Addresses to the young, chapters 1-ix.

Second.—Addresses, more varied, to all classes, ranks and ages, chapters x-xxiv.

Third.—Collections of extant records, made by scribes under the orders of King Hezekiah, chapters xxv-xxix. "These are also proverbs of Solomon which the men of Hezekiah, king of Judah, copied out" (Prov. xxv, 1).

To sum up all the life lessons of the book of Proverbs is impossible, but some of the prominent evils against which Solomon warns us in various parts of the book are as follows:

1. Filial impiety. The duty of children to parents is emphatically urged, occupying space in no less than nine passages. This duty needs to be emphasized in these days when children and young people seem especially addicted to the sin of filial impiety. Solomon condemns it and calls upon children to reverence, love and obedience to parents.

2. Bad company. Nothing is more harmful in life than evil companions, and Solomon lays great stress in his warnings against it.

3. Impurity. The sin of impurity, even to the extent of licentiousness, is one of our most prevalent evils. Young people especially should read in private Solomon's fearful pictures of its results and be warned against it.

4. Untruth. On nine occasions Solomon speaks of this subject. Dishonesty, untruthfulness and deceit in all forms are denounced. We live in an age much given to opposites of these in business, politics and social life. Solomon's warnings should therefore be heeded.

5. Slothfulness. No writer surpasses Solomon in denouncing sloth. He pictures its results as disappointment, decay and poverty. "Drowsiness shall clothe a man with rags."

6. Intemperance. This is another modern vice which Solomon pictures in its awful final results—its brawls, impurities, exhaustion and delirium, all issuing from the wine cup.

7. Solomon exalts wisdom—not the wisdom of books, but practical wisdom, the knowledge of right and wrong and doing of right and avoiding the wrong.

Notes From Foreign Fields.

The negro Endeavorers of Rhodesia go out two by two to preach in the kraals. One of these Endeavorers was once asked by his employer: "Why do you not learn to read? Isn't it enough to make money?" "Ah," he answered, "money will not buy eternal life."

Fully 3,000 Boer Endeavorers became prisoners during the Boer war with England. During their imprisonment the spirit of missions became strong among them, and 200 of them on their release volunteered to serve as missionaries to carry the gospel to the blacks. A new theological seminary was formed to train them.

Every German Endeavorer gives 12 cents a year to support the National Christian Endeavor union. They have sent several of their own number as missionaries to the Marshall Islands, and the spirit of evangelism is very strong among them.

In Snow Clad Alaska.

One of the first Christian Endeavor societies in Alaska consisted of five young men who met in a tent on the beach at Valdez. Then they built a log cabin, with "Christian Endeavor" over the door. It was the only house of worship in Valdez. They organized a reading room and a Sunday school and finally became a church, the Endeavor church. They did a great work in carrying material for a relief station up the glacier near by, a task occupying thirty-four days. This relief station saved many lives.

COAL PILED UP IN CENTRAL'S YARDS

The yards of the Central Railroad at Elizabeth are congested with cars filled with more coal than has ever been allowed to remain unmoved in that city since it became one of the important coal shipping points of the Atlantic seaboard. It was in anticipation of a strike among the miners that thousands of tons were shipped from the Pennsylvania coal fields to be stored against the possibility of a famine. It is estimated that in the last month there has been piled at various points in this State and Pennsylvania 10,000,000 tons of coal.

There is little opportunity to pile it in the Central yards at Elizabeth, so it still remains in the cars in which it was shipped. These cars have been run onto the sidings on the main line of the Central between Spring street and the Port depot, every foot of available rail being covered. At the foot of Port avenue, there are located the docks from which half of the coal is shipped to the Boston market is loaded on barges, there is also congestion. As rapidly as possible the coal in the cars that block the tangle of tracks at this point will be transferred into the bins and bins on the half dozen wharves owned by the Central. Many hundred tons will also be shipped to Hampton Junction.

Elizabeth is not the only point at which stores of coal have accumulated. Along the tracks of the Lehigh Valley Railroad at South Plainfield there are mountains of coal and at Port Jefferson, near Bayonne, there is in immense quantity stored. At Perth Amboy the Pennsylvania Railroad yard is three miles long that is given over entirely to the storage of coal.

EDUCATION OF MOTHERS.

In discussing the "Older and Newer Ideals of Marriage" in the April American Magazine, Professor W. I. Thomas claims that to handle the child wisely the mother should be as wise as society can make her. He says:

"The mother should be educated both in life and in the schools, and the solicitude and provision for her education cannot be left to be learned than for that of the scientific specialist. At the age of perhaps eight the child's brain is practically all in; he is short only in experience and practise. He can understand any abstract principle and any piece of machinery in theory. Even evolution to the Hottentot or Shakespeare, but when he spends his time with an uneducated nurse or an uneducated mother he goes to school and even to college with a mind so barren that one of our great colleges has actually installed a tutorial system by which an intelligent instructor practically lives with the boy and attempts the reparation of a misspent childhood.

"It is also true that there never was a time in the history of the family when it stood so much in need of an intelligent mother. Formerly life as a whole was largely comprehended within the family. The industries and arts, education and religion were carried on there. But these interests have now been abstracted from the home to such a degree that the family situation is left rather empty. Business pursuits keep the father away from home most of the time and even set very narrow limits to his intelligence, and it is therefore peculiarly important that the mother should be fit to represent the interests of life during that prolonged period before the child makes his connections with the outer world.

"Morality is, with reference to the welfare of society, not the aspirates of the individual, and a theory or practise which restricts the interests of the mother and thereby stunts the life of the child is, in the profoundest sense of the word, immoral."

WOULD CONDUCT SHOW
IN DEBELE'S HALL.

A moving picture show may be started in the borough next week, if Mr. Hiff, of New York, has been looking over the ground and has open negotiations for Debele Hall. His application for a permit has not been acted upon by Mayor Townsend as yet, his honor being desirous of, hearing the sentiment of public in regard to such an invasion of the borough.

Personally, the Mayor believes the moving picture show, properly conducted, to be an excellent inexpensive form of amusement, and one that any poor earner may enjoy. The promoter seems not in the least disturbed by the experiences of three similar enterprises within the last few months in the city.

Would Seem Not.

"Was there never a southpaw knight?"—Kansas City Journal.

Coal Oil as a Cleanser.

Keep a bottle of coal oil on a shelf close to the bathtub and make it a rule that each member of the family when the bath is finished wipes out the tub with an oiled rag. This makes for cleanliness and saves the maid's time.

FOR LUNCHEON OR "HIGH TEA."

Try This Way of Preparing and Serving Baked Virginia Ham.

Nothing is more delicious for luncheons and "high teas" than a Virginia baked ham. To prepare it, take a ham weighing from seven to nine pounds, scrape and scrub the outside, rinse well, cover with cold water and let stand 24 hours. Put to boil in cold water and simmer gently until tender. Take the kettle from the fire, but leave the ham in it until the liquid is lukewarm. Take out the ham and remove the skin, which should come off easily. Prepare a dressing of one beaten egg, two spoonfuls brown sugar, rolled bread crumbs or cracker dust, a level teaspoonful dry mustard with a little sour wine or cider to moisten. Spread this mixture over the ham, dot with cloves and put in a pan to bake. Pour a pint of sour wine or cider over it and bake, basting often until the cider is absorbed and the ham well browned.—Emma Paddock Telford.

USE FRESHLY BOILED WATER.

An Absolute Essential for the Making of Good Tea or Coffee.

There is more to the art of cooking than can be covered in any number of bare recipes. There are many little ways of doing things practiced by the best cooks which are not to be found in the ordinary cookbook.

One of these apparently trifling matters is the care of the tea kettle. Empty it and wash it out at least once a day—oftener if it be a small one.

If you wish good tea or coffee the secret is to make it with freshly boiled water. It is a great mistake to use water that has bubbled in the kettle from early morning till the afternoon, with a pitcherful added to it now and again to keep up the supply. Water that has been boiled and reboiled and an indefinite time is unwholesome and a frequent cause of indigestion.

Genoa Cake.

Required: Half a pound of flour, six ounces of butter, six ounces of castor sugar, four eggs, four ounces of sultanas, three ounces of mixed peel, half an ounce of shelled almonds, one grated lemon rind, half a teaspoonful of baking powder.

Line a flat square or oblong cake-tin with three layers of greased paper. Cream the butter and sugar until soft and white. Beat the eggs, and add them gradually to the butter and sugar. Sieve the flour and baking powder, and stir it lightly into these ingredients.

Clean the fruit, chop the peel, mix these with the lemon rind, and stir them in thoroughly, adding about half of the shredded nuts. Put the mixture into the prepared tin, shake the remaining nuts all over the surface, and bake the cake in a moderately hot oven for about one hour and a half. It will weigh about one and three-quarter pounds.

Checkerboard Cake.

Light part: One and one-half cups of white sugar, one-half cup of butter, one-half cup of sweet milk, whites of four eggs, one teaspoonful of vanilla, two teaspoonfuls baking powder in two cups of white flour. Dark part: One cup of brown sugar, one-fourth cup of butter, one-half cup of sweet milk, yolks of four eggs, two teaspoonfuls of baking powder in two cups of white flour, one teaspoonful of cinnamon, one-half teaspoonful of cloves, one-half nutmeg. Mix the dry spices, baking powder and flour together. Now place a spoonful of light in the center of your jelly pan, then a ring of white, then dark again, so on, till pan is filled. Next pan out a light center, a dark ring, then light again, so on, till the pan is filled, then alternate layers.

Delicious Meat Loaf.

Two pounds of round steak, one pound of fresh pork, three green peppers, one-quarter of a nutmeg, one egg, one onion, grated fine, one large cup of stewed tomatoes. Season all well with salt and pepper. Put meat and peppers through chopper, then add seasoning and tomatoes. Have cracker crumbs on molding board, form into loaf and roll thereon. Put loaf into spacious, well-buttered pan and bake three-quarters of an hour. Baste frequently with butter.

Prune Pie.

Make your crust quite rich. This is a good recipe for crust. Take two cups of flour for two pies, add a little salt, one-half teaspoon of soda, one of cream tartar. Sift together with one teaspoon of sugar, two large tablespoons of lard and one of butter. For filling take one pound of prunes, wash in warm water, soak over night in one quart of water and boil very slowly till tender; then stone and mash. Add a pinch of table salt, two cups of sugar. This will make three pies.

Walnut Cream.

Rub a cream cheese to a paste with a silver fork. Add soft enough add a little melted butter or sweet cream. Season with salt and pepper. Make into small balls and into each press the halves of an English walnut. Lay on young, crisp lettuce leaves and stand where it will get cold. When ready to serve pour over it mayonnaise dressing and send to the table with thin slices of toasted bread.

Orange Jumbles.

One-third cup butter, one cup sugar, one egg, one-third cup milk, 2¼ cups flour, two teaspoons baking powder, one-half teaspoon salt, one teaspoon orange extract. Cut with doughnut cutter, sprinkle with sugar and bake in moderate oven.

McCLELLAN IN LECTURE EULOGIZES CLEVELAND

"Principles in Politics," his subject in the first of his Stafford Little lectures before the university, served as a basis for Mayor George B. McClellan, of New York, in a eulogy of his predecessor at Princeton, the late Grover Cleveland.

"I feel that I pay him the tribute that he would have preferred," Mayor McClellan began, "in choosing as my subject one that meant so much to him." Later the lecturer alluded to Cleveland as one who had "assumed that Presidency acclaimed as the savior of Democracy," and left it "ignored by his party's convention and repudiated by his party's chiefs."

Mayor McClellan said he found it difficult to define the meaning of the terms "political principles." From an ethical point of view they might not be principles at all, for they were at best only the political hopes of parties or individuals, and might not be either generally accepted, fundamental, universal or even truths. He believed that the very theory of the State that the fathers believed in implicitly, that men in their natural state were free, possessing absolute liberty, had been rejected.

"Each of the two great parties," he declared, "has been at one time or another strict constructionists and loose constructionists, centralizer and decentralizer. Party history has shown that while both parties have always expressed a loyal devotion to the Constitution, that party which has invariably shown the greatest solicitude for its strict interpretation has been the party for the moment in opposition and free from all care and responsibility in its enforcement."

"While it is true that to the Republican party belongs the credit of incorporating in its platform of 1896 the single gold standard plank drawn by ex-Senator Platt, of New York, it is no less true that to President Cleveland belongs the honor of having irrevocably committed our country to its maintenance."

Reverting to the alienation of President Cleveland from his party, the lecturer said:

"It has often been said that Mr. Cleveland might have prevented the break in the Democratic party had he treated the Democratic leaders in Congress with more consideration and tact. Those who have said this forget that the leaders of the Democratic organization were at the time in open alliance with the Populists; that the very smallest olive branch they could have accepted with the consent of their following in the South and West was the President's support of the cause of 'free silver.' The country was trembling on the verge of bankruptcy; any compromise would have meant the stoppage of gold payments and absolute national ruin."

Mr. Cleveland was confronted, Mayor McClellan said, with the choice of saving his party or preserving the credit of the country. He chose the latter, even to his party, he added, and by doing so proclaimed his devotion to political principle as opposed to opportunism. The lecture was closed with a quotation from Mr. Cleveland's last message. In it he said that nothing in the retrospect of his public service was more comforting than the recollection of duty well performed and the memory of a constant devotion to the interests of "our confiding fellow-countrymen."

FOR A CANDY PULL.

Here are recipes for a candy pull:

Old-Fashioned Molasses Candy—Two cups best New Orleans molasses, one cup sugar, one cup milk, two tablespoonfuls butter, one tablespoon vinegar. Let boil until it will harden in cold water, taking care that it does not burn. Add one teaspoon soda, and pull when partly cool. Butter the hands well to prevent the candy from sticking.

Salt Water Taffy—To each cup white sugar add two tablespoons water, and cook without stirring until it will crisp in cold water. Just before removing from the heat add a quarter of a teaspoon of cream of tartar and one teaspoon vanilla or lemon flavoring. Pull when partly cold as you would molasses candy, until it is perfectly white, then cut into small pieces with chopping knife or shears.

Friendly Greetings.

"Well, well, Jove, this is lucky," cried a young man as he heartily slapped the back of a gentleman whom he overtook in the street. The other turned round sharply and angrily, showing the face of a complete stranger.

"I thought it was my friend Jackson," said the young man, confused.

"All right," said the stranger; and he doubled the young man up with a tremendous blow in the waistcoat.

"What did you do that for?"

"I thought that was what Jackson ought to do," remarked the stranger, as he resumed his interrupted walk.—Tudor Jenks in Judge.

BANKER-POET VISITS BISKRA IN ALGERIA

Former Mayor L. V. F. Randolph and party have recently visited Biskra in Algeria, North Africa, south of the Aurez mountains. Biskra is the northernmost and most important of the oases of the Desert of Sahara, about 400 miles from Algiers across the Atlas Range. It was a place of some consequence under the Romans two thousand years ago and was called Vlsecra. Its population—nearly ten thousand—is chiefly Arab. But the French took possession in 1844, and, despite several uprisings, hold this and all other parts of Algeria. It is an important military station. The climate for the first three months of *the year is dry and bracing. After*ward it is hot. Biskra is watered by a stream from the mountains, whose valley the railway follows for fifty miles; and in the bed of the stream at Biskra, strong springs arise, increasing the flow of the brook, or "oued," from the higher country. The town has many date palms and fine parks. The most beautiful spot in this vicinity is "Villa Benevente," owned by Count Landon de Longueville, and celebrated by Hichens as "The Garden of Allah."

Upon his visit to Biskra, Mr. Randolph wrote this tribute to that oasis:

BISKRA.

O Biskra, bright Biskra! Thy sire was the Dessert—
Thy mother the "Oued" of the far, hoary mountain.
Their soul-thought in common, thou bloomedest in beauty—
The child of the sand and the fast-flowing fountain.

The East and the West in thy garden may commerce;
War's terrors no longer can trammel.
The hard-footed iron-horse, welcoming burden,
Takes the fardels of trade from the soft-footed camel.

On thy pure arch of turquoise a rich revelation
Is written at sunset—entrancing the story!—
Of a desert all golden; of peaks amethystine;
Of emerald palms; of a sun's liquid glory.

When Aures' sweet breath thrills the Garden of Allah
Through its "alleee" at eve-tide it dallies and whispers;
When pine-trees and poplars and palms stoop to listen
Who can say if it crooneth in love-chants or vespers?

O Biskra! proud Biskra! Thy mighty have fallen!
The boast of the marabouts fades into Tophet!
Thy warriors stalk listless in ghostly apparel—
The purposeless wraiths of the power of the Prophet.

O Biskra, thy life is the favor of Allah!
The sand for the oued can but patiently linger.
Far away from His grace, we were lost in the desert;
We wait for the life-giving touch of His Finger.

OFFER TO DONATE LAND FOR CITY-BOROUGH PARK

J. W. Lawrence, of the Plainfield Park Association, submitted to the Borough Council Monday a tentative map showing the exact location of the property owned by that organization. The majority of the property, which consists of about seventy-five acres, lies between West End and Rock avenues, Green brook running through it. It is the purpose of the association to convert a certain part into a public park, and at the junction of Green and Stony brooks to make an artificial lake, perhaps a quarter of mile in length. The chief purpose of the association is to lay out a sight for building lots.

The association is willing to deed to the city of Plainfield and North Plainfield, or to a joint commission appointed by the proper authorities, or to such trustees as may be mutually agreed upon for the purpose intended, upon proper conditions as to the maintainence of the premises by municipalities. In other words the association will turn the property over to the city and borough for a playground.

No action was taken by the borough fathers. It is understood that Mayor Townsend will refer the matter to a committee for further consideration.

POTTED PLANS AS HOUSE DECORATION.

During spring months potted plants of flowers are much used in decorating a house for social functions. Tulips, primroses, hyacinths, narcissi, when massed together or scattered through a room, give a charming effect at comparatively small cost.

The cost can be further reduced if one understands the art of massing. Three plants can be made to do the work of half a dozen, if, instead of standing each pot upright, two are turned on their side and the central one is tilted slightly forward. This brings the blooms in a solid mass and makes a fine showing.

For mantelpieces, tops of bookcases or shelves, tilted plants are best; on tables, piano or tabouret, do not attempt massing, but select fine individual plants, taking care to place them in regard to the background and color effect.

One large, full-flowered plant on a table looks better than a cluster of several smaller ones.

Do not mix colors in decorating. This is some what hard to avoid in spring plants, but if one has a collection of pink hyacinths, yellow narcissi and red tulips, at least see that they are not grouped together, and as far apart in the room as possible.

A few yards of smilax to drape, with manent leaves and green crinkle paper to cover the pots, stood singly, add greatly to the general effect. After use on special occasions the plants can be made to last a long while if they are all stood upright in a sunny window or where they get a good light.

If the living part of the house is overheated, plants will bloom longer if they are taken at night into a temperature of not more than 60 degrees.

Never let pots go dry, but do not keep soil water-soaked. Cut off blossoms as soon as they fade.

Treated in this way primroses continue to bloom until late spring, and hyacinths, tulips and narcissi retain their flowers much longer.

IN HIS NAME CIRCLE HOLD SUCCESSFUL TEA AND SALE.

A successful tea and sale of cake and candy was held Saturday afternoon under the auspices of In His Name Circle, of King's Daughters, at the home of Miss Ruth Timpson on Hillside avenue. This circle is the youngest in the city, having been organized recently. The membership consists almost entirely of young girls, whose mothers are identified with older branches of the organization.

Mrs. Frederic W. Butler is president of the circle, and the various heads of the different committees were as follows: Cake, Miss Morgan Wean; candy, Miss Gwendolin Gough; jig-saw puzzles, Miss Eleanor Iredell. Miss Ruth Timpson poured tea in the dining-room. The rooms were attractively decorated for the affair, there being a profusion of daffodils and roses. The attendance was large and liberal patronage was accorded. The proceeds from the affair will go toward the King's Daughters' work in the city.

AMUSEMENTS.

Blanche Bates' long New York run at the Belasco theatre in "The Fighting Hope" will terminate Saturday evening, April 10.

David Belasco's eminent star, David Warfield, is in his second great week of "A Grand Army Man" at the Lyric theatre, Philadelphia.

Klaw & Erlanger and Joseph Brooks have accepted a play by Mrs. Gertrude Andrews entitled "Through a Window," which they will produce early next fall.

Frances Starr will soon register her 100th performance as Laura Murdock in Eugene Walter's play, "The Easiest Way." There has not been a vacant seat at the beautiful Belasco Stuyvesant theatre since the opening night.

Frances Starr and "The Easiest Way" continue on the topmost wave of prosperity at the magnificent Empire theatre, New York, where the delightful Belasco star and the gripping Walter drama of New York life are proving potent factors to attract capacity audiences at every performance.

Fannie Ward has purchased from Channing Pollock the English rights of a one-act play, entitled "With Her Back to the Wall," which she will present next summer in London. The piece was especially written for Miss Ward because of Mr. Pollock's recognition of her work in his dramatization of "In the Bishop's Carriage."

Lillian Russell in "Wildfire" is doing phenomenal business on the Pacific coast. Her season will not close until the middle of July. She will open in her new play, "The Widow's Might," by Edmund Day, in New York city, the middle of September. Will Archie, who is playing the part of the stable boy, will be featured in "Wildfare" next season.

Joseph Brooks has engaged Eleanor Moretti for the cast of the Engelman, Iras, in "Ben-Hur" next season. Klaw & Erlanger and Joseph Brooks are organizing an exceptionally strong company for this play for next season and will present it in the larger cities, such as New York, Boston, Philadelphia, Brooklyn, Washington, Baltimore, Chicago and Pittsburg.

"The Right of Way," Klaw & Erlanger's production of the dramatization of Sir Gilbert Parker's novel, in which Guy Standing and Theodore Roberts are starring, is one of the successes of the season on the Pacific coast, despite the fact that the play was not received with the cordiality it deserved in the East. Messrs. Standing and Roberts remain together next season, appearing in an American play in which there are two big roles.

Major Guy Du Maurier, author of "An Englishman's Home," is the eldest son of George du Maurier, of "Trilby" fame and his "An Englishman's Home" is the invasion drama which has worked all England into a fever of patriotism. About four months ago Major du Maurier, who is serving with the regiment at Pietermaritzburg, in South Africa, sent home this thrilling play to his brother Gerald, the actor. Gerald was at once struck with its possibilities and set to work to alter its technique A little later called in Mr. Barrie, who supplied a few humorous touches, but who *still modestly dis*claims any share in the play. Then came a bitter blow. The censor of plays declined to pass the play for fear of causing international trouble. It was then explained that no mention whatever would be made to Germany in the play, nor would a German uniform be seen in the production. The "enemy" which invades England was named the "Empress of the North," and finally Mr. Haldana, the Secretary of War, and Lord Roberts, who read the play, prevailed upon the censor to allow it to be played. The most remarkable feature of the production is the preponderance of the young men over the usual matinee girls in the cheaper parts of the theatre.

"A Gentleman from Mississippi," at the Bijou theatre, New York, is looming up as a Gilbuller of Sackcribbed success among the many failures of the New York season. It is not only the best laughing entertainment on Broadway, but it is full of charming love interest and vibrant with the spirit of home life in and on a public place. Although the action flashlights the social and political life of Washington, its personages are *chiefly Southern people and its at*mosphere is quaintly Southern. But there is no Dixie and Dixon line in its broad area of genial fun, and the little theatre of famous successes, packed to capacity always, resounds with roars of laughter, and the players are recalled again and again at the end of each act. The courtly old-fashioned United States Senator from the South, and his audacious and alert young Northern secretary, are a great fun-making combination, and their fight for honesty in the naval base scheme is gallant and exciting. "A Gentleman from Mississippi" has firmly gripped the elusive fancy of New Yorkers and out of town play-goers since late last summer, and there is no sign of waning popularity. Very significant are the crowds of women and young people who attend the Wednesday and Saturday matinees.

RINGLINGS AMAZE NEW YORK.

Opening in Madison Square Garden Biggest Hit in Fifty Years.

Ringling Brothers' circus has made the biggest hit of any similar amusement enterprise in the past fifty years in New York city. One of the biggest audiences that ever filled Madison Square Garden was amazed at the brilliant performance last night, when the big circus opened its season.

The long program was one succession of surprises. The Schuman horses from the Circus Shuman at Berlin, Germany; Robiidello, the wire wizard from Mexico; the Loren family of acrobats, also from Germany; the double somersaulting automobile, presented by a young French girl; the Arthur Saxon trio of strong men, also new to America; the telephoning elephants; the Curzon sisters, in their charming aerial suspension act, and their brilliant equestrian spectacle are a few of the features that gave the performance distinction above all others ever seen in the Garden.

A more distinguished audience never before gathered in the big auditorium, and from the grand entry to the very last act the building rang with applause. The Ringling Brothers have scored as they never have in the past. Their invasion of New York has been a triumph. The engagement will be a short one, and out-of-town visitors will do well to send their orders for seats in without delay as the demand for seats is larger than ever before in the history of circus affairs in New York.

Permanent Shubert Comedy Co.

The company which is now presenting Clyde Fitch's latest farcecomedy, "The Blue Mouse," is to hereafter as the Shubert Comedy Company and is to be the first of a series of permanent organizations to be formed and managed by the Messrs. Shubert. For more than a year, it has been a favorite contention of Mr. Lee Shubert that the drama of farce-comedy, produced with truly competent players, was much greater than recognized by most theatrical managers and that the interest of the public in an emotional problem play did not detract from the popular appreciation of play in a lighter vein. Another great success of "Girls" justified this conviction, and the still greater success of "The Blue Mouse has proved it beyond doubt or question. The Shubert Comedy Company, now offering "The Blue Mouse," will continue in that piece for nearly a year, and will then be supplied with yet another farce comedy, also from the pen of Clyde Fitch. The other three "Blue Mouse" companies will continue indefinitely in the present piece and then, if the success of the next farce comedy production by the Shubert Comedy Company justifies such a course, will change to the next offering of the central company.

CATES AND JONES ARE FAST FRIENDS AGAIN.

An altercation over a pool game in a Watchung avenue poolroom last Saturday night landed James Cates, colored, before the court on the complaint of Wade Jones, a colored friend of his. It seems that Jones was appointed stake-holder for a match game of pool, and the settlement of the bet involved high words and alleged insults.

When Cates took the stand, he appeared to be a peaceable party, who mildly denied any wrong-doing. He stated that he and Jones had always been good friends, "and I am still a good friend to him," he concluded. It seems a certain fair woman in the case, and Cates smilingly remarked: "Naturally, she care more for me than she does for him."

Judge Runyon finally succeeded in persuading Jones to withdraw his complaint and renew his friendship with Cates. The two colored men had a long hearty hand-clasp, while the genial Cates spoke of his pleasure at patching up all the difficulties.

GAVE DINNER IN HONOR OF Y. M. C. A. ATHLETES.

The dinner given to the championship athletic and basketball teams of the Y. M. C. A. by the Women's Auxiliary at the association parlors Saturday night, was one of the most enjoyable events given by the organization this season. It was attended by a large number of the best athletes in the city, and its success reflected great credit upon the women.

During the dinner honor medals were presented to Carl Stelner, Harry Rottberg and R. J. Lawrence Speeches were made by Secretary H. E Parker and Harry Gilmore.

CLAIM THEY ARE HEIR TO ESTATE OF $30,000,000

Miss Pearl Drake and Mrs. Henry Walling, of Port Monmouth, claim to be heirs to a fortune accumulated by Sir Francis Drake, the English discoverer and will take means to secure their share of the money. According to their understanding, when Sir Francis died he left a large sum of money in the Bank of England. This, with interest, it is reported, aggregates more than $80,000,000.

Not long since a member of the Drake family living in Virginia received word that the bank authorities had ordered the money removed from the institution, and, according to report, this has occasioned a stir among the reputed relatives of the discoverer. Miss Drake who is an orphan, makes her home with Mrs. Walling, who is a cousin. Miss Drake asserts that her share of the fortune amounts to about $20,000.

AMERICAN AUTHORS INTEREST WOMEN'S CLUB

A delightful program in charge of Miss E. E. Kenyon entertained the members of the Monday Afternoon Club at their meeting held in the informal meeting in the Hartridge Auditorium. The occasion was the fifth Monday of the month devoted to "Readings from American Authors." Mrs. DeWitt Hubbell read Roosevelt's oration on Abraham Lincoln delivered on the centennial of his birthday; Mrs. Hugh F. Fox read selections from Sidney Lanier and the "Subway Express" and Mrs. George H. Campbell gave some Uncle Remus stories with true southern accent. The readings were interspersed with some charming songs by American authors sung by Mrs. George S. Ring, the accompaniments to which were played by Miss Corey.

*An informal expression of prefer*ence for books found helpful by club members completed the literary program and was followed by a social half hour over the tea-cups.

VARIED PROGRAM AT TRINITY SUNDAY-SCHOOL.

The Sunday-school session at Trinity Reformed church, Sunday, was made of special interest through a varied program arranged by Superintendent F. E. Smith. There was a large attendance of members of the school and it joined heartily in the exercises. The first twenty minutes were devoted to a rehearsal of Easter music and then Superintendent Smith gave a ten minute temperance talk from the desk.

The annual meeting of the Sunday-school missionary society was then held and these officers were elected for the ensuing year:

President, Henry Seader; first vice president, Miss Mabel Wilson; second vice president, Mrs. J. M. Tier; third vice president, Mrs. H. E. Gayle; secretary, Miss Eliza Dufford; treasurer, Charles Layton; committee of arrangements, Mrs. Lafayette Rosenstiehl, Mrs. F. E. Woodruff, Miss Ethel Young, Miss Harriett Randall, Mrs. H. E. Gayle and Mrs. A. M. Tier.

Mrs. F. E. Woodruff gave an interesting mission study lesson on Arabia, using a map to point out the various mission stations supported by the Reformed Church of America and in which Trinity church is interested. The young people's society shown in missions and the school pledged an increase of $50 a year to missions provided the present missionary plans of the church are adopted.

SUNDAY-SCHOOL OFFICERS OF SEVENTH-DAY BAPTISTS.

The Seventh-Day Baptist church Sabbath-school held its annual meeting, Sunday, when reports for the year were presented, officers were elected and other business transacted. Orra S. Rogers, the superintendent, presided. The reports showed the school to be in good working condition.

The following officers were re-elected for the ensuing year: Superintendent, Orra S. Rogers; assistant superintendents, Henry M. Maxson and Asa F. Randolph; secretary, Nathan S. Wardner; treasurer, Charles F. Seeger; librarian, Miss Nettie Stillman; pianist, Miss Kea Rogers; chorister, Theodore G. Davis; auditors, Mrs. Asa F. Randolph and Mrs. Orra S. Rogers. Miss Ida L. Spicer was continued as superintendent of the primary department and Miss Nancy Randolph of the home department.

Besides the appropriations ordered in behalf of the denominational work, others were made for the various local charities, which has been the custom of the school for many years, and officers and teachers of the school are much encouraged over the progress made last year.

INTERVISITATION PLAN FOR THE ENDEAVORERS

State President John T. Sproull is sending out to all Christian Endeavor societies in New Jersey a suggestion for intervisitation among the societies. The plan is a systematic effort the carrying out of which cannot fail to be beneficial to the societies. It is a part of the general movement for emphasis upon specific objects in specific months.

It is hoped that there will be a hearty response to this suggestion of the State president, whose own work in increasing the spirit of fellowship among the societies is well known.

Concerning the intervisitation plan and other matters of interest to New Jersey Endeavorers, Mr. Sproull says:

"Dear Endeavorers:

"We regret exceedingly that J. K. Harriman, superintendent of the fresh air department of the State, in consequence of many business obligations, and because of the very successful work that he is doing in his own county union, of which he is the honored president, has found it necessary to resign his position on the State work.

"Mr. Riedle, of West Orange, has been appointed to fill the unexpired term of Mr. Harriman as superintendent of the fresh air department, and we most heartily commend him to your sympathy, support and co-operation. Mr. Riedle has had considerable experience in this kind of work as it is largely through his personal efforts that the Essex County C. E. Union has been enabled to put up its new fresh air home at Roseland, and I congratulate the Endeavorers of Essex county on his acceptance of the position, feeling assured that through his helpful and practical suggestions to meet the varying needs of each locality you will be enabled to do more definite work for the needy children. You will hear from him soon.

"In pursuance of our new plan, we would like the month of April observed throughout the State by the different societies as intervisitation *month, not that we want any societ*y or its members to go "gadding" for the "gadding" but for the definite results that will undoubtedly accrue from a thorough and careful planning of the work.

"We would suggest that there be planned an interchange of workers by pairing off the societies together and assigning three to six workers from each society to visit some other society on each of the four successive Sunday evenings, or the evenings upon which the meetings may be held. These designated workers are to report briefly to the society on each succeeding meeting night. In this way no society will have a small meeting or lose in attendance, in that while a society may send three to six of its workers to another society, it will on the same evening receive the same number of new workers visiting them from some other sister society.

"We all know the inspiration of a new voice in a meeting or of an outside leader, and we feel that if this interchange of workers and leaders shall be carefully and prayerfully planned and carried out during the month of April, each society will receive a new impetus in the work, and if backed up by earnest, believing prayer may bring new life to many societies now careless in connection to many Endeavorers—touch many lives for Christ. In arranging this interchange would suggest that representatives of societies get together and make a schedule of each individual society and the workers to be dispatched to each society who will during the month visit other societies; have them regularly assigned meeting by meeting to the individual societies which they are to visit and have the night, and what society their members are in return to visit.

"Have as these visiting delegates your best workers. If only one C. E. society in your place, unite with the other young people's societies (without regard to denomination or name), in the interchange of workers, or at least in an interchange of leaders. Arrange if possible to have a schedule covering all four meeting nights in April, thus swinging around in a circle, leaving out no society and giving each society a visit on each meeting night of the month, three to six workers. If possible have these visiting workers meet for a short prayer service together before starting for each appointment; and this entire series of intervisitation the subject of prayer in each society during the month.

"In the month of May we desire to take up extension work along the line of the organization of new societies, either Senior, Y. P. S. C. E., Intermediate or Junior, in every church in every town or village where it is possible either to organize or reorganize such societies. We want to secure at least one thousand new societies in New Jersey before July 1. This can readily be done if every society will definitely take up this work, thoroughly planning it out in advance and use tact and judgment in presenting the matter where no such society exists. There are many churches which have one of these societies and where by intelligent effort more could readily be organized, as for instance, where there is only a Y. P. S. C. E. and no Junior or Intermediate Society with ample material for such other organization and with great benefit to be derived therefrom."

CONVERTED MORMON'S ADDRESS AT Y.M.C.A

Hans P. Freece, of the International Reform Bureau of Columbia University, spoke before a large audience of men at the Y. M. C. A. Sunday afternoon on "Mormonism." Mr. Freece is the son of a Mormon, and his wide experience in the doings of the inner workings of the Mormon church enabled him to give a very clear interpretation of the belief.

In his discourse, in which he tried to point out the evils of the Mormon faith, Mr. Freece stated that both his father and mother had turned infidels, owing to the corruptness of the church laws. As it was, the son, who had been converted to the Christian religion and was doing all he could to prevent the growth of Mormonism, Mr. Freece's father was aiding him in every possible manner to collect data that would be of use to him in his work.

At the conclusion of the service, Secretary Parker stated that Mr. Freece would speak next Sunday, on the subject of the "Mormon and Politics."

MRS. E. M. ZEREGA DIES IN HER 100TH YEAR

Eliza M. Zerega, widow of Augustus Zerega, died in New York on Friday. She was born on the island of Saint Thomas on January 2, 1810. Her father was Dr. Von Bretton, a Danish nobleman. Her mother was an English lady. At the age of fifteen, on April 9, 1825, she married Mr. Zerega, who was then twenty-one. His father was Italian, and his mother English, and he was born in the French island of Martinique.

Shortly after his marriage Mr. Zerega engaged in mercantile business at La Guayra, Venezuela. He removed to New York in 1835, where he had a prosperous career in the shipping business. He died in December, 1879, having retired from business many years before. It will be noticed that the couple had more than sixty-three years of married life, and that Mrs. Zerega survived her husband more than twenty years—a remarkable instance of longevity.

They had eleven children, of whom eight survive, one of them being Mrs. Samuel Huntington, of Franklin place. Mrs. John Constable Moore, of Watchung avenue, is the daughter of a deceased son. Early in Mr. Zerega's married life he adopted Mrs. Zerega's young brother, Albert. He formerly resided on Park avenue, in this city, where his widow and children still live.

REVIVE INTEREST IN Y.M.C.A. FOR 'PLAINS

*The question of establishing a lo*cal branch of the Y. M. C. A. at Scotch Plains is again being agitated, at this time by Rev. Franklin K. Mathiews, pastor of the Baptist church. As yet no definite plans have been made, but Mr. Mathiews believes that there are sufficient men at the 'Plains who would be interested in such an organization.

It was ten years ago that this matter was discussed and as a result Dr. J. Ackerman Coles gave the use of the old school building on Grant street for the purpose. Nothing more than placing a Y. M. C. A. sign on the building was accomplished. Rev. J. S. Braker was then at the head of the movement. It is believed that Dr. Coles will allow his old offer to hold good, provided an organization is effected.

STATE BOARD DECLARES 'PLAINS DOG WAS MAD.

The Board of Health of Scotch Plains has received word from the State Board of Health that the dog shot Tuesday afternoon by Clinton Clark, was suffering from the rabies. The local board is considerably alarmed over the report for it does not know how many canines were bitten by the mad dog. In a number of instances dogs attacked have been chained up and closely watched.

Several owners of dogs have said that they would shoot their animals if the State Board report was adverse. Fortunately, no person was bitten by the mad dog, although there were several narrow escapes. The 'Plains board will issue a notice today that all dogs found running at large without a muzzle will be

"GOSHEN" ESTATE CLAIM

Colored Woman Wants Share of Estate of Showman who Posed as White Man.

REAL NAME GEORGE SCOTT?

Ejectment Proceedings Brought Against Owners of Land Formerly Belonging to the "Colonel."

In the ejectment proceedings brought by Mrs. Eliza J. Newby, of Metuchen, against Joseph J. Blakeley and William H. Wyckoff, both of Franklin township, Somerset county, which will come up for trial in the Supreme court, in Somerset county, next month, is a story that reads like a romance. Mrs. Newby, who is a colored woman, sues to recover her claim to the lands purchased by the Somerset men, as a daughter and heir of Colonel Ruth Goshen, who was a partner of the famous Phineas T. Barnum in the show business shortly after the Civil War.

According to an affidavit made by Mrs. Newby's mother, Mrs. Eliza Scott, who resides in Kansas, the latter claims to be Col. Goshen's widow. In a remarkable affidavit, Mrs. Scott alleges that she was born a slave, in Kentucky, in 1832, and that when twenty-four years of age she was married to George Scott, also a slave, whose master owned an adjoining estate to that of her owner. The ceremony, she says, was performed by one Rev. Joseph Dudley, and to this union four children were born to them. To escape being sold by his master, the husband, according to her oath, escaped and made his way to Canada in 1851. Because of the lightness of his skin, Scott found it easy to pass as a white man, and realizing the greater possibilities of a white person, he made an agreement with his wife and children that they were not to reveal his real identity, and not disclose the fact that he was colored." He corresponded regularly with his wife, but always under the assumed name.

Soon after the Civil War was brought to a close, Scott, it is alleged in the affidavit, joined P. T. Barnum and obtained an interest in the latter's show up Barnum and others he was known as "Col. Ruth Goshen." His daughter visited him once this time, the mother swears, and received some money from her father. Later, when the circus was showing at St. Louis, Mo., a son paid his father a visit and asked for money. The colonel offered him $2,000, but the young man demanded more. When the father refused his demands, young Scott as a means of revenge told Barnum that his partner was a negro. This information resulted in a severing of all business relations between the showmen.

The next heard of "Goshen," according to Mrs. Scott, was when he *died settled at Middlebush, Somer*set county. His wife, she alleges, that he would shortly join them at their home in Junction City, Missouri. Before he could do so, however, he was taken ill and died. Mrs. Scott also swears that she and "Col. Ruth Goshen" were married.

"Col. Ruth Goshen died on Feb. 22, 1889, and his will was filed at Somerville on April 8, 1889. One Mary L. Goshen, of Elgin, Ill., was named as next of kin, according to the document in question, she declares, but as the estate was left a life interest in all his estate and in case of her not having issue the estate was to devolve to one Mrs. Margaret M. Gelling, of Rochester, N. Y. A caveat was filed by Mary L. Goshen as the alleged wife and another was filed by Frances Sylvester claiming the estate as the heir at law but without stating the relationship. The will, however, was admitted to probate by the late Judge J. D. Bartine in the Somerset County Orphans' Court on Jan. 17, 1896.

According to the papers in the case, Willis D. P. Voorhees, now a justice of the Supreme Court, brought two actions for Mrs. Eliza Scott on November 27, 1905, as the real widow of "Col. Ruth Goshen," claiming dower rights, against Wyckoff and Blakeley, whose total of fifty acres of land near Middlebush had been owned by "Goshen." Judgment by default, it appears, was entered in the Wyckoff suit. The Blakeley suit comes up for trial next month. Mrs. Eliza J. Newby, the alleged daughter of Mrs. Scott and "Goshen," is the wife of Rev. Lafayette C. Newby, a colored preacher located at Metuchen. She retained Winfield Scott Angleman, of this city, to bring actions for ejectment against Blakeley and Wyckoff to recover the "Goshen" lands Suit was started against Blakeley on Dec. 15 last and against Wyckoff on Feb. 8.

"JIM" MARTINE'S RECORD

In Forty Years "Farmer-Orator" Has Made 4,105 Political Speeches.

ONCE SUCCESSFUL CANDIDATE.

The Picturesque and Admired Citizen Has Run for Office Many Times—Never Discouraged.

After having scanned over his diaries and done some calculating, James E. Martine, "the farmer-orator of Cedar Brook," and the undisputed champion of New Jersey's Democrats has figured it out that to date he has advocated the principles of Democracy from the rostrum approximately 4,105 times. This estimate does not include the countless private arguments and heart-to-heart talks he had had on the subject during the forty years in which he has held State fame as a war horse of Jeffersonian ideas.

"Yes," it is safe to say that I have spoken 4,105 times on behalf of the political principles which are my religion," said Mr. Martine to a Daily Press reporter. "I have not figured out how many words I probably have expended during such a long period in enunciating the great truths of my party. Life is too short to waste time in that way. But someone asked me a day or two ago how often I had talked and I confessed I had no idea. That led me, however, to look the matter up, and I'll be darned if it didn't surprise me. No. 1 haven't figured how much time is spent in railroad travel and other such expenses and what's more I don't care for I count it a good investment. I don't begrudge one penny of it.

"It's all a myth about my never having won as a candidate for office," continued the interesting Martine. "Why, bless your soul, I was elected a member of the Common Council right here in this Republican city away back in 1872. All told I have been a candidate before the people thirteen times. On one occasion I have been a candidate before the Legislature. That was when I was the minority's choice for United States Senator to succeed Mr. Dryden. I have been a nominee for the Assembly four times; three times in the Senate; for Senator twice for Congress, once for Sheriff and once for Mayor, and once for Council.

The picturesque Martine home, known to every Jersey Democratic politician of any consequence, is also the heart of Plainfield. It comprises fifty acres of valuable land. Situated in the centre of the estate is the quaint house, which is by all means the oldest landmark in this section of the State. The original structure was built in 1685 by Sir Thomas Gordon, an Englishman of great wealth. The estate then comprised 1,500 acres, and had it been kept intact until today, it would be of immense value. The Gordon home has only fifteen by twenty feet and was nothing more than a shack. When Sir Thomas' wife died and was buried in St. Peter's churchyard, Perth Amboy, the estate was sold to the DeCamp family in 1717. The house was practically rebuilt and the original part used as a kitchen. Since then it has been changed but little. At later periods it was the home of Edmund Clarence Stedman, the banker-poet, and his mother, Elizabeth Stedman, the Quaker-poetress. William A. Kinney, minister to France under President Franklin Pierce, and William E. Dodge, the New York philanthropists, at various times also made it their home. Forty-six years ago, Jerry Dunn, of New York, the father of "Jim," purchased the estate and it has since remained in the family.

Must Lessen Work.

Acting upon the advice of his physician, Rev. George A. Warner, rector of Holy Cross church, has announced that his health will not permit him to continue at the head of the Holy Cross Club, a strong organization comprising nearly 100 boys and young men of city and borough. The announcement, made by Rev. Mr. Warner at the meeting of the club held in the church parish house, Saturday night, was received with genuine regret by the club members, and the club has not yet announced its plans for the future.

Cake Sale a Success.

The cake sale under the auspices of the visitors of the home department of Trinity Reformed church Sunday-school, Saturday afternoon, was a success. There was a generous supply of fine cakes and all were disposed of at good prices. The proceeds will go toward a fund with which to purchase flowers and fruit for sick members.

P. H. S. JUNIORS NET $135. BY PERFORMANCE

Pupils of the Junior class of the Plainfield High School successfully presented two clever playlets at the school auditorium Saturday night. A large audience taxed the seating capacity of the hall to the utmost. Harry Van Zandt, president of the class, announced today that $135 had been netted by the affair, and this will be used for the class gift for the school.

"A Case of Suspension" was the title of the principal play presented, and it was preceeded by "The Facts of the Matter," as a curtain raiser. "A Case of Suspension" is an unusually clever piece, and the numerous comic situations were ably presented by a carefully trained cast of the pupils.

The cast follows:

"Dorothy Talcott," Miss Katheryn Moynihan; "Molly Stockton," Miss Louise Andrews; "Mildred Bartlett," Miss Grace Parker; "Harold Ellis," James Munger; "Tom Jenkins," Thomas Ricketts; "Jack Robinson," Otis Hovey; "Miss Ophelia Judkins," Miss Barbara Fleming; "Professor Emilius Edgerton," Howard Runyon; "Kathleen," Miss Lila Duy; "Jonas," Willet Gano.

The best meeting of the curtain-raiser, "The Facts of the Matter," was by Miss Bessie Alpaugh, as "Mrs. Grosvenor, a widow," and Miss Ouida Hetfield, her French maid. Those who took part:

During the intermission between the playlets the Plainfield High School quartet sang three selections. The members of the quartet are F. Clyde Doane, Guion Fountain, Roy Titsworth and Charles Prior.

GREENBROOK RESIDENTS FAVOR A SEWAGE PLANT

Opposition to the proposed plan to locate sewage disposal beds in North Plainfield township, for the joint use of Plainfield, North Plainfield, Dunellen, Fanwood and Scotch Plains, is rapidly disappearing. At a largely attended mass meeting of citizens of the township at the Greenbrook Schoolhouse on Saturday evening resolutions were unanimously adopted favoring the idea. These resolutions provided that if North Plainfield Borough makes application to locate such a plant in the township that the Greenbrook Improvement Association recommend to the township committee that it be granted, provided that the site chosen be west of Sebring's mills. The association, under whose auspices the meeting was held, went on record as being strongly opposed to the selection of a site east of the mills.

The resolutions also impose several conditions, which to the majority of the members are considered fair. Among these are that the borough shall pay satisfactory damages to any property-owner effected by the introduction of the proposed plant; that the borough shall pay the township for permission to enter its territory and that the amount to be agreed upon through the township committee. Other conditions provide that the borough pay each effected property-owner for pipe line or disposal plant without charge at any time. Provision is also made that the system be the most improved and efficient and that a written agreement be signed before any permission is given.

President McCauley of the association in speaking of the matter, said: "It is the general impression that if it is necessary to locate a sewage disposal plant in the township it should be in the most isolated spot possible, which can only be found west of Sebring's mills. This location would give the borough of Dunellen an opportunity to join with North Plainfield and Plainfield for one general disposal plant. Our people are very anxious to get rid of the present Plainfield beds which have been and are so obnoxious. We trust that all necessary arrangements can be made to carry the matter to a successful satisfactory completion."

It is said that within the next two or three years Plainfield would have to spend at least $50,000 to improve its present sewage disposal plant. This would include the purchase of additional land for new beds.

Two of a Kind.

A distinguished specialist in Washington was called upon a week or two ago by an eminent government official for treatment for a nervous ailment.

"The first thing you must do," said the physician, after an examination, "is to give up both smoking and drinking."

Whereupon the eminent official became real peevish. "Look here, doctor," he burst out, "now you're talking just like my wife!"—Lippincott's Magazine.

CONVERTING THE HEBREW

GIVES STORY OF HER LIFE.

Jewish Women Firm in Their Faith —Rabbis Organized to prevent Conversions to Christianity.

Miss Ruth Angel, a missionary among her own people in New York, addressed the Christian Endeavor Society of Trinity Reformed church, Sunday, telling of the trials of the missionaries in the Hebrew quarters. Her mother was a Roman Catholic and her father a Roumanian Jew, of the Tribe of Levi, a tribe of Orthodox Jews. Miss Angel's father, according to her story, was preparing to be a rabbi in the Jewish seminary at Hanover, Germany. During the course of instruction a rabbi teacher said, "We will skip the 53d chapter of Isaiah." When asked why he said, "The Christians refer that chapter to their belief in Christ." Her father then became interested and thoughly studied the chapter. In referring to this incident, Miss Angel said that as it is the custom of all Jews to learn as many languages as possible, her father decided to learn English and he was told to go to New York, where he was informed there was less possibility of his being converted.

Continuing Miss Angel said:

"One day he said to his wife, whom he had met and married on the way to this country, that he was to the mission and listen to the preacher." They went and they were converted. When he informed his parents about the matter they told him that he was to consider himself dead to them."

While in Chicago, Mr. Angel went to the Union Theological Seminary, and before completing his course he established a mission there. Later he went to New York and continued his work among the Jews. He has been there for fifteen years and has been instrumental in the conversion of a thousand Jews.

Miss Angel said that the words the Jews base their conversion on are those inscribed on a certain arch in Rome, "and all Israel Shall be Saved." It is claimed by a great many Jews," said Miss Angel, "that Christ was and is equal to any Jew on the face of the earth today, but a great many say that He is not equal to any of them. Christ's first followers were Jews. Saul of Tarsus was a Jew, she said, and she did not see why the Jews did not accept the teachings of the New Testament. There is now in New York city, according to her story, a party of rabbis trying to stop the conversion of the people of their race and these rabbis go to any and the first meet.

Miss Angel declared that the Hebrew could be converted and would be converted as the race is now allowing itself to be more fully enlightened on "Christianity." There are now in New York one million, one hundred thousand Jews, and the needs for their evangelization is necessarily great, she said. Two missions are now being conducted in the Hebrew district of New York and the average attendance at meetings, from 100 to 150. The opening of the mission but ten or fifteen came. The prejudice of the women is hard to overcome, also, and there is strong opposition from the rabbis, but gradually the work is progressing and Miss Angel has confidence in it. With the help and co-operation of the Gentile Christian the Hebrew people will be saved."

HIS "NIGHT OFF" GOT HIM INTO TROUBLE.

"My night was off" was the explanation given by Herman Springer, a gardener employed by a prominent West Eighth street family, when he was arraigned before City Judge Runyon after his arrest at his employer's home Saturday night for drunkenness, and only was the man arrested, but he was "fired," for his clothes were sent to police headquarters Monday along with his wage money, amounting to $16.67, which was turned over to him by the Court after his announcement that sentence would be suspended.

Springer's "night off" and its sequel brought about the man's arrest when he returned to his employer's home with some bread. The bread supplied to the Court in rich Teutonic accents how willing he was to go for the bread. Complaining that he had grown tired of an alleged persistent diet of pickled herring and "oyster soup" The prisoner said he would "go quick" by Holyoke and waited around police headquarters after examining his baggage because he found that his overcoat and hat were missing.

PLAN ANOTHER MARATHON FOR SATURDAY, MAY 15

So big a success was the boys' marathon race, Saturday afternoon, that another such event will be held the coming summer, May 15. It seems the boys are not satisfied with the time that was made, of 36 minutes and 25 seconds but as it was the boys smashed the old record held by the men, of 39 minutes.

The race Saturday was made in remarkably fast time. The distance which was over five miles, gave the boys a good wind test, and to show their condition, all but five boys finishing. The Plainfield High School had more first men than any other organization, A. H. Durar, the winner, netting first money to the P. H. S. Others who finished close were Andrew McDonough, P. H. S.; Ray Manley, Y. M. C. A.; William Taylor, Y. M. C. A.; Ray Cline, Holy Cross; D. S. Minck, Y. M. C. A., and A. S. Campbell.

SALE OF UTILITIES NETS $80 FOR CHURCH.

Practically making an innovation in the "value received" idea in church sales, the women of Holy Cross church held a highly successful utility sale at the parish house Monday afternoon. Useful articles and things to eat were disposed of at "unreasonably reasonable" prices, which compared favorably with those asked at the stores. More than $80 per, netted, and it will be used for new choir hymn-books and choir music.

Mrs. F. W. Creesy was chairman of the committee in charge of the affair, and was assisted in the arrangements by a committee of the church women. The articles sold were made by the women of the church so that the receipts were net. The affair was largely attended and tea was served by these women of the church: Mrs. Samuel Townsend, Mrs. Gertrude Cochran, Mrs. Frank Allen, Mrs. George A. Warner, Mrs. T. E. Rhoades, Mrs. Francis DuBois and Mrs. F. O. Ball. Assisting were the Misses Marjorie Hart, Emma VanAlstyne and Harriet Nichwitz.

Those in charge at the various tables were as follows: Mrs. Hiram Woodruff, aprons; Mrs. J. W. Coddington, household utilities; Mrs. Frederick Dietz, home-made preserves, candies and sundaes; Miss Miriam Carmen, ties and belts, and Mrs. G. V. Van Hoesen, bags.

E. C. DEAL IS WELL RECEIVED IN THE SOUTH.

E. C. Deal, who was recently division superintendent of the electric department of the P. S. C., with headquarters at Elizabeth, and who is the new manager of the street car system for the Public Service Corporation of Greensboro, North Carolina, has evidently made a favorable impression among the southerners. The Greensboro Telegram, under date of March 25, has the following to say of Mr. Deal;

"The new manager of the street car system here is E. C. Deal. He is a young man of pleasing appearance and of marked modesty, giving one the impression that he is a man to do things rather than talk. Despite his youth he has had large and varied experience in his line of work.

"As has been stated, the plant is now owned by the North Carolina Public Service Company, this corporation having come into ownership at noon on Tuesday. The officers of the company are L. H. Hole, president; Bird S. Coler, vice-president; Z. V. Taylor, first vice-president and counsel; L. H. Hole, Jr., secretary and treasurer."

ADDRESS S. S. WORKERS

Many Parishes Represented at First Meeting of Episcopal Institute.

TO ELECT OFFICERS IN MAY.

Rev. E. M. Ferguson, Rev. Dr. H. H. Sleeper and Rev. G. A. Warner Give Talks.

The first meeting of the Plainfield Sunday-school Institute, an organization formed to systematize Sunday-school methods and to secure better results by teachers in the Episcopal Sunday-schools in this vicinity, was held Saturday afternoon at Grace church. In addition to delegations from Grace, Holy Cross and St. Stephen's Sunday-schools, Episcopal Sunday-schools at Bound Brook, Somerville, Bernardsville and Dunellen were represented.

Rev. E. Morris Ferguson, general secretary of the New Jersey State Sunday-school Association, spoke on "Methods of the Modern Sunday-school" and "Teachers' Training" was the subject of a helpful address by Rev. Dr. Henry Hale Sleeper, rector of Grace church, Elizabeth. Rev. George A. Warner, rector of Holy Cross church, made an address on "The Boy Problem."

Rev. E. Vicars Stevenson, rector of Grace church, presided, and was in charge of the short devotional service. An opportunity for questioning and comparing experiences was given at the conclusion of each address. Coffee was served in the parish house at the conclusion of the meeting. The Institute will meet again early in May, at which time an organization will be effected and officers chosen.

TO SUGGEST CHANGE IN HACK ORDINANCE

The Councilmanic license committee held a conference with the cab drivers and operators of taxicabs in the office of Mayor Charles J. Fisk, Saturday night, when questions relative to that business were discussed. The cab drivers expressed the opinion that the motor vehicles would injure their trade to some extent, but made no serious objection.

The Plainfield Taxicab Company has been operating two machines here for several weeks, the rates being the same as charged by the cabmen, but this is only a temporary arrangement. The company has filed its proposed rates and they have been incorporated in an amendment to an ordinance proposed for adoption by the Common Council.

According to these rates the company will carry from one to four passengers a half mile for thirty cents with an additional charge of ten cents for each quarter mile thereafter. The cabmen charge charge twenty-five cents for each passenger carried within the limits of Grant and Johnston avenue and Randolph road and Greenbrook. No doubt the cabmen will revise their rates to conform to those of the taxicab company, provided the Council adopts the proposed amendment. No exclusive franchise would be granted to the Plainfield Taxicab Company and nothing would be done to prevent any person from employing a motor vehicle in this business if they desire.

It is the intention of the Common Council to adopt the amendment to the hack ordinance at the April meeting, the conference Saturday night being chiefly to get the views the cabmen as well as those identified with the Plainfield Taxicab Company.

BOROUGH MAYOR TO NAME SEVERAL COMMISSIONS.

Mayor Samuel Townsend plans to announce the appointment of several commissions, in the near future, for North Plainfield. Chief among these will be that of the tree commission, similar to that in this city, and it is probable that Henry C. White will be named as its chairman.

In all likilhood, the Park commission will be composed of private citizens, although the brook committee, which will co-operate with a similar committee from the city in cleaning up Green brook, will be made up of councilmen.

SOME ODD VAGARIES IN EASTER HATS.

Who knows what will replace the rose on the feminine head for Spring?

"Flower-pots," "pudding-bowls," "basins"—these are the delightful names which the merry milliner seeks to slap upon our unoffending heads.

Certain it is that if we turn back the fashion book pages to a hundred years ago, there we shall see just such odd little hats as are shown in these early days, when Spring blooms in the shops however it may yet conceal itself from the streets and fields.

The curious high-crowned scoop bonnets, very like an upside-down flower pot with a generous sugar scoop attached, are such as parade through the pages of the history of 1804 and 1815 and thereabout. All they need to complete the illusion are three-cornered shawls and more voluminous skirts.

These high-crowned scoop hats are deliciously trimmed. One of rough straw has on front an enormous poppy as big as a tea plate, and on the side a great velvet bow, hat, poppy and velvet all in a deep catawba grape color. On the front of another is tossed a big loose bunch of pansies, cowslips, roses, violets and great pond lilies, all nodding as high as the lofty crown.

Then there is, too, the demurest little mushroom hat, small and meek and unoffending, with a chaste little bow of velvet at one side, and a lady-like little posy on the other—quite like the feminine headwear that marched through Godey's Lady Books we used to find in our grandmothers' garrets and cut paper dolls out when we were little.

Numerous adaptations of the Charlotte Corday appear. And there is a dear little picture hat on the Henri IV. order, small, with plumes sweeping from the brim that rolls up on one side.

Most of the hats are undeniably diminutive. The Merry Widow and her ilk is "layin' low" as Br'er Rabbit for the nonce.

Several things are certain about the new hats:

Colors and color harmonies are exquisite.

Velvet is the ribbon par excellence, blending better than anything else with the lovely toned flowers used.

Poor old overworked satin takes a back seat.

Flowers are so wonderfully realistic that you involuntarily sniff the air to catch their sweetness. The new roses in particular are enough to make nature herself envious.

FUNERAL SERVICES OF MRS. WM. H. LARRABEE.

E. church, of which she was a member; Rev. Dr. Jesse L. Hurlbut, of Bloomfield, and former pastor of the local church, and Rev. Dr. James M. Buckley, editor of the Christian Advocate. There was a large attendance of relatives and friends. The floral tributes were particularly numerous.

Interment was made at Hillside cemetery. The pall bearers were F. S. Cutler, Harry Thorn, Wilbert Pennington, Dr. James R. Joy, George White and Henry A. McGee.

The New Jersey Cricket League met at the Continental Hotel, Newark, Saturday night and decided on the teams to comprise the membership this season. The clubs include Bound Brook, several members of which are Plainfielders. A schedule, which opens May 22 and closes September 18, was adopted.

At a meeting of the Board of Health Monday there was a consideration of the small-pox situation in this city. It was reported by Health Officer Leon R. Thurlow that there are but three cases here, James White, John Woodston and Willard Hammond, all inmates of the Isolation hospital, and they have about recovered from the disease and expect to be discharged next week.

The Board announced that the period of incubation or exposure is over and it does not expect any new cases as a result of the recent outbreak. Every possible precaution was and has been taken to prevent a spread of the disease and the means proved effective.

Judges' Pay Bill in Balance.

If the two Newark District Court judges expect to get their salaries increased from $4,000 to $5,000 by the Young bill, House 338, they will first have to assure Mr. Young that they will preside over their courts at least five days every week. Otherwise Mr. Young will let his measure die in committee or at the most will oppose its being reported. The Young bill has received the indorsement of the Lawyers' Club of Newark, and is also looked upon favorably by other members of the Newark bar. There has been much complaint, however, Mr. Young says, over the number of days the Newark judges officiate each week, and for that reason he has decided not to let his act get before the Legislature until he has been assured there will be five day sessions. The measure is in the hands of the Judiciary Committee, of which Mr. Young is a member, and is marked "not to be reported until Mr. Young says so."

REMAINS OF PRIMITIVE MAN.

Discovery That Seems to Clear Up Disputed Point.

The name Neanderthaloid has been used to denote an extremely ancient race of men, of which remains were first found in 1856 in the Neander valley, Germany. Since then an entire skeleton of an adult woman of the same type was found in Dordogne, France, in 1905, and only a few months ago, near the same place, there was unearthed the skeleton of a youth showing the typical characteristics of race—strongly developed supraorbital ridges, powerful maxilla, large teeth, etc. The wisdom teeth were still in their alveoli. The lower jaw was prognathous to an extent almost calling to mind the muzzle of an animal. The canine teeth were not very highly developed, as in anthropoid apes. The bones of the limbs were entirely in accord with the type known to us in paleolithic man, the femur massive and stubby, the radius curved. Near the human remains were found those of Bos primigenius.

The attitude in which the body was placed seemed to indicate that it had been placed there for burial. This is of special interest, as it has hitherto been somewhat generally held that primitive man did not bury the dead, and that this was an indication of his entire lack of all religion.

GET OUT OF WORRYING HABIT.

Exercise of Reasonable Amount of Will Power Is Necessary.

If will usually be found useless to try to stop worrying by simply saying: "I won't worry." That is the negative way of reaching the trouble. Something must be put in its place. Having assumed the general attitude of resistance to ill, fill the mind with thoughts of other things. Get an interesting book indoors and keep outdoors as much as possible, and get into good physical condition. People in sound health are almost never known to worry. A person who has worried habitually for a long time has developed grooves into which his mind easily slides. He can change the direction of his thought very much by auto-suggestion. The last thing before going to sleep or just after awakening, when the subconscious self is said to be easier to reach, suggest new topics, and if this is persistently done and a reasonable amount of will power exercised, the worries will scatter. Even if the worst happens, it will generally be found not as bad as what had been dreaded. "The sense of death is most in apprehension." There are few people who are not at some time confronted with situations calculated to cause uneasiness. Business troubles threaten, disease attacks, plans miscarry, friends prove false, but when you have faced the cause of trouble, whatever it may be, and decided on a course of action, dismiss it from your mind.

Surnames in Bosnia.

Bosnia is a land where a man's surname very often varies according to his religion. In the old days families often divided their members between Christianity and Islam, so as to be certain to have friends on the winning side, much as old Scottish families in some cases deliberately divided themselves between Jacobite and Hanoverian. In such Bosnian cases, Sir Charles Eliot explains, all representatives of the original family recognize each other as relatives, but generally they use different names for the two branches, conveying the same meaning in Slavonic and Turkish respectively. For example, there are the names Ralkovich and Jenetich ("Rai" and "Jennet" both meaning paradise), and Sokolich and Shahinatich ("Sokol" and "Shahin" both meaning falcon).

Swelling Her All Up.

Paris judge tells a lady all about herself just before sending her up for manslaughter. He said, in part:

"You are a female Apache. You received as many stabs of the knife as you gave, and as many revolver shots as you fired. Two years ago a dagger was plunged into you by your lover, and the wonder is that you survived.

"Last year another lover blew out your eye with a revolver. How you survived this is also a mystery. You paid his savage lover back by stabbing him during sleep. He was sent to the hospital, and almost miraculously recovered."

Outside of that she was probably a great kid.

Birthdays and Health.

For several years I have noticed that in a period of from two days to two weeks preceding the anniversary of my birth I have had a feeling of returning vigor, a renewal of vitality such as I have not experienced at any other time of the year. This has lasted for from two to eight days, but has always expired before the anniversary. Hence it has occurred to me that there may be some connection between the approach of the recurrence of one's birthdate and the maintenance of one's health.—Letter in London Graphic.

Chinamen at Communion.

An infrequent visitor to St. Paul's chapel was amazed to see three Chinamen go up to the communion rail one recent Sunday, come back to their seats, and sit very quietly and intently throughout the partaking of the communion by the others.

"It is not at all strange," said the clergyman in charge. "There are very few nationalities that are not represented here in St. Paul's chapel."—New York Press.

BALTUSROL CLUB BURNED

Club House and Its Rich Furnishings are Completely Destroyed by Fire.

ESTIMATED LOSS IS $100,000.

Chef Jumps for His Life Breaking Both Legs—New Jersey's Wealthiest Golf Club —To Rebuild.

The clubhouse and contents of the Baltusrol Golf Club, near Summit, was totally destroyed by fire at an early hour Saturday, causing a total loss of $100,000. The blaze so far as can be learned started over the kitchen and was caused by a defective flue.

The fire was discovered by Gasson Fesso, chef at the club, who occupied a room just above the kitchen. He was trapped by the flames and smoke and was obliged to jump out of a second story window. In falling both his legs were broken and he was taken to the Summit hospital, where his condition is said to be critical. More than a dozen prominent Plainfielders belong to this club.

Steward Jaquith and several waiters, who lived at the club, had great difficulty in escaping with their lives, several being compelled to jump out of windows. As quickly as possible one of the waiters reached the telephone in the clubhouse and summoned the Springfield fire department.

When the firemen reached the scene the whole structure was ablaze and there was no possibility of saving anything. Aside from the loss to the building the greatest damage to the club includes all of the valuable trophies, paintings and handsome furnishings, for which it was noted. Many of these things can never be replaced.

The fact that Chef Fesso had a room so close to where the blaze started was possibly the only thing that saved his life. He was first awakened by a choking sensation caused by the smoke and then the crackling of the fire thoroughly aroused him. He immediately tried to escape, but found all avenues shut off. He then called loudly for help and in this way he awakened Steward Jaquith, who in turn aroused the waiters.

Owing to the lack of sufficient water supply the employes of the clubhouse were greatly handicapped and were helpless to fight the flames. The Springfield firemen could do but little better and they were practically powerless to cope with the fire which by this time had enveloped the whole structure. There was nothing to do but let it burn itself out.

The great blaze illuminated the heavens for miles around and hundreds of people were attracted to Baltusrol by automobiles and carriages. The whole Watchung Mountain range was lit up and made a beautiful sight.

The clubhouse, one of the most famous in the east, and considered one of the wealthiest organizations of this character in this part of the country, was of the old fashioned type, but during the past year or two large sums of money were expended in making additions to the building. It occupied a picturesque site and was the mecca for a great many New Yorkers. The interior was done in the old-fashioned style, quaint and attractive and besides the costly furnishings were a great many trophies that have been won by the members in competition.

The officers and directors of the club held a meeting this morning and it was unanimously decided to rebuild the clubhouse on a more elaborate plan. It will be modern in every respect and thoroughly equipped with all improvements.

When the flames were at their highest in the clubhouse sparks flew to the squash court buildings, barns and auto garage. They took fire and lit up the surrounding country for miles and the people from several of the nearby suburbs, including those from Short Hills, flocked to the scene of the conflagration.

The Baltusrol Golf Club is one of the best-known golfing organizations in the East. The membership runs up nearly to 2,000, and it is comprised mostly of New Yorkers. Many of big golf tournaments have been held over the links of the course, including the national championships for both men and women, the professional championships, the metropolitan championships for men and women, the New Jersey tournament and the intercity tournament between New York, Philadelphia and Boston. The programme for this season included several big features.

Louis Keller, of New York city, organized the club about fifteen years ago. The site is on the eastern slope of the Watchung Mountains and affords a beautiful view of the surrounding country. From time to time additions had been made to the building, until it occupied property to the extent of a city block.

Allaying His Fears.

The New Convict—Say, old man, I'm likely to go stamping around my bondoir at all hours of the night —I'm a sleepwalker. It worries me terribly, too.

Guard—It needn't in this hotel, but there isn't the slightest danger of your walking out of a window.—Puck.

UP-TO-DATE APPARATUS NOT FOR NEW FIRE HOUSE

The Councilmanic fire committee met Friday night for the purpose of discussing the bids received for furnishing the city with a combination chemical engine and hose wagon for the East End fire-house. The bid of James Boyd & Brother, of Philadelphia, $1,430, for a combination chemical and hose wagon, to be drawn by horses, was considered the lowest, and the committe proposes to make further inquiry into the standing of the concern and what it will do for the price named.

It has practically been decided to recommend the purchase of a horse-drawn apparatus, because the city's means will not permit anything else. Councilman Herbert Buxton appeared before the committee last night and made a strong effort to change the plans of the committee in favor of an automobile apparatus. He presented a resolution, suggested for adoption, and tried to show the members how the city could purchase such an apparatus and finish the new fire-house within the appropriation, but the committe could not agree with Mr. Buxton. Nothing further will be done until an investigation is made and a report received concerning the bid of James Boyd & Brother.

JERSEYMAN INSURED ANTARCTIC EXPLORER

The safe return of Lieutenant Ernest R. Shackelton, Royal Navy, from his partially successful trip in search of the south pole is of more than ordinary interest to Jerseymen, inasmuch as one of their number succeeded in obtaining a heavy life insurance for the explorer after British agents had made a hopeless failure of an attempt to do so. For many months prior to his departure, the English naval officer had made futile endeavors to arrange for proper provision for his relatives in case of his meeting with death while in that strange and unexpected frozen region. No company would take the risk and the lieutenant undismayed had resolved to make the perilous journey without insuring himself.

It was in the summer of 1907 when all England was discussing Shackleton's nervy scheme and at that time Charles J. Wetzel, of Newark, a frequent visitor of this city, was sight-seeing at the British capital, his health having been impaired from over-work. Wetzel was chatting with friends at his hotel when one of them remarked causually that it was peculiar that no life insurance company would accept a risk on the explorer's life. Without loss of time, the broker investigated the rumor and finding it to be well founded set about on his own hook to "make good." He sought out the Lloyds', but after trying in vain to secure one of its thirty life insurance concerns, he turned to the English companies in London and Liverpool. With them he got the same treatment bearing the same old story from each that Shackleton's representatives had made a similar application over and over again only to be refused. Finally he got in touch with the actuary of the Liverpool and London and Globe Company, in true Yankee fashion he brought his arguments home and succeeded in obtaining a rate of one and one half per cent extra on the face of non-participating life policy.

Then the Newarker hunted up the naval officer. The result was that he insured him for $20,000 and the policy was delivered to the explorer before he departed in October, 1907, in search of the south pole. It was the first policy on such a risk ever written and Wetzel made enough as commission to defray the expense of his pleasure and health trip to England.

Wetzel is well known among the insurance men in New Jersey and New York. For the last twenty years he has been paying periodical visits to Jersey's bigger cities including Plainfield, where he is as well known as in Newark.

MISS ELEANOR WOODCOCK GIVEN A LINEN SHOWER.

A linen shower was given to Miss Eleanor Woodcock, daughter to Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Woodcock, of Fanwood, on Monday evening. That night, at the fire-house, Fanwood, by a large number of her Plainfield friends. Miss Woodcock and William Gaston, also of this city, will be married during April.

Miss Woodcock was the recipient of a large collection of useful articles in linen and was showered with the best wishes of her friends. The fire-house was attractively decorated for the occasion with American flags and bunting. Dancing was the feature of the evening and was continued until a late hour. The committee in charge comprised C. Bertram Leggett, Rollin Williams and George Bentley.

MEEKER CHAIRMAN OF SEWER COMMISSIONERS

Robert A. Meeker, S. P. T. Wilbur and Harry B. McDonald, who were appointed sewer assessment commissioners by Mayor Charles Joel Fisk, met in the Common Council rooms Friday and organized by electing Mr. Meeker chairman and Mr. Wilbur secretary. Ernest Sharp and J. D. Loizeaux, who are interested in some realty holdings in the Netherwood district of the city, appeared before the commissioners for the purpose of explaining that Mr. Loizeaux would pay the sewer assessment. They are identified with the Mercantile Realty Comapny, formed to develop local property.

It being the first public meeting of the commissioners there was little business. As they will be expected to make the assessments for benefits and damages covering the past two years for sewer improvements, it will be necessary for the commissioners to hold many sessions. They will meet from time to time as the occasion requires and arrange to confer with property-owners to suit the convenience of all concerned.

"CHURCH AND TEMPERANCE" LOCAL OPTIONIST'S THEME

James H Ecob, of New York, a lecturer of the American Institute of Social Service, spoke on "The Church and Temperance" before the Brotherhood of the First M. E. church Friday night. His talk was on the progress of temperance, and he made a strong appeal for the support of the local option movement.

Local option, the speaker declared, is the solution of the liquor problem in New Jersey as it had proved to be in many other States. Summarizing the spread of the movement in the West and its value in controlling the liquor trade, characterized the East as "lawless" in this respect and said that New York, New Jersey and Pennsylvania were "the blackest States in the Union in regard to temperance. Mr. Ecob, who was an active local option worker in Augusta, Maine, at the time when the State went "dry," told of his experiences there, and said that it was the individual's duty to suppress the legalized sale of liquor by the support of the local option movement. "Local option," he said, "is the biggest step toward prohibition," and it is the duty of every good citizen to use every measure to suppress the evil of liquor."

Following the talk, there was an open discussion of local option, in which the speaker's remarks were endorsed by Rev. Dr. A. C. McCrea, Samuel Bingaman, former Assemblyman S. B. Swingle, Nelson A. Miller, Maurice McGrath and William R. Cosington. About fifty members of the church Brotherhood were present.

THE THIRD INFANTRY TO HAVE A BIG TIME

The Third New Jersey Infantry on the night of May 1 will celebrate the eleventh anniversary of its departure from Elizabeth at the outbreak of the Spanish-American War. Arrangements will be made to hold the celebration in the camp quarters at the Cory building, Elizabeth, or the armory in that city. An extensive program will be prepared. Many of the former officers and men will be called upon to make addresses, and it is planned to have several men prominent in military circles of the State there. All officers and men who served in the Third Regiment will be asked to be present.

There are few citizens of Elizabeth that do not remember May 2, 1898. The Third Regiment had been ordered to Camp Voorhees at Sea Girt to be mustered in. It was reported at that time that the regiment would go at once to Cuba. The troops were to leave at 10 a. m., but the city was astir at daylight. Broad street and Elizabeth avenue were thronged. The regiment formed at Broad and East Grand streets and escorted by the veterans of the Civil War—Ulric Dahlgren Post, No. 25, and Judson Kilpatrick Post, No. 64, G. A. R.—they proceeded to the Elizabeth avenue station of the Long Branch Railroad. An impressive feature of the march was an ovation given the departing boys in blue by the school children of the city.

WHO SMASHED UP DE HART'S CROCKERY?

Because somebody entered the apartment of Charles De Hart, colored, of Richmond street, last Saturday night while he and his wife were away, and smashed up all the crockery, china and glassware in the place, De Hart had Thomas Brooks, colored, haled before City Judge Runyon at the session of court today as the smasher. The burden of Brooks' testimony was "Who? Me? I'm not the Man" and a cross questioning could not budge him by reason why he should wreck the place. He proved an alibi, almost, but a little girl who came as De Hart's witness, stated positively that she had seen Brooks at the door of the De Hart home on the night in question and shortly before the breaking-up fest. The girl probably told the truth, because she had a clear idea of the meaning of an oath. She defined her understanding of testimony under oath by saying "It means to tell what you seed and nothin' else."

De Hart, whose glassware was smashed, was away Saturday evening, being down town doing his marketing. His wife and Mrs. Brooks, her guest for supper, were also down. De Hart gave a vivid description of the wreckage before the court. He told how the hint closet had been cleaned out and its contents "deliberately smashed" and piled up on the table. He told how the "communicating door" between the two rooms had been "busted open" and a lamp and a few vases broken. He felt that Brooks was the man, because he had an idea that his wife and Mrs. Brooks spent too much time together and felt that this fact might irritate Brooks.

Nothing could be done toward proving the alibi, however, and when Brooks swore that he had no grudge against the De Hart family, Judge Runyon concluded that it would be best to postpone the case until one, Mr. Coleman, said to have been with Brooks, could be brought to the witness stand. The case will be continued next Saturday morning. F. J. Platz is Brooks' attorney.

PARK AVENUE BAPTIST CONGREGATION'S ANNUAL

E. Frank Dorman was elected church clerk of the Park Avenue Baptist church at the annual meeting Wednesday night. He succeeds Harry C. Runyon, who for the past five years has been the occupant of the office. Mr. Runyon explained to the members of the church board that he would be unable to accept the office for another year, and it is with genuine regret that the parish loses his valuable services in the capacity.

The other officers elected, a treasurer for the benevolent fund and three deacons, were re-elections. J. F. LaRue was chosen treasurer of the benevolent fund, and William M. Tallman, Isaac F. Giles and Charles F. Dayton. The deacons will serve two years and the treasurer one year.

Reports were received from the officers of the Sunday school and the various societies of the church, and these showed a steady growth during the year. It was announced that the parish meeting will be held on Wednesday, April 14, and at this time the report of the pastor, Rev A. E. Finn, will be received, along with those of the various parish societies.

MRS. W. H. LARRABEE HAS PASSED AWAY

With the death of Mrs. Letitia B. Larrabee Wednesday morning there closed a long life devoted to charitable, work. She was seventy-one years old, the wife of William H. Larrabee, and had been a resident of the borough thirty years, twenty-four of which was lived in the Willow avenue home in which she died. She was born in Lebanon, Ohio.

She had been an invalid for five years, suffering from a chronic malady. Only her husband of the near relatives survive her, but scores of friends mourn her death.

Mrs. Larrabee was an active worker in the W. C. T. U. for more than a quarter of a century and taught in the Sunday-school of the First M. E. church up to fifteen years ago. She was formerly a teacher in the Foreign Missionary School of the Methodist Episcopal church at Sandusky, Ohio.

Papers on Chinese Missions.

At the meeting of the Young Women's Missionary Society of the First Baptist church held Friday afternoon at the home of Mrs. Robert Barnes on Mountain avenue, interesting papers on Chinese missions were read by Mrs. Ralph Dunham and Miss May Shreve. The former told of the work among the Chinese in their own country, and the latter showed what was being done for them in America. Miss Minnie Serrill led the devotional service. At the conclusion of the meeting refreshments and a social hour were enjoyed.

JOURNALISTIC OPINIONS

The Two Liability Bills.

It would hardly take a Philadelphia lawyer to point out all the differences in the two employers' liability bills that were before the Legislature this week, but it would seem as though the less effectual of the two had been selected by the Guardians for enactment. The successful measure was fathered by Senator Ackerman, and it went through the Senate with but little opposition. The House bill, introduced by Assemblyman Blauvelt, was the cause of one of the most exciting log-rolling spectacles witnessed in the present Legislature.

The essential provisions of the two bills, as pointed out by their respective sponsors, are these: The Ackerman bill does not affect the common-law liabilities of employers for accidents to their employes, except in these particulars: Under the common law the master is not liable for injuries to an employe caused by the negligence of a fellow-servant. This bill makes the employer liable for injuries to a servant resulting from the negligence of a fellow-servant, if the latter stands in the position of superintendent or foreman. It also requires that the injured party commence suit within 120 days, instead of two years as under the common law.

The Blauvelt bill holds the employer liable whether fellow-servant is a superintendent or not; whether an inferior, a superior or an equal—that is, if the injured servant is not guilty of any negligence of his own part. Mr. Blauvelt contended that this is the doctrine advocated by President Roosevelt, and he insisted that under the Ackerman bill an injured employe would have no redress if hurt through the negligence of a fellow servant. Furthermore, the Blauvelt bill leaves the period two years in which suit for damages may be brought.

It would hardly seem as if these distinctions ought to puzzle legislators, and yet, when the Blauvelt bill came to a vote there was such a flopping as hasn't been seen in many a day. Ward, of Bergen, voted first aye, then no, then aye and then no again. He seemed to have been undecided whether to vote as he wished or as Senator Wakelee, who sat beside him, counseled. Ward, of Cape May, voted on both sides in succession, so did Bowden, of Essex; so did Schade, of Salem. It was finally announced that the Blauvelt bill was beaten, having received but thirty votes but it is certain that at one time it had a clear majority in its favor and would have been passed had log-rolling and wire-pulling and the work of the Guardians been prevented.

The Ackerman bill, which seems booked to go through, does less for the employee than the Blauvelt bill, and that may be one reason by the Board of Guardians stood back of it and pushed so hard. The scenes and votes in the House indicated that the Guardians' influence has been as generally disseminated as was intended before the Blauvelt bill came to a vote. Earlier instructions might have saved much embarrassment.—Newark News.

Where Mr. Fowler Landed.

We think that the papers that have been criticising Congressman Fowler for joining the insurgents in the organization of the House of Representatives are fully justified. Mr. Fowler was elected as a regular Republican and he should have stood by the majority of his party. But Mr. Fowler has too many bees in his bonnet. He imagines himself the greatest financier in the house, and it is no secret that he even aspired to the position held by Uncle Joe Cannon. Judging from the prominent place he has occupied in the public prints, and in the official records of the house proceedings, it does not appear that he has been very badly eclipsed by the "drastic rules" of the house. But he voted with the insurgents and what are the new rules? They are worse than before. Practice will probably prove that it will be more difficult to obtain recognition from the speaker's chair than ever, and it would not be strange if the speaker took advantage of the new arrangement by remembering those who opposed him at the house organization. If Congressman Fowler's idea was that he would cut more of a figure in his office than he has in the past, the probability is that he will find himself greatly mistaken. And if so, as Happy Hooligan says: "Serve him right."—Paterson Call.

The Excise Probers' Pay.

The attitude of the Appropriations Committee on the expense account of the State Excise Commission is discourteous and undignified. The Senators are less excusable for such treatment for the reason that the Senate passed the resolution calling for the inquiry into the Excise Commission and directing a thorough investigation of conditions existing throughout this State. If the House can hide behind the lack of any formal record that it voted to authorize the commission, the Senate has no such refuge.

Here is a commission. It was not self-appointed. It was not created by any ordinary civic body. It was appointed by the Governor of the State upon what he officially regarded as full and complete authority, so certified to him by the proper official and so announced by him in transmitting its findings to the Legislature. This commission was a court of investigation; it was directed to visit the different counties in the State, to summon witnesses, to probe conditions, to make reports and to incur expenses.

Now, aside from the quality or quantity of work done or good accomplished, this commission is entitled to fair, just, courteous consideration. Its members did as they were officially directed to do, and if the Governor believed he was right in appointing them they were right in believing they were duly appointed and duly authorized to do the work required of them and to incur the necessary expenses. They unquestionably have a moral claim on the State for every dollar of expense incurred. And it is hardly to be doubted that they have a legal right to be reimbursed.

Yet the House discourteously refused to recognize the commission or to name any provision to meet its expenses, and on Monday last the Appropriations Committee laughed the commission's secretary and official stenographer out of the room, and denied the appropriation of $6,000 to reimburse him. Yet Mr. Dengler has done his work, not only, but has advanced $6,000 of his own personal funds to pay the proper expenses of the commission, and if the Legislature continues in its policy of wilful injustice, he will lose every dollar thus advanced in good faith.

There appear to be several reasons for this hold-up of the commission's expenses. Some of the majority members in the House are very anxious to rap the Governor, and take this occasion to do it. And again, this commission had the audacity to put on record some exasperating revelations concerning the liquor traffic, and, every legislator who acknowledges, secretly or openly, the influence of the saloon and brewery in politics, finds this an opportune occasion to belittle the Excise Commission and square himself with the powers in control. But popular sentiment is not in accord with any such conduct. The people of New Jersey may not be ready for local option or for the bill reported by the Excise Commission, but they stand for the same fair treatment to this commission that has been accorded to every other commission that has done the work for the State.—Newark News.

Washington Rock.

It is reassuring to know that the story which started out from Plainfield, to the effect that Washington's Rock is to be demolished to make broken stone for road building, is entirely without foundation. The effect of the tale should, however, be to inspire some patriotic society to buy the rock and thus preserve it from any possible destruction in the future.—Bound Brook Chronicle.

Ways of Fighting Tuberculosis.

In every imaginable way the great white plague can be met and fought, in utilizing these ways the wonder arises that man, with all his acquired knowledge, his mental capacity and his fear of death, should have not already intelligently given to the great enemy of the human race every possible weapon and every possible opportunity to strike down selected victims. We have acted in the case of tuberculosis much the same as the fatalist Turk did when his dwelling was afflicted with a smell down calmly amid his household effects and said: "What is to be will be," and let the fire burn. What is more, we have aided the scourge in many ways, and made its victims the carriers and disseminators of the deadly germ. For years a cure was vaguely talked of. The experiments of scientists like Professor Koch were eagerly watched and extravagant hopes were built upon them. Prevention was little thought of until of late, and infection went on just the same, in dwellings, on the streets, in institutions, in schools and in railroad cars and everywhere. The common drinking cups, and even the communion cups, are purveyors of the disease germs. We know the evil of factory dust, of the badly ventilated and crowded tenements, of expectoration on public vehicles and places. We know the importance of isolation and of the utmost care to prevent infection. In short, we know the means of prevention, and to a much larger extent, also, the method of cure. What some organization, energetic effort and a thorough awakening of the public to the nature of the disease the victory will be won and tuberculosis will cease to figure in the vital statistics as claiming more victims annually than all other contagious and infectious diseases combined.—Newark Star.

Washington Rock.

The fact as the Evening News suggested when the startling report was spread abroad that Washington Rock was to be destroyed, there is no foundation in fact for such a story to rest upon. "There never has been, says the Plainfield Press, "any purpose to locate a stone crusher at Washington Rock, nor has it ever been intended to desecrate this historic spot in any way. The truth of the matter is that the rock will be made more attractive than ever, after some contemplated improvements are made in the immediate vicinity." This comes from an authoritative source, and it is in accord with common sense and the usual rules of successful business. The time is coming when the southern slope of the Watchung Mountains, to the north and northwest of Plainfield, will all be laid out with roads and drives and will be thickly dotted with beautiful residences. What folly it would be, even from a business point of view, to destroy one of the chief attractions of the whole tract, and rob it of one of its chief assets. No money that could be made out of the crushed rock would begin to compensate for such desecration.—Newark Evening News.

ANOTHER PROD FOR GOVERNOR J. F. FORT

In a letter sent out by the State Council, Junior Order United American Mechanics, and signed by Grafton E. Day, State councilor, reply is made to Governor Fort's recent communication on the public school funds. The Governor is charged with continued assaults upon the income of the public school system while pretending to be friendly to the schools.

The letter is as follows and addressed to the subordinate councils:

"Your attention is called to a new form of an attack on the public school moneys of this State by the introduction of Assembly bill No. 430, by Colgate, of Essex county, by which he proposes that the Legislature shall appropriate the sum of $3,000,000 to be taken from the railroad taxes assessed for 1908, to be paid to the schools for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1910. This bill is taking from the schools the money that is already theirs and giving them back a part of it. 'Beware of the Greeks bearing gifts,' especially when they are giving you a part of the contents of your own pocket-book.

"You will notice that this bill, say $3,000,000, is to come from the taxes of 1908, but the schools are not to receive it until June 30, 1910. This bill is absolutely destructive to the law of 1906 and repeals it in effect.

"The Governor, while pretending to be friendly to the public school system in this State, continues his assaults upon its income. In an open letter, published March 23, he intimates that the Junior Order United American Mechanics are aiding the railroads, in protecting the public schools. This intimation, or suggestion, is petulant and false. If the railroads can get the school moneys back into the State treasury then there would be no danger to them of any increased taxation on railroad property.

Advocates Law's Repeal.

"The Governor advocates this plan of repealing the law of 1906, taking the money from the schools and placing it in the State treasury. This, the Junior Order United American Mechanics oppose. 'Who is protecting the railroads?' The Governor has changed his so-called 'my plan' of diverting the school moneys, and now proposes, in the Colgate bill, No. 430, to appropriate $3,000,000 this year out of moneys that already belong to the schools.' You will notice that this bill makes no provision, except for one year. The Junior Order United American Mechanics contend that the law of 1906 should remain intact. Let it alone, and then there is no necessity for Assembly bill No. 430, for the reason the law of 1906 now provides the appropriation of this money, not for one year, but perpetually. The money received from railroad taxes belongs to the municipalities and our public school system.

"We urge you, as before, to call upon all friends of the public schools, School Boards, members of the order, and urge upon them the necessity of at once calling upon and writing to the representatives of their respective counties and urge upon them the necessity of opposing this bill, No. 430, and all bills that will in any manner affect the law of 1906.

"There are but a few days left for work. The Legislature will adjourn very shortly. Whatever you do must be done at once."

EDITOR TAKES OVERDOSE OF NUX VOMICA BY MISTAKE.

George W. Shampanore, publishers of The Weekly Review at Whitehouse Station, and father of Andrew Shampanore, an employee of The Daily Press, had a narrow escape from death by poisoning at his home, Thursday afternoon. Mr. Shampanore has been a sufferer with stomach trouble for a long time and has been in the habit of taking medicine regularly.

Thursday afternoon he went to his home and from a number of bottles on a shelf took down one which he supposed contained a harmless remedy for indigestion. Instead it contained nux vomica and he swallowed a large dose before discovering the mistake. A physician was summoned and in a few hours he was out of danger.

What is Needed for Baby.

In years gone by all little tots were made comfortable and grew up into sturdy men and women, but never were there so many pretty things for the baby as now; what was once considered a luxury is now a necessity.

It is an unfortunate baby indeed who is not presented with a lingerie basket at birth.

All around the inside are separate baskets attached to the sides, and in each one is kept some necessary article. The top basket has a lid, and the lower baskets are wadded and lined in blue or pink silk.

L. R. THURLOW RESIGNS

Efficient Health Officer Has Accepted Position With Mc Adoo's Company.

ASSUMES DUTIES ON MONDAY.

To Supervise Local Department's Work Until His Successor Is Appointed—His Career Here.

Leon R. Thurlow, who has been health officer of Plainfield since December 1, 1901, has tendered his resignation and will be relieved from active duty Monday, April 5, on which date he will enter the employ of the Hudson and Manhattan Railroad Company, with offices in the Hudson Terminal Building, 30 Church street, New York. Mr. Thurlow will be identified with the engineering department of the company, his position being one of great responsibility and trust and with a promising future.

Mr. Thurlow is a native of Lowell, Mass., and received his education in the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, Boston. While pursuing his course of study he resided at Brookline, Mass., and immediately following his graduation for a short time he was an assistant engineer in the employ of the Boston Board of Health. He left that position to come to Plainfield.

During his residence here, Mr. Thurlow has accomplished much in sanitary matters, and through his efforts the work of the Board of Health has been brought up to its present high standard, second to none in the State. When Mr. Thurlow came here the Board occupied one room in Corporation Counsel C. A. Marsh's building on Park avenue, and Health Inspector W. H. Addis and Miss Mattison, a clerk, were the only two employes of the department. Today the Board has finely-equipped quarters in the Kenney building on North avenue, with all appliances to make analysis of milk and water and conduct a first-class department.

Perhaps the most important work accomplished by Mr. Thurlow is that of introducing an approved system for milk inspection and analysis. This department is so well organized that it is practically impossible for contagious disease to get out of the control of the Board or spread to any extent.

This fact has been illustrated time and again, especially in the case of two outbreaks of small-pox since Mr. Thurlow took charge of the health department. The Isolation Hospital was established soon after he came here and the detail work of the health department has grown steadily until it can no longer be measured by mere office hours.

One thing that has been appreciated by the residents is the way that the milk supply has been safe-guarded and brought up to the highest standard. Every department of the Health Board has been protected in the same way.

The new position taken by Mr. Thurlow will require considerable executive ability and his college training and work in this city has fitted him in every way for it. The Board of Health regrets that the department is to lose Mr. Thurlow's services, but realizes that it is impossible to keep him here under the circumstances. A successor has not been chosen as yet, but until that is done, Mr. Thurlow will continue to have general supervision of the health department out of his New York business hours.

'CHORUS LADY" MAKES $250. FOR DAY NURSERY

"The Chorus Lady" with Rose Stahl in the stella role, was presented before a capacity audience at the New Plainfield theatre Monday night for the benefit of The Day Nursery. The production was undoubtedly one of the best that has been seen here since the house was opened, and was given in the same faultless detail that has marked its successful run of two years. The company was the same as appeared in New York.

Miss Stahl as "Patricia O'Brien," was of course the life of the play. She kept her audience convulsed with laughter for the most part, giving as fine a bit of acting as one could possibly expect. In the more serious lines she displayed rare emotional qualities.

The play was presented here under the auspices of Edwin S. Hooley. Mrs. Frederick W. Butler and Mrs. Charles A. Reed, who are interested in The Day Nursery. As a result that charity will receive at least $250 as its percentage of the receipts.

Removals.

L. A. Beekman has removed from 39 Somerset street to 321 East Third street; Chief George Welgs, from 37 Summit avenue to 106 Duer street; John Dickson, from 106 Duer street to 131 Duer street; E. W. Barrett, from 309 West Fourth street to 304 Central avenue; Arthur S. Mosher has removed from West Fifth street to Watchung avenue, near Codington avenue.

REAL AUTOCRAT OF THE ROAD.

Commodore Vanderbilt Sole Ruler of His Railway Lines.

Commodore Vanderbilt, at the age of 80, was the greatest railroad autocrat this country has known. Nowadays railroad ownership is a compli*cated affair; Vanderbilt made it a one* man affair.

He managed his properties, spent many millions in their reconstruction, and manipulated their securities with absolute independence of all minority stockholders. That the public had any legitimate concern with his railroads would have struck the commodore as absurd. And, upon the witness stand, he repeatedly replied: "None of your business," to a regularly authorized inquisitor who was *attempting to get certain first-hand in*formation concerning the Central's affairs. Before he obtained control of the Central its official reports were fairly complete; afterward they did not furnish the most rudimentary information. He had the utmost con*tempt for the law and its representa*tives. "Law!" he once roared, "what do I care about the law? Hain't I got the power?" Once observing that a Central director had not voted for a certain proposition which had been under consideration he asked the reason why. "Don't you know, commodore," his friend replied, "that each and every one of those transactions is absolutely forbidden by the statutes of the state of New York?" "My God! John," said Vanderbilt, "you don't suppose I pay any attention to a railroad accord ance with the statutes of the state of New York, do you?"—Burton J. Hendrick, in McClure's.

LETTER GOT TO DESTINATION

But How It Did So Without an Address Is Not Explained.

A New York man who belongs to a Brooklyn club had an experience the other day that has impressed him with the ability of the post office.

The club sends out regular monthly statements of indebtedness in envelopes which have a piece of transparent paper set in so that the name of the bill shows through and thus saves work in directing the envelope. Occasionally notices of forthcoming club events are included in the envelope.

The last monthly statement the New York man got was fixed up so that only the printed lines announcing a club concert showed through the transparent part. The name on the bill didn't show at all, because that card was turned toward the back of the envelope.

There seemed absolutely no way barring opening the envelope, by which the name of the person for whom it was intended could be discovered. The envelope arrived apparently as it had been posted, and the club man is mentioning yet how the post office folks did it.

The Peculiar Camel.

A peculiarity of the camel is his dislikes—likes he has none, save for mimosa thorn and perhaps for dying. He hates red, and when in the first Nile expedition in 1884 some bright genius equipped the squadrons of the camel corps with bright crimson saddles, the animals so resented the outrage that numbers of them gave up the ghost in sheer disgust. He always, of course, hates man, and sometimes displays his vindictiveness in no uncertain manner. I have seen a dignified and elderly British officer, footing it all around the camp in blue silk pajamas, closely pursued by his own camel growling savagely with his long neck stretched to the utmost and its savage mouth much too near that sleeping suit to be pleasant. At length a fatigue party was summoned who, with telegraph poles, young trees, railway sleepers and such affectionate calculeries prevailed upon the foe to desist.—From T. P.'s Weekly.

A Queer Census.

"When I was last in India," said the globe trotter, "they were taking the census. The returns were most remarkable. In the Allahabad census 35 citizens described themselves as 'men who rob with threats of violence.' There were 226 'flatterers for gain.' There were 35 'hereditary thieves.' There were 20 'howlers at funerals.' There were 145 'ear cleaners.' There were 76 'makers of crowns for idols.' There were 14 'hereditary painters of horses with spots.' There were nine 'professional false witnesses.'

"It was remarkable, wasn't it? Maybe, though, if we, too, told the strict truth to the census taker, our own census would seem quite as quaint as that of India."

Why Musicians Wear Long Hair.

"Why do musicians wear long hair?" said the barber. "Pshaw, I thought everybody knew that. They wear long hair to protect their ears, of course—their sensitive ears. All depends, with musicians, on the ears, the same as depends the eyes with painters. And the ears of musicians are delicate, liable to take cold, liable to aches, inflammations and what not. So they protect them with long hair, and you have no more right to laugh at the mane of a pianist or violinist than at the protective shields and pads of your favorite ballback."

Just Like a Man.

"Queer thing about the laughter of the average man," remarked the woman who observes things.

"What's queer about him?" asked the sweet girl graduate.

"Nearly every time he laughs it is at something he has said himself," replied the feminine observer.

MISS DORA WEISMAN IS MR. ROSENBAUM'S BRIDE

Miss Dora Weisman, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jacob Weisman, of Newark, and Samuel Rosenbaum, of this city, were married Sunday night in Columbia Hall, Newark, by Rev. Dr. Brodsky, of that city. It was one of the largest Jewish weddings held in Newark in a long time, there being five hundred guests, including many from this city.

Mrs. Samuel Weisman, of Newark, was matron of honor and Samuel Weisman was the best man. The bridesmaids were the Misses Sarah and Rose Kirstein, of Newark; Rose Rothberg, of this city, and Sadie Rothberg, of New York, and the ushers were Louis Hoffman and David Berger, of Newark; Alex L. Kramer, of New York, and Louis Goldstein, of Plainfield. The flower girls were Ida Goldstein, of Newark, niece of the bride, and Sadie Rothberg, of this city, cousin of the groom.

Mr. and Mrs. Jacob Weisman gave their daughter in marriage and Kalman Rothberg, of this city, gave the groom in marriage. A reception followed, during which Max Fisch, representing the Ladies' Auxiliary of Court Clover Bonian, Newark, presented the bride, who was the financial secretary, with a handsome gas lamp. Samuel Rothberg, of this city, introduced President Meyer Molodesky, of the Young Men's Hebrew Association, of this city, who presented the couple with a silver service. The groom is a member of the association. The couple will reside in this city.

JEFFERSON BANQUET ON TUESDAY, APRIL 6

Loyal Democrats to the number of about one hundred will pay tribute to the memory of Thomas Jefferson, whose birthday is to be celebrated April 13, by gathering at the Hotel Kensington, Tuesday night, April 6, for a "Jefferson Dinner." The arrangements for the banquet have been practically completed by Walter C. Linbarger, chairman of the committee. Former Assemblyman S. S. Swackhamer will be the toastmaster.

Democrats of prominence from all over the State will attend the dinner, for which elaborate arrangements have been made. "Farmer-orator" James E. Martine heads the list of local speakers, which will include former Mayor William L. Saunders and Mayor Samuel Townsend, both of North Plainfield. Col. Nelson V. Dungan, of Somerville, will respond to a toast, as will also former Mayor Frank S. Katzenbach, of Trenton; former Chairman Robert S. Hudspeth and Mayor Otto H. Wittpenn, both of Jersey City.

"UNDER THE INFLUENCE" BUT WAS "NOT DRUNK"

Arrested for intoxication by Patrolman Nolan Monday, Harry Witters, who has no home, stoutly denied that he was drunk at his hearing before City Judge Runyon.

"This charge of drunkenness," he said, "is false. A man is not drunk unless he is tee-totally down and out,—like a bag of meal. A man can be under the influence of liquor and not be drunk. I claim that I was only under the influence of liquor."

It has been three years since Witters was in court, and believing that he is trying to keep away from the booze, Judge Runyon suspended sentence. Seeing that he would probably go free, when the Judge began to speak, Harry drew a plug of tobacco from his pocket and bit off a large chew. When he heard that he was really free, he reached up and shook the Judge warmly by the hand. "You're all right, Your Honor," he said.

ACKERMAN BILL FOR JOINT SEWER BONDS

Of particular local interest is the bill introduced Monday in the State Senate by Senator Ernest R. Ackerman, which provides for additional bond issues in the case of two or more municipalities joining in the construction of outlet sewers.

The bill, which is known as "Senate Bill No. 322," is intended as a supplement to the act of March 15, 1899. If passed the act will enable Plainfield, North Plainfield and Dunellen to jointly construct and operate a sewer in the Greenbrook section of North Plainfield township. The measure was referred to the committee on corporations.

LOCAL OPTION DEFEATED

Anti-Saloon League Beaten in Fight for Home Rule in Excise Matters.

MR. ACKERMAN'S STRONG PLEA.

Union County Senator One of Six Voting for Plummer Bill—Senator Frelinghuysen Votes "No."

New Jersey's Anti-Saloon League again has lost in its fight in the Legislature for local option, its bill to enable municipalities to prohibit the sale of intoxicants being killed in the Senate at Trenton Monday by a vote of 14 to 6. The final vote, following a long debate, was as follows:

For—Ackerman, Union; Bradley, Camden; Gebhardt, Hunterdon; Gaunt, Gloucester; Minch, Cumberland, and Plummer, Salem.

Against — Brown, Monmouth; Corning, Warren; Fielder, Hudson; Frelinghuysen, Somerset; Hand, Cape May; Hillery, Morris; Hinchliffe, Passaic; Leavitt, Mercer; Osborne, Essex; Price, Sussex; Robbins, Burlington; Silzer, Middlesex; Wakelee, Bergen, and Wilson, Atlantic.

When the bill came up for final passage Senator Plummer explained that it applied only to the municipal vote with power to vote on the proposal in six years. In stating that he knew it was impossible to pass the measure now, he felt that the cause had made progress and that his bill was the fairest ever offered in a New Jersey Legislature. Senator Ernest R. Ackerman of Union, favored the bill because of the principle of home rule.

Senator Ackerman said: "I think no one will question the fact that it is a plain sign of the times that the people wish to take a direct and active interest in all matters of public importance. By defeating this bill the people will justly reason that they have been denied the right of deciding a subject of public importance which directly concerns them, and the surroundings of their homes. I shall vote for this bill for the following reasons:

"First. Local option is not prohibition—It is home rule.

"Second. The sale of intoxicants has always been regulated by the police powers of the State and there is no inherent right to sell the same. It has always been a matter of license and only at the will of the State.

"Third. The Legislature is acting within the limits of the Constitution *if it refers a complete act to the peo*ple to be effective only on their approval.

"Fourth. The right of the people to vote on a question of this character cannot be logically denied.

"Fifth. When the people demand that right a refusal to grant it cannot be successfully defended.

"Sixth. The State Constitution recognizes the principle of the referendum with respect to debt. If the people are permitted by local referendums to decide such questions as bond issues, franchises, consolidations and other important matters relating to the power of the purse, why not the subject of the liquor trade?

"Seventh. In carrying the liquor question direct to the people for settlement, it gives the advocates of high license, etc., an equal chance before a jury of the voters.

"Eighth. If local option is put justly and fairly before the people will it not take the saloon question out of party politics?"

SAYS HE WAS SWINDLED OUT OF EIGHT DOLLARS

Sigmund Macris, who recently started in the grocery business at No. 43 Somerset street, believes that he was swindled out of eight hard earned dollars Monday by a clever old chap for whom the borough police have been asked to search. According to the tale told by the grocer to Mayor Townsend, he purchased a bill of goods from a salesman representing Grant Kaufman, of Perth Amboy. It was agreed that payment should be made today personally to the salesman.

After the wholesale grocers' agent had departed Monday afternoon, a stranger entered the store and introduced himself to Macris as Mr. Kaufman, of the Perth Amboy firm. He had come to see if his account could afford to have Macris run an account with them, explaining that the salesman was ill and that the goods would be shipped as quickly as possible. Before the stranger left, Macris gave him $8 on account. Not until this morning when the salesman in question put in an appearance did the borough grocer learn, he says, that he had been buncoed out of his $8.

The two kids shambled penitently into the classroom long after the school had opened.

"Boys, come to my desk immediately," said the teacher.

The meek little lads walked to his desk and stood looking helplessly at their feet.

"Tommy, why are you late this morning?" she asked.

"I overslept myself, ma'am," began Tommy. "You see, teacher, I dreamed I was going to take a railway trip. I just got to the station when I woke up an' found it was past school time."

"Freddy, why are you late?" inquired the teacher, turning to the other boy.

"Please, ma'am," replied the trembling culprit, "I went to the station to see Tommy off."

GUNN OBTAINS DIVORCE

PREFERRED DANCES TO HUBBY.

Father Must Pay For Support of a Six-year-old Son and Also Counsel Fees.

Vice-Chancellor Howell Monday in the Chancery Court at Newark, granted a divorce to John Gunn, of Watchung, but gave the custody of their child to Mrs. Gunn, and ordered Gunn to pay her $2 a week for its support, and also a counsel fee of $20.

Gunn testified that his wife Ella, since May 21, 1906, preferred to "go out to dances and one thing and another," as he phrased it, to staying at home with him and their young child. Because he didn't like such doings, he said, she left him. After the alleged desertion had continued for the statutory two years, Gunn brought suit for divorce through Codington & Swackhamer. William G. DeMeza and W. L. Angleman appeared for Mrs. Gunn.

In his petition Gunn asked that the custody of their boy, who is six years old, be awarded to him. The petition alleges that Mrs. Gunn is unfit to have the care of the boy.

Mrs. Gunn denied both the desertion and the statement that she was not a proper person to have the child.

Mrs. Gunn testified that she left her husband after a quarrel, in the course of which he told her that he would give her $50 if she would go away. She further told the court that her husband, on that occasion, hired a wagon and helped her to move her things to her mother's home.

The Vice-Chancellor in giving his decision said that it had not been shown that Mrs. Gunn was unfit to look after the child, and that he would give her the custody of the child and compel the husband to support him.

ONE RECORD BROKEN AT ATHLETIC MEET

A large and enthusiastic crowd attended the annual meet of the Sunday-school Athletic Association, held at the Y. M. C. A. gymnasium last Monday. The meet which was one of the best ever held, showed that the boys from the city churches were athletes of some promise, and one of their number broke the record for the running high jump.

Of the seven churches that took part in the events, the First Baptist proved themselves winners in both the senior and junior games, and at no time during the contest did their rivals have a chance to make them feel uneasy. With such men as Miller, Butler and Krewson in good condition it makes a hard combination for any team to beat. The individual star of the evening, Carl Steiner, of the Congregational church, who broke the running high jump. Steiner made the new mark 5 feet 3 inches, thereby going one inch above the old record.

Crescent Avenue also put a good team in the field and won second place, Wyckoff and Borden being the chief athletes to uphold the honor of their church. For the First Presbyterian they had to content themselves with but three points, while the Seventh-Day Baptist, Warren chapel and Trinity Reformed didn't qualify in any of the events at all. For the winners cups were given to each team, and medals to each winner of a contest. The points are as follows:

Junior First Baptist, 23; Crescent Avenue, 13, and Congregational, 9. Seniors, First Baptist, 18; Crescent avenue, 14; Congregational, 10, and First Presbyterian, 3.

Those who won the events are:

15-yard dash (boys)—L. Church, of the Crescent Avenue, was first, with W. Borden, of the same church, second.

15-yard dash, Juniors—Ray Wyckoff, Congregational, first; William Zook, second.

Running high jump—Carl Steiner, Congregational, first, 5 feet 3 inches; C. Lee, First Baptist, second, 5 feet 2 inches.

Potato race (boys)—Borden, Crescent Avenue, first; M. Krewson, First Baptist, second.

Running broad jump—E. M. Daniels, Y. M. C. A., first, 15 feet 11½ inches; second, C. Steiner, Congregational, 15 feet 7½ inches.

Running hop, step and jump—R. Miller, First Baptist, 33 feet 2 inches, first;, L. Randolph, Crescent Avenue, second, 31 feet 97-4 inches.

¼ mile potato race—M. Rushmore, Crescent Avenue, 1 minute 52 4-5 seconds; E. M. Daniels, Y. M. C. A., second, 1 minute 53 seconds.

THE CONSTITUTIONALIST

VOL. XLI PLAINFIELD, N. J., THURSDAY, APRIL 8, 1909. NO. 14.

"Support the Constitution, which is the Cement of the Union, as well in its Limitations as in its Authorities."—Madison.

DR. M'CREA TRANSFERRED

Popular Pastor of First M. E. Church Assigned by Bishop to Centenary in Newark.

DR. ANDERSON SUCCEEDS HIM.

Rev. Charles Sumner Kemble and Rev. Ora J. Shoop Remain in Plainfield.

Rev. Dr. A. C. McCrea.

As a climax to the closing session of the Newark Conference at Centenary M. E. church, yesterday, there followed a shake-up in the annual appointments by Bishop Neely that was unprecedented. There was no intimation of the changes to come and the fact that they affected so many important pastorates stirred the conference as never before. When the appointments were read the church was thronged to overflowing with members of the conference and their friends and there was not a little discontent when some of the changes were made known.

This was especially true in the case of the change at Centenary M. E. church, Newark, where Rev. Dr. C. L. Mead has been pastor since 1905. He was sent to his old charge, the First M. E. church, Hoboken, where he served from 1899-1904. Rev. Dr. Abel C. McCrea, who has been pastor of the First M. E. church here for four years, goes to Centenary church, Newark. This change was one of the big surprises of the conference. There was general regret here today when it was learned that Dr. McCrea was to leave. During his pastorate at the First church he has not only endeared himself to the hearts of his people, but is loved and esteemed generally among the people of Plainfield.

The dissatisfaction over the change in Centenary church was entirely because of the strong attachment formed by the members for their pastor, Rev. Mr. Mead, and they felt sure that he would be returned to them another year. Centenary church is one of the best in the conference. It pays a salary of $3,000 and gives its pastor a parsonage.

This is the only local change, Rev. Ora J. Shoop being returned to Grace M. E. church, and Rev. C. S. Kemble to the Monroe Avenue M. E. church, where they are both doing good work.

Dr. McCrea will be succeeded here by Rev. Dr. C. M. Anderson, who has been district superintendent of the Jersey City District, and he in turn is succeeded by Rev. Dr. G. W. Smith, formerly of Plainfield, while Rev. Dr. Jesse Lyman Hurlbut, who was also a former Plainfield pastor, and who has been at the Bloomfield church, is made district superintendent of the Newark district. Rev. Dr. D. B. F. Randolph, of this city, continues as district superintendent of the Elizabeth district.

There are not many other changes in the Elizabeth district of especial interest here. Rev. E. C. Dutcher, of Dunellen, is succeeded by Rev. W. A. Knox and Rev. W.W. Dietrich, who goes West, is succeeded at Scotch Plains by Rev. E. C. Gisriel. Rev. Dr. W. C. Snodgrass remains at the First church, Perth Amboy, and Rev. W. C. O'Donnell continues at St. Paul's church, Newark. Rev. George Angleman, formerly of Plainfield, who has been at Sussex, is sent to the Memorial, Jersey City, and Rev. George Mooney was sent back to South Orange. He was formerly at the Monroe Avenue church.

Rev. Dr. Daniel Hallenon, formerly district superintendent, and who was pastor of the M. E. church at Washington, last year, is sent to the Eighth Avenue church, Newark. Rev. Dr. W. E. Palmer, who has been at Centenary church, Jersey City, is sent to Trinity church, West New Brigton.

Rev. Dr. Charles M. Anderson, who is now pastor of the First M. E. church, this city, has had a successful career in the conference. He was pastor at Branchville and Frankfort Plains, 1885-1887; Rutherford, 1888-1892; First church,

HOPE MEN'S CLUB ELECTS NEW OFFICERS

The semi-annual business meeting and election of the Men's Club of Hope chapel was held at the chapel, last night. The reports from the treasurer showed the club to have received $45 during the past six months and disbursed the same amount. William Baker, financial secretary, presented this report. Four new members were elected, making a total of 37 on the roll. The new members are Alfred Aitkens, Russell Perrine, C. G. August and Russell Randolph.

Rev. L. R. Howard will deliver an illustrated lecture on "The Great Divide" at the chapel Friday night, April 16. The minister spent several vacations in the Rocky Mountains and is thoroughly conversant with his subject. A silver offering will be received.

These officers were elected for the ensuing year: President, Robert Hangliter; vice president, Thomas Hendry; treasurer, James Cullinan; recording secretary, Frank Rimmer; financial secretary, William Baker.

DUNELLEN TO ENLARGE A SCHOOL STRUCTURE

The Dunellen Board of Education at a special meeting last night received bids for the building of a two-story two-room addition to the Whittier School and the contract for the work was awarded to Walter G. Clawson, of that place, whose bid, $2,664, was the lowest of three. The other two bids were William H. Pangborn's Son, Plainfield, $3,167; Rimmer, Agar & Cuzen, Plainfield and Dunellen, $3,178.68.

The successful bidder will furnish a security bond and according to the conditions the work must be completed by August 1. The addition to the building is made to accommodate the rapidly increasing attendance of children, it being impossible to properly conduct the school under present conditions.

WAHLBERG REPENTANT FOR INSULTING WOMAN

Today's session of city police court was marked by an unusual incident, a prisoner freely acknowledging that he had been in the wrong and telling an absolutely straight story of the case. The man was Carl Wahlberg, of Spooner avenue. Last night he got in a fistic mixup with his tenant, Grover Cashin, about some back rent.

Wahlberg was in conversation with Cashin's wife, who, he said, had been holding him off with promises. Cashin came home in a drunken condition, according to the landlord's story, and when told that the husband had no money he turned to the wife and called her a liar. "I guess, Judge, I was bad and wrong to call her 'liar,'" said Wahlberg in court, "because mebby that was to her an insult. I am sorry I said it now."

The landlord's story was very complete, and so truthful that the court listened attentively as the incidents leading up to the fight in which one of Wahlberg's eyes was blackened by Cashin were carefully related. Cashin told the court that he struck Wahlberg when he called his wife a liar.

The Judge gave Cashin a severe lecture on drinking, for it appears that the man spends most of his money over the bar. Wahlberg was told that the disgrace of not being able to pay the rent was Mrs. Cashin's obvious reason for giving him excuses, and that a man so quick to avenge an insult should care enough for his wife to spare her the necessity of making excuses for the financial shortcomings. He told Cashin it was "up to him" to let the booze alone for his wife's sake. All this effected the landlord to such an extent that he refused to press his claim for the rent, and said that if the family would move out now, instead of the last of the month as he had planned, he would ask for no money. The court told him that this wasn't business, but commended his considerate attitude in the matter. Cashin said he would pay and the two left the court-room together.

WILLING WORKERS' DINE

Trinity Reformed Sunday School Class Banquets Officers and Consistory.

F. E. SMITH TOASTMASTER.

Robert Clark, Jr., Rev. J. Y. Brock, H. J. Martin, C. M. Dolliver and E. F. Sheppard Speak.

One of the most enjoyable dinners given at the Trinity Reformed church took place last night, when the members of Class No. 30, known as the "Willing Workers," took it upon themselves to banquet the officers and teachers with a four course dinner, prepared by the women of the class, at the same time not forgetting the deacons and elders, who were guests of honor. Horace J. Martin, Sr., teacher of the class, saw that everything in the way of formality was cast aside and a good time generally prevailed. There were thirty-six covers, and if anyone did not have a good time, he himself was to blame.

The toastmaster was Superintendent F. E. Smith and a better one could not have been chosen. The first speaker was Rev. J. Y. Brock, who spoke briefly on the subject, "Our Sunday-school and How to Improve It." During the course of his remarks, Mr. Brock said: "The chief thing to do to improve the school is getting teachers who are always attentive, and could be found working for the interest of their classes. If a class always finds its teacher present, it is a pleasure for the pupil to attend. Before coming to Plainfield I took a good look at the prospects of the Sunday-school, and what could be developed from it."

Robert Clark, Jr., spoke briefly on the subject of "The Relation of the Sunday-school to the Church." For awhile Mr. Clark kept his hearers in a roar of laughter with his jokes and puns on many of those present. Mr. Clark said incidentally, "It is through the Sunday-school that the future church depends. Statistics show that the real growth of a church depends upon the Sunday-school to at least 75 per cent." "Music in the Sunday-school, and How the Teacher Can Help It," was the topic of H. J. Martin, Sr. "Everyone should be interested enough in music," said Mr. Martin, "to at least try to sing. There is nothing in the world that wins a person like good music, and by having good music in our Sunday-school we can depend upon a large attendance, and one that will continue to grow." Charles M. Dolliver said a few things about "Our Boys in Sunday-school and Out." Mr. Dolliver declared that the time for boys to become interested in the real Sunday-school work is between the ages of sixteen and twenty. The great mistake boys make at that age is leaving the school, under the impression they are too big to attend.

One of the most interesting and practical addresses of the evening was that made by Edgar F. Sheppard, on "The Place of Athletics in the Modern Sunday-school." "Athletics," said Mr. Sheppard, "is now a modern factor with the life of every boy. At the age of life when his brain and body are both active he needs something that will develope both in the right way. In the modern Sunday-school, athletics will interest the boy to the extent of becoming more interested in something one would hardly dare approach otherwise."

A neat menu card had been prepared for the occasion.

EMIL MUECK IS MISSING

Otto Mueck's Seventeen-Year-Old Son Was Last Seen on Monday Morning.

POLICE ALARM SENT OUT.

Former Plainfield Boy Had Just Recovered from a Severe Attack of the Grip.

Emil Mueck, the seventeen-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Otto Mueck, for ten years a resident of this city, but now residing on Cherry street, Elizabeth, is missing from his home and the police of that city have sent out a general alarm. He left his home Monday morning to pay a gas bill in Elizabeth. It was learned afterward that he did this, but after that all trace of the lad was lost.

Young Mueck was employed at the works of the Western Electric Company in Newark, but for the past two weeks was detained at home with a severe attack of grip. He recovered sufficiently to go out on Monday, and the family think that perhaps the boy's illness may have had something to do with his disappearance. For this reason a general search of hospitals through out this section of the State will be made.

The Mueck family is very well-known in this city, Mr. Mueck being prominently connected with Masonic lodges; also the Elks. He is chief clerk for the Military Service Institute, with headquarters on Governors Island. The young man also has many friends here, where he attended the public schools. There is a belief that he might have come to Plainfield, but inquiry here fails to reveal that he came this way after leaving Elizabeth.

RECORDER EJECTED HER FROM A TROLLEY CAR

A woman from Dunellen, who is employed as a housekeeper for John Wagner, of that place, caused a disturbance on a westbound main line trolley car leaving Plainfield at 10:30 last night. She was plainly under the influence of liquor and after getting on the car at Front and Somerset streets, made a dash for the conductor, during which she grabbed his hat and threw it the full length of the car. She then declared that the collector's nickels had insulted her and begged the passengers to take his number.

When Dunellen was reached the woman refused to leave the car and Recorder D. S. Campbell, who happened to be nearby, was urged to use his influence. He entered the car, picked the woman up bodily and carried her to the street, after which Mr. Wagner, who had also been a passenger on the car, escorted her home.

DUNELLEN CITIZENS FAVOR JOINT SEWER PLANT.

At a public meeting held by the citizens of Dunellen in the Borough Hall last night it was the unanimous consent of all present that they join with Plainfield and North Plainfield to establish a joint sewerage plant. It should such be the case through the present beds will have to be removed and in a southwesterly direction of Sebring's mills.

PROBATE L. E. HART WILL

ESTATE WORTH ABOUT $100,000.

Bulk of the Fortune Goes to Wife —Some Minor Bequests to Relatives.

The will of Lemuel E. Hart, against which a caveat was filed a week ago by his brother, Levi Hart, was admitted to probate in the Surrogate's office by the Union County Court, this morning. Mrs. Hart, wife of the testator and her brother, C. Frank French, are named as executors. William R. Codington and John Corey appeared as witnesses to the instrument.

The sum of $2,000 is left to be equally divided among the children of Mrs. Hart's deceased sister, Mrs. Amelia Pound, and $1,000 is left to be equally divided among the children of another deceased sister, Mrs. Carrie Sebring. Codington & Swackhamer represent the estate. Winfield S. Angleman was counsel for Levi Hart.

Mr. Hart was engaged here as a contractor for many years and he erected some of the finest dwellings in the city. He also owned many valuable properties in Plainfield and vicinity and these comprise a large part of the estate.

ATWOOD WELDY HAS PLEADED NOT GUILTY.

Atwood Weldy was arraigned before Justice Bergen yesterday at New Brunswick by Prosecutor Berdine to plead to an indictment charging him with having killed his brother, Allen, on the night of October 16 last. Mrs. Weldy was not called to plead because separate trials are wanted by the State.

After the Prosecutor had read the indictment Weldy in nervous voice pleaded not guilty and Justice Bergen immediately fixed April 26 as the date for the trial.

Upon being informed that Weldy had no funds to employ counsel the court assigned August Streitwolf to defend Weldy.

Judge Bergen took occasion to remark that he wanted to break up the practice of lawyers going to the jail and getting prisoners to request the court to assign them to their defense. Prosecutor Berdine assured the court that Mr. Streitwolf did not come under that category.

MRS. GEORGE S. CLAY DIES AFTER LONG ILLNESS

Mrs. Annie Doell Clay, wife of Councilman George S. Clay, and daughter of Mrs. Harriet and the late Charles S. Guion, died this morning at her home on East Seventh street, following an illness of five years with pulmonary trouble. She was a great sufferer and struggled bravely for life.

Mrs. Clay was about forty-two years of age, and had lived in Plainfield practically all her life. She was a communicant of Grace church, and until her health denied her the privilege, was a faithful attendant at all the services and was especially interested in all the societies of the parish. Her father was for a great many years one of the leading business men of Plainfield, being engaged in the coal and lumber trade on Watchung avenue. Mrs. Clay is survived by a husband, George S. Clay, who is the law partner of Judge Dillon, of New York, and one son, Godfrey Clay. The funeral services will be held from Grace church Saturday afternoon at 3 o'clock.

ITALIAN DROPS DEAD WHILE AT HIS WORK

Stricken while at his work at the Plainfield Cement Stone Company's yards on Berkman street at shortly after 7 o'clock, Cesaro Catello, whose home was in Scotch Plains, dropped dead from heart trouble as he was carrying a cement block to the drying shed. The dead man, who was thirty-five years of age, had been in the employ of the company for more than a year, and had started his day's work only a short time before the fatal attack occurred apparently in the best of health.

Dr. Albert H. Pittis was summoned by telephone, but death had been instantaneous. The body was removed to Cole's undertaking rooms. Catello is survived by a wife and four little children, living in Scotch Plains. No arrangements have been made for the funeral.

MRS. M. S. SIMS DIES IN NINETY-THIRD YEAR

Mrs. Mahala Sandford Sims, one of the oldest and most esteemed residents of Plainfield, died at the home of Mrs. Theodore I. Runyon, of 1015 Putnam avenue, yesterday afternoon. She was born in Piscataway Township ninety-three years ago, and came to this city when she was but seven years of age. At the time she came here to live with the family of Manning Stelle, eighty-six years ago, Plainfield was a village without either railroads or any fast means of transportation, outside the old stage coach lines.

Mrs. Sims was a devout member of the First Baptist church and for seventy years had taken an active part in both church and Sunday-school work. In spite of her great age she attended all services until last Christmas, when her health gradually began to fail. Her church work during the latter part of her life was watched with much interest by the younger people, who took every opportunity to show their appreciation in all her efforts. In her younger days she was a teacher in the Sunday-school, and for a number of years was librarian.

For sixty years Mrs. Sims lived on the corner of Fourth and New streets, the residence built by her husband, William Sims. It was here their only child was born, which died during infancy. For the past nine years she made her home with Mrs. Theodore I. Runyon.

The funeral service will take place at the First Baptist church Friday afternoon at 3 o'clock. Interment will be made in Evergreen cemetery.

Death of a Child.

Grace Margaret Schwartz, the five-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles H. Schwartz, of Dunellen, died this morning after a short illness. The funeral will take place Friday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock from the residence of the child's parents on North avenue.

Harry Randolph, son of the late Jonathan Randolph, of Jefferson avenue, who is under treatment at Muhlenberg Hospital for trouble of the back, is said to be improving slowly.

Albert Karshals, of West Sixth street, is at Muhlenberg Hospital under treatment for a severe attack of dysentery.

JEFFERSON DAY BANQUET

Local Democrats Gather to Honor the Memory of Father of Their Party's Faith.

WACKHAMER TOASTMASTER.

Colonel Dungan, R. E. Mayham, Mayor Townsend and J. E. Martine Respond to Toasts.

"If, Democracy would succeed, it must be Jeffersonian," said Ray E. Mayham, president of the Democratic State League during the last campaign, in his speech at the Jeffersonian Dinner held at the Hotel Kensington last night, and the other speakers of the evening also forcsaw an opportunity of reversing the party's recent defeats by a closer adherance to the cardinal principles of the party's founder in campaigns to come. The occasion was marked by the gathering of some sixty or more Democrats of the city and borough with some of the prominent men of the party from out of town—and "Farmer-Orator" James E. Martine.

The banquet was in honor of Thomas Jefferson, the draughter of the Declaration of Independence, although the dinner was not served until after 9 o'clock and it was early morning before the last speaker had paid his final tribute to the party's founder, the enthusiasm was kept at a high pitch and the speeches were frequently interrupted by applause. Former Assemblyman S. S. Swackhamer was toastmaster, and seated at the speaker's table with him were Mayor Samuel Townsend, of North Plainfield; James E. Martine, A. H. Atterbury, W. E. Tuttle, of Westfield, and David T. Kushner, Col. Nelson T. Dungan came down from Somerville to speak, and Mr. Mayham from Rahway, and seated at the two long banquet tables in the large dining-room, where the American flag was lavishly displayed as the only decoration, were county officials and prominent local Democrats, who, if not office-holders, had at least had their names on the party's ticket.

The dinner, arranged by Walter Linbarger, who is not yet a Democrat by office-holder, was excellent, and after the inner man was satisfied the diners did ample justice to it.

Colonel Dungan, introduced by Toastmaster Swackhamer as "the liveliest political corpse anywhere in the great sarcophagus of Somerset county or the State of New Jersey," was the first speaker, and spoke at length on the life and political principles of Thomas Jefferson. "No men then or since," he said, "has been wielded with greater influence for the United States of America at that time and for all time than that of Thomas Jefferson." The speaker had some things to say about the popular vote, the method of electing Senators and Supreme Court judges and the corporations, and showed that these things are not as the founder of the party would have had them. He read extracts from Jefferson's writings.

"These Jefferson celebrations," said Secretary Ray E. Mayham, of the State Auxiliary committee, the next speaker, "are being held by Democrats all over the country, and I believe they will be a great benefit to the party this year and in years to come. If Democracy would succeed, it must be Jeffersonian. The party has been mistaken. It must put aside the quackery of radicalism which has come out of the West and it must support the almon-pure principles of Thomas Jefferson and Grover Cleveland." "The people are tired of the Republican misrule," he continued, and went on to show the chances of the party this fall, stating that he believed the ballot-

TELLS OF WORK IN INDIA

Dr. Ida Faye Levering Addresses First Baptist Missionary Societies.

HER TWENTY YEARS' EFFORT.

With Husband She Has Been Stationed at Secunderabad—Great Need for Funds.

The anniversary of the Women's Missionary societies of the First Baptist church drew a large audience Wednesday afternoon in lecture room when they were addressed by Dr. Ida Faye Levering, a New Jersey woman who for nearly twenty years has been a medical missionary in India.

The reports of the various societies preceded the address. An interesting report of the Home Missionary Society was read by the secretary, Mrs. George H. Robins, and the treasurer, Mrs. Frank Jones, reported the receipts of the year $784.95. The thirty-sixth report of the Women's Foreign Missionary Society was read by the secretary, Mrs. B. J. Shreve, and the treasurer, Miss Ida Yerkes, reported the year's receipts $622.15.

Miss Pauline Denton, secretary of the Young Women's Society, gave a unique account of the year's work and the treasurer, Miss Bessie Handers, reported their receipts $122.87 and $7.47 from the "Willing Helpers" auxiliary of the society. The Junior Band organized last October was officially represented by their secretary, Miss Lucy Douglass, who read an interesting report and their treasurer, Miss Edna White, reported an amount aggregating $42.

Dr. Levering, who is a magnetic speaker, then followed with an address full of thrilling interest and inspiration. She described the work of herself and husband in Secunderabad, India, which is for the most part under Mahammandan rule, only a small contonment belonging to the British government. Her account of the Moslem women doomed to seclusion and degradation was full of pathos and she take up the establishment of schools and the power of the Gospel to change conditions had the convincing power of an eye witness.

Dr. Levering spoke again in the evening to a large audience at the regular church service. The work of herself and husband among the British soldiers as well as the Telegu natives was of equal interest with the afternoon address. The ability of the medical missionary as a pathmaker in pioneer missionary work was dwelt upon with much force and the opportunities for doing good from which the missionaries are barred by lack of money and men, as told by Dr. Levering, were full of silent appeal to men and women believing in missions.

HOPE'S ENDEAVORERS ELECT THEIR OFFICERS

The annual business meeting of the Christian Endeavor Society of Hope chapel for the election of officers and presentation of reports was held Tuesday in the church parlors. The reports were encouraging, showing the society to be in fine condition, financially and spiritually. During the year $122.02 was raised through entertainments, collections and in other ways. The expenditures were $120, leaving a small balance in the treasury. The society has been especially active in a social way.

Miss Bertha A. Jones, who has been the president the past year, was re-elected, but she declined the office explaining that her health would not permit her acceptance. The society then gave her a vote of thanks for her work and interest in the past. These officers were then elected for the year:

President, Allen Snyder; vice president, William Baker; secretary, Miss Lona Becker; treasurer, Miss Clara Hunter; chairman lookout committee, Miss Edna Eckert; chairman, missionary committee, Miss Mary Mortimer; chairman prayer meeting committee, Miss Bertha A. Jones; chairman social committee, Mrs. Harry Keen; chairman flower committee, Miss May Ardern; representative to local C. E. Union, Miss M. Clara Hunter. After the business meeting there was a social and refreshments were served.

This was the origin of the "Dutch treat."

RUSHMORE MUST PAY HIS ENGINEER'S WAGES

Samuel W. Rushmore, of the Rushmore Dynamo Works, was the defendant in an action in the District Court, Thursday, in which William Connolly, who was employed at the works as engineer, sought to recover $32.55 as wages. The case occupied the attention of the court the entire morning and was a tedious one. John F. Owens was counsel for the complainant, J. P. W. Taylor assisted Mr. Rushmore in the defense, the latter frequently taking matters in his own hands, apparently being more familiar with the technical part of the case. At the conclusion, Judge Newcorn gave the complainant a verdict for $32.55, explaining that the defendant had failed to prove negligence as claimed.

According to the evidence, Mr. Rushmore engaged Mr. Connolly as an engineer, he being recommended as an expert. He had been working ten days when there was an accident to the engine, which Mr. Rushmore claimed was the engineer's fault. He thereupon discharged him. Connolly then sued to recover wages due.

Among the witnesses called by the defense was F. H. Ball, of the borough, who is connected with the American Engine Works, Bound Brook, from whom Mr. Rushmore's engine was purchased. He was summoned as an expert, but his testimony proved to be of benefit to the complainant, for he said that the accident to the engine was not an uncommon one and was likely to happen at any time. Edward J. McCue, who has charge of the engineering department at the works, and other employes were called to testify as to the condition of the engine before and after the accident.

HUSBAND, A BRUTE, MUST KEEP AWAY FROM HOME

Because his sister-in-law, Mary Stevens, tried to take his wife's part in a quarrel started at their home on West Fourth street late Wednesday, George Henry, colored, attacked her with a stove lifter, inflicting a serious scalp wound. The injured woman, who lives in the rear, fled from the house and found Patrolman Sweeny, who arrested Henry on her complaint shortly afterward. Each was fined $5 at their hearing before City Judge Runyon.

The quarrel came as the "last straw" to the endurance of Mrs. Henry, who is a frail little woman in poor health. With choking voice she told Judge Runyon of the cruelties and hardships she had suffered at the hands of her husband during the eighteen years of their married life. She told the story of her broken sentences as she stood grasping the Judge's desk for support, and at the same time she handed over the five dollars for her sister's fine—she would not pay to secure her husband's freedom. The woman explained that she was afraid of the man, and especially after his arrest, and begged the court to order him to keep away from the house. He had threatened to beat her when her sister interfered, according to the story. Concluding her plea for protection by the court, the witness was led to her seat by Chief Kiely in an almost fainting condition.

Judge Runyon summoned Henry, who had been led back to his cell, to appear in the court-room again. The court demanded the man's house key, for Mrs. Henry had said that she paid the rent, and Henry was warned never to go to the house again. "This frail woman," said the Judge, "has been trying to be a little bit about what she has had to endure at your hands. The court will not stand for such things. You're a brute, not a man. I shall give this key to your wife, and I want you to clearly understand that if the court ever learns that you bother this woman again, or go to that house for any reason at all, you will be brought here and I'll send you to jail for one hundred days."

Mrs. Henry was allowed to her home by her son, a boy about sixteen years of age. She was very weak. Henry's fine was paid by a friend and he left the court alone.

COUPON WITH MARRIAGE.

By way of increasing his business, John C. La Voucherie, a justice of the peace of Hoboken, has issued advertising cards promising a present to every couple married by him. The card reads: "This is the place to get married and get a present. I am not a faker. The first couple that comes to my place will see that I mean what I say."

Besides this special inducement, Mr. La Voucherie has had a large floral bell installed in his parlor, under which candidates for matrimony may stand and feel that they are getting their money's worth. Arranged on brackets around the room are bits of china, cut glass, cuckoo clocks and house ornaments, which make up his stock of presents.

PURCHASE DRIVING PARK

Local Men Buy the Grounds for $11,000. and Will Form New Club.

IMPROVEMENTS TO BE MADE.

Plainfield Driving Association To Be Incorporated — Plan to Hold Racing Meets.

The Plainfield Driving Park grounds, comprising a tract of more than thirty-six acres, has been purchased from the American Silverplating Company, of New York city, by the Plainfield Driving Association, which comprises several of the more prominent members of the Fair Haven Riding and Driving Club. The deal was consummated by Chas. H. Lyman. The purchase price is said to have been $11,000.

The Driving Park, which has been the scene of race meets and the headquarters for local horsemen for more than a score of years, was the property of J. W. Johnson, and it was taken over by the New York company, who had been holders of a mortgage on the property. With the purchase comes the formation of a new organization, which is to be incorporated as the Plainfield Driving Association. The incorporators will be Thomas Brantingham, Adam C. Blair, Joseph Osborne and Henry Evans and C. S. Smith, of Westfield.

The formation of the new club will serve to give a new impetus to trotting and racing here. The club organizers have announced that race meets will be held every week or two during the summer and are planning elaborate improvements at the grounds. The grandstand is to be remodeled and the track put in the best possible condition. The fences and buildings at the park will all be put in first-class condition for the summer racing season.

SOMERSET TO IMPROVE THE GREENBROOK ROAD

The Somerset County Board of Freeholders has voted to improve and macadamize Greenbrook road, from Gavin's corner to Debele's property, the whole distance petitioned for by the property-owners interested in this project. This will give the residents of the borough, as well as those in other parts of the county, a fine thoroughfare directly through to Newark or Somerville, and will also mean the improvement of property along the road.

The Somerset Board has also voted to macadamize Terrill road from the Union county line to Mountain avenue, thus continuing the improvement made by the Union County Board of Freeholders last fall. The contracts for this work will be awarded at the regular May meeting of the Somerset county Board in May.

LIQUID ASPHALT TO BE USED ON STREETS

One of the most important improvements planned by the Councilmanic street committee this year is that of repairing West Front street from Madison to Clinton avenues. It is several years since this thoroughfare has received much attention and the time has arrived in the opinion of the committee when something must be done.

According to the proposed plans, the committee expects to remove the present macadam surface, which is not very deep, by aid of the new scarifier recently purchased by the city. Then it will be filled in with cracked stone of good size, on top of which will be placed a binder and then a coating of liquid asphalt and lastly a top dressing of stone, which will prevent the liquid asphalt and the macadam beneath. While this work will cost a considerable sum, the Public Service Corporation will be called upon to pay a good share of the expense, especially between Madison and Grant avenue, where there are double tracks.

The use of liquid asphalt here is new. It has been tried with apparent success in the southern part of the State and is said to have the approval of the State road commissioner. One point in its favor, aside from its reported lasting qualities, is that the manufacturers have given the city a low price which will remain the same throughout the year. In this way the committee will be able to figure exactly what such improvements will cost. It is also planned to use the liquid asphalt on other streets to be improved during the summer. The work on Front street will be started as soon as the committee can complete the details and sufficient time will be taken to make a first-class job.

SENDS BAD BOY TO THE STATE'S HOME

Howard Scott, aged 13 years, colored, of this city, was arraigned before Judge Atwater in the juvenile court, Elizabeth, Thursday, on a charge of breaking a patent machine. The lad did not have "a ghost of a show" of being acquitted after his history was related to the court by Dr. Henry M. Mason, superintendent of the Plainfield public schools, and Miss Adelaide Ball, who have been in touch with the boy.

Scott was announced as "Plainfield's worst boy." It was stated that when he attended school, which was seldom, unless accompanied by a truancy officer, he made it almost impossible for the teacher to continue the lessons, that he was more trouble than all of the two hundred children in that particular school and when he absented himself from school, not a thing happened to stir the even tenor of the school program. It was also stated that Scott was abusive to small children, constantly teasing them and preventing them from doing their work in school.

In view of the "terrible" character of the boy, Judge Atwater decided to send him to the State Home for Boys, where he will have time to think over his bad deeds.

A TEN-YEAR-OLD GIRL WINS PRIZE FOR ESSAY

During the past week the New York Times has been distributing the prizes for the Lincoln essay contest, among the winners is Jennie Feinberg, aged eleven, a pupil of the Whittier School. She merited a Tiffany medal, engraved with the head of Lincoln.

It is now the centennial of the birth of Abraham Lincoln in a forest of Kentucky.

The outlook greeting him at his birth was forlorn. The cabin of his birth was a woodman's shack and a floor of "Mother Earth," devoid of all comforts or refinement of life. His surroundings were only huts as large as his own and large dreary forests. Each time the sun rose a new struggle for bread began.

Lincoln's father was a shiftless, illiterate farmer and carpenter with little skill or other occupation. Education was a waste of time to this father. If it had not been for his weak, patient mother, Lincoln's ambitions would never have been aroused. After her death the lad was removed and his father reluctantly began to teach his son carpentry, but found it more profitable for him to hire the youth as an extra hand at farming.

No man ever had a worse chance in life, but he never complained. He was content to wait until he was older. Lincoln was no saint; he was a boy, as fond of amusement as another, but his time was full of work. He had, however, one red-letter day; when the Circuit Court of Backwood's lawyers met at Boonsville, fifteen miles distant. Then he trudged to hear their discussions. There it became his ambition to be a lawyer. In spite of his ambitions he never thought of leaving his old home to seek another. When he was twenty-one, he had not a penny for himself. People stood and watched him as he ploughed the field with an open book before him.

When the Black Hawk war began he enlisted as a volunteer and then became a captain in the war, but he never saw Black Hawk or another Indian. He only fought mosquitoes and wild onions. After a while he set up a grocery store in New Salem. Berry but was not successful because Berry was a heavy drinker and Lincoln more absorbed in the study of law. He became a lawyer but never grew rich on account of unsteady practice. Later he was elected for Legislature and took a brief interest in politics, but he was never considered a real politician or a real candidate.

During the war with Mexico his opposition to slavery found it scorn. Later, when he delivered a speech he was told he might be elected if he did not speak of slavery, but he spoke fluently and was elected. During the Civil War he was blamed for much hardship, but after he issued his proclamation his was loved and honored as the president who held America together by a never-failing strength.

CHILD UPSETS THE LAMP; DAMAGE BY FIRE IS $100.

In playing in the dining-room of his home Thursday, George Muttron, the ten-year-old son of Joseph Muttron, of 522 West Fourth street, accidentally upset the lamp, starting a fire that caused damage to the amount of $100. Falling from the table, the lamp broke and the blazing oil quickly set fire to the furniture.

An alarm was sounded from box 34, at Fifth and Liberty streets, at about 7:30 and a chemical stream soon extinguished the blaze. The damage, which was confined to the room where the lamp upset, is covered by insurance.

MRS. J. H. VINCENT DEAD

Wife of Methodist Bishop, Who Lived Here Many Years, Passes Away.

IN HER SEVENTY-EIGHTH YEAR.

Much Beloved in Plainfield, Where She Had Spent Twenty-two Years—Husband and Son Survive.

After an illness extending over two years, Mrs. Elizabeth D. Vincent, wife of John H. Vincent, bishop of the Methodist Episcopal church and chancellor of the Chautauqua Institution, died Wednesday, at her home, 1118 North Alabama street, Indianapolis, Indiana. She was much beloved here, where she had spent twenty-two years of her life.

Mrs. Vincent was born at Deposit, N. Y., seventy-seven years ago, and spent her childhood days at Portsville, N. Y., where her father, Henry R. Dusenbury, was a pioneer lumberman, miller and merchant. She was educated in Genesee Wesleyan Seminary at Lima, N. Y., and taught in the High School at Joliet, Ill. There in 1857 she met the Rev. John H. Vincent. They were married in 1858. The only child, George E. Vincent, is now president of the Chautauqua Institution and dean of the faculties of the University of Chicago.

Mrs. Vincent was a woman of high ideals and firmness of character. The sanity of her judgment was respected by all who knew her. She was a woman of fine culture and until the last weeks of her life found relief from pain in the companionship of good books. She took an intelligent interest in public affairs, which she followed regularly in the daily and weekly press. Her private philanthropies were unobtrusive but systematic and generous. She disliked pomp and shrank from effusiveness of every sort. One of her last wishes was the half humorous, half earnest expression of hope that her husband and son would refrain from extravagant eulogy.

While Dr. Vincent was at the head of the Sunday-school department of the Methodist Episcopal church the family home was in this city, at the corner of Fourth street and Arlington avenue, having removed from Chicago to this city in 1866. They removed to Buffalo after his election to the episcopacy in 1888. Four years later the episcopal residence was at Topeka, Kan., and from 1900 to 1904 they resided at Zurich, Switzerland, the Bishop having charge of the Methodist missionary interest of Europe. Since 1904 they have made their home in Indianapolis.

Rev. Dr. George H. Whitney, who has been a close friend of the family, was requested by the bishop to write a tribute to be read at the funeral services. The venerable clergyman has penned these thoughts:

"It has been my great privilege to know Mrs. Vincent for nearly 50 years. In all this time I may truly say Mrs. Vincent has been one of God's elect ladies. In all the relations of life,—as pastor's wife, as wife of editor, and of bishop, she has been a true helpmate in every sense of the word. Bright, vivacious, vigorous, wide awake, full of repartee and full of wisdom, most wonderfully did she always know how to use her ample educational accomplishments in whatever sphere her lot might be cast.

"A true Christian woman, always earnest in church service, and generous in all cases of needed help. And when at last sickness and pain in some of its severest forms came to her, and for many years, *in the past two years, no words of mur*muring nor complaint have escaped her lips. Hers indeed has been a most noble example of Christian patience and fortitude. Her devotion to her son from his childhood to his hour, and to her husband in all their married life—through all his varied labors and through all his splendid successes—has been a devotion that knew no abatement, and knows no superior.

"In Mrs. Vincent's life God has left for us all a wonderful example of truest Christian womanhood, and has now called her to an eternity of joy."

DENY ASSAULT CHARGE PREFERRED BY ROYSTER

Baffling the efforts of the court to get the facts of an assault upon John Cooper, colored, near the Liberty street railroad bridge, Wednesday night, five young West End men, against whom a warrant for assault was sworn out by T. H. Royster, of West Second street, a colored ice cream dealer who employs Cooper, disclaimed any knowledge of the fracas on the witness stand before City Judge Runyon Friday. Warned repeatedly that they were under oath to tell "the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth," the prisoners denied taking part in the affair, although two of them were positively identified by the complainants.

The prisoners were Thomas Boyle, John Casey, John Conway, James Conway and John Madden. Boyle and James Conway were each fined $10. Of the five men, Boyle and James Conway were positively identified by the colored men as having struck Cooper, but each testified that they were not within a hundred yards of the place where the assault was committed, and were walking away. Seminary at Lima, N. Y., and taught The entire party was rounded up by the police, but John Madden and John Conway were entirely freed from blame, and Casey was only partially identified.

According to the story told by the colored men, they were carrying an ice cream tub to a West End church, where Royster was to supply refreshments. They stopped under the Liberty street bridge for a smoke, and while they were there, the party came across the street and demanded a drink. Cooper's statement that he had no liquor was disbelieved and he was attacked by Boyle and James Conway, according to the plaintiffs' story. In the course of the fight, Cooper received a smashing blow in the eye and was knocked down. His employer stood by him, defending himself, and Cooper shouted "police" and scared the men away.

Brought to the witness stand, one at a time, each of the five, after taking oath, swore that he hadn't seen the colored men and had taken no part in the fight. Those accused of striking Cooper said that they were a considerable distance away from the man at the time, and although all stated that they had heard cries for police, no one stated that he had investigated the alarm.

Each witness for the defense was cross-questioned by Judge Runyon and Chief Kiely, and urged to tell the truth about the matter. None would alter his statement. In passing sentence, City Judge Runyon said that he had a feeling that certain of the witnesses were not adhering to the facts, and that for this reason he was inclined to trust the identification of the colored men. When the fines were imposed, Boyle urged his companions to "tell the truth" and get him free, but there were no statements forthcoming.

PRIVATE ICE PLANTS FOR LOCAL BUTCHERS

To protect themselves against a possible ice famine during the summer, several local butchers have let contracts for the construction of refrigerating plants. Such plants being installed are at the butcher shops of Charles Arnold and John C. Storm, and it is said that S. S. Scheuer & Co., W. L. Smalley, Jr., Herman Theis, W. W. Wilson and Reed & Co. propose to make such improvements. Several butchers, among whom are Smalley Bros. and W. W. Wilson, have already had the refrigerating plants installed and used them for meat preservation last summer. In Mr. Wilson's case, the plant contracted for is for another store.

The local contracts have in each case been given to a New Brunswick concern, which has installed the plants already in use here. The apparatus comprises pipe coils, and the low temperature is secured by expansion and condensation of a solution of ammonia forced through them. A powerful condensation pump is employed and is moved by a motor making 1,200 revolutions a minute. The cost of the apparatus is about $1,000.

EXTRA! BOTH GIRLS ENGAGED.

Montclair Matron Choses Novel Way of Making the Announcement.

The engagement of Miss Bertha Richards and Miss Alice Frances Richards, daughters of Joseph A. Richards, of Montclair, to Milton Towne and Dion W. Kennedy were announced in a strikingly novel manner. Mrs. Richards gave a luncheon at the Aldine Association in New York for a party from Montclair Wednesday afternoon.

While the guests were at the table, a hired newsboy broke in upon the company with a bundle of papers under his arm and began shouting "Extra! Full account of the latest engagements." After the astonishment had subsided and while the boy was still shouting, the women tore open the papers and out dropped the formal announcement of the double engagement.

TRADE BOARD'S ROUTINE

Charter Day, Banquet and Other Committees Submit Their Reports.

ADMIT THREE MORE MEMBERS.

E. E. Parvin Gave His "Ocean Transportation" Address and Refreshments Are Served.

The regular monthly business meeting of the Board of Trade, which took place Thursday, was the largest attended in some time. There was little official business transacted, the whole routine being finished in less than half an hour.

After the meeting had been called to order by President Marshall, and the minutes read by Secretary Herr, a communication was read from the President of the Westfield Board of Trade, thinking the local board for their hospitality at the banquet. A report from the treasurer showed there had been sold for the banquet 277 tickets, which amounted to $831. The expenses were $927.34, leaving a deficiency of $96.84, which was paid out of the general fund.

Chairman W. C. Smith, of the Charter Day committee reported that all those interested are doing their best towards getting everything in shape for the next meeting, which will be held in about two weeks. Out of the thirty-three organizations that were to act, representatives from thirty-one were present at the first meeting and all showed they were interested. It was proposed that on the morning of July 5, there be a parade; in the afternoon athletic events and speeches will take place, and at night there will be a big display of fireworks.

Mr. C. Van Arsdale handed in the bills for telephone charges, which were ordered paid. Three new members were admitted, they being George R. Morris, A. A. Brousse and M. L. Gano. A resolution was offered by E. M. Laing thanking Alexander Gilbert, Alexander Milne, Hugh A. Todd and Allen B. Laing for their services in connection with the banquet.

At the conclusion of the business meeting, E. E. Parvin, secretary of the Ocean Steamship Monopoly Marine Co., gave his address on the subject of "Ocean Transportation." Although Mr. Parvin has delivered similar addresses in this city before, upon the same subject, he was listened to with much interest.

At the conclusion of Mr. Parvin's talk, those present were entertained by selections by an amateur orchestra. Refreshments were served.

MAKES PUBLIC DENIAL OF ALLEGED REMARKS

Just before the close of the Board of Trade meeting Thursday, President H. W. Marshall stated that he had been accused of making a statement to the effect that the reason for the boycott on the Merchants' Association was on account of the Hebrews belonging to the organization.

"Such a remark attributed to me," said Mr. Marshall, "is false, for I never made such a remark in my life, and I bear no malice against the Jew fellow. To be candid, the reason I am not a member of the Merchants' Association is because I am not in favor of their method of advertising, for I believe a business man has a right to advertise with any one he pleases."

"It has also been said," continued Mr. Marshall, "that I am responsible for driving out some of the new business enterprises that would like to come here, meaning, of course, the new proposed silk mill. Now any one knows that if any business man in this city wants to see a new enterprise come to Plainfield, it is I. Don't think for one moment that I am not aware the more mills and factories that come here, the more business it makes for me, and all other business men. But, when it comes to telling a man what I think of the labor question pertaining women help I told those who came to me, just what a proposition they were up against. I know from experience with the girls' labor problem in, so do others of this city who have to deal with it. Plainfield is not a city where you can get women help to work in factories and those enterprises that do employ women have been for years getting them."

At this juncture Mr. Marshall called upon Mr. Kahn, of the skirt factory who employs a number of girls and asked him his opinion of getting two hundred girls for such a factory. Mr. Kahn said it was impossible to get that many girls from here and to bring them from neighboring towns would cost too much.

At the close of the meeting the subject of woman labor was discussed to some length by a great many who had heard Mr. Marshall speak. Many believe that if proper methods were used, help could be gotten, while others were of the reverse opinion.

DR PATRICK ON TURKEY

Woman President of American College at Constantinople Gives Lecture.

STUDENTS ARE COSMOPOLITAN.

Distinguished Speaker at Hartridge School Introduced By Mrs. Henry Villard.

A cultured audience of more than two hundred listened with marked interest to an illustrated lecture given at the Hartridge School auditorium, Thursday, by Dr. Mary Mills Patrick, who is the president of the American College for Girls at Constantinople. She is famous as an educator and especially for the interest she has taken in educational matters in the Western Levant.

Mrs. Henry Villard, who is the daughter of William Lloyd Garrison, and the present owner of the Evening Post, New York, and a woman who is a leader among the great charities in the part of the country, kindly consented to preside. Mrs. Villard and Dr. Patrick are warm friends and Dr. Patrick are warm friends and in introducing the latter she did so in her usual charming manner. She paid a fine tribute to the great educational work of Dr. Patrick, speaking for her general hearty co-operation and support.

Dr. Patrick displayed about eighty exceptionally fine views, giving a clear and concise description of the country and people where she has been working. She told of the inestimable value of the college training to girls at the seat of learning in Constantinople, explaining that students are drawn not from civilized America, but from an area including Greece and Alhamia on the west, the region of the Tigris and Euphrates rivers on the east, Egypt and Syria on the south and Roumania, Bulgaria, Servia and Russia on the north.

It was Dr. Patrick who found this college and she explained that the students return to their homes to save and elevate the women of their race and many of them have become powerful factors in the political struggles of their people. It is this work that has appealed so strongly to the American people. Dr. Patrick said that several of the most prominent women in Russia have received their education at this college.

"The Conditions in Turkey Since the Revolution," was the topic of Dr. Patrick's address and it was a revelation to her audience as she described in detail and by aid of the pictures the great changes that have been taking place in Turkey. She declared that all had dawned a new life and most promising future and at the present time it was difficult to imagine what glorious results would follow this awakening among the people of that country.

Dr. Patrick was enabled through the aid of Miss Grace Dodge, Mrs. Russell Sage, Miss Helen Gould, John H. Converse and many other people of wealth, to establish this educational work. During the past year she has been the guest of Miss Gould in New York, endeavoring to raise sufficient funds with which to erect new college buildings in Constantinople, where valuable land has been purchased for the purpose. During her stay in this country she has been given by Princeton, Vassar, Harvard and at several other large colleges. Following her talk an opportunity was given those present to meet both Dr. Patrick and Mrs. Villard. The women were guests of Miss Hartridge while in Plainfield and this morning they were invited to address the children of the school, which they did, delighting all with interesting incidents of their work.

STATE SCHOOL PUPILS THANK THE LEGISLATURE.

The student body of the State schools passed a rising vote of thanks to the New Jersey Legislature, Thursday, for the thanks were for passance of the bill providing for the purchase of additional grounds to be used for an athletic field and land for plant life research.

As soon as the Appropriation Committee of the Legislature provides the $20,000 needed for purchase of the ground, which is located on Model avenue, between the home of Dr. Elias Carr and the Assunpink Creek, work of putting the property in shape will be started.

A baseball and football field will be laid out, together with tennis courts, etc. The sloping part of the land reaching to the banks of the creek will be laid out in gardens, where practical work in plant life research will be conducted.

When the new field is opened all of the grounds surrounding the school buildings will be devoted to the girls of the Normal and Model schools. The new field will be for boys' games, but will also be generally used for outdoor study purposes.

SENATOR KEAN BUSY WITH TARIFF QUESTION

While the United States Senate is not in session Senator Kean is now busily engaged at Washington in connection with the meetings of the Finance Committee of the Senate, which has the tariff bill under consideration. The Senator will do his utmost to see that the various interests of New Jersey are protected, and he will have the assistance of Senator Briggs. Senator Kean is often seen nowadays on the floor of the House of Representatives consulting with the New Jersey Congressman.

Senator Kean has received a communication from the Chrome Steel Works, at Chrome, Middlesex county, relative to the proposed duty on chrome steel and similar products. Mr. Howell has received a similar communication, and both will do their utmost to have the matter re*ceive proper attention.*

Senator and Miss Kean were among the guests at a dinner which the Japanese Ambassador and Baroness Takahira gave in Washington. Other guests present were the German Ambassador and Countess von Bernstoff, the Turkish Ambassador, the Danish Minister and Countess Moltke, the Greek Minister and Senator and Mrs. Lodge.

Work Keeps Congressman Howell are doing their utmost to aid H. E. Donegar, secretary of the Board of Trade of Asbury Park, to prevail upon the Weather Bureau to establish a weather station at that place. Mr. Donegar has made a proposition which has been submitted to the Weather Bureau to the effect that a station might be established on a co-operative basis, the city to furnish the location and pay part of the expense. Mr. Obert, secretary of the Board of Health, the mayor and the observer, could take charge of the work, and it is probable the city would buy the necessary instruments. The matter is under consideration by Willis L. Moore, chief of the bureau.

GOV. FORT HAS SIGNED A. F. KIRSTEIN'S BILL

The Kirstein railroad crossing accident bill, House 219, by the Assemblyman from Union, is now a law, Governor Fort having approved it. It provides that the accidents at grade crossings where safety gates have been erected, the presence of the gates shall not act as a bar against recovery of damages for injury or death but that the question of such damages shall be submitted to a jury. Senator Ackerman, in speaking on the bill in the Senate, showed that under the old law it was practically impossible to get damages where there were safety gates.

Several bills were lost in the Assembly last week. One was House No. 130, by Mr. Scharf, of Bergen, authorizing local Boards of Health to pass ordinances regulating the selling of milk and providing a license fee for each milk vehicle not to exceed $20. Mr. Scharf advocated it, claiming such a law was necessary for the protection of people in cities against adulterated or unsanitary milk and cream. Mr. Nichols opposed the measure on the ground that it would impose a hardship on all farmers coming into the cities to retail milk.

House No. 204 was also defeated. It made it illegal for any auctioneer to sell at public auction any horse unsound, so that he could not be used without violating the law against cruelty to animals.

The other measures defeated in the House were: House 439, amending the orphans court act relative to the taking of appeals; House 201, the Davidson measure, authorizing municipalities to pass ordinances for the licensing of stationary engine steam boiler firemen, and the Tumulty bill, House 76, abolishing the State Board of Riparian Commissioners and placing its work with a new board to consist of the Governor and the State Board of Assessors, to serve without additional pay.

The Flag.

Three men proposed using the nation's flag as a means of boosting their business, whereupon Enlightened Sentiment, feeling itself nearly touched, insisted on knowing what was the stock in trade of each.

"Cheap politics!" answered the first man.

"Fine!" exclaimed Enlightened Sentiment, approvingly. "And yours?"

"Cheap melodrama!" answered the second man.

"That's fine, too!" declared Enlightened Sentiment. "And what, sir, is your stock in trade?" this to the third man.

"A good, honest, nourishing article of ham!" answered he, and at that Enlightened Sentiment was terribly shocked and waxed wroth and warned the man not to attempt any such thing on pain of condign punishment.—Puck.

CROCKERY-SMASHING INCIDENT A MYSTERY

It looks as though John De Hart, colored, who lives on Richmond street, would get no redress for some $25 worth of crockery smashed up at his home two weeks ago tonight. Thomas Brooks, the man's brother-in-law, who was arrested for the damage on a warrant issued by De Hart, proved an alibi at the city court today, when an East End colored boy, George Coleman, testified that Brooks had been at his home that evening. The ten-year-old niece of Brooks, however, took the stand again today, as at the hearing last week, and declared that she had seen Brooks on De Hart's piazza. Both witnesses were very positive about their statements. In the face of such testimony, City Judge Runyon felt that Brooks could not be held, and he dismissed the case. He told De Hart to keep on the track of a possible bric-a-brac smasher, and if he found any clues to get out another warrant.

In the course of the hearing, it developed that the De Hart home was in danger of destruction by fire when De Hart and his wife returned at about midnight. The crockery-smasher had turned up the lamp wicks high and low. De Hart testified that she believed that the woodwork would have caught fire had she not returned when she did. Mr. Sadler, a neighbor, said that she had heard the sound of breaking china-ware as she passed the house, but did not investigate. She said that she thought that it was "just De Hart and his wife having a little spat."

Testimony relative to Brooks' doings during the evening was such as could hold him in no way responsible—except the statement by his niece. There was evidently no fiction between the familis and the peacefulness of Brooks was shown by his wife's statement that "he is most generally very quiet, an' you can't never tell nothing 'tall 'bout his mind."

After hearing the testimony, City Judge Runyon spoke of the case as a mystery, and said that he could not inflict any penalty on Brooks because the case against him was not clear and he had told a straight story about where he was during the entire evening in question. Francis J. Blatz represented Brooks.

LICENSES FOR PEDDLERS

Borough Council Also Substitutes Licenses for Taxation on Dogs.

BOTH IN EFFECT MAY 20TH.

Some Strict Regulations for Canines —Peddlers Must Pay For Their Privileges.

Ordinances regulating the peddler nuisance and dog licensing were enacted by the North Plainfield Council Friday, but of which will go into effect on May 20, Mayor Townsend having already annexed his signature to the measures. Excepting these matters, little of importance was transacted.

Peddlers doing business with a wagon will have to pay $20 a year for the privilege while those using push carts will be assessed $13. Peddlers, without vehicles, will pay a fee of $10. Butchers and milkmen are exempted, inasmuch as their business is already regulated by the health department. This exception was made at the request of Mayor Townsend, who desired that the board of health continue to supervise the milkmen and butchers business.

The borough fathers have abolished the tax on dogs and have substituted the more modern system of licensing the canines. This is an amendment to section five of the present ordinance which provides for a tax of $2.50 on each dog. After May 20 the owner of this tax, the owner will have to take out a license costing $2 a year. Provision is also made for the identification of canines, it being ordered that each dog *must wear a collar and on that col*lar and tag shall be stamped plainly the name of the owner and the date of the license. The lettering must be of a size visible ten feet away. On issuing the license the authorities will provide a tag bearing the breed of the dog and its sex as well as the name and residence of the owner. To those owning a number of dogs, for breeding, hunting or dog show purposes, a kennel tax of $5 will be imposed. In such case each additional tag will cost twenty-five cents.

SURPRISE PARTY FOR JAMES MANNING, JR.

A surprise party was tendered to James Manning, Jr., at his home in Dunellen avenue, Friday. The affair was arranged by the Misses Emma Manning and Helen Smith. When the party arrived at the house, the young man was engaged with some work about the barn. He was informed that a companion was at the front door to see him and refused to come in. Mr. Manning went to the door and was surprised to find about twenty-five friends there waiting to greet him.

The evening was spent playing all sorts of games, while vocal and instrumental music was a feature. The dining-room was handsomely decorated for the occasion, pink being the prevailing color.

Those present were the Misses Estella Force, Florence Neal, Lillian and Vivian Dunn, Emeline Hillman, Marion Lloyd, Lillian Fountain, Edna Mosher, Emeline Manning and Cedric Ostrom, Russell Miller, Herbert Hillman, Egbert Fountain, William Hand, Robert Butler, Clifford Vail, Arthur Briggs, Henry Shirley, Howard Armstrong, Jeremiah Leland and Manning, George Noonan, James Noonan and Mrs. Arretta Manning.

MOTHERS' LEAGUE ELECTS

Mrs. Hamilton Succeeds Mrs. Sandford as Head of the Mothers' Association.

ADVISORY BOARD IS NAMED.

Review Year's Work—Paper Read on "The Heart of the Child" —Mrs. Holt Presides.

A new president and vice-presidents were elected to head the Plainfield Mothers' Association at annual meeting held Friday afternoon at the Plainfield High School, when Mrs. William J. Hamilton was chosen to succeed Mrs. William M. Sandford, Jr., as president, and Mrs. Andrew J. Gavett and Mrs. Sandford were named as first and second vice-president, respectively. The other officers chosen were Mrs. Horace G. Phillips, recording secretary; Mrs. Maurice Benton, corresponding secretary, and Mrs. Harold D. Corbusier, treasurer. These were all re-elections.

The association has considered it necessary to have an advisory board of men to co-operate with it in its work, and a committee of five men was named. Those who are to serve on this advisory committee for the coming year are Dr. Henry M. Maxson, Principal Irs. W. Travell, W. D. Harrison, Dr. Norman A. Probasco and Dr. F. C. Ard. The women believe that some matters which are in line with the work of the association can better be managed by an advisory board of men, and the board was named at yesterday's meeting.

The work of the association during the past year was summarized in the reports of the various officers. A feature of the work during the year has been the organization of so-called Parent-Teachers' Associations in five of the city schools. These organizations work with the *Mothers' Association to secure co*operation between the parents and teachers. Such organizations have been formed at the Franklin, Stillman, Bryant, Washington and High schools.

Mrs. J. Hervey Doane read a paper on "The Heart of the Child," which dealt with character building in the home, and the influence of the parent on the child's development. In the absence of Mrs. William M. Sandford, Jr., Mrs. Frank L. Holt presided at the meeting. The newly elected officers will not assume their duties until after the May meeting.

HOLY CROSS CLUB WILL NOT DISBAND

By the decision of several of the older members of the Holy Cross Club, a borough organization of about one hundred members, it has been decided to continue the club, although Rev. George A. Warner, who organized it about three years ago, has been compelled to give up the work with the boys on account of his health.

The announcement last week that Mr. Warner would no longer continue at the head of the club was received with genuine regret by the boys. He severs his connection with the organization at Easter. Arthur Williams, Edwin Mosher, Ira Vail, Duncan Patterson, Albert Miller, Chester Harriman and Russell Vail, some of the older members, have decided to hold a meeting at Mr. Williams' home Tuesday night and at that time it is planned to select an advisory board to take charge of the organization and to appoint a suitable person to take charge of the organization in Mr. Warner's place.

When the club started, at the time Mr. Warner first came to Holy Cross parish, there were but eight members. Since then the club has grown steadily, until the membership comprises 100 boys and there is a large waiting list. The organization has been active in all branches of athletics for several years past.

Little Bill Guessed Right.

"This," said a teacher to her class of arithmeticians, "is a unit." She held up a pencil. "This book is a unit, too," said she. "And these are units." And she showed them a ruler, a flower and an apple. Then she peeled the apple and, holding up the peel, said, "Now, children, what is this?" Silence. "Come, you know what it is," she urged. Little Bill's hand went up slowly. "Well, William," said the teacher. "Please, ma'am, the skin of a unit."—Christian Register.

Will Shorten Saloon Hours.

Two hours will be lopped off the business day of saloons in East Orange by an ordinance which the Board of Excise of that place has determined upon. The action is the return of agitation on the part of the blue ribbonists, who asked that the board make the hours from 6 a. m. to 11 p. m. The board has compromised by allowing the saloons to keep open until midnight, but preventing them from opening their doors until 6 o'clock in the morning.

GOVERNMENT ACCEPTS TRACY FIRM'S PLANS

Announcement was made yesterday by the Government officials that in the competition among architects for furnishing plans for the new Federal building and United States Court House at Denver, Tracy Swartout & Litchfield, of New York, was successful. Seventeen architects from New York, Chicago, St. *Louis, Omaha, Cleveland, Washing*ton, San Francisco, Los Angeles and other cities were invited to compete. The jury for decision comprised five of the leading architects from Boston, Buffalo, Washington and Chicago and the honor conferred on the successful firm is noteworthy.

The Government appropriated $1,500,000 for the building, which will be one of the largest yet constructed. It will have a Grecian ionic colonnade, the length of the court. The columns will be forty-four feet high. While a million and a half has been appropriated for the building, it is expected that at least another half-million will be added before it is completed. The architects will *have full charge of the work of con*struction.

Evarts Tracy, of the firm, resides in this city, and during the past few years has been successful in his work, some of the largest buildings in the east having been constructed after his plans.

BOROUGH GETS $600. IN DELINQUENT TAXES

A report from the Councilmanic finance committee at the Borough Council Friday night shows the delinquent taxes amount to the sum of $2,600, that the delinquent collector has collected about $600. While it was agreed upon by the Mayor and the committee that the collector had no doubt worked hard to make all the collections he could, it was the duty of the Council to uphold the collector in all that was reasonable and to advise some means to get in his collections as promptly as possible. Also that after delinquent tax warrants had been served, two days for payment would be given to all receiving notices, and, if they were not paid action would be taken for collection of the same.

The bill has totaled $526.40 by the Public Service Corporation, taxes on poles and wires. This amount is also to be deducted from the total amount of the delinquent taxes, thus making a total collection of $1,126.40.

The Mayor stated that a number of complaints had been received from various citizens, that they had been assessed more than the real value of their property. As this is the fault of the assessor it was his duty to acknowledge the mistake and to have the same adjusted. "I do not," said the Mayor, "want to see any one over assessed."

BOROUGH TO ASSIST IN CLEANING UP BROOK

The borough fathers considered the question of the clearing up of Green brook, as suggested by the health authorities at their session Friday night, and Mayor Townsend announced Councilmen Morris C. Van Arsdale and W. L. Smalley, Jr., as a committee to confer with the Plainfield Common Council about the matter.

Thomas Curren and others petitioned the Council for a three-foot cross-walk on Somerset street at Grandview avenue, and Lafayette Rosenthell requested a permit to erect a brick barn in the rear of his premises at 105 Somerset street. A. L. Carney, proprietor of a restaurant at Somerset street and Somerset place, asked permission to move his building to a position next to the Bender building, several hundred feet north of its present position. The officers of the Union County Investment Company filed a petition requesting the Council to build a storm sewer on DeLacy avenue. The application specified that the sewer go through DeLacy avenue, Jackson street and Westervelt avenues into the brook.

The contract for re-painting the borough fire chief's wagon and the exercise wagon of the fire department was awarded to W. J. Conroy. The cost of the painting will be $50.

Does Sheriff's Office Pay?

Although an investigation has been made by the sheriff's account committee of the Board of Freeholders, the members have as yet been unable to decide whether the sheriff's office is self-supporting under the salary system or not. They will be unable to decide until a decision has been reached as to the disposition of the court fees.

Annual Church Supper.

The annual church supper under the auspices of the Women's Association of the Congregational church will be held in the church parlors on Wednesday night, April 14. Supper will be served from 6 to 9 o'clock. The proceeds will be for the church improvements.

COURT HOUSE DEDICATED

Jurists Speak at the Somerset County New Building Ceremonies.

ALVAH A. CLARK PRESIDES.

Chancellor Magie, Justice Parker and Others Make Suitable Addresses at Somerville.

Formal ceremonies marking the acceptance of the new Somerset county court house were held at Somerville Saturday at 3 o'clock, and the affair was largely attended by county notables, including many prominent citizens of North Plainfield.

Alvah A. Clark presided at the *ceremonies. The contractor deliver*ed the keys to William J. Logan, chairman of the building committee, who in turn passed them over to the Board of Freeholders. Following a prayer by Rev. Dr. W. S. Cranmer, of the First Reformed church, Somerville, addresses were made by Chancellor William J. Magie, Justice Charles W. Parker, the present presiding justice; R. V. Lindabury, of Newark; Justice Jamel D. Bergen, of Somerville; Jdge Benjamin A. Vail, of Elizabeth, and Judge Louis H. Schenck, of Somerville.

The new court house is one of the most complete structures of the kind in the State and has every convenience and will enable the people outside the enclosure arranged for members of the bar and the court. The Board of Freeholders' room is furnished in elaborate style with individual desks for the members. The jury rooms and offices are all equipped and furnished in modern style and is a credit to the county. Surrogate Demond, Sheriff Ross and County Clerk Anderson have occupied their new quarters for some time.

SUES JAMES CARTER FOR ABSOLUTE DIVORCE.

Mrs. Nora Carter, formerly of this city, but now of Asbury Park, has commenced a suit for divorce from her husband, James Carter, of this city, and the papers were served on the husband on Thursday. Both are colored. A divorce is petitioned for on statutory grounds. It is said that Carter will make no defence to his wife's action, but will be represented at the hearing in the Court of Chancery, Trenton, Tuesday, April 27.

The Carters were married on Arlington avenue, April 3, 1905, by Rev. Mr. Bass, a colored preacher from Westfield, and according to the statement of his wife they lived together until April 19, 1905, when she claims that her husband left her at Asbury Park, where they were then residing. Mrs. Carter names a Miss Annie Harris, colored, of this city, as co-respondent.

Carter denies his wife's allegation. He claims that it was through an action in Justice Borden's court at Asbury Park that he was compelled to live with her. He also claims that his wife sold his furniture when the couple resided on West Fourth street, this city. At that time he was employed by I. H. Boehm, the dry goods merchant. The petitioner's maiden name was Nora Goode and her home was in Prince Edward county, Virginia.

VIOLATED AN ORDINANCE AND HALED TO COURT.

In an effort to prevent the dumping of loose papers and rubbish to fill in the land in the vicinity of new houses erected by Simon Roth on Sycamore street, William Campbell, of Sycamore street, was arrested and brought up in police court Saturday. John O'Brien, an employe of the Health department, stated that a restraining order had been issued again such dumping on the property, and asked for its enforcement by the court. Frank Carter and George Miller, two colored ash men, were haled to court as the offenders and were warned by City Judge Runyon.

Robert Newton Crane appeared for Simon Roth, owner of the buildings, who stated that he had allowed the filling in to be done by the ash men, but understood that only clean ashes were to be used. The defendants were told that future violations would result in fines.

AN INDEPENDENT WEEKLY.

THURSDAY, APRIL 8, 1909.

DR. ELIOT AS AMBASSADOR.

It would have been extremely difficult, if not quite impossible, for President Taft to select a better equipped and more distinguished citizen than Dr. Charles W. Eliot as the ambassador to the Court of St. James. America had just cause to be proud of the line of men who have represented this great Republican at the British seat of government. They have been diplomats of culture and of profound learning; statesmen of high ideals and irreproachable character, who have represented in themselves the very best type of the true American. The President of Harvard University is all of this. He is one of the foremost scholars in the land and, further more, for years has been a deep student of political subjects, and a recognized authority on matters pertaining to political government.

In no sense a politician, Dr. Eliot's influence has been far more reaching and effective than that of many of the giants of partisanship in government. "Here is a man," says the World, "who has perhaps never given a cent to any partisan campaign fund, and certainly not in the last campaign, whose partisan preferences are unknown, though his political ideals are made familiar by his admirable public addresses. He is a philosopher and scholar. The post to be conferred upon him should teach youth how political successes that count and honors destined to be historic are not repelled by conscience or by character."

AN EFFICIENT HEALTH OFFICER

It is unfortunate for Plainfield that Leon R. Thurlow, who has so ably discharged the responsible duties of health officer for nearly nine years, has resigned his position. When he came here, the health department amounted to next to nothing. Fresh from the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, imbued with modern methods of coping with sanitary problems and eager for experience, he set about his work with an enthusiasm that showed in a short time that he had the real stuff in him. He leaves with a realization on the part of the taxpayers that the health department now does amount to something. In fact, those in a position to say, say that it is second to none in the State, not even excepting that of Montclair, which has long enjoyed the reputation of having the best in New Jersey. Thurlow has made good here and it is quite certain that he will prove equally capable in his new field of labor.

TWO DEATHS AFTER PROPERTY TRANSFER.

A strange and fatal coincidence marked the transfer of the house on Chestnut street to Elizabeth formerly occupied by Mrs. Sarah Reeder. The property had been bought by Patrick Sarsfield Foley, and she was preparing to move. She dropped dead Monday night. Thursday night Mr. Foley, whose household goods were packed in readiness for removal to the Chestnut street place, died of pneumonia, after being ill only a few days.

Mr. Foley died at his home, 230 Court street, Elizabethport. He was born in County Kildare, Ireland, and served in the United States navy. He lost an arm by falling through the hatchway of a warship on which he was serving. He was one of the charter members of Father Henry Council, Catholic Benevolent Legion, and a member of St. Patrick's church. Mr. Foley at his death owned considerable property on Third and Court streets, Elizabethport.

He was twice married. He is survived by a widow and several children by his first wife. He was clerk of the Elizabeth market and janitor of the Elizabeth City Hall. In politics he was a Democrat.

The great object of the congress will be the strengthening of public sentiment for international arbitration and the consideration of the next steps to be taken toward the realization of universal peace.

Speakers of world-wide reputation have been invited, and Government officials from all parts of the world, including Great Britain, Germany, France, Japan, China and South America, and Mr. Dickinson, secretary of war, is the president of the congress and will preside at the coming session.

"Why, you've got the grip, old man."

"I have not. I can't afford to quit work and go to bed. This is merely a darned bad cold."—Cleveland Leader.

N. Y. AMUSEMENTS.

An important vaudeville event is the engagement of Miss Vesta Tilley at the Colonial theatre the week forthcoming. Miss Tilley will begin her engagement under the Williams' management at this house, bringing over a lot of new songs, as well as the latest Picadilly effects in male attire. This will be the first appearance of Miss Tilley in America in several years, and it is safe to say that her return will be signalized by capacity audiences at the Colonial. Miss Minnie Seligman and William Bramwell will be among the headliners in their one act playlet, "Public Opinion." Rice and Prevost, the famous and very popular "Bumpty Bumps," have returned to vaudeville and will present their laughable specialty. Dan Burke and his school girls will offer their singing and dancing skit; Waterbury Bros. and Tenney will present their excellent musical act; Will H. Fox, the modern idol of vaudeville, will offer his lively pianologue; Kenney, McGahan and Platt have a comedy singing and talking act; Reynolds and Donegan will offer a novelty skating specialty and Armstrong and Verno will conclude the bill in a mnusement with a comedy singing and talking duo. On Sunday, concerts will take place as usual.

A Frohman Season.

When Charles Frohman presents Clyde Fitch's newest comedy, "The Happy Marriage," at the Garrick theatre on Monday, April 12, he will have made his twenty-fifth stage production in America alone since the beginning of the present season. These twenty-five theatrical productions have brought employment to 792 actors and actresses for a period of from thirty to forty weeks. But in all the twenty-five productions there has been but one absolute failure, "Diana of Dobson's," a play that still enjoys great popularity in London. The weekly salary list incurred by these twenty-five productions has amounted to over $50,000. The cost of producing these twenty-five pieces has averaged from twenty to thirty thousand dollars each, and except in the case of the failure noted, each production long ago paid for itself. The best that was to be had in things theatrical in the four corners of the world, Mr. Frohman has given New York; and, operating from New York, the rest of the country. As it has been the most eventful, it has been the most prosperous season in Mr. Frohman's career as manager. From London this same manager, aptly referred to by the English as "The Colossus of the theatre, with one foot in London and the other in New York," prophesied that next season will be an even greater one for him and for the theatregoers on both side of the Atlantic.

COST ONE HUNDRED TO VACCINATE 700 PUPILS.

Medical inspectors of the city schools, Dr. T. H. Tomlinson and Dr. A. H. VanHorn, reported at the meeting of the Plainfield Board of Education Monday night that during the past month more than seven hundred pupils at the various schools have been vaccinated. This precautionary measure taken by the city school fathers comes high, for each of the physicians will receive $50 addition for this special work. The work of vaccination among the pupils is not yet entirely completed.

An effort is to be made in all the schools to have the pupils co-operate in the possible development an1 spread of epidemics by special care of themselves. Cards giving a series of rules and instructions for cleanliness and personal health were ordered last night and will be distributed in the various schools as soon as they are printed. Personal cleanliness, care of the hands, feet and hair are especially urged, and there are directions for exercise and plenty of fresh air while sleeping.

MASONS TO HONOR WILLIAM D. WOLFSKEIL.

Wolfskeil, grand master of the Masons of the State of New Jersey, whose term will be ended on April 21 next, will be given by the members of the eleventh masonic district, which comprises all the German Freemason lodges in the State, at Krueger's Auditorium, Newark, tomorrow night.

Other officers of the grand lodge will be present at the banquet, and Past District Deputy Adolph Klee will act as toastmaster. Carl Goetz, district deputy of the eleventh masonic district, will be one of the guests at the banquet. His present term will also end on April 21, when the annual convention of the Masons of the State will be held at Trenton.

The menu for the feast of the banquet is composed of Adolph Klee, Fritz Stersberg and the masters of the eleven German lodges in the State.

C. are now ready to book games with all teams in their vicinity, and such towns as Flemington, Clinton, Highbridge, Somerville, Red Bank and Orange Valley, who have open dates can be accommodated. The team is now getting ready for their grand masque ball on April 23, the funds which will go towards purchasing new uniforms.

RANDOLPH PERKINS MAKES A NOVEL PLEA

Former Assemblyman Randolph Perkins has filed a plea to the declaration in the suit of John F. Cadmus against Margaret A. Bogart to recover seventeen months' rent of a house in Hackensack. The plea asserts that the house was overrun with insects, and goes on to say:

"Said dwelling house was, with the knowledge of the plaintiff, infested and overrun by certain blood-sucking and anthropophagous insects known as cimex lectularius, the habits and irresistible propensities of which said insects were and are to come upon the householders like a thief in the night, and with force and forepps to attack, harass and make war upon householders, endangering the bodily comfort, peace and domestic felicity of said householders and causing them to flee away to be at rest

"From the proud cimex, which maliciously destroy;

"And ride o'er tenants with malignant joy."

The plea adds that the plaintiff owner, "well knowing the premises, and intending craftily and subtilely to deceive and defraud the defendant, would not or did not inform the defendant of the infesting and overrunning of said dwelling house by said blood sucking and anthropophageous insects as aforesaid, but, on the contrary thereof, falsely, fraudulently and craftily concealed the same from this defendant."

Further on it is asserted that after the lease had been made the insects "refused to leave said premises, and the cimex gave answer: 'Echo answer me if you can, sir!' thereby rendering said household untenable and uninhabitable."

BOOST THE PRICE OF ICE ONE HUNDRED PER CENT.

The five-cent piece of ice, which has been the daily supply in the summer for most of the families of Northern New Jersey who use ice at all, will away disappeared this season. The advance in the price to householders has brought the cost up to 70 cents per hundred, and this means that there will be no such thing as a five-cent piece of ice for family purposes. The wholesalers have advanced the price 100 per cent. to the dealers, who expect to make their advance to the consumers this week.

Wholesale dealers in Newark and vicinity have announced an increase of 100 per cent., to become effective today. The doubling of the price that has stood since last summer is explained by the poor harvest of last winter. Manufactured and natural ice are affected alike by the change.

PROGRESS OF THE DAY ALL OVER THE WORLD.

The Sultan of Turkey is the proprietor of a fine zoological garden.

The sailing vessels of the world are twice the number of steamers.

The Persian rug weaver takes about twenty days to weave a square foot.

There are more than 2,000 distant operations in the work of assembling a train.

London has 96,926 outstanding licenses for drivers of motor cars and motorcycles.

Two billion dollars' worth of coffee, tea and cocoa have been imported into the United States during the past twenty years, or an annual average of about $100,000,000.

A prize of $100 has been offered for the best work that has been published during the last four years in the departments of the anatomy, physiology, and pathology or the organ of hearing. This sum is the accumulated interest of a fund of 3,000 francs offered some time ago by Baron de Lenval, on the occasion of the Third International Otological Congress, the capital to be used in the construction of the national government building, which will be one of the handsomest structures in the world. It will surpass by far anything on the South American continent. It will be entirely of marble. All of the coping, trimming and cutting of the marble to enter into the building will be done with carborundum wheels. The big order included in all about 105 wheels, varying in size from fourteen to twenty-six inches in diameter. This is believed to be the largest single shipment of abrasive wheels ever sent to South America. The carborundum wheels were selected for this important work only after the keenest competition with other wheels. It is unfortunate that those wheels are to be used on German machinery.

Mr. and Mrs. Lewis Peterson, of 517 East Third street, will celebrate the fifty-second anniversary of their wedding on Saturday night, April 24, from 8 to 11 o'clock.

SALVATIONISTS' BIG DAY

Staff Officers, With the Provincial Band, Conduct Several Meetings.

SERVICES PROVE INTERESTING.

Colonel W. A. McIntyre and Brigadier Kimball Make Marked Impression on the Audiences.

Under the auspices of the Salvation Army, a largely attended meeting was held at the First Baptist church, Sunday night, which was in charge of Colonel W. A. McIntyre and Brigadier Kimball, of national headquarters, New York, assisted by the Provincial Silver Band. The service attracted a capacity audience to the church. It was the closing service in a series that marked the special visit of the national officers.

The band occupied seats in the choir loft of the church and presented a program of exceptional interest, which was interspersed with bright choruses and numerous solos, monies by the bandsmen, as well as able addresses by Col. McIntyre, Brigadier Kimball and Mrs. Hewitt, who are in charge of the work of the army here.

The band rendered a number of excellent selections, all of a sacred character. The program opened with a selection, "Memories of Childhood," introducing trombone, alto and cornet solos and then the full band. The band also sang several sacred numbers. Brother Sandford rendered a beautiful trombone solo, "Behold the Saviour," and Captain Fowler sang a bass solo, "This World Is Not My Home," and there was an effective cornet solo, "Nearer My God to Thee," by Captain Allan. Another interesting selection was called "Easter Memories," introducing several compositions.

Col. McIntyre made the chief address of the evening in which he made a strong appeal to the young people to give their hearts to Christ, before it is too late. He related many pathetic incidents in his army life and said it is for a person to sin away the day of grace and impressing upon all that only a very small percentage, according to statistics, are converted after the age of fifty or sixty years. Brigadier Kimball also made a strong address.

At the conclusion a generous offering was given for the work of the army. Sunday morning Colonel McIntyre, Brigadier Kimball and the band were in charge of the service at the Monroe Avenue M. E. church, and at 3 o'clock in the afternoon they conducted a large service at the Westfield Presbyterian church. The special visitation was one of the most successful in the history of the army and was productive of much good. The band is composed of trained musicians and their music was listened to with much pleasure.

Saturday night they gave a musical at the local headquarters that was worthy of attention of real music lovers, for the army musicians showed they were skilled in the use of their instruments and would be of credit before any audience no matter how critical. "The First Price," a march rendered by the full band, was worthy of praise, their time and shading being in unison all through the piece. The cornet solo, by Captain Allen, and telephone solo, "The Chimes of Trinity," by Mr. Calio, were well rendered.

To Become a Miner.

John D. Slorah, son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Slorah, of Prescott place, left today for Medford, Oregon, a mining town of 3,000 inhabitants, located near the State line of California. James Slorah, a brother, has been living in Medford for several years and has been successful in mining ventures. This fact, together with the present slackness in Mr. Slorah's trade, led him to decide on the trip. Mr. Slorah is twenty-three years old, and is popular in a large circle of friends, especially in the East End. He will be missed in church circles, being active at Hope chapel, where he is a member of the choir, Young Men's Club, the Men's Club and Judge William N. Runyon's Bible class.

Want Civil Service Chauffeurs.

The Civil Service Commission announces an examination to be held in Newark on Saturday, April 24, for chauffeur and mechanician for the new automobile ambulance of the Board of Health, and chauffeur and mechanician for the Board of Works, paver and street inspectors for the Board of Works and instructor in the bakery at the Newark City Home, at Verona.

A Dance for the Juniors.

The seniors of the Plainfield High School tendered a dance to the juniors at the high school auditorium, Saturday night. Owing to the inclement weather the attendance was not large, not more than twenty people being present. The program was an excellent one and thoroughly enjoyed.

MENACE TO HEALTH IS TOLERATED IN TOWNSHIP

Many complaints have been made concerning a nuisance on Mountain avenue, near Raymond avenue, where a practice is made of allowing deposits from cesspools. As the place is situated in North Plainfield township, the Borough Board of Health has no authority and is therefore powerless to act in the matter. It is understood, however, that the matter will be brought to the attention of both the Township Committee and the Somerset County Board of Freeholders.

The claim is made that ultimately much of the matter finds its way into Green brook, the land being slanting in that vicinity. As many cows are allowed to drink in the stream, it is considered as a menace to the public health. Some few years ago, a similar condition was allowed to exist for a time but the Borough Board of Health finally succeeded in having it stopped.

RICH HARVEST IN FINES IN THE POLICE COURT

Prisoners haled before City Judge Runyon Monday felt the hand of justice heavily on their pocketbooks, for in each of the four cases to come up, a fine was imposed. The fines totaled $35, and were all paid in. The option of "days" was unusually stiff. In the two casese where imprisonment was given as the alternative, the prisoners were only prompted to scurry around for the coin.

Thomas Duffy, who boards in a West Front street apartment, was given the "$5 or 20 days" dose when Judge Runyon had heard the story of his Saturday night jag as told by Patrolman McCarthy. Duffy took a lot of punishment along with his jag, for he was so bewildered and unsteady when he started upstairs to his rooms early Sunday morning after a night over the cups that he slid all the way down again on his left cheek and sat on it, helpless, until helped to headquarters by the policeman. The effect on the man's facial appearance is not such as would put him in line for a blue at any beauty show, for his slide downstairs had caused his cheek to accumulate considerable splintered lumber, and had purpled his eye.

Nineteen-year-old William Berkowitz, of Watchung avenue, was another five-dollar prisoner. Willie is a heavy sport, they say, and as he nonchalantly chatted with some other members of his set in front of Proctor's theatre Saturday night, he passed out a few remarks about passers-by. One epithet was taken personally by a Dunellen girl. Miss Mary Mohan, whose father used to head the Dunellen police, but she appealed to Patrolman Nolan to arrest the boy. The Judge did the rest.

Charles Meyer, of New Market, charged with a violation of the health ordinance by Deputy Health Officer O'Brien, who alleged that the man had been collecting garbage in uncovered wooden barrels. Meyer admitted the truth of the accusation and was compelled to pay $5.

BISHOP SCARBOROUGH VISITS HOLY CROSS

The Right Reverend John Scarborough, bishop of New Jersey, made his annual visit to Holy Cross church at the morning service, Sunday, when he administered the rite of confirmation to a class of fifteen candidates. The church was elaborately decorated for Palm Sunday, branches of palms and cut flowers being used in profusion. The ambulatory processional by the full vested choir of forty boys and men, carrying palm branches, was particularly effective and Karl Ball sang a tenor solo, "The Palms," as an offertory.

Bishop Scarborough preached the sermon, taking his text from Matthew 21, 8-9, which verses are a description of Christ's triumphal entry into Jerusalem. At the outset of his discourse, he took occasion to congratulate his parish on the various improvements to the edifice and grounds since his visit, and spoke also of the encouraging religious development in the church and the various parish organizations. In accordance with his custom, he made a brief address to the confirmation class at the altar rail.

Dean Robbins to Preach.

Rev. Dr. Wilford L. Robbins, dean of the General Theological Seminary, New York, will preach at Grace church, Sunday morning, April 18. Dr. Robbins is in great demand as a speaker and the members of Grace church parish consider themselves fortunate in being able to secure his presence here.

Safety in Flight.

"That is my belief," replied the cautious inventor. "At least it won't tip over while on the ground, and it hasn't been anywhere else yet."—Philadelphia Ledger.

SOMERVILLE TROUNCES PLAINFIELD HIGH'S TEAM

Plainfield High School went down to defeat Monday afternoon at the hands of the Somerville High School by the score of 6 to 0. The game was lost to P. H. S. by loose fielding and failure to bunch their hits.

Although Lyness let nine men walk, nevertheless he pitched good ball, striking out twelve, and he would have won his game had there been any support behind him. But the errors were too abundant. Doane, Snyder and Clark were there with the fumbles, while Dodwell couldn't seem to find the second sack. The only redeeming features were Clark's three bagger, bringing home two men, and Snyder's classy catch of a high liner, but these did not count anywhere nearly balancing up the bungles.

On the other hand the boys from Somerville played fine ball and played together.

STYLES IN STOCKINGS.

Stockings are not being left behind in all the changes of fashion. For each original shoe or slipper model there is a pair of fancy stockings to equal it.

Sheer silk and gauze in every possible shade, from black to the latest apricot, is not enough. The new stockings are hand-embroidered in forget-me-nots, in violets, in pink rosebuds, in the original colors of the flowers. Hand-embroidering the directoire ribs does not end matters; the directoire stocking is also hand-embroidered.

The oddest of the new stockings is spangled in tiny little gold or silver beads and, of course, is to be worn with slipper decorated in the same way. The spangles run in a design up the front of the stocking, and in bbetween the lines of the beads are little silk tassels. Another almost as decided a stocking novelty is the stocking inset with a number of lace medallions, many of them quite large, representing a flower or a leaf, or some simple conventional pattern.

Other stockings have almost the entire front made of a thin embroidered net or lace, with polka dots or some other arrangement on them. Another unusual way of decorating the fancy stocking is with the eyelet embroidery. Holes are made in the silk and button-holed, and a small flower pattern added to it.

The stocking which still has the plain front has a handsome clock-work design of some kind embroidered up the side. The prettiest stocking is still the sheer silk one, with some simple lace work of embroidery preferably in same color as the stocking.

Birthday Party.

A birthday party was given in honor of Miss Sofie Vogel at her home in Dewey Park Friday night. Those attending were the Misses Mary, Helen, Rose and Jennie Hazlin, Emil, William, Albert and Frank Vogel, Fred, Edward, John and Charlie Brait, Ralph and Edward Decker, Miss Elsie Kean, Gus Angerer, Fred Greanel, Martha Noble, Ada Noble, Miss Helen Mont, Miss Helen Davenport, Miss Rosa Fitzsimmons, Robert Fitzsimmons, Miss Ruth Smalley, Miss Florence Lee, Miss Ethe Hanson and Roy De Mont.

In the Union County Court at Elizabeth, today, Sheriff Robert Kirkland drew the following Plainfielders for service on the petit jury for the first two weeks in May: Arthur L. Titsworth, William McD. Cornell, W. Clifford Dobbins, Edward A. Laing, Henry Leifke, Abraham Angleman, George Voehl, J. Fred MacDonald and Thomas Hanna.

Lecture on "Astronomy."

Prof. Mitchell, of Columbia College, an authority on the subject, will give an illustrated lecture at the First Presbyterian church Thursday night, April 15, on "Astronomy," under the auspices of the Men's Club.

CHARTER DAY PROGRAM

Three Days' Celebration Mapped Out by the Board of Trade Committee.

EXCEPT MAYORS' INTEREST.

Three Big Parades, Athletics, Open Air Meetings, Band Concerts and Fireworks Included.

After a two hours' conference with Mayor Fisk and Mayor Townsend, of the city and borough, respectively, Monday, the executive committee appointed by the Board of Trade for the Charter Day celebration, decided to make the observance a three days' event and on a much more elaborate scale than first intended. The two mayors consented to act as joint chairmen of a bi-municipal citizens committee to be composed of the representative men of the two places. They appointed Ralph L. Morrow as the citizens' committee secretary and announced that they would get to work at once to select a body of 100 prominent men to co-operate with them. Mayor Fisk expressed the opinion that the city government would contribute liberally to a fund to be raised for the affair.

As outlined this morning by Secretary A. H. Stern, of the Board, the celebration will begin on Monday morning, July 5, with a parade of the municipal government representatives, the fraternal, civic, benevolent, labor, social and athletic organizations. The merchants will have floats in line. It is also the manufacturers. In the afternoon there will be athletics together with an open air meeting and at night fireworks and a band concert.

On Tuesday, July 6, a firemen's and military parade will be held in the morning. All firemen in this section of the State as well as several companies of the National Guard will be invited to participate. In the afternoon there will be a baseball game and at night fireworks and a band concert.

An automobile parade will be the feature on Wednesday morning, July 7, and all auto organizations in New Jersey will be invited. In the afternoon, a masquerade parade, similar to the Philadelphia New Year's shooters, will be held. Judges for this event will be selected by the two mayors. The celebration will wind up that night with more fireworks and a band concert.

THIS COLORED DAMSEL SLASHED WITH RAZOR

Grace Blackman, of this city, went to New Brunswick on Saturday to visit friends. She is a colored girl, and Ed. Stines, a well-known colored man, of this city, became so smitten with her charms that he requested permission to see her safely home.

Grace acceded to the proposition, but now she wishes she hadn't, as her escort proved to be dangerous himself rather than a protection.

The couple boarded the 7:08 trolley for Bound Brook Saturday night. All went well until the conductor came around for fares as the car was crossing the Albany street bridge in New Brunswick.

Then Stines suddenly discovered that he had inadvertently left his pocketbook on the piano and he hadn't a bit of change. In honeyed tones he suggested to Grace that she pay both fares. But the girl couldn't see it that way.

"What's that you say yet?" you cheap sport!" gently demonstrated the girl. Words quickly led to blows, and just as the car reached the east end of the bridge the man pulled a razor and slashed the girl twice. One cut laid open the cheek and the other gashed the girl on the neck.

Before the conductor or passengers could interfere Stines jumped from the car and disappeared.

The girl was bleeding properly but insisted on continuing to this city before seeking medical aid. She bound the cuts herself sufficiently to check the bleeding.

No arrest has yet been made, as the girl has made no complaint.

Will Form Industrial Association.

Announcement was made in Elizabeth today that a State Industrial Association will be formed at that place on Thursday, April 15, under the direction of the State Industrial Commission, appointed sometime ago by Governor J. Franklin Fort. There will be an inspection of the Singer plant in the morning, followed by a conference in the afternoon, after which dinner will be served. A public meeting will be held in the evening to be addressed by prominent men from all parts of the State.

The Legislature at its present session having set apart Good Friday as a holiday, there will be no sessions in the public schools in either city or borough on that day. This will be the first time in the history of the local schools that the day has been observed.

The Plainfield theatre will be closed on Good Friday.

GET-TOGETHERS BANQUET

Union County Politicians and Deal Club Guests of the Local Regulars.

JUDGE NEWCORN TOASTMASTER

Mayor Fisk, Sheriff Kirkland, Register Smith, County Clerk Calvert and Others Make Speeches.

Almost every political factor of as magnitude in Union county was present at the Get-together Club's banquet in honor of the Deal Outing Club on Saturday night. The affair took place in the club rooms of the local "regulars" organization at the Hotel Waldorf and was attended by some seventy big and little guns. The dinner was great and so were the speeches.

Andrew McCardell,

Judge William Newcorn acted as toastmaster. On his right was seated the club's president, Factory Inspector Andrew McCardell, and on his left his honor, Mayor Charles J. Fisk. Near them were Sheriff Robert J. Kirkland, County Register Frank H. Smith, County Clerk James C. Calvert, Assemblyman Augustus W. Schwartz, Plainfield City Chairman W. S. Angleman and Elizabeth City Chairman James White. All of these made speeches and the club's rule not to talk politics was rigorously enforced by Freeholder Samuel P. T. Wilbur, Thomas Humphreys, Elizabeth's funny man, made *the hit of the evening as a speech*maker and in recognition of his effort was subsequently elected an honorary member of the organization.

On behalf of the Deal Outing Club and the Elizabeth bunch in general, Sheriff Kirkland presented a handsome traveling bag to Sachem McCardell. During the evening there were a number of vocal and instrumental numbers.

FINED TWENTY DOLLARS FOR HIS PROFANE WORDS

On complaint of Mrs. Elizabeth Fenton, of Prescott place, 30, and Mrs. Thos. Finneran, her neighbors, were in police court Monday. She declared that the couple, and especially the husband, had "maligned, slandered, cursed and insulted" her on Thursday night. The testimony, bringing out a recital of "cuss-words" which must have been thrown out wholesale, was furnished by five neighbors, who had overheard the Finnerans' remarks.

When it became known to the court that Finneran had a habit of passing out the loose and profane talk and had been a source of regret to his neighbors for months passed on this account, City Judge Runyon imposed a fine of $20. Finneran paid.

The testimony showed that the man held his neighbors in terror by his "awful goings-on" and it developed that one of the witnesses, hearing that he was "on the war-path" had gone to his home by a roundabout way rather than meet him in the street. The charges against Mrs. Finneran were comparatively insignificant, for hers were only words provoked by back-fence disagreements.

Wyandottes Beat Netherwood.

The Wyandottes, a baseball team of Netherwood, defeated the Berckman street team by a score of 12 to 4 at the Central street diamond, Saturday. The Wyandottes' line-up was as follows: Griffin, catcher; Wilmerding, pitcher; Hand, first base; Stoboard, second base; Costaloes, short stop; Coughlam, third base; Horden, left field; and Christiansen, right field.

UNION COUNTY MEN FORM RAHWAY TRUST COMPANY

Articles of incorporation were filed on Saturday with Union County Clerk James C. Calvert at Elizabeth, by the Rahway Trust Company, to be located on Cherry street, Rahway, the agent being City Treasurer Charles H. Angelman, of that place. The incorporators are Hamilton F. Kean, of Union Township; State Senator Ernest R. Ackerman and County Register Frank H. Smith, both of this city; John W. Whelan, Elizabeth; Peter Fox and Aaron Gries, Newark; Peter Tillman, Fred C. Hyer, John J. Coffey, Albert F. Kirstein and Dr. John M. Randolph, all of Rahway.

Frank H. Smith controls 270 shares. Senator Ackerman, Hamilton Kean, Peter Fox, Peter Tillman, John M. Randolph and John W. Whelan each have 100 shares. Mr. Smith is a director of the Plainfield Trust Company.

FITZPATRICK IN JAIL ADMITS HORSE STEALING

Dominick Fitzpatrick, of North Plainfield, prizefighter, and more recently an expert horse thief, who started in to steal all of the best horses in Washington Valley, is in jail at Somerville. County Detective Totten brought Fitzpatrick from Perth Amboy, where he had attempted to dispose of a number of stolen horses which he had picked up in Somerset and other counties during the past month. Fitzpatrick was trying to dispose of a stolen team and buggy to a dealer in Perth Amboy, which he had taken from John Wyckoff's stable at Germantown, and the low price at which he offered the animals aroused suspicions which led to his arrest.

Fitzpatrick has confessed to stealing eight horses, six of which have already been recovered. He will be tried during the April term in Somerset county.

DESERTED WIFE GETS $1. A WEEK FOR SUPPORT

John McGuire, an erstwhile boroughite, who married three years ago and left his wife, whose name is Josephine, three months after the ceremony, was held under $50 bond on a desertion charge before Justice of the Peace Cole Monday Saturday night, being ordered to pay her $1 each week. McGuire is a teamster and has been living in Summit since he left his wife. The wife is but eighteen years of age. Their only child is dead.

Testimony revealed the fact that the man never wasted any time complimenting his wife even while the two made their home together. It is alleged that for an entire week after the ceremony was performed, John was never sober long enough to recognize his wife. Mrs. McGuire has been self-supporting ever since her husband left her. Robert Newton Crane represented Mrs. McGuire in the case, while Francis J. Blatz was counsel for the husband. The court ordered that the dollar be paid each week to Borough Overseer of the Poor Fred Becker and that the latter should turn it over to Mrs. McGuire.

GLOVE-MAKING PLANT FOR USE AS SILK MILL.

Through the firm of Hardingham & Perrin, of this city, the glove factory which was operated by Perrin-Freres of Cie, has been sold to the Rosenthal Brothers, silk importers, of New York. The concern will convert the old factory into a silk mill, which will begin operations about May 1. It is their purpose to start the new mill with about fifty looms, and soon as possible increase it to 200. This, of course, will necessitate the enlargement of the plant, which will be done as soon as the business will demand it.

A Surprise Party.

A birthday surprise party was given in honor of Miss Beatrice Tier at her home on Madison avenue, Saturday evening. The affair was successfully arranged by Miss Adelaide Cole and William Tier, Jr. It was a complete surprise to Miss Tier as she had planned to spend the evening elsewhere. She received many pretty and useful presents. The time was spent in playing games and a feature of the evening was the "Toothache Act" by Jack Rogers. Refreshments were served at a late hour. Among those present were: the Misses Marion Thompson, Adelaide Cole, Mildred Priester, Lillian Schlief, Beatrice Tier, Elsie Tier, William Tier, Mrs. May Tier and Ethel Swain, of Newark; Jack Rogers, John Richards, Raymond Becker, Bert Pope, William Tier and Charles Small and J. C. Crater, also of Newark.

ANNUAL CHURCH MEETING

Seventh-Day Baptists in Seventy-fifth Annual Session Review Year's Work.

THEY CHOOSE THEIR OFFICERS.

Afternoon and Evening Meetings Largely Attended—Letters Read From Some Former Members.

Officers were elected, reports presented and other interesting business transacted at the seventy-fifth annual meeting of the Seventh-Day Baptist church, held in the church, Sunday afternoon and evening. William C. Hubbard was chairman *of the meeting. After prayer was of*fered by the pastor, Rev. Edwin Shaw, the minutes of the previous meeting were read by Asa F. Randolph, and adopted.

The report of the trustees was presented by Dr. Henry M. Maxson, *showing that all of the church prop*erty is in excellent condition and satisfactory returns were reported. William M. Stillman, treasurer of the church, presented his statement. This showed that all bills were paid and there is a balance of $738 on *hand. The committee on subscrip*tions *for the year also reported fa*vorable responses, the amount subscribed being about the largest in recent years.

The obituary committee presented an exceedingly interesting report re*garding the life and labors of the* late Rev. Dr. A. H. Lewis. This was adopted by a rising vote. Touching references were also made to the loss in the death of Dr. Martha Stillman, Alexander Titsworth and Mrs. Irving A. Hunting.

*Then followed the election of of*ficers. David E. Titsworth was re-elected trustee for a term of five years, while William M. Stillman was re-elected treasurer, George E. Stillman assistant treasurer and Asa F. Randolph church clerk for one *year. Arthur T. Tits*worth and Charles H. Dunham were chosen auditors for the year and David E. Titsworth was again chosen chorister and Miss Jessie M. Utter organist. These ushers were elected: Arthur J. Spicer, chairman; George M. Clark, Charles W. Titsworth, Rowland Williams, Milton St. John, A. B. Titsworth, Raymond Burdick, Roland Davis.

This concluded the afternoon session, after which a social fellowship hour was enjoyed, during which supper was served in the church parlors. The evening session convened at 7:30 o'clock, with devotional exercises by Rev. Dr. T. L. Gardner, Mrs. John B. Cottrell sang a pleasing solo, after which N. O. Moore, Jr., presented a summary of all the church societies for the year, including the Sabbath-school, Christian Endeavor Societies, Women's Society for Christian Work and the Men's Club. This showed a general gain in membership and increased interest in all departments. The customary appropriations for the various departments of work were made for the coming year.

Supplementing the report by Mr. Moore, was one by the pastor, Rev. Edwin Shaw, which touched on the spiritual side of the church work. This was shown to be encouraging under the supervision of Mr. Shaw, who has been pastor scarcely a year.

Perhaps, one of the most interesting features of the meeting was the reading of letters from absent members and former pastors. Among them was one from Mrs. Mary N. Rogers, of New York State, who is the only surviving constituent member out of the original number of fifty-seven. She never fails to send a greeting to the annual meeting. Other letters were received from Rev. George B. Shaw, of Nebraska, and Rev. Dr. A. E. Main, of Alfred University, both former pastors, and members in Illinois, California, Chicago, Long Island, Alfred, Boston and other places.

Another helpful feature was a question box devoted to church work. Different phases of the work were considered during this period, the reading of letters from absent members and former pastors. Among them was one from Mrs. Mary N. Rogers, of New York State, who is the only surviving constituent member out of the original number of fifty-seven. She never fails to send a greeting to the annual meeting. Other letters were received from Rev. George B. Shaw, of Nebraska, and Rev. Dr. A. E. Main, of Alfred University, both former pastors, and members in Illinois, California, Chicago, Long Island, Alfred, Boston and other places.

The supper committee comprised members of the refreshment committee of the Women's Society for Christian Work and the social committee of the Christian Endeavor Society as follows: Mrs. Frank Champlin, chairman; Mrs. W. R. Mosher, Mrs. Charles H. Dunham, Mrs. J. D. Titsworth, Miss Ethel Titsworth, Miss Helen Rogers, Miss Anna Stillman and Roy Titsworth. The committee on program comprised N. O. Moore, Rev. Edwin Shaw, Asa F. Randolph, Mrs. Amanda Maxson and Miss Mildred Greene.

Two Concerns With Same Name.

By selecting the name "The Plainfield Supply Company," it is claimed that the incorporators of the new ice, coal and lumber concern to which the Natural Ice Company and others are interested, have taken the title of a firm which has been doing business here for several years. It is the concern of the same name in which L. B. Woolston is treasurer and E. V. Bartine is manager and which deals in linseed oil.

PARK OFFER MADE TO CITY FATHERS

The Plainfield Park Association which recently acquired about eighty acres of land in the western end of the borough and city, communicated with the Common Council last Monday offering to deed a portion of this land to the city for park purposes, under certain conditions. This offer is almost the one made to the Borough Council, last week, and Councilman Herbert Buxton, who was president pro tem, in the absence of President R. I. Toiles, referred the whole matter jointly to the committee on public affairs and the Shade Tree Commission.

It is the intention of the Plainfield Park Association to set apart a certain number of acres for park purposes, in the centre of which is to be a lake, and in the communication it was stated that the object is to have the city accept a portion of the property and arrange for its maintenance as a park at the least possible expense to the city. The association is planning to lay out numerous boulevards and erect a number of fine dwellings.

CLAMSMAN'S HUNTING SONG.

Oh, sing your songs of the silly chase,
And listen he who will,
Of red-clad men who madly race
Perspiring up a hill;
And flop-eared dogs that run about
A-mouthing savage bays,
While some lone fox among the rocks
Looks on in mild amaze.

Oh, lift your lays of the coveyed quail!
'Mid the covers' matted thorn,
And a pant for dog with an index tail
In place of a huntsman's horn.
Sing, too, of your sylvan water-hole
With paw-prints all about—
But me for the reach of a clammy beach
When the tide is running out!

Ye butcher men whose scatt'ring shot
May spread a field with gore,
I gain a finer thrill, I wot,
In digging on the shore.
Your deer-coming, dreadful bangs
Reecho through a grove;
My skilful wrist, my thrust and twist,
Reveal the treasure-trove.

I too can miss my aim as well;
It chills one's pulsing blood
To pounce upon a noble shell
And find it full of mud.
When you home-bent are gore-begrimed,
I'm stained with cleanly dirt;
Mid ozone sweet up-shore I beat
And sing, "Ahoy! They squirt!"

P. S.—They're washed within a pot
And drained until they're white.
They're covered on a stove that's hot—
(Add water half their height).
They're done as soon as they boil up;
Oh, joy, too vast to utter!
You drink the bouillon from a cup
And dip the clams in butter.

MARRIED WOMEN WHO WORK.

Widows, 800,000 of them, and more, were earning their living in the United States in the year 1900. And married women, likewise, to the number of more than 700,000. And divorced women, likewise, to the number of more than 60,000. One million, six hundred thousand of them altogether!

How many women were there, 25 years of age and over, in the United States in 1900? There were approximately 16,700,000. And how many married women workers, widowed women workers, and divorced women workers were there? There were approximately 1,500,000.

While it is to say that in the total female population of the United States, married and unmarried, working and not working, rich and poor, 25 years of age and over, in the year 1900, one woman out of every eleven had passed her wedding day and nevertheless was a breadwinner.—"The Woman's Invasion," in the April Everybody's.

HANS P. FREECE AGAIN ATTACKS MORMONISM

The second address on Mormonism was given by Hans P. Freece, of Columbia University, at the Y. M. C. A. men's meeting, Sunday afternoon. On this occasion he treated his subject from a political standpoint, pointing out the danger of Mormonism becoming a future political issue.

"It has always been the purpose of the Mormon church," said the speaker, "not only to mix in politics but if possible to rule or destroy. At the time the Mormons went to Utah, which was then Mexican territory, it was their purpose to defy the United States, and to establish a nation and government of their own, to be controlled by their church, where polyg*amy could be practiced without an*noyance from any governmental authorities. After the Mexican War, and the treaty of peace signed, and all the land acquired by the Mormons became a part of the United States, it was then that the Mormon *began his crusade against this gov*ernment, and has kept it up ever since.

"In 1849, when the gold fever in California caused thousands of men to go to that State, the Mormons began their reign of murder and plunder. According to their belief, a man outside their church could only be saved by the shedding of blood. The Mormons always saw that those who shed blood had either plenty of gold dust or good horses, both of which were needed. When the United States government sent judges out there to uphold the law and to investigate these outrages, the Mormons watched their opportunity to beat them, and place the blame on the Indians. The Mormons are a wise people, and realized that if they could get Utah admitted as a State, it would be easy for to get their own constitution. When the new State was admitted, polygamy was to be abandoned entirely and the Mormons themselves were to keep free of politics. But now we see whether they keep out of governmental affairs or not by their sending Reed Smoot, a man with five wives, to the Senate.

"To get the Mormon vote both political parties during the last campaign catered to the Mormons, and this shows the descendants of Joseph Smith have foiled not only our government, but become an important factor in it."

MISS LOHRKE SOLOIST AT A LENTEN RECITAL.

Miss Gertrude Lohrke, of East Orange, was the soloist at the last of the series of Lenten organ recitals held Saturday afternoon at Holy Cross church, when an excellent program of organ music was rendered by R. Burns Eglinton, the church organist and choirmaster. Miss Lohrke, who is a soprano of unusually charming voice, sang "Just For Today" in a manner which won the keenest appreciation. The instrumental program follows:

Largo on G, (Handel); Pastorale in E, (Lemare); Allegretto, (Thomas); Scherzo, (Lemaigre); Adagio molto, from Sonata 3, (Guilmant); Andante in G, (Battle).

STATE NEWS BRIEFLY TOLD

Escaping steam from a boiler severely burned Mrs. Jennie Mengel, a Millville hotel proprietress.

In attempting to stop a runaway horse at Millville Harry Fisher was knocked down, sustaining a broken nose and contusions of the head and body.

Pleading guilty to breaking and entering the residence of James Clark, at Atco, Alfred and Frank Hall, negro boys, were Saturday sentenced in Camden to the State Reformatory.

After being confined to his bed nearly all winter, Barclay Smith, of Quinton, attempted to get up to sit in a chair, but fell and fractured a hip, which will hold him in bed for a couple of months more.

Knocked down and run over by a wagon while playing in the street, Saturday afternoon, John Anderson, eleven years old, of 1003 Mt. Ephraim avenue, Camden, sustained a fracture of the left leg.

There is much speculation among Tuckerton folks just now as to who is the worst man in Tuckerton. This speculation is due to the announcement of Rev. J. M. Buyers, who preached a sermon last night entitled "The Worst Man in Tuckerton."

State Fire Warden Price is investigating a series of fires that have occurred in the pine woods between Barnegat and Cedar Bridge. All have had their origin at points remote from any railroad, and their number and frequency have led to the belief that they have been the work of an incendiary.

Much anxiety is felt in Millville for the welfare of Captain John Douglass, of Clermont, and the crew of the three-masted schooner A. John Rose, which cleared from Point, Alabama, forty-six days ago, and has not since been heard from. The vessel carried a cargo of dry cypress lumber and was bound for New York city.

His head battered until he was senseless, Lee Carter, colored, was Friday held under $500 bail by Recorder Starkhouse in Camden on a charge of assault and battery on Policeman Troncone. Carter was in a street brawl which the officer endeavored to quell, and he put up a desperate battle before being clubbed into submission.

Following orders of officials at the head of the Past Shore Line under which trolley cars in Atlantic avenue, Atlantic City, are being painted white, business men along the street are starting a movement to use the same color on every store and other building. Proposals for a "White Avenue," with pale blue trimmings, matching the municipal colors, are being received with enthusiasm.

Harry Downs, a Clayton expressman, has a rooster which for fighting abilities probably has no equal. Downs says he has no use for a dog, as the rooster is more protection than any dog he ever knew. Mr. and Mrs. Downs went away Friday and asked a neighbor, Rudolph Hartlett, to feed their chickens for them. Rudolph entered the yard, but was soon discovered by the rooster, which attacked him and gave him the fight of his life to keep from getting his eyes scratched out. When finally he made his escape the conqueror perched himself on the gatepost and crowed victoriously for a long time.

ORIGINAL CHAFING DISH PARTY

Several young girls who didn't care for bridge or jigsaw puzzles and disliked guessing contests, decided to give a charming dish frolic to boy friends.

The mother of one of the girls offered her dining-room, which was provided with seats for four guests at each. On each table was placed a small square of zinc to protect the wood, a chafing dish and a small tray filled with condiments, butter, milk and sugar, also a long spoon for stirring, and a measuring cup.

The buffet was cleared, and on it were placed various raw materials, as eggs, cold meat, cheese, oysters, flaked fish, flour, several cakes of chocolate, maple sugar and a good-sized steak. There were also a bottle or two of ale and a flask of sherry to be used as seasoning, and several loaves of bread and a box of crackers.

The centretable was daintily set with heaped plates, vegetable dishes, tumblers, knives, forks and spoons, and a huge punch bowl was filled with lemonade to be drunk during the cooking.

Soon after the guests arrived they were escorted to the dining-room. The boys, not having been let into the secret of the entertainment, were much overcome to be told to put on long white aprons and a chef's cap. The girls at the same time donned dainty chafing dish aprons of swiss and bewitching frills of swiss for their heads.

The boys were told to match for partners. Small colored cards with a cooking recipe pasted on each side were cut into four irregular pieces. Half of these were put in one box, to be drawn by the girls, while the other half were separated and drawn by the boys.

Partners having been found, the four young people were supposed to cook the dish for which they had drawn the recipe.

The girls seated themselves at the table and the boys were told to get from the buffet the different ingredients called for in the recipe. Much amusement was afforded by the queer things they bought as many of the most ordinary foods were not recognized in their raw state.

After everything was in readiness the two boys at each table were compelled to cook their assigned dish without help from their partners, save where some critical mistake was imminent, says the Philadelphia Ledger.

When all the tables had finished their cooking the girls acted as waitresses, passed plates and served the contents of each chafing dish. Every one present had a taste of everything that was prepared. At the close of the meal slips were passed and boys and girls voted on the dish they thought the best, the next best, and the worst. They also cast a ballot for the cleanest cook, the flassiest cook and the one who showed the most knack.

The winners were given different books on chafing dish cooking as prizes.

In preparing for the frolic each girl was supposed to bring a chafing dish, the piece of zinc or a tray, and her own apron and cap. The materials for the feast were bought from a common fund, while the chafers spent several merry afternoons making the caps and aprons of the boys from cheap muslin.

Among the dishes cooked were scrambled eggs, creamed hash, browned oysters, Welsh rarebit, a panned steak, chocolate and maple fudge, an omelet and lobster Newburg.

Four of the young people drew a recipe for ice cream, and two freezers, salt and a mallet for pounding ice—found in the kitchen—were supplied them, and they made the dessert for the party. As there was an extra couple, they were given a French percolator and a toasting fork and inducted into the mysteries of coffee making and toasting bread over the kitchen stove.

FACTS ABOUT WOMEN AT HOME AND ABROAD.

Mrs. Sarah R. Clifford recently served as a juror in a case in a Denver city court. She agreed with the male jurors in acquitting a milkman accused of striking a woman.

The first medal for artistic photographs of children at the Kansas State photographers' convention was awarded to a woman, Mrs. Helen L. Francis. About half the competitors for the prize were men.

In the high school at Dover, Mass., is a young Turkish woman from Smyrna. Miss Marika Lambichi, who is taking a preparatory course of two years, before entering Mt. Holyoke. She is a graduate of the Smyrna American Collegiate Institute.

The present awakening among the Hindu women is said to be largely due to the men of India, who are anxious to have educated wives and daughters. At the last convocation of the Bombay university two Bharman women took degrees. For the first time Hindu women were graduated from Madras University. At Malabar University Srimati Amma passed the language examination for the degree of A. B. She is married and the mother of a family. Some time ago she took the fine arts examination, it is said, at the express desire of her husband. She is a teacher in the local girls' college and coeditor of the Sarada, a literary journal.

HELPING HINTS AND AIDS FOR THE SEWING ROOM.

Thread will knot less easily if the end that is broken from the spool is run through the eye of the needle.

In joining the edges of lace or embroidery, the neatest finish is made by buttonholing the edges in as tiny a seam as possible.

The gingham apron for the housewife at her daily task, especially if the maid is out and she has any kitchen work to do, is imperative, and she will find the long apron that buttons over the shoulder the most acceptable.

After cleaning the sewing machine several yards of stitching must be accomplished before the machine runs smoothly and without leaving oily marks. If you have any long seams on dark material sew them now before attempting fine and light work.

A FINGER PROTECTOR.

When making buttonhole stitch on plain sewing or on embroidery the constant drawing of the thread across the little finger will eventually cut it. If you have not a finger protector of one sort or another, just use the "ounce of prevention" instead, in the form of a small, round piece of court plaster pasted on the part of the finger the thread will pass over.

There are some sewers who find this less of an inconvenience than the purchasable article, because it is flat and close to the finger.

THE FICHU.

It will be worn.

It is seen on black satin blouses.

It is richly embroidered in metal tones.

Colored laces, net and embroideries also adorn it.

It is, of course, made of some soft, filmy material.

It is graceful, picturesque, distingue, and now, fashionable.

It was worn some seasons ago, and is returning to popularity.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Prayer Meeting Topic For the Week Beginning April 11, 1909.

By REV. S. H. DOYLE.

Topic.—Risen with Christ.—Col. iii, 1-4. Easter meeting.

In the preceding chapter of this book the apostle points out the facts that the Christian died with Christ (verse 20), was buried with Him (verse 11), and also rose with Him (verse 11). "Buried with Him in baptism, wherein also ye are risen with Him through the faith of the operation of God, who hath raised Him from the dead." In the beginning of the fourth chapter he speaks of the practical side of our relation to Christ, especially as having been raised from the dead with Him. "If risen with Christ, what then?" he seems to ask and then answers his own question.

1. If risen with Christ, our aims in life should be more exalted. "If risen with Christ, seek those things which are above, where Christ sitteth at the right hand of God; set your affection on things above, not on things on the earth." The aim of the one who has been associated with Christ in all His works of redemption—in other words, who has been redeemed himself—is to be changed from earthly achievements and joys to those of heaven. The aim of the regenerate, unredeemed man is worldly. His mind is only toward the things of this life—its wealth, its pleasures and its ambitions. With the redeemed this is not the case. He seeks to lay up treasures in heaven, to be rich toward God rather than to possess riches of this world, and if we do this our affection for and set on the things in heaven rather than the things of earth, for where a man's treasures are there is his heart also. If our wealth is in heaven our thoughts will be constantly upon them. If our aims in life be to reach some political goal our hearts will be constantly upon that, and if seeking heavenly things our hearts' affection will be centered there, "where Christ sitteth on the right hand of God." This is indeed a "consummation devoutly to be wished," for many waste their lives on the trifling toys of earth and see not and seek not the eternal joys and treasures of heaven.

2. If risen with Christ the secret springs of all our life are heavenly. "Your life is hid with Christ in God." Christ is in God, we are in Christ, and therefore our lives are hidden in God, the source of all their power and efficiency. What a stupendous fact! A stream cannot rise above its source. But if the source of the secret springs in a man's heart and life be in God how boundless the aims and opportunities of his life! He can sing with sheerlift:

> Rise, my soul, and stretch thy wings,
> Thy better portion trace;
> Rise from transitory things
> Toward heaven, thy native place.
> Sun and moon and stars decay,
> Time shall soon this earth remove.
> Rise, my soul, and haste away
> To seats prepared above.

3. If risen with Christ we shall partake of His glory at His second coming. "When Christ, who is our life, shall appear, then shall ye also appear with Him in glory."

Unique Practices.

The first Endeavorers in Ceylon cut the Christian Endeavor monogram in native characters on the stems of certain cocoanut trees, whose fruit they thus dedicated to the Lord. And those that had no fruit trees dedicated each a hen, with her eggs and chickens. In another society in India, in famine times, each member set aside a handful of grain from her daily allowance that it might be sold to support a child in Africa.

Small but Zealous Society.

There is in the "way back" country on the west coast of Australia a Christian Endeavor society of only two members, both of them young men. They are working and praying to establish Christian Endeavor in their district, and they are Endeavorers of the right stamp.

ENJOY OPEN SESSION DAY AT THE SEMINARY

The gymnasium classes at The Seminary held Thursday the open session which marks the close of the indoor work for the season.

The program opened with the contest for the prizes offered to the pupil whose carriage was the most correct and graceful. Mrs. Morris Benton and Mrs. Eugene Hatch were the judges for the first and second divisions composed of the oldest girls and the smallest children in the school. In division III the marching was done without music and by request Miss Kenyon acted as judge.

The work which followed consisted of Swedish exercises, a jumping contest, aesthetic gymnastics and an obstacle relay race. An amusing game of "Simon says" was played by the younger class to test the promptness and accuracy of obedi*ence to command.*

The cups and the banners of the P. S. A. A. were given to the following successful contestants: Eleanor Hatch, Alverda Holland, Margaret Rice, Elsbeth Benton, Virginia Glover, Eleanor Bucklin and Winifred Titus. Those receiving honorable mention were Mary Dickinson, Dorothy Leal, Edith Palmer, Julia Scribner, Theresa Sharretts, Jean Wharton, Ruth Timpson, Eleanor Bucklin, Catherine Wright, Margaret Condict, Florence Moffett and Elsa Palmer.

Miss Dora Brown, the instructor, is a graduate of the Boston Normal *School of Gymnastics recently affil*iated with Wellesley College.

Next week will begin the out-door games and basketball.

GOLFBALDERDASH.

'Twas Snandrews and the bockered caves
Did slip and bunk as they offteed;
All grinsy were the caddiecoves
And the plusfours outdeed.

Beware the Potterhunt, my son.
The paws that cite the laws that catch;
Beware the Gofferback and shun
The shemixed Foursomatch.

He took his bulger club in hand.
Longtime the glumsome foe he fought;
So rested he by the sixteenth tee,
And stood awhile in thought.

And as in goffish thought he stood
The Potterhunt, with cheeks aflame,
Came silcing, and, in language crude
Dumbashterisked his game.

One up! One up! Though in a cup—
The mashie blade went flicherflack—
He holed it out, and with a shout
He came two-upping back.

And hast thou flogged the Potterhunt?
Come to the bar my beerish boy!
Oh, pargolf day! Hu(e)roo! Hu(e)ray!
He hiecoughed in his joy!

'Twas Snandrews, and the bockered caves
Did slipe and bunk as they offteed;
All grinsy were the caddiecoves
And the plusfours outdeed.

SOME DON'TS FOR THE YOUNG GOLFER.

Don't try to keep your eye on both hole and ball. Keep it on the ball.

Don't forget the rule about brushing the line of the putt. It's a new one.

Don't ever play over a missed putt when some one is coming up behind you. It does not help a player's temper to be delayed by your practising.

Don't be in too much hurry, but don't dawdle, especially over your putting.

Don't forget that "never up, never in," is a fine rule. It is just as easy to hole a putt from the far side of the hole as the near one.

Don't accept or concede putts. Remember that you missed some short ones yourself.

Don't try to hole in a long putt when you can halve the hole in two. Play safe and get the half.

Don't forget that there are limits to the teeing ground.

Don't lose your temper. You will lose the match if you do.

Don't hang over the ball debating what club you will use. Pick one and use it.

Don't try to outdrive your opponent. Play your own game, even if he does get longer drives.

Don't let your opponent hurry you. If he is a faster walker let him walk. Set your own pace.

Plan Bike Road Race.

Providing Mayor Fisk will grant a permit, "Jack" Horner, a local bicycle rider, will arrange for a twenty-five mile road race for May 31. There will be entries from all the States and should the event be as successful as that of last year, Plainfield cycle enthusiasts will see a great race.

VOGUE OF WHITE.

A growing inclination to wear white is apparent. White was once regarded as the special privilege of youth. Now, with a clearer knowledge of the values of color and a better realization of the importance of surrounding, one indulges one's natural tastes. Perhaps the influence of the period under which fashion is passing his something to do with this, for the women who amused themselves at Trianon used white freely and without stint.

Be that as it may, white gowns and white generally will be more worn this season than ever. White cloth in a variety of makes, satin charmeuse, the cashmere and white serge, in an infinite variety of qualities and thicknesses, will come in for much more attention from artists in dress.

As to the lingerie gown, its importance in the wardrobe cannot be questioned. It is one of the most useful things to have, and, whether worn outside or indoors, permits so much individual taste and charm in contrast that it is quite indispensable.

A new trimming that should become popular is best described as a theilis made from ribbon, soft silk or strands of chiffon and used as an insertion on skirts, as suspenders, belts, sashes, bertha and even sleeves. It is exceedingly pretty and can be easily made at home. Two strands are taken and laid as far apart as the desired width of the finished article. Then a third very long strand running zigzag is used to connect these two. At every point where this strand turns the ribbon or chiffon, etc., is gathered into a little button rosette and then caught to the foundation strands. Ribbon and chiffon combine very prettily. The ends, as in a sash or where necessary, are drawn together and weighted with a pretty tassel.

MOTHER AND CHILD.

Prominent cars should always be corrected in childhood by putting a thin cap on the child at night.

A day is a child's life is equal to a week in ours; so think twice before you condemn a child to a whole day's disappointment or unhappiness.

But the most pliable of baby's features is the nose. By gently massaging this feature every day with the thumb of forefingers a tendency to boardiness may be promptly subdued. The bridge should be gently pressed between these fingers in the course of an upward message movement.

One little chap was constantly being deceived as to his bed hour, which was 7:20 o'clock. He could not tell the time, and his mother or nurse would tell him that it was bedtime when in reality it was only 7 o'clock. He would look puzzled and only half convinced, as his reason told him that it could not be that late; but he had no choice but to obey. It would have been far wiser to set 7 o'clock as his bed hour and to have stuck to it.

A PING-PONG DOLL.

This curious doll is for the baby. It is quite irresistible to give, and even more so to make.

The ping-pong ball will make a regular little head for the doll. The ball is to be painted with a face, a smile that won't come off and parted hair.

The doll proper, which is to be attached to it, is made of a skein of soft pink yarn tied in at the waist with more yarn, and separated somewhat, so that the arms and legs are but strands of the same material.

The hands and feet are each a tiny tin sleigh bell sewed where it begins. The ping-pong balls are made also into little lady pin cushions, with wide, old-fashioned skirts.

The Secret of Success.

The motto of success was given in this tale, told at a banquet.

A Swede among the miners in the West was noted for always striking pay dirt. His fellows thought that there must be some secret to the unusual success of the Swede and questioned him as to how he always succeeded in finding the spot where the gold cropped out.

"Vell, Ay don't know of Ay can tell anytang 'bout dat," answered he, putting. "Ay only know dat Ay just keep on diggin'."—Milwaukee Press Press.

Hunt In a Georgia Graveyard.

"Could you direct me to a moonshine distillery?" said the major in the mountain region.

"Don't you know Georgia's gone dry?"

"I do. That's why I want a distillery."

"Kin I trust you?"

"Sure!"

"Well, the go down yander to the old graveyard, an' wait in the dark o' the moon by the dead cypress an' the ol' slate tombstone what you can't read the name on, till you hear somethin' like a scritchowl holler an' I'll come to you."—Atlanta Constitution.

Celery Bisque.

Chop fine sufficient celery tops to make half a pint; put them in a saucepan with a pint of water and simmer slowly for fifteen minutes; drain and press perfectly dry. Put this water in a double boiler, add a pint of milk, two level tablespoonfuls of butter rubbed smooth, and add twenty-five oysters that have been washed and drained. Cook until the gills curl, and serve at once.

CASHMERE DE SOIE FOR AFTERNOON DRESSES.

A very soft silky kind of cashmere, scarcely to be distinguished in appearance from crepe de chine, is the favorite fabric of the moment, so far as afternoon dresses are concerned. It is known as "cachemire de soie," and well describes its very attractive title, since there appears to be considerably more of silk than of wool in its composition.

Some exceedingly graceful frocks in this new cashmere are being arranged en princesse, with skirts which fit quite closely in the region of the waist, although they are fully draped half-way between the knees and the hem with soft folds, which are caught together with motifs of various shapes, carried out in padded rouleaux of satin, matching exactly the color of the cashmere.

The bodice part, the gown of this description, chosen in a new tone of orchid mauve, is made in the form of a princess robe, so far as the lower part of the bodice and the upper part of the skirt are con*cerned, but from a little distance* below the waist, the gown of cashmere are draped in such a way that they gave a tablier effect. They are lifted slightly on both sides, to reveal an underskirt of plain cashmere, the draperies being caught up with buckles of black silk in the same shade of mauve, embroidered with tiny sprays of dark and green leaves. To fill in the upper part of the bodice there is a chemisette of tucked mauve net, arranged with long close-fitting sleeves to match, and lined with ivory white satin. On the front of the bodice there is a very pretty embroidery representing clusters of dark violets and green leaves, with a few single blossoms scattered here and there.

Yet another charming afternoon frock is made in lavender-gray satin charmeuse, with a perfectly plain *under robe of the satin, fitting close*ly to the figure, and made with a long train. Hanging loosely from the shoulders there is a tunic of silk net in the same fascinating shade of gray, adorned with floral embroideries worked partly in oxidized silver and partly in gray floss silk and lacet braid to match. This tunic is finished both back and front with wide gray silk fringe, intermingled with threads of silver. The bodice is filled with gray Alencon lace and net, while the long sleeves, which come a little distance below the wrist, consist of alternate bands of gray lace and net, arranged to run horizontally.

TO COOK SHRIMPS.

Shrimps may be cooked delectably in the chafing dish in several ways. They are delicious with curried rice. Put four tablespoonfuls of butter into the blazer with a little chopped onion and allow to remain until brown. Add a heaping tablespoonful of cornstarch, into which two teaspoonfuls of curry powder, a teaspoonful of salt and a dash of pepper have been mixed; then add two cupfuls of milk, one-half cupful of shrimps, broken in small pieces, and a cupful of boiled rice; cook slowly for about five minutes.

For shrimp salad cut the shrimps into pieces and mix with minced lettuce. Prepare the dressing with it and cover with a dressing made with two eggs, yolks and whites beaten separately, adding a teaspoonful of salt and pepper, half cup of vinegar and a spoonful of mustard. The whole should be cooked until it begins to thicken.

The other receipts have been tested and found nat wanting. For one, take half a pint of fresh or canned shrimps ,a teaspoonful of tomato sauce, half cupful of cream; two and *one-half tablespoonfuls of but*ter, half a cup of boiled rice and a half cupful of cream. Put the butter into the blazer and when melted stir in the onion and rice. Then add the shrips, cream and tomato sauce. Stir until hot, then allow it to simmer for five minutes. Serve on toast.

The other recipe: Melt a piece of butter in the dish and add half a cup of boiled rice, one cup of cream or milk, and three tablespoonfuls of catsup. When the mixture is thoroughly heated add one cup of shrimp and cook for three minutes. Serve this also on toast.

Corn Pudding.

Score down the centre of each row of grains of twelve ears of corn and with dull knife press out the pulp. Canned corn may be used when green corn is not available. Separate four eggs, beat the yolks; add half a pint of milk; pour the skim milk into half a pint of flour. When perfectly smooth strain the mixture into the corn, add a level teaspoonful of salt, a saltspoonful of pepper and fold carefully the well-beaten whites. Pour the mixture in a shallow, greased baking dish, bake in a moderate oven for thirty minutes. Serve at once.

HOW TO BE HAPPY.

(By Chauncey M. Depew.)

The only paramount desire of all right-minded men and women is happiness. "How to be happy" is the cry or a near one, depending upon him who prays. It is not a matter of environment and of risposition. I have seen miserable rich men and miserable poor ones, the misery of the one not coming because of his riches, nor of the other because of his poverty. I knew a man whose income was a million a year and he spent a hundred and fifty dollars a month. I said to him, "What is your happiness?" His answer was, "What the snowball grew." I knew another with an income equally large who was a guinea pig. He lived upon the fees which he received as a director in many corporations. He was persuaded late in life to visit Europe, and there came across an old associate who had become happy after retiring from a hard business life by studying art and accumulating the treasures which he understood. He took his visitor to see a painting at the Salon which was interesting at Europe. While explaining its beauties with rare enthusiasm, he turned to see his friend busy writing upon a pad. He said, angrily, "What are THE PROPER WAY you doing? Are you trying to copy my picture?" "No," said his friend, "I am reckoning how much money I am losing while here in director's fees." The happiest man I ever knew was a peddler and a Methodist exhorter. He cheered the sorrowful, uplifted the sick, carried joy into houses of mourning, added gayety in life to gatherings of the *young, and consolation and merri*ment to the old by carrying out to the full the Scriptural motto, "Be diligent in business while serving the Lord." The amount of pleasure that there is in this world from mak*ing other people happy can never be* measured. The larger the field which money or talent enables a man to cover, the greater the joy. The philosophy of life is reciprocity, and a man gets what he gives.—Leslie's Weekly.

SUNDAY SCHOOLS MAKE THE CHURCH WORKERS

Declaring that fully ninety per cent. of church workers came from the ranks of the Sunday-school, Rev. Dr. David, corresponding secretary of the board of Sunday-schools, brought to a close Thursday the sec*ond day's meeting of the annual ses*sion of the Newark Conference being held in Centenary M. E. church, Newark. Rev. Dr. Thomas I. Coultas, of Elizabeth, presided at this meeting, a feature of which was the singing by the choir of the church.

Dr. David said that the gospel of the Sunday-school is being proclaimed now as never before in the history of the world, and in his opinion the future of not the church alone, but of religion, of civilization, rests with the members of the Sunday-school.

"Fully ninety per cent. of the workers of the church come from the Sunday-school," said Dr. David, "while eighty-three per cent. of the ministers are graduated from the Sunday-school and seventy-six per cent. of the new members of the church come from the same source.

"It has been said that the ministers and preachers do nothing but teach a man nothing but how to die. I say to you that this is false. The clergy today is not teaching men how to die, but how to live. That is the mission of the Sunday-school. We want to take the baby from his mother. The baby is sweet and good and innocent until God sees fit to call him to His home on high."

Today's session will be full of great interest. This morning Bishop Neely conducted a vow to be undertaken by the conference during the remaining days of the session and at 10 o'clock the board of examiners made its report and the candidates for holy orders appeared before the bishop.

Two meetings will be held tonight, one at the Centenary church, where the anniversary of the Freedmen's Aid Society will be observed, the Rev. F. L. Rhodes presiding, and the speaker being Rev. Patrick J. Maveety, secretary of the society. The other meeting will be the anniversary of the Conference Epworth League and will be held in the Halsey Street M. E. church, with the Rev. M. W. Wormer presiding. Rev. Prof. W. Hannan, of Brooklyn, will speak.

Rev. Dr. D. B. F. Randolph, of this city, superintendent of the Elizabeth district, in presenting his annual report before the conference yesterday afternoon, concluded as follows:

"The time is near when this insular group of churches under my charge will be closely bound to New Jersey by a tunnel to Bergen Point and another to Elizabethport, rendering them one; insulated but no longer insolated, no pent-up Utica will contain her powers; with a tunnel under the bay to Manhattan sure to come, immense population will settle here, and every encouragement should therefore be given, that Methodism, which at this time is the most numerous denomination there, may not only hold her own, but so anticipate the future as to do the largest possible work for God and for humanity."

MARRIAGE AND WORK.

As long as women workers stop work at marriage they will continue to be, as a class, low paid, overworked, and liable to drift only to-day and never to the future, entering industry casually without training, retiring from it unexpectedly without warning, hard to organize into trade unions, hard to interest in technical improvements, hard to inspire with financial ambition, behaving, in every respect, with the utmost good sense, just exactly in the manner in which any class of admittedly and consciously temporary workers should behave. It is hard to believe that such a situation can be right either for women or for industry. The women lose opportunities. Industry loses abilities.—From "The Women's Invasion," in the April Everybody's.

DON'TS FOR WOMEN WHO WOULD BE BEAUTIFUL.

Don't scowl or frown or knit your brow. As unlovely expression will counteract perfect features.

Don't mouth or bite your lips or hang your lips open. Twisting and contortion do not improve an ugly mouth, and ruin a pretty one. Don't squint or wink your eyelids or attempt "goo-goo" expressions. Your eyes may not be glorious orbs, but if left as nature made them they will attract less unfavorable notice.

Don't look coquettish or pose or smirk. Catharalness is one of the biggest beauty factors known.

Don't slap on rouge or peroxide or bought locks under the impression that the world is easily fooled. All three have their places, but should be used discerningly.

Don't wear unbecoming coiffures or hats or gowns just because they are the style. No one is so beautiful that she can afford to be a slavish follower of fashion.

Don't try to look younger than you are nor older than you are, nor as if you had more money than you have. The girl who apes womanly clothes is as unlovely as the old woman who tries to be kittenish; while attempted finery is hopelessly inartistic.

*Don't neglect the value of sun*light, fresh air and a good digestion as beauty-makers. Live out of doors and eat sparingly and the measure of beauty that is yours will be sensibly enhanced.

PRINCIPALS PLAN FOR NATURE STUDY OUTLINE.

The Union County Principals' Association held a regular meeting at Van Court Inn, Roselle, Thursday evening. The following were present: Superintendent Savitz, of Westfield; Principals Johnson, of Cranford; Soehl, of Kenilworth; Howell, of Linden; Davis, of Roselle; Dere, of Roselle Park; Walton, of Springfield; Updyke, of Garwood; Woodfield, of Lyons Farms; Headley, of Linden; Kline, of Union, and Cox, of Unionville.

The committee on nature study submitted an outline course of study in that subject. The course was well defined and showed thorough work on the part of the committee. The principals plan to devote a period of nature study in the schools. Dr. Savitz pointed out that this section is particularly good for the study of birds, especially at the migrating season.

It was reported that lectures on nature study and agriculture can be obtained from nature clubs and the national and State departments of agriculture at a very low rate, in most cases for expenses only. Several schools have already had such lectures and found them very instructive.

Principal Woodfield prepared a list of suggestive books on nature study for teachers and a number of poems to supplement the work in the subject. The May meeting will be held at the home of Principal Walton at Springfield.

OUTDOOR SLEEPING.

Lacking any opportunity for sleeping entirely in the open, one can have a sleeping hood which enables one to sleep with the head out of doors and the rest of the body indoors. For this one can place the bed with the side against the wall and the head at the window. The canvas hood extends over the bed alone, completely cutting off the rest of the body. The window is wide open, leaving the head exposed to the outside air, and there is a curtain to drop from the upper sash for protection against storms or winds. Another form of hood permits the bed to be placed with the head to the window and the foot out in the room. With this style of hood the extension bed may be used. The head of this extends out of the window just far enough to allow the head of the sleeper to rest outside. The sash is left open, with a curtain for use in case of storms, and in addition there is a canvas awning which may be raised or lowered.—Martha Cutler, in Harper's Bazar.

THE WIFE.

The little Dreams of Maidenhood—
I put them all away
As tenderly as mothers would
Their babies, today,
When little children grow to men
Too overwise for play.

The little dreams I put aside—
I loved them, every one,
And yet, since moonblown buds must hide,
—Before the noonday sun,
I close them wistfully away,
And give the key to none.

O little Dreams of Maidenhood—
Lie quietly, nor care
If some day in an idle mood
I, searching unaware
Through some closed corner of my heart,
Should laugh to find you there.
—Theodosia Garrison, in Harper's Bazar.

LICENSES FOR TAXICABS

Amendment to Ordinance Provides for a $10. Fee for Auto Vehicles.

FINE FOR FRAUD FIXED AT $20.

City Fathers Give Hospital $1,500 —The Usual Monthly Reports Are Filed.

An amendment to the ordinance regulating the licensing of hackmen, peddlers, hucksters, etc., was offered by Mr. Clay at the April meeting of the Common Council, Monday night, to include the operation of motor vehicles in the city. The ordinance as amended was read for information, laid on the table, it being the intention of the body to act upon it at a meeting in the near future.

The only changes in the ordinance as amended are made to cover the operation of motor vehicles and regulate the charges. It provides for a license fee of $10 for each motor vehicle and in addition a fee of $1 for which the driver will receive a license to operate the same. The ordinance fixes the charges at thirty cents for one or four passengers for the first half-mile and ten cents for each additional quarter mile, with a charge of ten cents for each six minutes in waiting. A taxicab can be called a distance of a mile and half free of charge, but for a greater distance a charge of twenty cents can be made.

The ordinance further provides that each taxicab shall be equipped with a taximeter of approved design, to be attached to the axle, and that the Mayor or City Judge shall have the power to revoke the license under which the taxicab is operated upon proof of fraud in making charges or tampering with the taximeter. A fine of $20 for each offense in violations of the ordinance may be imposed.

Building Inspector T. O. Doane reported that he granted thirty-three permits during February, while Street Commissioner A. J. Gavett reported the granting of thirty-eight sewer permits during the months of February and March. Horace G. Adams, clerk of the District court, reported receipts amounting to $101.15 and disbursements of $25.-56, with a balance of $75.60, for the past month.

In response to a request from W. L. Hughes, chairman of the finance committee of Muhlenberg Hospital, Mr. Mygatt offered a resolution, which was adopted, appropriating $1,500 for the hospital to cover the expense of caring for the city's indigent poor during the coming year. This is the annual custom. Another resolution offered by Mr. Mygatt and adopted, provided for the transfer of $5,000 from the general fund to the fire account and $2,000 from the general fund to the poor account.

The Council accepted the offer of Harry Denckla to settle his claim against the city for $30, and arrangements were made to secure his release upon the payment of that amount. The claim was for injuries received by his horse as a result of street obstructions.

An ordinance to vacate Raymond avenue, between East Front street and Midway avenue, was offered by Mr. Gloak, adopted on the first reading, ordered advertised and Monday night, May 3, was fixed as the time for a public hearing on the proposed action.

Mr. Mygatt moved that when Council adjourn it be to meet on Monday night, April 12, at which time matters pertaining to the fire department and finances will be discussed.

WANT ROLLER SKATING PLACE FOR CHILDREN.

Realizing the growing popularity of roller skating among the children of the city, and, the fact that there is no suitable place where the sport can be enjoyed, the Parent-Teacher Association, in a communication to the Common Council Monday, requested the body to provide a walk of concrete or other similar material, of suitable dimensions, where children can roller skate unmolested.

At present the children use the sidewalks of the city more or less, and oftentimes they interfere with pedestrians. This matter was brought to the attention of Chief of Police Kiely recently and he issued a semi-official notice warning children to be careful. The Parent-Teacher Association believes that the city can and should provide a place for roller skating and that it would be a source of great pleasure to the children. The communication was referred to the committee on streets.

Endorse Candidates.

At the regular meeting of the Republican Club of New Providence township on Saturday night, on motion of Henry S. Morgan, the treasurer of the Union County Republican Committee, it was unanimously resolved that the Republican Club of New Providence township endorse the candidacies of John H. Kean for re-election as United States Senator, James C. Calvert for renomination for County Clerk and Frank H. Smith for renomination for Register of Deeds.

ROUTINE MATTERS OF THE COMMON COUNCIL

Mayor McBride, of Paterson, in a communication to the Common Council at its April meeting Monday night, stated that the legislative measure providing for the distribution of railroad tax money among the school districts had passed, and urged the city to use its influence in having the Governor sign it this week. The matter was referred to the finance committee.

Resolutions in the vicinity of Midway avenue, between Hill street and Johnston avenue, asked the Council to put a stop to the practice of dumping refuse there. The communication was referred to the Board of Health.

Public hearings were granted on the ordinances providing for the macadamizing of certain streets and the opening of Stelle avenue, but no one appeared to speak for or against the proposed improvements. The Public Service Corporation reported the location of sixteen new street lamps, as ordered during the past few months.

Mayor Charles J. Fisk appointed William F. Walters and James O'Keefe as call-men in the fire department to take the places of E. P. Townley and J. B. Conklin, resigned. The appointments were confirmed.

City Treasurer W. F. Arnold reported that he had received a final statement from Alexander Gilbert, as treasurer of the Lincoln Day celebration and $91.75 the balance of the fund appropriated had been returned and placed in the general fund.

CITY WILL GET FINES FOR EXCISE OFFENSES

For the purpose of making it possible for the City Judge to dispose of violations of that section of the ordinance regulating to the sale of liquor in quantities from one quart to five gallons, Mr. Clay offered an amendment to the ordinance at the April meeting of the Common Council, Monday. It was read for information, laid on the table and will be acted upon later. The original provision called for a fine of $100 or sixty days in jail for violations, and Mr. Clay's amendment makes the fine $20 for each offense.

The matter has been under advisement for several weeks, and if the change is made it will do away with the trial by jury in cases of violation and bring the offenders before City Judge Runyon. This is considered the most satisfactory as well as the easiest way of disposing of such violations.

COMMUTER'S NARROW ESCAPE FROM DEATH

Dragged half the length of the platform at the North Avenue station, Van Wyck Brooks narrowly escaped death Tuesday in an unsuccessful attempt to board the 7:55 train for New York. He was badly scratched and bruised about the face and hands, but was able to go to town on the next train.

The young man vaulted from the station waiting room as the train pulled out, and attempted to jump aboard. He was carrying his overcoat on his arm, and it got in his way as he seized the guard rail and attempted to climb aboard. He was thrown heavily and dragged along with the train, which rapidly developed speed. Just before reaching the bridge girders at Watchung avenue, the young man had presence of mind enough to let go and dropped by the track. Passengers and railroad men rushed to his assistance and an examination showed that no bones were broken, but that he was badly bruised.

HER BURNS PROVE FATAL

Mrs. Henry's Dress Ignited and She was Aflame From Head to Foot.

L. P. RUNYON'S MOTHER-IN-LAW.

Taken to Somerset Hospital Where Doctors Said There Was No Hope For Her.

Mrs. William S. Henry, of Washington Valley, mother of Mrs. Isaac P. Runyon, of Prospect place, and Borough Clerk Louis P. Runyon, of Somerville, at 3 o'clock Tuesday morning, as the result of frightful burns received Monday morning while buring some leaves about the house.

After raking the leaves into a pile she touched a lighted match to them. Before she realized it her dress had caught from the flames and she was ablaze from head to foot. Her husband and the hired man were not at home at the time, but her screams attracted Ernest and Harry Snyder, who were a few hundred feet away and they, together with Louis Hoffmeister, rushed to the assistance of Mrs. Henry.

Before the rescuers could extinguish the blaze the woman was burned almost beyond recognition. She was carried unconscious into the house. Mr. Henry returned within a short time and upon his arrival arranged to have his wife removed at once to the hospital at Somerville, where she was placed under the care of Dr. Stillwell. A little later Dr. F. Ellis, of the borough, was called in consultation. The physicians announced that Mrs. Henry's burns would prove fatal. She passed away at 3 o'clock this morning without regaining consciousness. The members of the family were with her at the time.

Mrs. Henry was Miss Mary Louise Quick, daughter of James Quick, a builder of Somerville, at which place she was born sixty-one years ago. For twenty-five years she had lived in Washington Valley. She was a faithful member of the Mt. Horeb M. E. church. Surviving her are the husband, one daughter, Mrs. Isaac P. Runyon, and a son, William B. Henry, of Newark.

The funeral service will be held from the late home Thursday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock.

GROVER CLEVELAND'S LOVE OF CHILDREN.

In the April American Magazine Jesse Lynch Williams, writing of Grover Cleveland, says:

"His love of children was not merely an abstract tenderness for the inherent beauty and pathos of new life; he liked to have them around; he enjoyed watching them. And they, with the instinctive trust shown by children and animals toward those who really appreciate them, enjoyed being with him. Sometimes he would spend a whole day gravely mending toys, making wooden blocks for paper soldiers, constructing water wheels. The story has already been told of how "The Princeton Bird Club,' composed of professors' children and others, decided that he was worthy of honorary membership in their body. So one day they assembled especially for the purpose, *and solemnly read an address of wel*come to 'the Hon. G. Cleveland,' who bowed and accepted the honor in a speech which won for him unqualified suprebation.

"Callers who came quaking into the presence, thinking, perhaps, 'So this is the man who guided the ship of state,' must have been surprised when, for instance, Francis, the youngest, a handsome boy of three or four, came romping in, never dreaming of fear. Or when Ruth, the former President of the United States, 'Hello! You've got on a new suit—are those shoes new, too?'"

Mayor Townsend referred at the outset of his remarks to the failure of the Democrats in the last campaign. "We can find reasons for the defeat," he said, "but what's past is gone, and we must profit by the lesson and the mistakes of the party now in power and strive to get the confidence of the people. He referred to the law on railroad taxation and the maximum tax law, and spoke of the trouble it had made in the borough, where it had been necessary to increase the tax rate. He characterized the movement to take away the school money as a measure incomplete," and he got an enthusiastic reception from the diners.

"It's nothing new to me to talk," he began. "I love to talk, and I do love to talk about my political beliefs. I wasn't here when Tom Jefferson was put in front sight. The mirror must not be hung, but screwed tightly, or it will knock and swing whenever the door is moved.

Bayonne, 1893-1897; Westfield, 1904-1907, when he was appointed district superintendent of the Jersey City district. Since that time he has performed a good work and succeeded in building up and strengthening all the churches in his district. He is a forceful preacher and his work in the past shows that he has been a good pastor. He is expected to occupy the local pulpit for the first time on Sunday, while at the same time, Dr. McCrea will make his farewell appearance as pastenary church, Newark. According to the rules of the M. E. church, the pastors assume their charges the first Sunday following their appointments.

Rev. Dr. McCrea was not in a pleasant frame of mind when he discussed his transfer with a reporter for The Daily Press today. Indeed, it was plainly evident that the popular divine was not at all pleased over his assignment to Newark.

"Just a short time before the Bishop announced his appointments," said the genial clergyman, "I was assured by the two presiding elders that so far as Plainfield was concerned there would be no changes. This pleased me mightily for, as you know, I and my first dwell in harmony. The announcement was a double blow to me inasmuch as I had sincerely assured the congregation of the First M. E. church that I would gladly accept the invitation to remain for the fifth year. I like Plainfield and I am attached to my parish work. The past year has been the most prosperous in our church history and I had planned with the cooperation of our people, to make a record for our parish during the coming year.

"No one," continued the pastor, "was more surprised than I when the appointments were announced. I do not know a single man in Centenary *church and why I was as*signed to that charge I do not know. I understand that they are hard-working Methodists and are most loyal, but I love Plainfield. The bishop has issued his orders and I must obey, but I wish that you would say for me that I am awfully disappointed in having to leave my work here which I consider unfinished."

UNIQUE DRESSING TABLE.

*A closet door, if one is so fortu*nate as to have a closet, is easily converted into a dressing table by screwing on a mirror and under it either a small shelf with a rim to prevent articles from slipping off, or, what is less expensive, an old-fashioned wooden knife and fork box.

Bags tacked tidily below this will hold brushes and combs, hand mirror and all necessary toilet articles, while the shelf or box may be used as a table when the former are in service. When the door is closed the whole is out in front sight. The

DR. ETON TO RESIDE IN 'CITY BEAUTIFUL'

Rev. Dr. Charles A. Eaton, the popular pastor of the Madison Avenue Baptist church, New York, together with his family, will soon make their home in this city. He was formerly pastor of John D. Rockefeller's church in Cleveland and less than a year ago accepted a call to the New York church of which he is now pastor.

Prior to assuming the duties of his new charge, Dr. Eaton was very ill with typhoid fever, and during the convalescing period he lived at Truell Inn, on Park avenue. While here he formed an attachment for Plainfield and decided to establish his residence here if his work would permit so that he and his family might enjoy the advantages of the country and get away from the hustle and bustle of city life. The minister has about decided on a property here which he will purchase and when not engaged in work at his church, will spend the time here.

Since going to the Madison Avenue church, Dr. Eaton has been successful in increasing its membership. He is considered one of the leading ministers in the Baptist denomination and is a man of charming personality.

SCOTCH PLAINS BAPTISTS HOLD ANNUAL MEETING.

The annual parish meeting of the Scotch Plains Baptist church was held Monday night, the pastor, Rev. Prabhu R. Mathews, being chair*man and Edward D. Johnston*church clerk, acted as secretary. The principal business comprised the presentation of reports and the election of three trustees for three years. The report of the treasurer showed a deficit for the year, but the several reports fro mthe societies connected with the church showed all to be in excellent condition with a balance on the right side. This was especially true of the Sunday-school.

John Lehmann, Edward D. Johnston and Captain H. B. Saunders were elected trustees. The deacons of the church were authorized to prepare and have printed a church manual for distribution among the members, also to arrange a revised list of the church membership with the present addresses. After the meeting there was a social hour and refreshments were served.

The spiritual interest which has been manifested in the church since Mr. Mathews became pastor has been most encouraging to him and he took occasion to thank the members, expressing hope that the coming year would be the best in the history of the church.

WILL LICENSE BOW-WOWS

The Proposed Dog Ordinance is Much More Strict in Its Provisions.

WAS READ TO CITY FATHERS.

Tax Removed and $2.50 License Substituted—Identification Tag to Be Provided.

If the amended dog ordinance as offered and read for information at the April meeting of the Common Council Monday night is adopted it will provide a license fee of $2.50, an increase of fifty cents over the present dog tax, and numerous other restrictions will be enforced, which, in the opinion of the committee, will solve a troublesome problem. Mr. Holt is the chairman of the committee, and he has held several conferences with Corporation Counsel Marsh preparatory to the drafting of the amended ordinance to cover all legal points.

The ordinance provides that the owners of dogs shall sign their names at the office of the city clerk, giving a complete description of their dogs, as to color, sex, markings or any particular feature. Upon the payment of the license fee the owner will receive a tag. A fee of $10 is provided for a kennel license, where there are five or more dogs in the kennel. A complete description of these dogs must be furnished the city clerk, who in turn shall file the information to Chief Kiely, and he shall acquaint the policemen concerning these dogs for their own information.

The dogs are to be provided with a metal tag to be furnished by the city and the design is to be changed each year for at least three years. The Mayor may at his own discretion order all dogs muzzled and on May 1 of each year a pound is to be established and a poundkeeper appointed for the impounding of unmuzzled dogs. The dogs are to be kept at least seventy-two hours for redemption and the poundkeeper is to receive twenty-five cents a day for the keep of each dog. It will cost $1 to redeem a dog. The dog-catcher is to receive fifty cents for each dog captured. Violations of the ordinance call for a penalty of $20 for each offense. No license will be required for dogs brought here for show purposes or dogs brought here on a visit.

While it is believed that the ordinance contains many excellent features, many are of the opinion that in other respects it is too drastic and would not meet with general approbation. The cost of a bulldog of about $10 last night to the dog-catcher and some of the Councilmen are of the opinion that the ridding the city of worthless canines is an expensive proposition. Objection is also made to the proposed ordi*nance, $2.50 being considered too* high for a single license and $10 too low for a kennel permit.

PRETTY ORNAMENTS FOR MILADY'S HAIR.

Hair ornaments multiply at counters equipped with them and at the theatre, opera, dance and wherever fashionable women congregate. Some of the newest inventions are passing attractive and even captivating.

In some of the jeweled bandeaus of one, two or more bands, economy has been considered in an arrangement which fits either the front or the back of the head.

Such ornaments are made of jet, or shell or its imitation, or of platinum, set with brilliants and jewels.

The ribbon-wound bands, which come singly or in clusters for filets, are one of the generally popular and becoming things. The satin platinum wire bands set at the front with fancy jeweled designs that remind one of a coronet are still used, but the ones that lie low on the head, decorating the back rather than the front, are the favorites of the hour. Others are made of pearls, the waxilled kind, made into a net-shaped arrangement that holds the hair in sash and emphasizes the width of the head at the back.

The head below has a hair twist that is of the old coronet braid order, and this is wound with ribbon strands.

The latest quirk at the milliner's is the wide flat velvet ribbon strap that is fastened to the under side of the brim at and that goes around the "nape of the neck at the back when the hat is put on.

The band, in going under the hair, draws the brim down more or less, so that a sort of bonnet effect may or may not be produced.

The ribbon takes the place of the parette. It is about three inches wide.

THE CONSTITUTIONALIST

VOL. XLI PLAINFIELD, N. J., THURSDAY, APRIL 15, 1909. NO. 15.

"Support the Constitution, which is the Cement of the Union, as well in its Limitations as in its Authorities."—Madison.

TALKED ON TEMPERANCE

Mrs. Addie Parsel's Theme at Local W. C. T. U. Meeting "Turn on the Light."

PROHIBITION MOVE GROWING.

The Two Great Friends of Cause Are the Press and the Corporations

She Says.

About fifty members of the W. C. T. U. assembled at Trinity Reformed church, last night, to listen to an address given by Mrs. Addie Parsels, of Philadelphia. Her subject was "Turn on the Light." Mrs. Parsels is an excellent speaker, with strong views of the liquor problem.

"The world is growing better, more sober and less drunken," said Mrs. Parsels. "The educational system of the public schools is settling the immigration problem, for by the law of the State every child must go to school. The children are in many ways being better protected by the State than they are by the parent. There are the truant officers, the pure food laws, the health officers and compulsory vaccination laws. These all show what is being done for the betterment of mankind.

"By 'Turning on the Light' we see the law means protection; by the law highways are guarded, safety rails are placed on all bridges, the speed of automobiles limited in such a manner that the public is safe in travelling. Now the only way to destroy the liquor traffic is for the government to prohibit its manufacture and sale. As there is a law against using adulteradted pepper, such a law should apply to whiskey. By 'Turning on the Light' we find the distilling of liquor illegal. Last year there were thirty-four counties in Ohio that voted 'dry' and 8,000 saloonkeepers and bartenders had to find other employment. Ten years ago there were six million persons claiming to belong to the prohibition movement. Now there are thirty-seven million in league with the movement.

"The two great friends of the W. C. T. U. are the press and the corporations. Only last year one hundred and twenty-five thousand railroad men signed the pledge for total abstinence. The larger corporations want men who are sober; men who can be depended upon and trusted, and for that reason they require men whose brains are not wrecked by liquor."

The devotional exercises were in charge of Rev. Ora J. Shoop, of Grace M. E. church. Miss Bertha Willis sang two solos, "Lead Kindly Light" and "Jesus, Jesus, Miserere."

This afternoon Mrs. Parsels will speak in Dunellen.

Among the many gifts received by Mrs. Peck was fifteen pieces of cut glass.

BURGLARS AT NEW MARKET

Disguised Thief Enters Walker Home and Chokes Daughter Almost Insensible.

ATTEMPTS MADE ELSEWHERE.

Miss Iva Dayton Suffers Nervous Shock—Natives Are Alarmed Over Numerous Burglaries.

The most daring burglary reported in this vicinity in a long time occurred early yesterday morning at the home of Louis K. Walker on the New Market road, below New Market. A young man climbed up the porch and entered the room where Mr. Walker's adopted daughter, Miss Iva Dayton, aged eighteen years, was asleep in bed, and took $2.60 which the young woman told him he would find on the bureau.

Thoroughly frightened by the presence of the thief, Miss Dayton began to call loudly for help. At the instant she did so, the man ran to her side and almost choked her into insensibility. The young woman, who has been detained at home by illness, received a severe nervous shock, but she was able to discover the fact that the robber's face and hands were blackened to hide his identity. In an attempt to choke her he left the imprints of the black on her throat.

The young woman's cries aroused her father and as he appeared in the room with a shot-gun, the thief made his escape through a window and got away in safety. The whole neighborhood was aroused and a vigilant search was made through that section, but no trace of the man could be found. It was afterward learned that attempts were made during the night to enter the homes of James Young, Mrs. Sarah Smalley, Wilbur Yances and Harry Dencklau, all in the immediate vicinity, but the burglars were frightened away before effecting an entrance.

The residents are thoroughly aroused over the situation and are determined to take steps to stop these wholesale burglaries.

Among those who made speeches were Mr. Swackhamer and Mr. Linbarger; also John Frech, counsel for the Board of Freeholders; Surroga'e William DeMund and Lawyer Daniel Beekman, of Somerville. All the speeches were excellent and listened to with interest by the guests.

The music was furnished by Mueller's orchestra, of Brooklyn, being seated on the stage behind the floral decorations.

In addition to the entertainment committee, which planned the affair, there were several patronesses including Mrs. Francis E. DuBois, Mrs. A. M. Abbott, Mrs. A. B. Laing, Mrs. Donald McGee, Mrs. Hugh Jarvis. They received the guests and helped to make the reception and dance a success.

On Saturday night the first of a series of informal dances will be held under the direction of the entertainment committee.

FIRST BAPTIST PEOPLE HEAR ANNUAL REPORTS

Gratifying reports were presented at the annual parish meeting of the First Baptist church, last night, and they showed that the church is free from debt with a cash balance of $28.16 and $777.89 in uncollected pew rents which will be due within a short time.

Rev. Dr. J. A. Chambliss, the pastor, was chairman of the meeting and O. B. Leonard, the church clerk, was in his position. The annual report of the treasurer, J. Herbert Case, was presented. This showed the total receipts, together with last year's balance to be $7,847.89 and the disbursements to be $7,809.73. The $1,000 included for music does not represent the total cost, the balance, amounting to about $2,000 being contributed privately for the purpose. During the past year about $700 was expended for repairs. It was reported that arrangements have about been completed to build a few new horsesheds alongside the church to take the place of the old sheds recently removed.

There were two trustees to be elected to succeed Alexander Gilbert and Alfred W. Day, whose terms of office expired. Mr. Gilbert was re-elected for a full term, and George F. White was chosen to succeed Mr. Day, who with his family expect to remove to New York in the near future.

SENTENCE SUSPENDED ON AN AUTO SPEEDER.

Released on his own recognizance after his arrest on South avenue on Sunday afternoon, Frank L. Apgar, of West Fourth street, whom Patrolman George Dobson found driving a big Flat car at a rate of thirty miles an hour, appeared before City Judge Runyon at the session of court today. The machine bore no number at the time, and it developed that the number had not been put on when the car started from Newark. Apgar alleged that this was the fault of the man who had washed the car at the Newark garage.

Riding with Apgar at the time of the arrest was a prospective purchaser of the car, but while Apgar, who is a salesman for the Flat, acknowledged that he had "let out" the 80-horse-power car before reaching town, he said that he had gone into the second speed at the city limits. Judge Runyon suspended sentence with a warning.

THE COMMITTEES ARE NAMED.

Veterans to Hold "Open House"—To Decorate Graves—There Will Be Public Exercises.

At the meeting of Winfield Scott Post, No. 73, G. A. R., last night, plans for the annual observance of Memorial Day were discussed, and an outline of the program partly decided upon. The general committee on Memorial Day comprises Charles B. Stephens, chairman; I. L. McVoy, Fred Wenzel, Nathan Pennington and Edward Vanderveer. This committee has selected its sub-committees. I. L. McVoy being in charge of music and speaker and Fred Wenzel and Nathan Pennington on hall. The marshal for the day has not yet been appointed.

The orator of the day has been chosen. He will be Past Department Commander Burroughs, of Paterson, who is said to be an exceptionally fine speaker.

The plans for this year's observance will include several features. The Post will keep "open house" at headquarters in Reform Hall and during the interval between the parade and the public exercises in the afternoon dinner will be served at headquarters by the members of the Women's Relief Corps. A general invitation will be extended to all veterans of the Civil War in this vicinity, whether members of the Post or not, to join in the observance and they will be invited to partake of the dinner.

Details from the Post will visit the various cemeteries early in the morning of May 30, and upon their return a Post, accompanied by Co. K, which has been invited, will join in a parade of the principal streets, during which the Evergreen and North Plainfield cemeteries will be visited. Appropriate exercises will be held at these two cemeteries. The Plainfield Brass Band will furnish the music.

After the parade dinner will be served. The public exercises will be held in Reform Hall in the afternoon when the veterans will have charge under the direction of Mr. Craig Smith, commander. There will be a chorus of school children to sing patriotic airs and the usual service for the unknown dead will form a part of the program, together with the reading of Lincoln's Gettysburg address.

A few days prior to Memorial Day, details from the Post will visit the public schools of the city and borough and speak to the children, as usual. Commander H. Craig Smith is in charge of the work to collect flowers from the public schools to be used in decorating the graves of departed veterans.

GEN. WANSER ORDERS ELECTION HELD NOW.

Major General Peter Farmer Wanser, division commander of the National Guard of New Jersey, yesterday issued a division order calling for the election of a successor to Brigadier-General Edward A. Campbell Friday night.

The election will be held in the armory of the Fourth Regiment in Jersey City, and General Wanser will preside. Colonel Edwin W. Hine, of Fifth Regiment, who was appointed temporary brigade commander pending the decision of the Campbell case, is the only candidate, and the promotion is due him under the seniority rules of military etiquette.

General Wanser, it is understood, would not have ordered an election until the Campbell case had been settled by the courts, but Governor Fort, as commander-in-chief of the New Jersey National Guard, directed the election, General Wanser stated yesterday.

Only the line officers of the First Brigade, including the colonels, lieutenant-colonels and majors, will vote, and there are fourteen of them.

Lieutenant-Colonel Albert A. Van Valraven, it is understood, will have no opposition in advancing to the command of the Fifth Regiment, if Colonel Hine is made brigade commander. The election in the Fifth Regiment will be ordered as soon as Hine is elected brigade commander, if present plans go through.

No Trace of Emil Mueck.

Emil Mueck, who disappeared from his home at Elizabeth a week ago Monday, is still missing.

BABY MAY BE BLINDED

Eight-Year-Old Boy Fires a Blank Cartridge, Powder Going in Brother's Eye.

THE VICTIM TWO YEARS OLD.

Dr. A. H. Dundon Has Hopes of Saving One of Little Biddle Boy's Optics.

Arthur Biddle, the eight-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Richard Biddle, of Lee place, while playing with a revolver filled with blank cartridges at his home this morning, accidentally discharged the firearm in the face of his baby brother, aged two years, and as a result the little tot will lose the sight of one eye, while his face will be disfigured for a long time. Dr. A. H. Dundon, the family physician, was summoned immediately and through prompt treatment believes that he will save one optic.

The revolver belongs to an older brother, Richard Biddle, Jr., and Arthur got hold of it while his mother was out of the room. In a playful mood and for the purpose of amusing his brother, he danced in front of him waving the weapon. He pressed the trigger a little too hard, discharging it. The report frightened the lad so that he dropped the pistol and ran from the room, while the screams of the injured baby brought the mother to the scene instantly.

The child's face was blackened by the powder from the cartridge, and the examination by the physician showed that the discharge was so close as to not only burn the skin, but also the eyes, one more than the other. The sight of both eyes are in danger, but Dr. Dundon now believes that he can save one.

MURDERER ESCAPES THE ELECTRIC CHAIR

Archibald Herron, who has been held in the death house at Trenton for several weeks under sentence to die in the electric chair for the murder of the Rev. Samuel B. D. Prickitt, at Metuchen on July 15 last, was yesterday judicially declared insane by Justice James J. Bergen at New Brunswick.

The court made an order in the matter except to direct the man to be taken in charge by the State prison keeper.

Justice Bergen stated that his refusal to reimpose sentence of death was the only action he could take, and that counsel for the defendant should make a move for the further disposition of the prisoner. Former Judge C. T. Cowenhoven, counsel for the man, declared that he would do so and an application to have the man committed to an asylum for the insane will be made later. This afternoon the prisoner was taken back to State prison.

Zelocowitz Case Postponed.

The case of Louis Zelocowitz, the New York plumber who is bringing action against Samuel Roth, of Plainfield avenue for an alleged assault committed Saturday night when Zelocowitz went to the house to collect some wages, was postponed for a week at the session of city court today. The reason for the postponement is that Patrick Kilbride, of Westfield, who was with Roth's house at the time, and has been subpoenaed as a witness in the case, was unable to come to this city today for the postponed hearing. Roth has retained Robert Newton Crane as his counsel.

Young People's Dance.

About two score local young people, including some Plainfield High School graduates now at the various colleges, held an informal dance at the Fanwood fire-house last night. Refreshments were served at midnight and dancing was continued until an early hour. The committee in charge of the affair comprised Louis De Brigard, Paul Collier and Stewart Freeman.

JAMES T. CLOSSON DEAD

Generous and Unostentatious Resident Passes Away After a Long Illness.

AGED SEVENTY-TWO YEARS.

Retired from Banking Business Twenty-five Years Ago—He Is Survived By a Sister.

James T. Closson passed away at an early hour this morning at his home on East Front street. His death comes at the close of a long illness, which has confined him to the house for the past six months.

Mr. Closson was seventy-two years of age and has lived in Plainfield since 1857. He was a banker of the firm of Closson & Hayes, of New York city, but retired from active business life about twenty-five years ago. He was for many years before his death prominently identified with the City National Bank of Plainfield as its vice president and one of its directors and much of the conservatism and strength of that institution are due to his watchful and intelligent interest in its affairs.

Mr. Closson was one of the best beloved men in the city. Of a disposition entirely unselfish and kindly and active part in helping every good cause. Having ample means, he used them generously but unostentatiously wherever there was need. His right hand never knew what his left hand was doing and there are many among the poor and deserving who will hold his memory in grateful recollection.

Mr. Closson was never married and is survived by an only sister, Mrs. Edgerton. His devotion to her was beautiful and his one great purpose in life was to minister to her comfort and happiness. His genial smile, his open hospitality, his firm friendship will long be cherished by those who were privileged to know him. The funeral will be private.

BIG NIGHT FOR THE KNIGHTS OF COLUMBUS

Under the direction of District Deputy O'Neil and staff of six from Jersey City, the second degree was conferred on thirty-eight candidates at the meeting of Watchung Council, Knights of Columbus, last night. The initiatory work was performed in a highly creditable manner by the team and the members were personally congratulated by the knights.

After the initiatory work there were brief speeches by Deputy O'Neil and his staff, as well as Francis J. Blatz and J. J. Varley responding. The remarks were all of a congratulatory nature. Following the work of the evening Watchung Council served refreshments and a smoker was enjoyed.

PLAINFIELD MEN VISIT A RAHWAY INSTITUTION.

A. E. Force, Isaac Schwed, J. Hervey Doane and M. C. Van Arsdale were the guests of A. Mr. Cloyd, the founder of what is to be known as the Self-Supporting Home for Men and Boys, which is located at Rahway. The object of the new institution is to take in men and boys who are un-employed and if possible to uplift them. Mr. Cloyd stated that it was his intention of making the institution self-supporting if possible and the large tract of ground that was leased with the building will be run as a truck farm, to be worked by the inmates.

On next Monday night Mr. Cloyd will be in the city as a guest of the Merchants' Association and will make some remarks pertaining to the institution.

Dr. Zwemer to Preach.

Rev. Dr. S. M. Zwemer, field secretary of the foreign board of the Reformed Church in America, and greatly interested in the Forward Movement for foreign missions and for many years a missionary in Arabia, will occupy the pulpit of Trinity Reformed church, Sunday morning and night. He is a very able speaker and much sought after by the churches.

The Daily Press Never Fails.

A member of the family of N. W. French, of West Fourth street, on Saturday lost a gold fraternity pin, and advertised the fact in The Daily Press. The pin was found by Mrs. David Bush, a reader of the newspaper, who returned it to the owner today and received a suitable reward.

MURDEROUSLY ATTACKED

The Victim, an Aged Junkman, with Skull Fractured, in Critical Condition.

ROBBERY WAS THE MOTIVE.

Police and Detectives Searching for the Unknown Assailant of George Elwyn.

His skull fractured with an axe by a murderous blow from behind, George Elwyn, a junk dealer, sixty years old, whose home is in a little shack on the Warrenville road, near the Watchung ice house, lies unconscious at Muhlenberg Hospital, the victim of an attack by an unknown assailant. Robbery is supposed to have been the motive for the crime, for the old man's pockets were rifled. The axe, a short-handled rusty tool, was found covered with blood and human hair near the barn, to which Elwyn had gone to feed his horse late last night.

William Bartle, who lives within a few hundred feet of the little six-by-ten hut where the old man has lived alone for the past two years, heard moans of pain at his front door as he was preparing to retire at about 10 o'clock last night and discovered Elwyn in a fainting condition on the stoop. The injured man had crawled on his hands and knees from the place where he was attacked and was so weak that he could only murmur that he had been struck in the head by a man near his barn. He could give no description of the assailant.

Realizing that the man was seriously hurt, Bartle summoned John Gunn, a neighbor, who ran to Hugo Madl's hotel, a mile away, and telephoned for Dr. Daniel C. Adams. The two then carried Elywn to the hotel, where the physician's examination showed that Elywn's skull was fractured. A telephone message to police headquarters brought Patrolman George Dobson and the patrol wagon and the old man, who had become unconscious, was taken to Muhlenberg Hospital.

Detective George Totten, of Somerville, was notified by telephone from the hotel, but no traces can be found of the assailant. Neighbors say that the old man had nearly $200 with him when seen in the borough yesterday afternoon, and when he came to Bartle's house his pockets were turned inside out. He lived like the life of a recluse in his little hut and was a peddler and junk dealer. The story that the old man had a hoard of money which he kept in his hut may have been the motive for the assaut, for the place was ransacked. Nothing is known to have been taken but Elwyn's revolver.

Elwyn's hut is one of a colony of houses, situated close to each other near the ice house. As far as can be learned, no one saw any suspicious person near the place last night. Detective Totten and Constable Clemens, of Watchung, are at work on the case. The North Plainfield police were notified by the physician at about midnight.

On next Monday night the home of George Wilson, who lives near Warrenville, was broken into and $1,500, which he had just received on a mortgage, was stolen from the mattress, where it had been put but a few hours before.

CRESCENT AVENUE MEN'S CLUB ELECTS OFFICERS.

Officers for the coming year were elected at the annual meeting of the Men's Club of the Crescent Avenue church, last night, in the study of the pastor, Rev. Dr. J. S. Zeile. Lindsey Best, last year's president, was again named to head the organization, and Henry Cochran was re-elected as vice-president. George Davey, the secretary-treasurer named last night, is a new officer, as is William Abbey, of the executive committee. F. M. Genung, Arthur Lovell and James Kimball were re-elected as the other members of the executive committee.

Following the election, there was a discussion of ways and means by the club members, and plans were made for the meetings of the year.

State Home for "Bad Boy."

At a conference yesterday between Mrs. Emily E. Williamson, probation officer, and Judge Atwater at Elizabeth regarding Tony Morato, Westfield's 8-year-old "Bad Boy," charged with breaking into and looting Councilman John J. Schmitt's bakery, Broad street, Westfield, Sunday morning, it was decided to send the boy to the State Home for Boys at Jamesburg.

FOR COOKERY BOOK

RECIPES THAT ARE WORTHY OF PRESERVATION.

Spanish Buns, with Frosting—Ingredients Needed for Simple Cheese Dish — Mock Cauliflower—Little Coffee Creams.

Spanish Buns.—Two cups brown sugar, half-cup molasses, three-quarters cup butter, three-quarters cup sweet milk, 3½ cups flour, two teaspoons baking powder, five eggs, one teaspoon cloves, three teaspoons cinnamon, half nutmeg grated. Bake in dripping pans, and while warm cut in small squares and frost. This makes three dozen buns, which keep perfectly. For frosting use the whites of two eggs, one teaspoonful of cinnamon, a dash of cloves and beat in enough brown sugar to thicken.

Simple Cheese Dish—The young housekeeper, as well as old, will welcome this simple dish. Ingredients needed are: One egg, one cup sweet milk, bread and butter (four or five slices), cheese, salt and pepper. Beat the egg, add the milk, and into this batter dip a slice of buttered bread. Place this in a buttered baking dish and grate cheese over it, add salt and pepper. Then place another slice of bread, and so on until the dish is filled. Pour on the remaining batter and bake about fifteen minutes, until well browned. This rule is sufficient for three people.

To Keep Eggs Light—In making omelet, or souffle, where yolks and whites of eggs are beaten separately, it will be much lighter if the beaten yolks are stirred into the beaten whites.

Mock Cauliflower—Chop together one-half small head of cabbage, one single bunch celery, cook 30 minutes, or until tender, in just enough water to cover. When done add one cup of milk, season, dash of pepper, small piece of butter, thicken a little.

Little Coffee Creams—The yolks of six eggs, a cupful of cream, half a pint of strong coffee, sugar to taste, and some lady fingers. Well beat the yolks, add to them the cream and coffee, which should be nearly cold, sweeten to taste. Strain the custard into small ramakin cases, place these in a shallow pan containing enough boiling water to come half way up the cases. Lay a sheet of buttered paper across the top. Put the lid on the pan and steam gently for 20 minutes. Then take the cases out and leave till the custard is perfectly cold. Serve them in the ramakin cases with a little heap of whipped and flavored cream on the top. Hand with them the lady fingers.

Jelly of Snow.

Wash thoroughly four tablespoonfuls of rice and put in a double boiler with two quarts of boiling water; cook slowly, without stirring until the rice *is tender; drain off what water re*mains, and each grain should be found separate and whole; set one side to cool. Soak one-quarter of a box of gelatin in water enough to cover it for one hour, then pour over it a half pint of sugar. Stand the dish containing the gelatine mixture in a pan of boiling water and stir until the gelatin and sugar are entirely dissolved. Then turn the mixture into the cooked rice and gelatin. Flavor and pour into a mold as lightly as possible with the cold rice and gelatin. Flavor, and pour into a mold that has been wet in cold water. Set on the ice until it becomes thoroughly cold and set. When ready to serve turn out on flat dish and pour preserved strawberries or cherries around it.

Boiled Rice with Fruit.

Two cups boiled rice, two cups sugar, one cup water, eight apples, some oranges, or any kind. Put the rice in a mold if you have one, I use a bowl. Heat it and press it through a colander first. I like it just as it is, though. Pare and core your apples and boil them in the sugar and water till tender. Take them out and boil syrup a while longer, so it will get thick. Now put your rice on a platter and pour syrup over it and around apples and fill the cores with raspberry or currant jam, or any kind you may like.

Bread Pancakes.

Soak stale bread in cold water until soft, then pour off the water and rub the bread very fine. Add a pinch of salt and one dissolved yeast cake. If the batter is too thick, add a little sweet milk of cold water, then add flour in proportion to the quantity of batter you wish, and set to rise over night. In the morning put in a beaten egg and a little baking soda. Bake on a griddle. Remember that the less flour you have the better and lighter will be the cakes.

Creamed Beef.

Take one-fourth pound of dried beef, pull into small pieces, and fry slightly in a heaping teaspoon butter. Add a tablespoon of flour, and when brown pour into it a half pint cream or rich milk and cook until thick and creamy. Serve on toast. This makes an excellent luncheon dish.

Keep Cut Onion.

If you happen to need a small piece of onion and have only large ones, which is often the case, cut off what you need and take a part of the thin outside skin of the onion and cover when you have cut. You can keep the rest two or three days without drying.

BETTER THAN STEWED PRUNES.

Cheap and Wholesome Fruit Is Appetizing When Baked.

Some one has said that you couldn't run a boarding house without prunes, and certainly there is no fruit so cheap, and at same time so wholesome, says an authority on foods. I think the boarder's chief objection to them is the monotonous way in which they are cooked. Now it is just as easy to bake prunes as to stew them, and the result is far more appetizing, as a rule. They should be first washed, then placed in a heavy earthen pudding dish or stone pipkin, covered with a plate and thoroughly baked in the open. They require no sugar, but will be improved by a sprinkling of fine shavings from the yellow rind of lemons or oranges. They taste best when served cold with whipped cream.

I very much doubt if prune soup has been tried by American cooks, though it is a great favorite in Sweden. It makes an agreeable variety with the ordinary sun of cream soups. The children will like it with plenty of bread for luncheon. The recipe reads:

Wash three pounds of prunes and soak over night in two quarts of water. In the morning cook in the water in which they have been soaked for two or three hours. At the same time cook in a separate saucepan one cupful oatmeal in two quarts of cold water. Let this also boil two hours, stirring frequently, unless you cook it in a double boiler. Strain the oatmeal. Half an hour before the prunes are done add a half cupful seeded raisins. Now add the prunes and raisins to the strained oatmeal, together with the juice of two lemons, a half cupful sugar and a salt spoonful salt. This may be served hot or cold as preferred.

Cleaning Furniture.

Many housekeepers overlook the necessity of thoroughly cleaning chairs and other pieces of furniture, some parts of which become so soiled that the ordinary dust cloth does not do what is required.

Wooden chairs that have nothing to protect them where the hair often rests, wooden arms on rockers, and the tops of a dining chair where the hand lifts it and where soiled coats rub against it become so soiled that white gowns and waists often show unpleasant smudges.

Use a soft cloth and slightly warmed water and do not be afraid of soap, a good soap. Do not have the cloth too wet and hurry the operation. Dry quickly with another soft cloth and polish at once with a flannel dipped in paraffin oil, which can be bought at any drug store for a small sum. Try this paraffin oil for a furniture polish and you will never want another.

Cauliflower Creamed.

Boil a cauliflower in salted water for half an hour, drain dry, and set in a lined saucepan with one pint of milk, same quantity of hot water, and simmer for half an hour longer. Take up the vegetable very carefully, drain it, place on a hot dish, and pour over it the following sauce. Place one-half cup of milk in a double boiler and let it just come to boiling point. Wet a tablespoonful of flour with cold milk, season it with pepper, salt and a little vinegar (tarragon preferred), then mix gradually with the hot milk and boil for a few minutes, adding a little butter. Beat an egg till it is a light color, stir it by degrees into the sauce, and pour over the cauliflower, which is then ready to serve.

Housewife Helps.

When grease has been spilled on the stove it can be quickly removed by washing with vinegar diluted with a little water. Apply with a black woolen cloth.

Vaseline stains are very hard to remove. Before washing they should be soaked in kerosene.

Black ribbon can be freshened by rubbing in hot coffee on a sponge and wrapping around a glass bottle or jar to dry.

Cream that is to be whipped should be icy cold and preferably 24 hours old.

Bacon and Calf's Liver.

Both bacon and liver should be in thin slices. Fry the bacon and remove it as soon as it is done enough to a hot dish before the fire; flour and pepper the liver and place it in the pan; turn frequently until done, then place a slice of bacon on each slice of liver.

Make a gravy by pouring off the fat and dredging a little flour into the pan; pour in enough water to supply the quantity of gravy desired, add a tablespoon of lemon juice, boil, and pour upon the dish. Garnish with slices of lemon. Time, about ten minutes.

Steak in Olive Oil.

If troubled with indigestion prepare your steaks as the Californians do, a method as appetizing as it is wholesome and digestible. Heat two tablespoons of olive oil in a skillet, bound and flour your steak exactly as if using lard or butter, and fry in the hot oil, turning frequently to prevent crust forming. When the steak is removed, add a little butter to the contents of the skillet and make gravy as usual.

Winter Chili Sauce.

Two tomatoes, four onions and eight apples chopped fine, four good teaspoons salt, two cups vinegar, nine heaping tablespoons sugar, two teaspoons whole cloves, two sticks cinnamon, pinch of cayenne pepper. Boil two hours.

Serve Baked Wafers.

Instead of plain crackers and cheese, passed with the salad cover salted wafers with butter, sprinkle thickly with paprica and Parmesan cheese and brown in the oven.

FIRE CAUSES BIG LOSS

Ten Thousand Dollars Damage Done by Blaze on Mrs. Widoson's Farm.

THE OWNER'S NARROW ESCAPE

Letter Carrier Burned While Attempting to Save Property

—Farm House and Barns Gone.

The large farm-house and hay barns owned by Mrs. Sophia Widoson, and known as Alton, were completely destroyed by fire at 9 o'clock Saturday an dthe contents of the house were also consumed, aggregating a total loss of about $10,000. The neighbors for a mile around responded to the call for help, but they were unable to stay the progress of the flames or save the contents of the dwelling.

Finally, a telephone message summoned the chemical engine from fire headquarters, this city, and although the long trip was made in eighteen minutes, the firemen were powerless to do anything when they arrived on the scene. Mrs. Widoson, who occupied the property, had a narrow escape and the nervous shock has resulted seriously.

Among those who worked the hardest to save the property was Leslie Lambert, the rural free delivery carrier. His clothes were considerably burned. A peculiar thing about the fire is that the horse barn, standing near the house, was saved, together with the wagon-house, but the large hay barn some distance away was destroyed. Es was also three large barracks of hay.

The farm, which was formerly owned by John L. Darby, was purchased by Mrs. Widoson a few years ago, and not long afterward her husband committed suicide there, following a protracted illness. The farm is one of the most valuable in this section of the State, and Mrs. Widoson recently spent a large sum of money in repairs.

DAUGHTER'S PROPERTY FOR FATHER'S DEBT

An attempt to have a property owned by a daughter held for a father's debt is being made in the case of Aaron T. Hegeman against Charles G. Brown and Roberta Brown just brought to issue in the Court of Chancery by an answer filed by Counsellor George Ball on behalf of Roberta Brown, defendant, in which the right to hold the daughter's property is denied. The complainant is represented by Paul Q. Oliver, of Westfield, and the property involved is some real estate located on Mountain avenue in Westfield.

In August last Aaron T. Hegeman, the complainant, recovered a judgment against Charles G. Brown, the father of Roberta Brown, for $177.-77 before Justice of the Peace Tooney, of Westfield. This judgment was later docketed in the Union County Court of Common Pleas at Elizabeth, and an execution issued thereon and returned unsatisfied. The property from which the complainant seeks to realize on his judgment against the father was purchased by the daughter in March, 1903, but the complainant claims that the daughter holds the property in trust for her father. This the answer denies. The case will shortly be tried.

FUNERAL SERVICES OF MRS. MAHALA SIMS.

The funeral of Mrs. Mahala S. Sims, one of the oldest and most esteemed residents of Plainfield, took place from the First Baptist church last Friday. The service which was impressive, was attended by a large number of friends from both here and elsewhere. There were many beautiful floral pieces sent by the different societies of the church, the one from the Sunday-school being the largest. Rev. Dr. J. A. Chambliss, who was in charge of the services, spoke of the long and living devotion Mrs. Sims had had for the church and Sunday-school she loved and labored so hard to see progress from the little meeting house to the great church of today.

The pall bearers were George H. Batchelor, Oliver B. Leonard, L. W. Randolph, Reuben Knox, Robert Barnes and E. L. Bonney. Interment was made in Evergreen cemetery.

Sponge Cake.

Beat five eggs very light, add to them a pinch of salt and a cup of white sugar, then beat hard for fifteen minutes. Last of all, add a teaspoonful of vanilla and a cup of sifted flour folded in lightly. Bake for a half hour in a moderate oven.

JOINT SEWER SCHEME IS CONSIDERED BY CITY

Councilmen F. E. Mygatt, Duncan W. Taylor and Charles C. Randolph, comprising Plainfield's special sewage commission, and Street Commissioner A. J. Gavett, met at the office of Mayor Charles J. Fisk Thursday, to discuss matters pertaining to the new trunk sewer proposition. Data on the subject collected to date, together with reports of the meetings held in North Plainfield borough and township of Dunellen were considered, as well as details of direct interest to Plainfield's part in the project.

The real purpose of the meeting was to arrive at some definite conclusion so that when a conference of all the interested muicipalaies is held, the city's representatives will be able to outline its position. After a definite plan is decided upon, the commission will present it in report to the Common Council for approval.

The proposition to locate one general sewage plant in the extreme western end of North Plainfield township now meets with the approval of the five municipalities who want to join in the improvement. Of course, considerable work remains to be done before the sewer is actually begun. The property-owners in the township who will be affected by the location of a sewage disposal plant want compensation and the question of deciding on what would be fair compensation for damages will no doubt be a difficult one to settle. If the property-owners are disposed to be reasonable in their demands this will greatly facilitate matters. There will be the question of dividing the expense of constructing the sewer. Plainfield will escape the cost of laying sewage pipes, except its share for the main from the presen sewage plant to the new plant.

All of the other four municipalities there will be sewer pipes to be laid, as well as all the house connections. It is estimated that the total cost of the improvement will be about $250,000.

VILLAGE'S QUIETUDE DISTURBED FOR TIME

A foot-race that almost ended in a fight made lots of diversion for South Plainfielders Thursday, and when the scrap was avoided by the explanation of a practical joke sprung on one of the racers, the village green was the scene of an uproar of merriment and the finale clouds rolled by.

Zacharian Arrowsmith, who is seventeen years old, and a "likely boy," was the cause of it all. "Polly," as the boy is nick-named, joined the group at Manning's store right after supper, and after the boys had talked over Hal Chase's illness and the Giants' chances this season, the conversation drifted to Marathon running. Conversation developed the fact that "Polly" thought he could beat Andrew McDonough in a race "around the block"—a distance of about half a mile. Andrew accepted the challenge, and "Polly" threw off his coat and stepping to the line drawn in the road at the startline got off slightly in the lead of Andrew.

While the two were Marathoning, there wasn't much for the crowd at the store to do until John Geary, who is somewhat of a village cut-up, sought to enliven the finish by springing a joke on "Polly." He took off his coat and removing the runner's coat from the store steps, laid it in exactly the same place. Then he soaked it with kerosene and set fire to it, putting on "Polly's" coat when the two runners came in sight Arrowsmith was slightly in the lead, but when he saw what he thought was his coat, burning brightly at the finish, he stepped out like a veteran and won easily. He wasn't elated over the victory, however, because he instantly declared that he could "lick the fellow" who had set fire to his coat. Geary, wearing Arrowsmith's coat, looked guilty, and the runner was about to sail into him when he recognized the coat.

So abashed was the runner by the hoots and cat-calls of merriment that he was forced to make the peace by "standing" for three "all-day suckers," and when the boys parted for the night, Arrowsmith said it was really a good joke and told how easy it had been to beat McDonough.

Trinity's Fine Showing.

At the meeting of the consistory of Trinity Reformed church, Thursday night, Robert Clark, Jr., chairman of the finance committee, presented the yearly financial report of the church. It was an excellent statement, showing that all bills have been paid, leaving a satisfactory balance on hand. The consistory complimented Mr. Clark on the fine showing of finances and statements will be printed and distributed in the pews of the church.

Extremely So.

"But why did you eat the cake she baked?"

"I wanted to make myself solid."

"Did you succeed?"

"I should say so. I felt like a ton of lead."—Cleveland Leader.

ORGANIZE BOROUGH BANK

AT NO 33 SOMERSET STREET.

M. C. VanArsdale Made Vice President and Frederic Coriell Cashier—Directors Announced.

The Borough National Bank, North Plainfield's new financial institution, will be opened for business at 33 Somerset street, Thursday morning, April 15, at 9 o'clock. An excellent location has been selected and up-to-date quarters have been arranged for the transaction of a general banking business.

The complete Board of Directors was announced at a meeting held Thursday as follows: Dr. Justus H. Cooley, William A. Clark, Jacob Voeki, M. C. Van Arsdale, Nelson A. Miller, James E. Nolan Dr. A. H. Dundon, E. C. Bataille, Newton B. Smalley, Francis H. McCauley, Frederic Coriell, Frank A. Weeks, George F. Brown, J. V. E. Vanderhoef, Hyman Adelberg, Charles A. Lee and John Kitchen. The directors have chosen these officers: President, William A. Clark; first vice president, M. C. Van Arsdale; second vice-president, James E. Nolan; cashier, Frederic Coriell. President Clark is the son of former Congressman Amos Clark, of Elizabeth. He has been a resident of Plainfield some time and has had a wide experience in banking affairs. He is now engaged in real estate business.

Frederic Coriell, the cashier, has had over fourteen years experience in banking business. He was graduated from the Plainfield High School in the class '95, after which he was assistant cashier of the First National Bank, Bound Brook, for seven years and has been with the Morristown Trust Company for more than seven years. His home is at Bound Brook and he enjoys a wide acquaintance in this section of the State.

All of the directors, with a few exceptions, are well-known business men here. E. C. Bataille is the president of the American Commercial Bank, of Newark, while Francis H. McCauley is former Mayor of Weehawken. The rest are known here. Frank Farley, who for several years was borough clerk, will be the assistant to Mr. Coriell.

A decided feature to be inaugurated by the new bank is that of keeping open Saturday night from 7:30 to 9 o'clock for the general accommodation of business men and others who may need the services of a bank.

A circular letter issued by President William A. Clark, under the direction of the board, contains this announcement:

"We shall carry on a general banking business and no account will be too small or too large to receive our attention. Liberal interest will be allowed on both special deposits and business accounts, and every assistance will be afforded to all people to further their business and promote the welfare of the community."

A public reception will be held at the bank Wednesday night, April 14, from 7 to 9 o'clock, when an opportunity will be afforded all interested to inspect the institution. The bank is equipped throughout with mahogany furniture and fixtures with every convenience for conducting business in a safe and conservative manner. The capital stock of the bank, $50,000, has been oversubscribed, and there is every promise that success will reward the efforts of those who have been instrumental in effecting the organization.

ELIZABETH TRADE BOARD IS OPPOSED TO TUNNELS.

Elizabeth's Board of Trade is opposed to tunnels under Newark Bay and will fight any effort on the part of the Newark Board of Trade to advance the underground plan, that decision being made lastnight. The tunnel is not feasible, the members being too costly and impracticable.

In addition to favoring bridges in preference to tunnels the board acted favorably on the communication of the Staten Island Chamber of Commerce, requesting that a committee be appointed to act jointly with similar committees from Staten Island, South Amboy, Perth Amboy, and other cities.

New Home For Juniors.

Plans and specifications for the proposed new building of the Jr. O. U. A. M. of New Jersey, in Trenton, will soon be submitted to the contractors. The site for the structure is on East State street and will be built and owned by the American Mechanic Building Association of New Jersey. It will be ten stories high, of steel frame, concealed, and the enclosure will be of brick and stone. It will be the headquarters of the order in the State.

MARRIED FORTY-SIX YRS.

Mr. and Mrs. Kasper Bolsterle Celebrate the Anniversary of Their Wedding.

WERE SHOWERED WITH GIFTS.

He's a Prominent Mason and Is Hale and Hearty at the Age of Seventy-five Years.

Mr. and Mrs. Kasper Bolsterle, of Watchung avenue, celebrated the forty-sixth anniversary of their marriage Friday night, when a reception was given to them by their daughter, Mrs. P. Frank Stone, on West Front street. There were about twenty relatives and a few intimate friends present to congratulate the couple and wish them many happy returns of the day. The evening was spent in playing games, listening to a program of music, after which supper was served.

Mr. and Mrs. Bosterle were married at Lebanon, Hunterdon county, forty-six years ago yesterday. Mrs. Bosterle was the daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Harvey Bird, of this city, while Mr. Bosterle's native home was at Lebanon, where for many years he was engaged in business as a tailor. He served his apprenticeship there, later went into business for himself, which he continued at Somerville and then in Plainfield, where he still follows his trade.

Mr. Bosterle is prominently identified with Masonic circles, being a 32d degree Mason. Both Mr. and Mrs. Bosterle are members and regular attendants at Warren chapel. Mr. Bosterle is about seventy-five years of age, while his wife is ten years his junior.

The couple was the recipient of a large number of gifts, comprising cut-glass, chinaware, silverware and other articles of use and value.

TRAILING NATURALISTS IN SOUTH AFRICA.

Helpful Hints for Correspondents.

Nairobi, East Africa.—Anticipating the arrival of Ex-President Roosevelt and his party, a new code for hunting and trailing is promulgated as follows:

The traveler, the explorer, or correspondent will do well to bear in mind that well known characteristics of the Faunal Naturalists, of which, on the whole continent of Africa, there rs only one group.

If, in breaking one's way through the thorn-bush, one finds an empty Bird Durham pouch, it is a sure sign that a certain eminent Faunal Naturalist has been that way. Moreover, it is a sign that he has entertained the native chiefs and wise men, for the Colonel himself does not smoke.

In making one's way across the lonely veldt, if one finds, besides a recent camp fire, the cuntenance of a dog, on a tobacco pouch, (empty), this is too to be considered a sign that the Colonel has passed that way or but it indicates that, instead of Bull Durham, he has decided to offer his guests "Dog's Head."

The finding of an empty can, marked "Tortoise Shell Mixture," is to be regarded as an infallible sign that Secretary Kermit Roosevelt has passed that way. The presence of the secretary, as is well known, indicates the close proximity of Colonel Roosevelt himself.

It is not absolutely necessary, however, to depend on mere keenness of eyesight. A hunter with a delicate, well trained sense of smell —so well trained that he can recognize the delicate fragrance of Cameron pocket slice will know at once what that sign indicates. The instant that fairy fragrance is wafted to his senses, the well informed trailer will know that, somewhere up the wind is Secretary Kermit—and somewhere near Secretary Kermit, is hunter Roosevelt.

Secretary Kermit, in fact, is about the best equipped smoker in East Africa.

Hunter Roosevelt does not smoke at all. But Son Kermit has been a smoker for the last five years, and the constant watchful eye sees no harmful effects from it.

Truly Literary.

Jinks—Harkins doesn't strike me as literary. Yet he declares that he never feels so comfortable as when he is snugly settled in his library.

PLANS C. E. CONVENTION

Plainfield Union's Committee Organizes with Clarence B. LaRue as Chairman.

GATHERING HERE IN OCTOBER.

First Baptist Church to Be Used—To Organize Orchestra and Chorus Choir.

Representatives of the local Endeavor Union held a conference at the Y. M. C. A. Thursday, with State President John T. Sproull, of Arlington, for the purpose of discussing plans for the State Christian Endeavor convention to be held in this city on October 6, 7 and 8. There will be three sessions each day.

Mr. Sproull came to Plainfield to offer suggestions to the local Endeavorers as to how to handle the convention. He is a man of considerable ability and his remarks were listened to with great interest. He consented to address a mass meeting at the Park Avenue Baptist church, the latter part of May.

In response to invitations sent by the secretary of the local committee to the various societies in this city, delegates were present from the First M. E., Grace M. E. and Monroe Avenue M. E. churches and they agreed to lend their assistance toward making the convention a success. They will report back to their societies.

Secretary Charles F. Windham was instructed to communicate with the United Christian Endeavor Society in Boston and secure, if possible, the song books used in the revival in Boston. The committee will recommend that the local societies use these books at their meetings in preparation for the convention. Plans are being made for having a large orchestra and chorus choir.

The general committee has been organized as follows: Chairman, Clarence B. LaRue; vice chairman, Fred C. Lounsbury, Jr.; secretary, Charles F. Windham; treasurer, William Latourette; chairman finance committee, Frank Stewart; chairman reception committee, Miss Eva Rogers; chairman Junior Endeavor committee, Mrs. W. S. Lowry; chairman entertainment committee, Alexander Galloway; chairman devotional committee, Peter C. Sweet; chairman usher committee, Elmer Gayle; chairman printing committee, Fred C. Lounsbury, Jr. The chairman of committees will select their own helpers.

While it is not definitely known just where the convention meetings will be held, it is the plan to have them at the First Baptist church, while no doubt it will be necessary to use other churches for overflow meetings.

HIGH SCHOOL SHUTS OUT ERASMUS TEAM

The Plainfield High School easily defeated the Erasmus Hall team, of Brooklyn, Thursday afternoon by a score of 6 to 0. The home team was in excellent condition, all the men playing their positions in clever style, and at no time during the game did the visitors show they had a chance of defeating the P. H. S. boys. The star of the P. H. S. was Van Zant, who pitched a fine game. He had plenty of speed and good control, and many a batsman shattered the air reaching for his benders. Giddes and Doane, for the home team, did the work that brought victory for the P. H. S.

The Erasmus boys put up a good game and came within an ace of scoring on more than one occasion. One decision at the home plate looked very much as if the Metropolitan lads had scored. Stein, in left field, was a terror for all high fliers that came any where in his territory, and Tilton at first covered the initial sack like "Hal" Chase during his school days.

The line-up:

P. H. S.	Erasmus H. S.
Giddes	Hesterbury
shortstop.
Clark	De Moya
third base.
Lidgate	Tilton
first base.
Snyder	McManns
second base.
Doane	Frost

Dodwell	George
catcher.
Riffert	Dumass
right field.
Cullen, Runyon	Stein
centre field.
Van Zant	Scally, Dingly

HAYMAKERS' ASSOCIATION ORGANIZED BY RED MEN

A Haymakers' Association, comprised of the members of Wetimpkah Tribe, Improved Order Red Men, was instituted here Thursday by State Chief Haymaker Alfred Cook of New Brunswick, and staff, including Grand Vice Chief F. Litkenhaus, Horn Blower W. A. Shauck, Collector of Straws Edward Barton, Keeper of Bundles H. H. Powell, Mule Driver W. H. Voorhees, Hayseed W. R. Schauck.

There were in all about 150 visiting Haymakers from New Brunswick, Newark, Elizabeth, Perth Amboy and other nearby places. After instituting the association, five trains were adopted. The business was followed by a fine supper served by Haymaker Henry Windham at the Hotel Waldorf, after which there were musical selections and a dance.

WANT "COLUMBUS DAY" MADE LEGAL HOLIDAY

Francis J. Blatz, of Watchung Council, Knights of Columbus, Edward Bracken, of the Orange Council, and James F. Fleming, of Jersey City's Council, have been named as a committee by the State organization to draft a petition to the legislature requesting that October 12 be made a legal holiday, to be known as "Columbus Day." It is planned to introduce a bill in the Senate for that purpose at an early date and to make every effort to have favorable action taken on it by the lawmakers at the present session.

The movement for the observation of "Columbus Day" in October, when Christopher Columbus is supposed to have first landed in America, is well developed in this State. Several States have recently passed bills making the day a legal holiday, among them being New York State.

SUIT FOR A LIBEL WILL BE TRIED SOON

The libel suit instituted by General Dennis F. Collins, president of the Peter Breidt City Brewery Company, against the Elizabeth Journal for the publication of an alleged untrue report of a speech made by him during the campaign in which he was defeated for the office of Mayor, is likely to come to trial during the May term of court.

Notice was served upon the Journal to that effect. The monetary damage claimed is $15,000.

Gen. Collins is represented by City Attorney Connelly in association with Lindabury, Depue & Faulks. Journal is represented by John K. English in association with ex-Attorney-General Robert H. McCarter.

The article to which General Collins took exception was the report of the political meeting held at the Lyceum theatre at which Vice-Presidential Candidate Kern spoke on the afternoon of October 14 last. It was in the Journal charged that Collins, in a speech which he made on that occasion, spoke of the Journal as a "prayer-meeting-editor," and the publisher as a "prayer-meeting-editor," and the inference was that he made light of religious matters.

Collins demanded a retraction. His statement of the language he claimed he used was printed, but the Journal had vilified him.

Since Election Day, nothing has been said publicly about the matter, and most people supposed the suit had been dropped, but the principles have been quietly preparing for trial, and now the whole history of the campaign and Collins' connection with it is likely to be threshed out in open court.

Praise Senator Ackerman.

Senator Ackerman is to be congratulated on the passage of his liability bill in the Assembly yesterday. Senator Ackerman can also be called upon to give attention to the legislative matters in which his constituents are interested, but he has a way also of making his services worth while in a broader way. He left his work on the session of the Legislature of 1903 by securing for the State a Civil Service law. Evidently now he is to have to his credit an employers' liability law. It has not escaped attention that Assemblyman Pierce has given Senator Ackerman excellent support in the Assembly. Union county legislators have a way of working together, for the county and the State.—Elizabeth Journal.

HUBBY WORKED FOR WIFE; TELLS TROUBLES TO COURT

Married eleven years, separated two months after their wedding, reunited about six weeks ago, Mr. and Mrs. William Grogan, Jr., do not find married life "one grand, sweet song." The troubles were aired before City Judge Runyon at the session of police court Saturday. Mrs. Grogan was the complainant. She said that on Wednesday night her husband threatened to abuse her after an argument during which he demanded $15, and fearing what he might do, so she had him arrested.

The fact that Mrs. Grogan, who is employed as a domestic, engaged her husband as counsel in a home for she is building on George street, was the cause of all the trouble. There was a misunderstanding between the two as to what Mr. Grogan was to get for the job, and when he asked for the money words wrangle ensued in which, according to the wife's story, the man called her "everything but a lady."

The Judge's effort to sort out the trifle developed the fact that Mrs. Grogan was of a decidedly "irritable" temperament for she kept interrupting her husband and contradicting his testimony. Finally the court ruled that the two had better patch up the difficulties between themselves, for there was nothing flagrant enough about Grogan's treatment of the woman to warrant the detention of her husband. The case was dismissed, but Grogan waited until his wife was well ahead of him on her way from police court before he ventured from the door.

CLARK SUCCEEDS CASE ON EDUCATION BOARD

At an adjourned meeting of the Borough Board of Education Monday night, Robert Clark, Jr., was elected to succeed J. Herbert Case, who has now moved into the city. Mr. Case was elected in place of Mayor Samuel Townsend, at the time of the latter's election. James R. Joy was re-elected president and Charles L. Nichols re-elected vice-president. The following committees were appointed: Building and grounds, E. S. Boyer, J. H. Cooley and Robert Clark, Jr.; finance, Woodruff, C. L. Nichols and Edmund Rushmore; book and supplies, N. A. Miller, W. B. Lowe and Edmund Rushmore; grievance and truancy, J. H. Cooley, C. L. Nichols and Hiram Woodruff; auditing, W. E. Lowe and R. Clark; teacher's committee, J. R. Joy, H. A. Miller and E. S. Boyer.

Bills were paid to the amount of $700. Many regrets were expressed by the board in regards to the leaving of Mr. Case, whose loss will be greatly felt, as he was a man deeply interested in education work.

COMMON COUNCIL WANTS GAS SERVICE "CUT-OFF"

Councilman Duncan W. Taylor called the attention of his colleagues at the adjourned meeting, last night, to the apparent necessity of the Public Service Corporation providing "cut-offs" for gas service pipes into dwellings and all buildings, where gas is used. He explained that the matter had been proposed by Chief T. O. Doane in a conference with other city officials.

In response to requests, Mr. Taylor said that he had communicated with President McCarter, of the P. S. C., and had received a letter, which was read. Mr. McCarter stated that he had taken the matter up with the first vice-president of the company, who in turn had received an opinion from Walton Clark, of the United Gas Improvement Company, an expert, and in view of this the company had taken a strong position against the advisability or de*sirability of such changes, and that* the cost of the work makes it practically prohibitive.

In the opinion of the company in practice the service cocks had proved of no value and experience had shown that that part of the pipe rusts first and is often rendered valueless. The whole matter was referred to the committee on laws and ordinances and it will ascertain what rights the city has in the matter.

SPRING CLEANING TIME NOW HERE.

It is no doubt hersey, but some regard the results of the spring cleaning as incommensurate with the discomfort, loss of temper, expenditure of physical strength and money which spring cleaning brings in its train.

Good housewives are said to revel in this annual saturnalia, but surely they only assume a cheerful demeanor under the trying conditions to hide their real martyrdom and to act as a foil to the bearish attitude of the average man during the operation. He assumes an injured air, as if he were the main sufferer, whereas the inconvenience to which he is exposed is microscopic compared with that which the woman of the household have to go through.

Nowadays, many contrivances tend in a measure to mitigate the severities of spring cleaning. The odious, fatiguing method of cleaning wallpaper by rubbing it with bread, is superseded by a delightful prepa*ration* resembling putty, which acts like a sponge, and by a mere wiping of walls or ceilings with it, dirt is removed instantaneously with little more exertion or expenditure of time than is required in using a slate.

The taking up of carpets and brushing of furniture threaten to become a memory of the past, with the new method of vacuum cleaning, *which comfortably takes up gal*lons of black dust from a house, with carpets, curtains and fixtures all left in place. Then, add the pretty furniture sales, and it's all over.

Will Tell of Steam Engines.

F. H. Ball, of this city, who is connected with the American Engine Company, Bound Brook, will deliver a lecture Friday night, April 23, before the local members of the National Association of Stationary Engineers, at their rooms, 109 Park avenue. All persons interested are invited. Mr. Ball will describe the development of the steam engine.

N. Y. AMUSEMENTS.

Miss Vesta Tilley will, on Monday, begin her second week at the Colonial theatre where the little English artiste is attracting capacity houses. Her greatest song hit is "Sidney's Holiday," for which she *takes many encores at every per*formance and which is undoubtedly the most delightfully humorous number in her repertoire. Other headliners are: Eddie Leonard and his company, including The Gordon Brothers in an original act entitled "In Old Virginia." Mr. Leonard was recently a feature of the Cohan & Harris Minstrels and celebrates his return to vaudeville with the introduction of several new songs and dances. Jack Hazzard contributes a lively monologue; Mr. and Mrs. Gardner Crane are on the bill in a one act playlet; Frank Stafford & Co. present a one act playlet; The Four Lukens have an acrobatic act of merit and The Nichols Sisters offer some notable musical selections. There will be Sunday concerts as usual.

JOURNALISTIC OPINIONS

Advertising a City.

Trenton has had under discussion for some time plans for advertising a city. All kinds of suggestions have been made—buttons to wear on your coat, "Trenton calling" with catch phrases, booklets, a Trenton week of publicity, a city museum containing all kinds of photographs and samples of goods manufactured locally. It was pointed out the other evening, at a meeting to consider the question, that at present a Kansas City firm is negotiating with a local sign painter for signs 200 feet long and 15 feet high, to be erected along the railroad between Philadelphia and Jersey City, in order to advertise the industrial advantages of Kansas City. It is said that the Western city contemplates spending about $20,000 in advertising that city in the East.

Probably the best way ever discovered to advertise a city—that is to call its advantages to the attention of people who are looking for a place to make a permanent home and to manufacturers who want a location for a plant—is to govern well and progressively. It is easy to buy 25,000 buttons to wear on your coat. It is a perfectly simple matter to prepare a boom booklet. But it has never been an easy matter to govern a city well; and, strange as it may seem to the promoter of booming features the city ably handled politically, with a high civic spirit and some natural advantages seldom needs any special advertising. Western cities which have claimed big results from press agents would have grown anyway. Nothing could stop them except internal political news, graft, slovenly streets, insufficient school accommodations and a population which does not care. The first thing to do is to get something to advertise—a reasonable tax rate, high financial standing, the ablest men in public office, unmistakable evidence of the existence of law and order, etc. Somehow a city possessing scores of such advantages, many of which cost nothing except eternal vigilance on the part of the people, is heard of—grows, prospers, finds itself, as the phrase goes.—Elizabeth Journal.

SCOTCH PLAINS FIREMEN HAVE THE SPRING FEVER.

That the Scotch Plains fire department does not care to turn out and fight mountain fires was shown Saturday afternoon. That morning the woods near the Ackerman estate were set on fire and during the afternoon the fire was endangering property. The caretaker of the estate telephoned to the Plains firemen asking for help. The call was unheeded. About 6 o'clock they telephoned again and this time it was decided to ring an alarm. Both companies turned out in force, gathering at their engine houses. They were told where the fire was and asked to turn out and help subdue it. A consultation was held and it was decided to go home to supper first and fight the fire afterward.

At 7:30 another alarm was sounded, but only about eight or ten of the members responded. Those who did turn out are a little warm about the matter and say that they will insist on the $1.00 fine being imposed on all those who heard the alarm and failed to respond. If the fine is imposed the treasury of both comunanies will be enriched to a considerable extent.

"The Seamy Side of Life."

The April meeting of the Men's Club of the Congregational church will be held Friday night and will be a ladies' night. Judge Teal, of Brooklyn, will deliver an address on "The Seamy Side of Life," as seen from a Judge's standpoint, and Miss Teal will render violin solos. Refreshments will be served.

He Stole a Cart.

Albert Carter, a young negro living at Fritz place, was arrested by Marshal Weiss, Saturday afternoon, for stealing an Irish mail cart from off the porch of T. L. Mellick, corner of Union and Howard streets, Thursday night. He was fined $2 by Recorder Dolliver.

TALKS ON TUBERCULOSIS

Dr. J. H. Buchanan Makes Instructive Address Before a Men's Club.

AT FIRST BAPTIST CHURCH.

Seven Per Cent. of World's Deaths Are Caused by the Dreaded Germ He Says.

An interesting lecture was given at a meeting of the Men's Club of the First Baptist church Monday by Dr. J. Hervey Buchanan on the subject of "Tuberculosis." There was a large number present.

"Tuberculosis," said Dr. Buchanan, "is not a contagious disease. It can be eliminated in the same way as small-pox, but the method for its elimination has yet to be found out. The disease in its origin comes from the plant life, and when the germs once get into the lungs they multiply so rapidly that unless they are destroyed immediately they soon eat a hole in those organs. This eventually proves fatal. The poison of plant-life is so fatal that seven per cent. of the world's deaths are caused by some form of tuberculosis.

"There are five kinds of germs belonging to a family of five diseases that are really some form of tuberculosis, among them being leprosy. One of the great evils of the day is the habit of expectorating in public places, in the street cars, in churches and amusement places, and even on the sidewalks. There is no danger while the saliva is wet and moist, but when dry, the particles of dust it creates might be filled with these germs and by blowing in every direction as they do. All who advertise the industrial advantages of Kansas City. It is said that the Western city contemplates spending about $20,600 in advertising that city in the East.

Probably the best way ever discovered to advertise a city—that is to call its advantages to the attention of people who are looking for a place to make a permanent home and to manufacturers who want a location for a plant—is to govern well and progressively. SAY HIS TAX BOOK HAS SOME MISTAKES

City officials and some property owners allege that some of the tax assessments published by Samuel W. Rushmore in a pamphlet entitled "Plainfield Taxes," are not correct. Injustice it is argued is thus done not only the assessors but the tax payers themselves.

Assessor H. C. Van Emburg is one who points out glaring inaccuracies in the pamphlet. He declared today that there were many of them. As an instance he pointed out that J. D. Layton & Co., No. 622-26 North avenue, had been quoted in the Rushmore book as being assessed on $1,200 personality. As a matter of fact the assessor's books show that he is assessed at $12,000 on personality. The correct assessments may be examined by any taxpayer at the office of the city collector in North avenue where the official books are always open to public inspection.

CHARMING DANCE GIVEN BY THE MISSES HOOLEY

The first social function here following the Lenten season, was the charming dance at the Hartridge School auditorium, Monday, for which Misses Mabel B. and Helen R. Hooley, daughters of Mr. and Mrs. Edwin B. Hooley, of North Plainfield, and there were about two hundred and fifty guests.

The attractive auditorium was artistically decorated for the occasion, there being a profusion of palms, Easter lilies, roses and greens, all banked about the stage, behind which Brooks & Denton's Orchestra was seated as it rendered a program of popular music.

The Misses Hooley were charming hostesses and everything possible was done to make the affair a notable one in Plainfield society. There were *guests from New York, Brook*lyn, Philadelphia and this city. The dance was continued until an early hour this morning, an intermission being taken at midnight for supper, which was one of the many delightful features of the dance.

John Harvey Dobbins.

John Harvey Dobbins, one of the oldest residents of Caldwell, Essex county, and a cousin of M. C. Dobbins, of this city, died at his home Sunday night, following an illness of several months. He was in his eighty-fourth year and was born in Caldwell. He was a veteran of the Civil War, having served in the Twenty-sixth Regiment, N. J. Vols., of which M. C. Dobbins was captain. He is survived by a wife and one daughter.

DOCTORS ASSIGNED BY MEDICAL STAFF

At the regular meeting of the Board of Governors of Muhlenberg Hospital, Monday, these physicians were appointed as assistants to the medical board for the year beginning April 30 next:

In the departments of medicine and surgery, Dr. Albert Pitts, Dr. Frederick J. Hughes and Dr. Francis E. DuBois; in the eye, nose and throat department, Dr. Alfred F. Van Horn; in the X-ray service, Dr. Peter B. Cregar.

The medical board reported the number of patients in March as follows: Remaining at date of last report, 38; admitted, 60; total number of patients treated, 98; discharged cured, 44; improved, 10; not improved, 3; died, 3; remaining, 38; total number of hospital days, 1,131; operations, 42. In the dispensary patients, 70; visits of pa*tients, 144; operations, 3. Four* cases of contagious disease were treated in the isolation ward.

NO HASTY ACTION ON THE DOG ORDINANCE

According to the plans of the committee on laws and ordinances, Chairman F. L. Holt called up the new dog ordinance at the adjourned meeting of the Common Council, last Monday, for its second reading. Before action was taken, Mr. Buxton, who was acting as president pro-tem, in the absence of Mr. Tolles, explained that he had had a conference with the latter at his home and that the president had requested further consideration of the ordinance before its passage.

Although at the time Mr. Tolles' *health would not permit him to dis*cuss the matter, he asked that the ordinance be laid on the table until he could attend a meeting, which would be within a week. Mr. Holt said he was willing to accede to the request, although Mayor C. J. Fisk was urging the adoption of the ordinance so that it would become effective May 20. After considerable discussion, it was finally agreed that the Council should on Thursday night and this would allow plenty of time to adopt the ordinance following any changes to be made and then advertise it the proper length of time before May 20. The same action was taken regarding the amendment to the dance ordinance to provide for the operation of taxicabs, which it was Councilman Clay's intention to call from the table.

FOUR LOST CHILDREN ARE SOON RECOVERED

Several lost children gave the police considerable trouble Tuesday and for a time there were some anxious parents. The first lost child, a boy of three years, was found at West Front street and Sycamore by Miss Hattie Giles, aged fourteen years. She took the little one to police headquarters, where every effort was made to learn his identity. He was well dressed in a neat suit, a long white coat and a hat of the same color. He had light hair and blue eyes.

After questioned the lad talked as though he was to take a ride on a railroad train and had been accidentally left behind. He did not seem at all worried over his plight and chatted merrily with the officers. A little later a telephone message was received at headquarters asking whether there was a lost boy there. An affirmative reply brought back the information that someone would call there for him. The inquirer did not give any name.

Then came three three children, *two boys and a girl, all of ten*der years, were found at the office of McDonough Brothers on Madison avenue. They had been lost in some unaccountable way. It was not long before the mother found her youngsters and called for them. She did not give her name.

TO REPRESENT CITY IN BOWLING CONTEST.

From present indications but one five-man entry will be made by local bowlers in the N. B. A. championships to be held at Madison Squae Garden next month. It was thought that two teams could easily be procured from the many pin experts of this city, but for some reason or other the idea did not appeal to the necessary number to make up two teams.

The team which will represent this city will be known as the Plainfield Bowling Club and will be composed of Edward A. Laing, Chauncey F. Stout, Francis J. Blair, V. W. Nash and John Compbell.

In the two man championships Laing and Stout will team up as will also Nash and Campbell.

Oppose Pupils' Fraternities.

The New Jersey State Council of Education, in session in Newark last Saturday, adopted a resolution condemning fraternal societies in the public schools.

DR. ANDERSON WELCOMED

First M. E. Church Crowded with Worshippers to Hear and Greet New Pastor.

NO REFERENCE TO CHANGES.

Dr. McCrea's Successor Preaches Twice and Addresses Sunday School Pupils.

The First M. E. church was thronged with worshippers Sunday morning, when Rev. Dr. Charles M. Anderson, the new pastor, occupied his pulpit for the first time following his appointment by Bishop Neely at the Newark Conference. Dr. Anderson made no public utterance regarding his coming to Plainfield. Following the service the members of the church and congregation took the opportunity to give him a warm welcome and assure him of their hearty support.

The new pastor preached a strong and impressive sermon, appropriate to the occasion, taking his text from Romans 4: 25, dwelling on three essentials to Eastertide, "The Resurrection, Ascension and Mediatorship of Christ," and in this connection he presented four vital doctrines of the gospel, sin, temptation, physical death and immortality.

Dr. Anderson said that the question, why did God permit sin to enter the world, was one that he had never been able to understand in a satisfactory way. The great question to his mind was what provision has been made for sin. The preacher said that everyone is born into the world with a single nature and Christ has covered this sinful nature, by the Atonement. "Now, there is another great question," Dr. Anderson said, "does Christ meet our demands?" He believed that He did and that by accepting Christ it means out of the kingdom of Satan into the kingdom of Christ.

"Where is the point of Christianity if it does not save at every point," continued the speaker. "Christ is an example to us in temptation for He was tempted in all points as we are. It is the work of the Master to save men and keep them safe."

Dr. Anderson closed his discourse by showing the power of Christ over sin and death and picturing the glorious resurrection as illustrated in *the crucifixion, death and resurrec*tion of Christ. Throughout his entire sermon he held the close attention of everyone. He has a pleasing and impressive manner and displays an oratory that adds greatly to the interest of his words.

In the afternoon, Dr. Anderson addressed the Sunday-school, speaking of the significance of Easter and congratulating the school and the members upon their interest in this department of church work. Last evening the service was given up entirely to Easter music.

IMPROVING STREETS WITHOUT COST TO CITY.

Without any expense to the city, the work of macadamizing Martine avenue and grading Thornton avenue has been begun, the expense being borne by the abutting property owners and the Central Park Realty Company. Martine avenue is to be macadamized for its entire length from curb to curb, and the work begun at the Park avenue end, is now well under way. Connected with the macadamizing of Thornton avenue, the street has been regraded and the macadam is to be sixteen feet wide.

James L. Greenleaf, of the shade tree commission, has purchased from the Central Park Realty Company the lot at the northwest corner of Evergreen and Hillside avenues. The property measures 141 feet on Hillside avenue, and is 174 feet deep. Mr. Greenleaf is planning the erection of a handsome residence in the *near future. By a deal recently con*summated, William B. McMechen, vice-president of the McMechen Preserving Company, of Wheeling, West Virginia, has purchased from the real estate company the house at the southwest corner of Prospect and Edgewood avenues. He will soon make his home in this city.

New Apparatus at the Plains.

The Excelsior Hook and Ladder Company, of Scotch Plains, has received its new hook and ladder truck made by the Seagraves Company, of Columbus, Ohio. It is fully equipped with five ladders and other necessary things with which to fight fires. It cost about $1,000. The new apparatus was placed in the service yesterday.

Party for Miss Kirsten.

A party was tendered to Miss Elsie Kirsten at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Willard H. Cook, 222 Prescott place, Monday night, in honor of the thirteenth anniversary of her birthday. SUTTON'S BIG CARGO TOO HEAVY FOR HIM

Eugene Sutton, a second class machinist on the battleship Ohio, came to town Saturday and got on such a cargo of booze that he lost control of his steering gear at the North Avenue station. Patrolman Nolan ran up alongside and acting as pilot, steered him to the port where the two green lights are displayed. Eugene's cargo was a big one, and his last consignment was the contents of a half-pint flask, which he absorbed without lowering his elbow, as he stood on the station platform.

"I was due at the Navy Yard, Brooklyn, at 8 o'clock this morning," said Sutton to the court, "and I'm being fined $1 an hour for every hour I'm late." The Judge figured that he had about $1.50 against him as he spoke, and that he would have to pay at least double this amount before he could report for duty. Accordingly, no fine was imposed and Sutton was allowed to proceed. Sutton put on all steam and started for the railroad station.

REV. DR. BLISS IS DEAD

Former Pastor of Crescent Ave. Presbyterian Church Passes Away.

AGED SEVENTY-TWO YEARS.

Had Charge Here For Sixteen Years and Did Much For the Presbyterian Flock.

Rev. Dr. JoJhn Collins Bliss, aged seventy-two years, and for sixteen years pastor of the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church, died Sunday night at hisvhome at 423 West 154th street, New York, following an illness of but a few weeks duration. News of his death was received here this morning with deep regret by his many friends and formed parishioners, who knew nothing about his illness.

Dr. Bliss was the third pastor of the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church, coming here in November, 1887, and continuing in his office until 1883, when he was succeeded by Rev. Dr. William R. Richards, now of the Brick Presbyterian church, New York. The local church was organized in 1844 with a membership of eighty-six and prior to occupying the present edifice in 1872, the year it was erected, he preached at the house of worship on East Front street, about opposite M. C. Van Arsdale's shoe store. The land where the present church stands was given for the purpose by the late Job Male.

During his sixteen years' pastorate here, Dr. Bliss was successful and he was beloved not only by his own people but by all who knew him. He was an able preacher and a faithful and hard-working pastor. It was largely through his efforts that the church grew to such strength and influence in the community and to be one of the leaders in the Presbyterian denomination of the State. He re*signed his pastorate here in 1883* and after spending a year abroad he accepted the call to the Washington Heights Presbyterian church, New York, where he continued to be successful in the ministry. He held that position until two or three years ago, when he was made pastor-emeritus of the church, remaining as such until his death.

Dr. Bliss is survived by a wife and two sons, Edmund Bliss and Collins Bliss. The latter is a professor at the New York University, a position which he has held with honor for many years.

LOCAL PHYSICIANS WILL ATTEND COMMENCEMENT

A notable gathering of medical men will be witnessed in New York city on Wednesday and Thursday, May 12 and 13, when the forty-ninth annual commencement exercises of the New York Homeopathic Medical College will be held and the alumni of the college will hold their annual banquet.

Among those who have been asked to attend the commencement exer*cises and banquet are three local phy*sicians, Dr. Daniel C. Adams, '90, of 46 Grove street; Dr. Jefferson C. Anderson, '96, of 405 West Fourth street, and Dr. Frank W. Cornwell, '00, of 192 East Front street. Dr. Anderson has also been invited to attend the decennial reunion of his class the night before the banquet. Two students from Plainfield graduate this year, Roger L. Cooley and Henry B. Dorr, and their relatives and friends are expected to attend the commencement exercises.

The program provides for commencement exercises at Mendelssohn Hall on Wednesday evening, May 12, and reunions of the classes of '84, '94 and '99 the same evening, at various places about the city. Next day the Alumni Association will hold its annual business meeting early in the evening at the Waldorf-Astoria Hotel, and immediately after it the annual banquet. Dr. Walter Sands Mills, of New York city, a graduate of the class of '89, will be toastmaster, and the speakers will include Dean Royal S. Copeland, Dr. John Prentice Rand, '83, of Worcester, Mass., president of the Alumni Association, Cyrus H. Burdett, a prominent real estate lawyer of New York, and Commission Robert W. Hebberd, of the Department of Public Charities of New York city.

The commencement exercises and banquet mark the conclusion of the first year's administration of Dean Royal S. Copeland, who gave up his position at the University of Michigan, at Ann Arbor, a year ago, to accept the responsibility of the management of the New York Homeopathic Medical College.

DAY OF THE RESURRECTION IS OBSERVED WITH SONGS OF GLADNESS IN ALL CHURCHES

Christ's resurrection from the dead was celebrated by all Christian congregations in both city and borough, Sunday. As usual, the services were elaborate, the floral decorations magnificent and the sermons inspiring. Following are some of the observances:

First Baptist.

Easter Day proved a happy one at the First Baptist church, where special services were held morning and afternoon. The display of flowers were, perhaps, the finest yet seen at this church, the entire pulpit platform being banked with beautiful flowers from the conservatory of C. W. McCutchen. The music was in charge of Howard M. Case, organist, and the choir rendered Easter anthems, while Miss Florence Wohlfert, violinist, assisted at both services. The pastor, Rev. Dr. J. A. Chambliss, preached in the morning on "The Resurrection of the Body."

This was the program of the morning service:

Prelude, "Cavitina," Taylor, violin and piano; anthems, choir; offertory, from "Mary Magdalene," Stainer; benediction, postlude, organ. The solo parts were well taken by Miss Luella C. Harris, soprano; Miss Gertrude Hinz, contralto; William Holmes, bass, and Geo. W. Smith, tenor.

In the afternoon the Sunday-school held its special exercises, when this program was followed:

Prelude, violin, piano and organ, Miss Jessie Utter, assisting; carol, "Hosanna! Sing," school; anthem, choir; recitation, "Help Somebody," Eulah Abel; primary song, recitation, "May's Easter Lily," Gertrude McClintock; carol, "Near the Tomb Where Jesus Slept," Junior department; recitations, Lucy Douglas; "Easter Story," Anna Sherwin; solo and chorus, Junior department; offertory, violin and piano, proceeds for Day Nursery; carols, "Strains of Victory," Junior department; "Praise the Saviour," school; benediction and postlude, organ.

Grace M. E.

Easter services at the Grace M. E. church took up almost the entire day. In the morning there was a large congregation present to enjoy the splendid services that took place. Rev. Ora J. Shoop preached a stirring sermon on the subject of the "Empty Tomb," and the Easter music rendered was the best heard in a long time. In the afternoon, the Sunday-school had an elaborate program, which they rendered in a most charming manner. The little children did their parts in a way that pleased everybody. In the evening, Mr. Shoop preached on "Fruits of the Resurrection." The choir again rendered a number of anthems, among them being "Christ Our Passover" and "The Choir Angelic."

Congregational.

There being but the Sunday-school and regular morning service at the Congregational church Sunday, there was a large attendance present to hear the special program that had been carefully selected for Easter.

The Easter anthems were beautifully rendered, as were the solos by Mrs. Thomas McDonald, and Charles L. Lewis. Rev. C. L. Goodrich delivered a well fitting sermon on the subject of "The Message Jesus Left in the Tomb." The Sunday-school program was carefully carried out, the scholars singing their part of the Easter music in an excellent manner.

Hope Chapel.

The Easter exercises were held at Hope chapel according to the previously published program. The soloists at the morning service were Thomas Hendry, tenor; Miss Edna Eckert, soprano, and Miss Eunice Eckert, contralto. In the afternoon at the Sunday-school exercises, W. D. Murray spoke on "The Man Who Rose Again." The Bible classes taught by Judge W. N. Runyon and G. Stuart Simons took part by reciting in concert passages of Scripture. In the evening the soloists were Miss Eunice Eckert, contralto, and Harold Brownell, tenor. The chapel was elaborately decorated by Mrs. Thomas Huron, Mrs. William Gray and Mrs. Samuel Cratsley.

Holy Cross Church.

Large congregations attended the Easter Day services at Holy Cross church, Sunday, and the Easter offering amounted to large one. It will be devoted to the parish fund. At 10 o'clock in the morning, the Easter festival of the Sunday-school was held in the church, and there was an address by Rev. George A. Warner, the rector. The Lenten mite box offering, to be devoted to foreign missions, was received at this time. The full vested choir was in attendance and the music included the singing of Easter carols by the children.

The church was elaborately decorated with Easter lilies, carnations, palms and potted plants and the church was thronged with worshipers for the principal service of the day, which came at 11 o'clock. The sermon, appropriate to the day, was by the rector, who also made an address at the evening service. Saturday afternoon, four infants were baptized at the evensong service.

St. Stephen's Church.

The Easter offering at St. Stephen's church amounted to $432, which sum will nearly wipe out the parish indebtedness. Rev. Morgan Ashley, the rector, was in charge at all the services, which were largely attended. The church was handsomely decorated and music was a feature of all the services. The Sunday-school Easter festival was held in the afternoon, when the children gathered in the church and sang Easter carols. There was an address by Rev. Mr. Ashley, and each child was presented with a potted plant. A substantial mite box offering was received for foreign missions. At the evensong service Saturday, two persons were baptized by the rector.

Trinity Reformed.

All the Easter services at the Trinity Reformed church Sunday were largely attended and the entire program of the day was carried out in a manner that was most notable. At the early morning Easter services which was held at 6:30 o'clock, there were about 200 present. This service was led by L. W. Randolph of the Temple Baptist church. There was also special music rendered by Martin A. Korff, violinist, and Whitney Frazee, cornetist.

At the regular morning service the church was well filled to hear the Easter music. Every selection was rendered in perfect time, and from a musical standpoint there could not have been a better program. The chartet numbers, "Ye Choirs of Jerusalem" and "Awake Thou That Sleepeth," were sung in excellent time and harmony.

Those who took part in rendering the instrumental were Mrs. Violet Powell Johnson, pianist, and Miss Lillian A. Force, pianist, and Arthur Titsworth, organist. The three instruments added greatly to the singing, blending all the parts most harmoniously. Mrs. H. D. Young sang the majority of soprano chorus parts, for Miss Etta Raybert, who has not fully recovered from an at*tack of tonsilitis.* The soprano solo "Hosanna" was sung charmingly by Miss Raybert. Rev. John Y. Broek preached a very fitting Easter sermons on the subject of "He Is Risen."

In the evening the services were in charge of the Sunday-school, which made it the largest of the day. The church was crowded to the doors and the late arrivals were unable to find only standing room. The program, "The Victor King," rendered by the primary and beginners' departments, went through in a charming manner. The music was led by H. J. Martin, assisted by Martin Korff. Miss Esther Baker took part in the primary department, were as follows: Recitation, "We Are Glad to See You," Carman Trembath; "Our Offering," Reginald Applegate; "I'm So Glad its Spring," Elsie Seppe; "The Church Bell," Will Hillan Laury; "Our Father Speaks to Us," Theodosia Vail;" "What Shall We Give," Marion Blair: "My Easter Jewel," Margaret Smith; "Happy Spring," Alma Allegar; "He Is Risen," Charles Todd trio, "The Easter Lily," Helen Thompson, Louise Seader and Adele Freeman; "The Lilies Message," Mabel Laury, Ruth Freeman and Harriet Higgins, Marion Wooley, Laura Smith. The soprano solos sang by Miss Adele Freeman were much enjoyed. Her strong voice was heard to advantage in all parts of the church. The Junior department was in charge of Miss Mabel Wilson and assistants, and sang "The Theme of Joy." Miss Lucie Coriell played the piano for the beginners' department. Those taking part in the Easter poem, namely, "Bells of Easter," were Dorothy Ross, Lena Wirth, Helen Wilett, Francis Neighbor, Alva Hansen and Willetts Ord; recitation, "When God Calls," Edward Andrews; recitation, "Easter Time Is Here," Harold Hansen. The solo part in "The Triumphan: King," song by Miss Helen Roberts, was a pleasing feature. Short addresses were made by Rev. John Y. Broek and F. E. Smith.

The church was beautifully decorated with palms, Easter lilies and ferns. Those on decoration: Mrs. Jacob Beckman, Mrs. L. B. Van Camp, Mrs. P. A. Van Name and Miss E. Conley.

Crescent Avenue Church.

Rev. Dr. E. G. Reed and Rev. Richard Campbell assisted Rev. J. S. Zelie at the Easter morning service at the Crescent Avenue church, when the pastor preached. Easter lilies were lavishly used in the decoration of the edifice, and the seating capacity was taxed to the utmost at the morning service. A substantial collection was received, which will be added to the deacon's fund. Easter exercises were held at the conclusion of the morning service, when the Lenten offering was received for mission work.

Grace P. E. Church.

Grace church was thronged by a fashionably dressed congregation for the Easter day service Sunday. The largest congregation was in the morning service, when Rev. Dr. Morgan, of Brooklyn, assisted the rector, Rev. E. V. Stevenson. Music was a feature of the service and the Easter Day offering was a substantial one. In the afternoon the Sunday-school Easter exercises were held and there was an address by the rector. Rev. Dr. Morgan preached at the evening service, which was largely attended.

Park Avenue Baptist.

In addition to the elaborate Easter services held at the Park Avenue Baptist church, Sunday, which were according to the announced program, features of last night's Sunday-school service was the illustration of "The Feast of the Passover," by Miss Ruth Angel, a Christian Jewish woman of New York, and the baptism of Mi.delyn Moy Edith Lowry, William Watts, Philip Schuyler and Fred Smith by Pastor Flinn. The floral decorations were among the finest of the season.

First M. E. Church.

The Easter services at the First M. E. church, Sunday, were of special interest because they marked the presence of the new pastor. The vested choir, under the direction of J. Edmund Skiff, rendered the musical programs morning and evening, as published, a feature being the solo work of Miss Jessie Haynes, the new contralto. She sang well, as did also Miss Bertha VanNuis Willis, soprano, and Bertram Talbamy, bass, who had solo parts. The church was decorated with flowers, plants and ferns.

The Easter exercises of the Sunday-school in Vincent chapel in the afternoon were largely attended and of much interest. James R. Joy, superintendent, presided over the general program, which included the singing of carols and recitations by older members of the school, as well as a short address by the new pastor, Rev. Mr. McDonald, of Seton Hall College, was sub-deacon. Father Bogan preached an eloquent sermon; his topic was "The Resurrection."

CENTENARY CHURCH GREETS DR. M'CREA

Making no reference except in his opening prayer to the feeling that was engendered in Centenary Methodist Episcopal church, Newark, when Bishop Thomas B. Neely last Tuesday transferred the former pastor, the Rev. Dr. Charles L. Mead, to the First church, Hoboken, the Rev. Dr. Abel C. McCrea, formerly pastor of the First M. E. church, this city, preached his first sermon as pastor there Sunday morning. There was a large congregation and every effort was made by the officials and people to make him feel that he is welcome. Every consideration that could possibly be shown to the new minister was his, and Dr. McCrea expressed himself as more than pleased.

The official board was waiting for Dr. McCrea before the church service on the corner of Kearny street and Avenue C, to leave outside the church, and when the minister approached, Frank A. Stesling, of the board, enthusiastically introduced him into his co-workers. No especial man acted as spokesman for the board, every member doing his best to make Dr. McCrea welcome.

In his sermon, the popular Dr. McCrea took for his text Matthew, 20:8, speaking on the mixed fear and joy *which the Resurrection of the Sa*viour brought to the world and to Christ himself.

"People of that day were just the same as the people of the present," said the new pastor. "They feared and rejoiced at the same time; feared because of the strangeness of Christ's rising from the dead, and yet rejoiced because He did so. It was that sort of mixed joy that the people experienced.

"But what of Christ's joy in His own Resurrection? What did Our Savior feel and think as He came back to us from the world of the Last Beyond? We find the answer in Christ's parable as given to His disciples and followers. The parables of the Lost Coin, of the Lost Sheep and of the Lost Son, all illustrate the joy and sweetness that must have been in the mind time. . . . First, the joy of finding and saving, as illustrated by the simple incident of the Lost Coin; and then, the joy of Power, that greatest of joys that comes from the feeling of something well done, of a consciousness that in spite of temptations, we have said and can still say 'no.'"

After the service, as many as were able of the 1,200 who crowded the church, came and shook hands with the minister, in accordance with an invitation extended by Dr. McCrea before pronouncing the benediction.

MORRIS HIGH DEFEATS LOCAL SCHOOL BOYS

For the second time this season, the City High School went down to defeat. The victors this time were the fast Morris High School boys of New York. The final score was 2 to 1. As the score indicates, the game was close.

The ability to hit when hits meant runs, combined with poor base running, lost the game for P. H. S. In the last inning at two different times there were men on third with no outs and there would have been another tally for them had any judgment been shown in base running.

VanZandt pitched a steady game for P. H. S., striking out four and keeping the singles well scattered. Snyder and Dodwell played best for P. H. S. Grossman put up the finest game for Morris.

Hoagland Wins Marathon.

The men's Marathon race conducted by the physical department of the Y. M. C. A. on Saturday afternoon was won by C. S. Hoagland, of the Y. M. C. A. team. The course extended from the Y. M. C. A. building on Front street out as far as Scotch Plains and return, covering a distance of nine miles. The time made by the winner was 36 minutes 5 1-5 seconds. Others who run in the race were John R. Fritz, Harry Mager, Edward Hawks, C. Dufford, Harry Rothberg and Gideon Fountain.

ENCOURAGING REPORTS OF FIRST BAPTIST S. S.

In connection with the Easter exer*cises under the auspices of the First* Baptist church Sunday-school, Sunday afternoon, the annual report *of the secretary, Raymond D. Car*ver, was presented and Superintendent George H. Batchelor made the appointments for the coming year. Secretary Carver's report showed that during the past year nineteen members of the school were baptised and four died, while there were 138 additions, ninety-five dropped, many of whom moved away, making the present membership in all departments 581, an increase of eighteen over the preceding year.

There are seventy-one in the primary department, forty-five on the cradle roll and 119 in the Home de*partment. The average attendance* for the year was 225, the largest being 310, on December 20, and the smallest 77, on August 9. It was with regret that the secretary reported the resignation of C. W. McCutchen from the teaching corps after a service of forty years, and there was the same expression concerning the resignation of B. J. Shreve, who has been librarian for a great many years. Robert Sherwin was appointed to succeed him. A new feature of the school is the men's Bible class, taught by Mr. Herman. This has a membership of forty-one.

James E. Church, as chairman of the Sunday-school Athletic Association, made a brief report. He said that of the eight cups offered in competition among the various associations of the city First Baptist had won six, and it won nine of the twelve games of basketball and the championship of the city. The Juniors also won the events in its class, while the Crescent Avenue church association won the senior events.

Superintendent George H. Batchelor then made his announcements for the year as follows: First assistant superintendent, Frank W. Jones; second assistant, James E. Church; superintendent intermediate department, R. C. Brown; superintendent junior department, Miss Katherine Perry; superintendent primary department, Mrs. J. A. Powlison; superintendent Cradle Roll, Miller; superintendent beginners' de*partment, Miss May White;* superintendent Home department, Miss Laura J. Runyon; teacher normal training class, Miss May Serrell; chairman athletic association, James E. Church; secretary, Raymond D. Carver; vice, Ernest K. Powlison, resigned; assistant treasurer, Harold Robins.

It was further announced that the morning sessions of the school would begin on the third Sunday in June and the afternoon sessions resumed the first Sunday in September. The annual excursion of the school to Asbury Park will be held on Thursday, July 22.

Following the afternoon exercises the pastor, Rev. Dr. J. A. Chambliss, baptized Henry Zook and Charles Blume, young men of the school. It was learned after the exercises that Mrs. Harold Serrell had resigned as assistant secretary of the Home Department, after many years of faithful service. Other duties prevent her continuance in this office.

Conference of Federated Clubs.

The third conference of Federated Clubs of Union county will be held in the Second Presbyterian church at Rahway Friday afternoon, April 16, at 3 o'clock. Rev. W. T. Stuart Smith will give the invocation and Rev. C. F. Shaw, of the First Presbyterian church, will give a talk on civics. Nineteen clubs will be represented. The president of the State Federation, Mrs. H. Burnham Newark, will speak, and Mrs. Thomas S. Henry, of Newark, and Mrs. F. A. Pattison, of Metuchen, both nominees for president, will also make addresses. Miss Sara Esterbrook, Sunshine president of Rahway club, will represent the Sunshine interests of Union county.

Funeral of Mrs. G. S. Clay.

The funeral service of Mrs. George S. Clay was held from Grace church, Saturday afternoon at 3 o'clock, and was largely attended by relatives and friends. Rev. E. Vicars Stevenson, rector of the church, officiated. There were many beautiful floral tributes from friends. The interment was in Hillside cemetery.

GEORGE V. VROOM DEAD IN HIS EIGHTIETH YEAR

George W. Vroom, of 44 Elm street, died Sunday at Muhlenberg Hospital from heart failure from which he had been suffering for the last three months. Until his recent illness he had always worked at the carpentry trade. Mr. Vroom was a native of Readington, Somerset county, and was seventy-nine years of age. He came to Plainfield about fifty years ago, and was well known among all carpenters and builders in this city, having worked on some of the largest buildings in the city. For many years he had been a regular attendant at what is now the Temple Baptist church.

GOVERNOR MAY ATTEND BANQUET AT ELIZABETH

Governor J. Franklin Fort will probably be the principal speaker at the annual dinner at Phil Kearny Guard, Company C, which will be held in Astfalk's Hall, in Elizabeth, on the night of April 28. The Governor and his military aide, Colonel Colgate, have been invited to attend the banquet and the committee in charge feels sure that they will both be present. The dinner of the guard this year promises to surpass all other functions of a like manner ever held by the command. Major Mravlag and many other prominent civilians will be present and address the soldier boys.

Heretofore the dinner has been held in the company quarters, but this year the affair promises to be so big that it was necessary to procure a larger place. There was a meeting of the dinner committee Saturday night, at which time invitations were sent out and preliminary preparations were begun. It is expected that several hundred persons, including the members of the com*pany, will attend the banquet.* An interesting program will be arranged for the entertainment of the guests. Music will be in order.

Among the speakers invited are Major Robert L. Patterson, Major William B. Martin, of the Second Battalion; ex-Captains Richard Cross and Louis J. Park, of Company C; ex-Captains McCarthy, of Company I; Captain Conrad Hall, Lieutenants Tull and Weir, of Company I, and other ex-members of the guard.

HOPE'S ANNUAL SESSION

Encouraging Reports Read and Officers Elected at Meeting of Congregation.

MR. BRADFORD IS TREASURER.

Rev. Lawrence B. Howard Presides —Church Membership Is Now Four Hundred and Ten.

The annual congregational meeting of Hope chapel was held in the chapel, Wednesday. The attendance was unusually large and great interest was shown in the review of the yearly activities of the various organizations of the chapel. Rev. L. B. Howard, pastor, was chairman of the meeting and Philip Braunsten acted as secretary.

Philip Braunsten, treasurer, reported that $1,026.01 had been raised during the year, from envelopes, $662.44, from loose collections, $185.97, for home missions, $2.20, and received from ways and means committee for music fund $155.40 and the disbursements were $1,030.01. J. W. Travell presented the report of the excursion committee, showing disbursements of $289.45, with a balance of $100 in the treasury. The total receipts from all sources were $2,813.59; disbursements, $2,566.58, leaving a balance of $247.01 in church organizations.

Rev. L. B. Howard presented the pastor's report from April 1, 1908, to March 31, 1909, showing the membership on the latter date to be 410. There were twenty-one added on confession, ten received from other churches, one restored from separate list, nine dismissed, two have died, 17 have been put on the separate list, making a net gain of four members. Nine adults and fifteen infants were baptized during the year.

The Sunday-school report was presented by Dr. D. G. Atwood, secretary. This showed that there are eight officers, four teachers and 189 members in the senior department; twenty-two teachers and 162 members of the junior department; six teachers and fifty-eight members of the intermediate department; nine teachers and 115 members of the primary department; four teachers and forty-eight members in the beginners' department, making a total membership of 626. The average attendance was 340 against 309 for the preceding year.

Mrs. John Johnson, as chairman of the flower committee of the Bible class taught by G. Stuart Simons, reported receipts amounting to $24.45; disbursements, $11.55, with a balance of $12.90. Robert Bailey, librarian, stated that there are 480 books in the library and 131 members of the school availing themselves of the privileges. Frank Rimmer, as treasurer of the Sunday-school, presented an excellent report. The receipts were $599.15; disbursements, $558.62, leaving a balance of $41.89. Mr. Rimmer has shown good executive ability in his office and was complimented for his good work.

The report of the Ladies' Aid Society, presented by Mrs. L. R. Howard, showed that $182.26 was raised and disbursed during the year. She also reported as treasurer of the organ fund, a total of $150.06 received and $124.05 paid J. W. Sandford, treasurer of the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church, leaving a balance of $26.01. Miss Bertha A. Jones, former president of the Christian Endeavor Society, and James Cullinan as secretary of the ways and means committee, presented encouraging reports of the work of their respective organizations during the year.

The Penny a Week Society, comprised of members of G. Stuart Simons' Bible class, reported a balance of $53.22 after disbursing $50 for scholarships at Wolf's Point, Montana. Mrs. Walter Bradford is treasurer of the society. Mrs. Emma R. Brown, as treasurer of the Women's Missionary Society, reported receipts for the year to be $85.91 and disbursements of $83.03.

One of the most interesting reports was that given by Miss M. Clara Hunter, treasurer of the Christian Endeavor Society. The society has raised through various sources, $142.32 and disbursed $140.22, leaving a small cash balance to start the new year. This is one of the best records ever made by a Hope chapel Christian Endeavor Society.

Walter Bradford was elected church treasurer and George H. Whyte and Willard H. Cook, assistant treasurers for the year. Messrs. Thomas Hendry, Charles Vincent, George H. Whyte, C. G. August and Marcus W. Clark were elected members of the ways and means committee.

DALEY BROS. MUST PAY FOR CIGARS PURCHASED

Tony Lusardi, Jr., was the plaintiff in a suit on contract in the District court, Thursday, against J. C. Daley, Charles P. Daley and James A. Daley, trading as Daley Brothers, grocers, in which he sought to recover the amount alleged to be due on one thousand cigars sold to the defendants by Milton F. Arnsberg, his agent. After hearing the testimony of witnesses, the case was submitted without argument and Judge William Newcorn gave the plaintiff a verdict for $35. Francis J. Blatz represented the plaintiff and Robert Newton Crane the defendants.

According to the testimony of Daley Brothers and James J. Nash, Mr. Arnsberg sold the firm the one thousand cigars with the understanding that they were to be credited up to his account and traded out in groceries. They claimed that they did not know of Mr. Lusardi's connection with the goods, declaring that Mr. Arnsberg led them to believe that he owned the cigars, that he had said he had been in hard luck and wanted to get rid of the cigars.

These statements were contradicted by the plaintiff, and Judge Newcorn decided that it was a case in which the plaintiff had a right to recover the cigars, claimed that the ownership of the goods had been established and that Mr. Lusardi should look to Daley Brothers for a settlement.

BIG VICTORY FOR CHRISTIAN SCIENTISTS

The State Senate has passed the bill of Senator Joseph S. Frelinghuysen, providing for the appointment of an osteopathic physician to the State Board of Medical Examiners and the examination and licensing of osteopathic practioners. The bill as originally introduced was amended by Senator Frelinghuysen to overcome the objections to Christian Scientists, who, according to its provisions, would be liable to arrest for attempting to heal the sick according to the tenets of their faith.

The amendment recognizes Christian Science healing and exempts members of the faith from any penalty for practising healing without a license.

Another amendment was adopted which exempts druggists who may prescribe simple remedies for slight ailments. There was a question as to whether they would not be liable to a heavy penalty if the bill was passed as introduced.

The Christian Science amendment is a great victory for the Scientists, as it is the first official recognition in this State of their methods. The amendment was drawn by Frank S. Katzenbach, Jr., and Joseph H. Lefferts, of Passaic, counsel to the Christian Scientists, who induced Frelinghuysen to advocate it. There was no discussion on the bill in its amended form when it came up for passage.

The vote was as follows:

Ayes — Frelinghuysen, Gaunt, Hinchliffe, Leavitt, Osborne, Plummer, Price, Robbins, Silzer, Wilson, Cornish;

Nays — Ackerman, Brown and Hart.

It is conceded that the Frelinghuysen bill is the only one dealing with osteopathy which has any show of passing the House.

Assemblyman H. Stacy Smith, author of the bill providing for a separate board of osteopathic examiners, conceded last night that his bill would be defeated.

DRINKING CUPS FOR ALL THEIR PASSENGERS.

The individual paper drinking cup, which Dr. Darlington, commissioner of health of New York, has been testing, has been adopted by the Lackawanna Railroad, to be put in use May 1. Passengers on the Lackawanna limited have commenced on a small nickel-plated device adjacent to the water-cooler. Closely nested within the tube are a hun*dred or more dainty white drinking* cups, which the bride's gift to each, can be replaced but must be destroyed or carried away.

These cups, which are in the exact form of a drinking glass, are stiffened by a coating of paraffine, and, being manufactured automatically, are untouched by hands until they reach those of the drinker.

Last week a call was issued to attend State boards of health to join in a movement to abolish the public train cup. Authorities say that there are few dangers within the reach of the traveling public today, so grave in a health sense, as the public drinking cup.

Waist of Today.

The manikins who are employed by dressmakers to display the new season's dresses are trying to bring their waist measurement up to a uniform 24 inches, which is the ideal waist of the present fashion. Tight lacing only obtains in old-fashioned show rooms, which have not yet taken cognizance of the entire change in the character of dress.

HORSE THIEF SENTENCED

Dominick Fitzpatrick to Serve Ten Years' Time in the State's Prison.

MADE CONFESSION TO COURT.

North Plainfield Man Given Long Term—Had Stolen and Sold Many Horses In Short Time.

One of the heaviest sentences passed up in recent years in the Somerset County Court was imposed Thursday by Judge Schenck on Dominick Fitzpatrick, of North Plainfield, who was found guilty of wholesale horse stealing. He was sentenced to ten years at hard labor in State prison and when Judge Schenck made it known the prisoner almost staggered under the severe penalty.

Fitzpatrick, who had considerable reputation as a prize-fighter, recently became famous as a horse thief. He started in to pick up all the best horses he could find in Washington Valley and his operations also covered other parts of the State.

County Detective George Totten brought Fitzpatrick from Perth Amboy, recently, where he had attempted to dispose of a number of stolen horses, which he gathered in Somerset and other counties during the past month.

When Fitzpatrick was arrested he was trying to dispose of a stolen team and buggy to a Perth Amboy dealer, which he had taken from Wyckoff's stable at Germantown. It was the low price at which he offered the animals and buggy that aroused suspicion and led to his arrest. Later he confessed to stealing eight horses, six of which have already been recovered. It is now expected that the remaining two will soon find an owner.

INSPECTION IS MADE OF UNION CO. ROADS

Members of the road committee of the Union County Board of Freeholders made a tour of inspection over all the county thoroughfares Thursday afternoon. Practically every highway in the county was examined. Many of the roads were found badly in need of repairs, while others were thick with dust. The Board is contemplating building new roads and possible locations were looked into.

The roads which are oppressed by the speed-mad autoists and flooded with dust through his recklessness will be oiled hereafter and an effort made to make living for the residents in the vicinity sanitary as far as is possible.

Among those on the inspection tour were Major Benjamin King, director of the Board of Freeholders; County Engineer Jacob L. Bauer, Freeholders S. P. T. Wilbur, Henry Krause, Peter H. Meisel, Elmor K. Adams and George B. Cladek.

Mr. Gilbert to Make Address.

Former Mayor Alexander Gilbert, president of the New York Clearing House Association, will address the Monday Afternoon Club at the Hartridge auditorium on Monday, April 19. His subject will be "Methods in Banking."

DECISION IN FAVOR OF MARTIN AUTO COMPANY

By an opinion handed down by the Supreme Court Wednesday, the judgment for full cost of an automobile owned by Dr. Alfred L. Ellis, mayor of Metuchen, against the F. L. C. Martin Automobile Company by the Circuit Court at New Brunswick, before Judge Lloyd and a jury in December, 1907, has been set aside, and the conditions of the automobile concern, which is represented by Reed & Coddington, have been sustained. Suit was started by Dr. Ellis, who refused to pay a bill for the repair of the machine two years ago, declaring that the damage to the car for about two months before taking it to the garage. The automobile company's attorneys learned after the hearing that the car had only been purchased by Dr. Ellis four days before it was taken to the garage.

In the testimony during the trial in the Circuit Court it developed that the machine had been brought to the local garage for repair and that while it was there the crank shaft was broken and the shaft casing damaged during the test of the engine. The Metuchen 'man' balked at the charges for the repairing of this damage done in the garage, although the automobile men claimed that the accident would probably have happened on the road. The machine was held for the payment of the bill, and it still in the local shop. At the trial two years ago at New Brunswick, the jury gave a verdict against the local automobile firm for the full value of the machine.

REV. MR. WARNER TALKS ON "EVERY-DAY HONESTY"

Rev. George A. Warner, rector of Holy Cross church, was the speaker at the Easter exercises at the Plainfield High School Thursday. His subject was "Every-day Honesty," and he referred at length to the opportunities for dishonesty in school life. Mr. Warner stated that among school pupils there was probably the greatest tendency to deceive and the so-called "white lies," and this should be guarded against by each and every pupil.

Hypocrisy, the speaker said, is a form of deceit, and affectation in any way should be guarded against in the pupil's life as in every-day life in the home. In this connection Mr. Warner said that the main reason, perhaps, for Mr. Roosevelt's popularity was that he always is his natural self and scorns affectation. Easter music by the pupils was a feature of the exercises, combining Good Friday and Easter music.

SHOW HORSE FALLS WITH WOMAN RIDER.

The first real excitement attend*ant upon the Atlantic City horse* show occurred Friday afternoon, when Miss Adele VonOhl, of this city, was spilled while riding Sidney Joseph That's bay gelding Irish Reel in the ladies' hunter class.

Miss VonOhl sent the big bay over the fences as lightly as a bird at first and received an ovation, but later on Irish Reel did not lift his forefeet clear and stumbled, pitching Miss VonOhl over his head. She rolled almost beneath the horse's feet, but the animal seemed to real*ize what had taken place and held in* the air the forefoot that, had it been "planted" would have landed upon Miss VonOhl. The young woman, too, realized her position of danger and rolled out quickly.

Will Sing "Elijah."

William E. MacClymont, organist and choirmaster of Grace church, has decided to give "Elijah" at the church Thursday night, April 22. The full choir and an orchestra will render the oratorio.

Miss Buckle's Engagement.

Former Mayor and Mrs. James F. Buckle announce the engagement of their daughter, Miss Mary E. Buckle, to William Finney, of Liverpool, England. The wedding will take place in June.

He Knew His Friends.

"Yes, sir," boasted the hotel proprietor, "that dog's the best ratcatchin' dog in the State."

Even as he spoke two big rats scurried across the office floor. The dog merely wrinkled his nose.

"Rat dog!" scoffed the traveling man. "Look at that, will you?"

"Huh!" snorted the landlord. "He knows them. That just you let a strange rat come in here once!"—Everybody's Magazine.

Mrs. Blunder had just received a telegram from India.

"What an admirable invention the telegram is!" she exclaimed, "when you come to consider that this message has come a distance of thousands of miles, and the gum on the envelope isn't dry yet."—Sacred Heart Review.

OBSERVED GOOD FRIDAY

Union Services of Protestant Churches at Crescent Avenue Largely Attended.

TALKS BY SIX LOCAL MINISTERS

Some of Those On Program Unable to Be Present—Offering For Children's Home.

A large congregation from the Protestant churches where there was no special Good Friday service Friday attended the special union Good Friday service at the Crescent Avenue church last night, when ten local ministers took part. A large part of the service comprised short addresses by various clergymen which were of the nature of meditations on The Seven Words From The Cross.

Rev. Dr. A. C. McCrea, who was to have spoken on the first words from the cross, was unable to be present, and this meditation was omitted. Rev. Charles L. Goodrich, of the Congregational church, spoke on the second word, "Verily I say unto thee, today shalt thou be with me in Paradise;" and the other meditations and speakers were as follows: "Behold thy Son! Behold thy mother;" Rev. J. W. Musson, pastor of the Temple Baptist church; "My God, my God, why hast thou forsaken me?" Rev. O. J. Shoop, of Grace M. E. church; "I thirst," Rev. John W. There were a great many beautiful floral tributes. The burial was in the family plot at Somerville.

Mrs. Henry, who was the mother of Mrs. Isaac P. Runyon, of Prospect place, the borough, died Wednesday morning in the Somerset Hospital, Somerville, as the result of burns received the day before when her dress caught fire from a pile of burning leaves. Before the flames could be extinguished Mrs. Henry's entire body was disfigured beyond recognition. ADDITIONAL CARRIER FOR THE NETHERWOOD SECTION.

Postmaster E. H. Bird has been granted another carrier, making twenty-two in all. The new carrier is Charles Schlief and he will begin his duties on April 16. He has been acting as a substitute and in this way is familiar with the work. Mr. Bird has assigned him to the Netherwood district of the city and this will relieve two of the carriers now covering that territory.

The granting of an additional carrier is due to the fine showing of the office during the past year. This fact and the inspection recently made of the office. The inspector praised Mr. Bird for the up-to-date office and equipment and the thoroughly satisfactory manner in which he conducts the business of the office. The report when it reached the Government officials had great weight in allowing an extra man for the carrier department.

"Greek Architecture."

After ten years' preparation, Professor Rufus Bennett Marquand, of the art and archaeology department in Princeton University, has published his work on "Greek Architecture." Professor Marquand enters into a discussion of disputed questions, and in cases where demanded he confines himself not to Greek architecture alone, but draws comparisons from the work of the Romans. Building materials, monuments, composition, style and decoration are all exhaustively treated.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Prayer Meeting Topic For the Week Beginning April 18, 1909.

By REV. S. H. DOYLE.

Topic.—Why we observe the Lord's day. —Mark xvi, 1-6; Acts xx, 7; I Cor. xvi, 2; Rev. i, 10.

A question perhaps more pertinent than the one before us might be, Why we do not observe the Lord's day? Sabbath desecration is one of our great modern evils. But this fact alone is sufficient for us to study the reasons for observing the Lord's day, with the prayerful hope that it may lead us, even as Christians, to a better observance of the day and for truer and loftier purposes.

The Lord's day is used with discrimination. The Sabbath of the Jews was the seventh day of the week. The Sunday of Christians is the first day of the week, commonly called in the New Testament "the Lord's day."

1. The Lord's day is observed as a memorial of the resurrection of Christ. The change in days was undoubtedly made to commemorate this crowning event in Christ's life. He arose on the first day of the week and met his disciples. He appeared to them eight days later, which was again the first day of the week. He ascended *the first day after His resurrec*tion, which was also the first day of the week. The apostles continued to meet on this day and called it "the Lord's day." Though with no recorded command to change the days, yet in practice they did do so as we learn from Acts to Revelation, where John in i, 10, declares that he "was in the spirit on the Lord's day." Christ's resurrection was an event of such vast importance that it made even such a signal change a most worthy one. Let us think of the Sabbath as the Lord's day and give it to Him as the Jews gave the seventh day to God.

2. The Lord's day is to be observed as a day of public and private worship. On this day, at Philippi, Peter preached to the gospel to a multitude of people, and Paul urged the Corinthians to lay aside offerings for God's work. "Upon the first day of the week let every one of you lay by him in store as God hath prospered him." Here are two acts of public worship—preaching and giving—and no doubt they took place in the public congregation with the other parts of public worship, such as prayer and singing. The Lord's day should be a day of worship. The house of God should not be neglected. Private worship cannot take its place, and much less the worship of nature or of nothing. Churchgoing may seem to some an insignificant thing, but it is of vital importance. Few souls are saved or grow in grace outside the church. It is next to impossible. We say, "It is the only day we have for recreation, for visiting friends, for getting out in the air," etc. The fact is it is the only day of the week which we have not got. It is "the Lord's day" instead of ours, and we should give unto Him what belongs to Him, "not forsaking the assembling of ourselves together, as the manner of some is."

3. John was in the spirit on the Lord's day and had a wonderful vision. The Lord's day is our day for spiritual uplift and spiritual vision. But to have it so we must yield ourselves unto the Holy Spirit, and let Him pervade us. The spirit of sin, of worldliness and of indifference will give us no heavenly vision on the Lord's day.

BIBLE READINGS.

Gen. ii, 1, 2; Ex. xx, 8-11; Lev. xxv, 1-7; Num. xv, 32-36; Neh. x, 31; Isa. lviii, 13, 14; Jer. xvii, 21-27; Luke iv, 16; John xx, 19-23; Rom. xiv, 5-12.

"St. Paul, 1909," Rally Song.

Minnesota's vigorous field secretary, Walter D. Howell, has written the following stirring song, which is being sung everywhere to arouse interest in the coming great international convention at St. Paul. The tune is "The Battle Cry of Freedom:"

We are coming in the southland, we're marching in the north,
Shouting the message of Endeavor!
In the east and in the west see the army going forth
Shouting the message of Endeavor!

CHORUS.

For Christian Endeavor we sing as we march,
True to our motto, "For Christ and the church,"
And in nineteen hundred nine then we'll rally in St. Paul,
Shouting the message of Endeavor!

See, the starry flag is waving beside the union jack,
Leading the army of Endeavor.
And our march is ever onward, no thought of turning back,
Shouting the message of Endeavor!

We are marching for Immanuel, our Captain and our King,
Shouting the message of Endeavor!
From Quebec to California we make his praises ring,
Shouting the message of Endeavor!

Let us rally in convention, full thirty thousand strong,
Rally the army of Endeavor!
And we'll win a mighty conflict against the hosts of wrong,
Shouting the message of Endeavor!

Start of Two Foreign Societies.

Most of the Christian Endeavor societies in Porto Rico originated from the mission school where Fidelia Fiske taught. The pupils, going home for their vacations, spend the time in starting new Endeavor societies. In the same way in Spain many of the societies were started by the girls of the American mission school as they went home for their vacations.

Large African Society.

There is a large Christian Endeavor society, numbering 200, on the west coast of Africa. They do all the teaching in the large Sunday school. They divide themselves into bands, one for each day of the week, and take turns going out to preach Christ to those who do not know Him.

RAM'S HORN PHILOSOPHIES.

Better die trying than not to try at all.

Our prejudice is always an enemy to our progress.

The white robe often hides the cloven foot.

The man who fears God is afraid to take a single step alone.

The more we have against us the more God is honored by our trust.

Even Heaven wouldn't look right through the devil's telescope.

The devil never knows just what move to make against a praying mother.

We do not always have the most reason for sorrowing when we are sorrowing most.

The hamlet in which a great man is born and reared is the last to find out that he is great.

It is always safe to count on God's help whenever and wherever no human hand can help.

Milder spots may be removed by a mixture of soap and powdered chalk.

The quickest cleaner for a sticky bread or cake pan is a crust of stale bread.

A dish of water kept on the radiator will improve the air of a steam-heated room.

When India ink gets too thick for use, dilute it with alcohol and it is as good as new.

The price mark on chinaware which is not easily removed can be secured off with a piece of lemon and salt.

Fringed doilies are kept in better condition if the fringe is brushed with a small nail brush rather than with a comb.

Oilcloth can be brightened quickly if after it is washed and dried it is rubbed over with a cloth dipped in skim milk.

If the temper of an iron is spoiled it will never retain the heat so well again. Never let irons stand on the range or get red hot.

The unpleasant creaking of a door can be remedied if the edges are rubbed with soap and a few drops of oil are put in the hinges.

TREATMENT OF THE HAIR.

Cleanliness is as important to the well being of the hair as tonic or stimulation by massage. If you doubt the efficacy of shampoos, omit washing the hair for several months while keeping up a course of tonics. Nothing takes the place of plenty of water and a good shampoo mixture in keeping the scalp healthy.

The intervals between shampoos must be decided by individual conditions. Oily hair should be washed every two or three weeks. No hair should go unwashed longer than six weeks. Each month is the accepted time.

Before washing the hair it is well to loosen the dirt with a little kerosene rubbed into the scalp. This can be put on the night previously if the hair is to be shampooed early in the day.

If soap is used it should be pure—a good castile soap is excellent—and should be shaved and boiled with water, never rubbed into the hair from the cake.

Thorough rinsing is the secret of a good shampoo; plenty of water is more important than the kind of shampoo mixture used. If possible, use a spray, or if that is out of the question rinse in at least a dozen waters.

Unless the shampooing has been done in egg the first rinsing should be in very hot water, gradually reducing the temperature until cold water as it runs from the spigot is forced on the scalp. The cold water is not only a tonic, but lessens the danger of cold.

With an egg shampoo rinse out the egg with tepid water before applying hot water.

Do not try to dry in a hurry. Light, fluffy hair should not be rubbed, but dried in the sun. This sun bath is also important to keep the lustre.

Shining hair is much in demand just now, and flyaway ends have given place to comparative smoothness and tight curling to more naturallooking waves.

If the hair is to be kept lustrous do not curl with irons the day it is shampooed. Instead use kid or wire curlers.

Do not treat the hair roughly. A brush should have rather soft bristles and should be used with steady even strokes. The stiff brushes so often advised irritate the scalp.

Brush and comb must be kept clean or hair treatment is nullified. Have a double set, so that both comb and brush can be cleaned every few days. Very particular people clean brush after each using, but this is scarcely necessary if the hair and scalp are kept in good condition.

WHAT EVERY HOUSEWIFE OUGHT TO KNOW.

A hardwood floor can be kept free from scratches longer if the legs of chairs have a bit of felt pasted on the bottom. An old felt hat can be utilized.

Onions, if rinsed several times in fresh additions of boiling water before they are cooked, are much digestible than if boiled in the ordinary manner.

When washing lace never rinse it in blue water with the idea of improving its color. Small lace should be finally rinsed in skim milk, which will give it a soft, creamy color.

To clean a blue-and-white fibre rug wash it with a solution of water, borax and white soap, rinse and add a nickel's worth of muriatic acid to the rinsing water to restore the blue tint.

When cakes stick to the layer pans do not attempt to scratch off the baked dough, but put one on the stove and fill it with boiling water in which is a pinch of soda, turn the other pan upside down on it, and steam will do the rest. Steaming a cereal pan makes it less difficult to clean than to plunge it into boiling water, for then the glutinous substances stick to the pan.

JERSEY FARMERS HAD A PROSPEROUS YEAR

Nineteen hundred and eight was the most prosperous year ever experienced by the farmers of Southern New Jersey, according to reports which have been compiled by the freight department of the West Jersey and Seashore Railroad, one of the subsidiary lines of the Pennsylvania Railroad Company. More than 14,000 carloads—140 miles of cars —of perishable freight were shipped from points on the West Jersey and Seashore.

The shipments in 1908 were larger by 2,771 cars than those in 1907, an increase of 39 per cent. These figures derive added significance from the fact that the railroad company in the last year carried on an active campaign to encourage the further development of New Jersey as an agricultural State.

The 14,042 carloads of produce shipped from Southern New Jersey in 1908 contained the following: 77,210 crates of berries, 519,096 crates of tomatoes, 12,861 crates of cantaloupes; 5,554 crates, 289,055 barrels and 307,886 hampers of sweet potatoes; 8,425 crates, 94,823 barrels and 1,062 hampers of peppers; 4,587 barrels of apples, 8,945 crates and 10,565 barrels and cranberries, 463,380 cases of canned goods, 141,972 sacks of oysters and clams, 211,320 barrels of white potatoes.

That the exploitation of the produce grown in New Jersey, the efforts to develop the widest possible market, and the operation of fast preference freight trains to enable shippers to deliver their produce at the most favorable possible condition, have been effective is evidenced by the fact that in 1908 the table delicacies referred to were placed in the markets of 24 different States, the District of Columbia and Canada. Four carloads were shipped to Montana, three cars to North Dakota, 12 cars to Maine, 45 cars to Minnesota, 27 cars to Wisconsin and 23 cars to Canada.

Of the remaining 13,828 cars Camden and Philadelphia received 3,567, New Jersey points and York 4,451, Newark 640, Boston 485, Pittsburg 643, Chicago 375, Ohio points 190, Buffalo 272, other New York points 111, Massachusetts points 101, New Hampshire 28, Connecticut 37, Rhode Island 3, Pennsylvania points 515, Delaware 46, Maryland 92, Washington (D. C.) 6, Richmond (Va.) 3, Indiana 12, Illinois towns, 5, Detroit 21, other Michigan towns 21, Iowa 9, Kentucky 2, Colorado 9, Minnesota 45, Kansas 2, Nebraska 12, Wisconsin 27, and New Jersey points other than Camden, Newark and Jersey City, 333.

DON'T RIDICULE BOY

ORISON SWETT MARDEN GIVES SOME GOOD ADVICE.

Well for Parents to Respect Dreams of Future Greatness Which May Enter Youngster's Mind—How Much Injury Is Done.

Many a boy has gone to bed in tears because his father criticized or denounced his effort at playing the violin; made fun of a simple little composition or story which he wrote; discouraged his attempt to make some little mechanical device, or threw a wet blanket on his dreams, laughing at his prediction of what he would do in the future, writes Orison Swett Marden in Success Magazine.

A man who has recently come into great prominence in his profession says that when, tremblingly, he told his father what he wanted to be, he was told that a padded cell was the only place for a boy with such crazy ideas, and that he was forced for years to do the work he had forbidden in every fiber of his being, and against which every drop of blood in him protested.

The father who has made up his mind that his son must continue his business and keep his estate intact, is not in a position to decide on the boy's bent—his special aptitude. He is prejudiced at the very outset.

The reason why there are so many mediocre men and women in the world, and so many failures, is because they never found their right places.

Every year we see men and women, capable of much better things, who were discouraged and diverted from their natural bent when young. Their own families did not take stock in them; they laughed at their young ambitions and crushed their aspirations, either by harsh treatment or, what is even worse, ridicule; and their teachers did not understand them.

You cannot read the sealed message which God has wrapped up in your boy or girl, and you should regard it as sacred. You should respect the dreams of future greatness of your son, because the Creator may have intended him for a grand and far-reaching mission. You cannot tell what is going on in his mind; you cannot tell what possibilities are locked in his brain. He may be perfectly conscious at this moment that he was intended for a much higher place in the world than you are occupying yourself, and to denounce him, to scoff at his dreams, to laugh at his predictions for the future may be a source of great humiliation to you some day. It may also work incalculable injury to your boy. A thousand times better strike him with your hand than blast his hopes by ridicule or by a cruel, chilling, cutting word.

Flower Dances for Children.

French mothers have been showing unwonted ingenuity this winter in dressing their darlings for the popular flower dances which are now the fashion for juvenile society and carry all before them. Generally a number of blooms are selected, and these are called bouquet parties. The charm of these parties is that the little people are well suited to represent flowers. Parisian society has gone daft over some of the designs and also the beauty of some of the children. The dresses are floral, of course. Trails of blooms are draped together from the waists, the ends floating on the airy skirts, or loose petals are scattered all over the material. But this gives little idea of the chic and the detail of the dress or of the human flowerot that carries it off. Nothing has so hit the French taste as these flower dances, and many of the older spectators have grown quite sentimental about them.

Demand for Professional Mourner.

The professional mourner who can be hired in many European cities to follow in the funeral procession and look grief-stricken is usually secured through burial societies. These furnish men and women, and sometimes both, dressed in keeping with the desire of the family of the late lamented. They also weep to order. At homes where self control is deemed a virtue there is no loud demonstration or sorrow, but when the real mourners are emotional and give way to weeping they are usually outdone by the professionals. An undertaker in Delaware furnished mourners several times recently, and the experiment was so successful, the stricken families were so well pleased with the manner in which the mourning parties had been augmented, that the funeral director has determined to enter the professional mourner's business with hopes for success.

That Wireless Signal.

The family circle was discussing the Republic disaster and the new famous "C Q D" signal sent out by Jack Binns that carried to the world the fateful news.

"Say, pa, what does that 'C Q D' really mean?" asked the youngest boy.

"Aw, I know what it means," spoke up the elder brother, "It's this: 'Come Quick, We're Drowning!'"

Rather Slow.

She is receiving attentions from a young lawyer and also from a young doctor.

"Which is ahead?"

"They're both somewhat backward. The lawyer asks merely hypothetical questions and the doctor only seems to hold her hand to take her pulse."

PHYLLIS ABSTAINS—AH, ME!

Ah, Lent's a dreary time at best, with nothing doing in the town.
Society in somber garb and rectors tossing Satan down;
But I'd no quarrel with those days of penitence, indeed, sometimes
I've felt a bit contrite myself on hearing those clear, dulcet chimes
Calling fair sinners to their prayers, bidding a reverent world make haste
To gain the sanctified retreat wherein its sins might be erased;
But now I know I'm not at all, howe'er they call appealingly—
"You must abstain," the rector said, and Phyllis now abstains from—me.

"It's only forty days," she said, "and I must give up what I like best.
In Lent, my dear, the rector says, one must give up what one loves best.
Abstain from every worldly thing; and you are worldly, aren't you?
Besides, it's but a test," she cried, "whether or not your love rings true."

No plea of mine availed against the rector's ban on worldly taint;
'Twas her obsession (great word, that), and so I let her have it.
In chastened mood and heart contrite took up her role as devotee,
Distributing tracts and vanities, beneath which head she barred out me.

Surely that rector graced his robes! Lofty of brow, a soulful gaze,
Six feet of sweetness and of light, someone once said of him.
Such deities the idol of a throng of femininity—
And to this rector Phyllis paid devotions afternoons at three.
In tending souls so ardent was the rector's zeal, I feared I lent waned—
I found Phyllis lost to me, and what I'd lost the rector gained.
Prate to me not of keeping Lent! Phyllis, immune to every plea,
Kept Lent and kept the rector, too!
That's why she now abstains from me.

WAR ON COUNTY BOARDS STILL ON IN LEGISLATURE.

Trenton, April 12.—Governor Fort's latest plan to abolish the present county boards of taxation, as embodied in Senate bill No. 363, introduced by Mr. Gaunt, shows that the Executive still regards these boards as worthless. The Gaunt bill, offered this week at the Governor's suggestion, would do away with the present membership of the county boards of taxation and would substitute for them new boards in each county to consist of the clerk of the dis*trict of the Board of Freeholders* and the collector, as well as one other person to be appointed by the Executive. At present the boards are composed of three members appointed by the State head.

*The Governor has repeatedly de*clared the present boards are a needless expense to the State and has urged they be abolished. He had a bill introduced in the House for this purpose, but it was easily and quickly defeated. It comes the Executive's new scheme, however, and by its provisions he would increase the pay of the director of the Board of Freeholders and the County Collector in first-class counties *$500 each as additional com*pensation for their new labors under the bill. The third member in these counties will be paid $2,500 a year if the Governor's measure prevails. In second-class counties the in*creases would be $300 for the direc*tor and collector and $1,500 a year for the appointee, while in all other counties the advances for the collector and director would be $200 and the appointee's salary $1,000.

If the bill was enacted into law it would save the State $40,000 a year, and add but little to the burdens of the counties.

The clerks to the county boards would also be abolished by the bill, and the measure, it was explained, would solve the criticism as to the expense the boards are to the State, and would also aid the State in securing a much-needed revenue.

ADVICE ABOUT CIGARS WHICH CLEVELAND DID NOT ACCEPT.

In the April American Magazine Jesse Lynch Williams writes affectionately of Grover Cleveland, whom he knew intimately. Cleveland had a "trick of silence" which always amused and interested his friends. Here is a case:

"Another example of his unconscious 'trick of silence' in a different mood may suggest a little of the quiet, pervasive humor his friends knew and liked so well. One of his neighbors, who enjoyed in no ordinary degree his one evening, said: 'By the way, Mr. Cleveland, let me show you a new way to cut your cigar, a most hygenic way,' and he illustrated it. 'First you start as if you were going to cut the tip off in the usual manner, but stop half way through, like this. Then begin at the very tip, you see, and cut straight in, so, until you strike the other cut; remove the segment thus formed and now you have not only a pocket drawing slide, but also by holding the cigar in your mouth this side up, there is formed a sort of cup which catches all the nocticine.' Mr. Cleveland listened with grave interest until his good friend had quite finished, then, without a word or smile, he picked up a cigar, snipped off the entire end in the old accustomed manner, and set to smoking with great satisfaction and no audible comment.

SILK CASHMERE.

It is soft.

It is pliable.

It is shimmering.

It is most modish.

It is a favorite for house gowns. It combines the good qualities of both satin and silk.

Yet it is less stiff than satin and has "ragged" than silk.

It is much liked, and much worn for spring house gowns and "dressy" frocks.

Obsolete.

VETOES TROLLEY FREIGHT

Governor Disapproves of Legislature's Grant Franchise Measure.

GOV. FORT GIVES HIS REASONS.

Vetoes Measure Authorizing Cities to Provide Penalties for Non-Payment of Water Rent.

As soon as the Legislature was in session Monday at Trenton, Governor Fort sent both chambers vetoes, five bills, among them being the Grant trolley freight carrying franchise act. He vetoes it on the ground that it provides for an unlimited franchise to carry freight after the State has on the statute book a limited franchise act. Another ground of veto is that there is nothing in the act giving to municipalities any authority over the freight which might be carried through their streets.

The Governor says that he is anxious to obtain for the farmers a cheaper freight rate for their produce, but he cannot consent to take away from small municipalities their rights to regulate what goes on in their streets.

He further says that many cities have contracts with trolley companies by which the latter pay a certain percentage of gross receipts for their franchises, and this measure in his opinion might in some way abrogate those rights.

Governor Fort vetoes the Trenton shade-tree commission act by which the Democrats were to be legislated out of office and the Republicans regain control of the parks. His veto is not on political lines, but because of legal objections.

Another act vetoed is the Wilson act, the purpose of which is to confer upon a railroad corporation the right to purchase the stock and bonds of a street railway near Atlantic City.

He disapproves of the Tumulty act, authorizing cities to provide penalties for non-payment of water rents, on the Tumulty evidence act.

A bill of considerable interest in South Jersey was signed yesterday by Governor Fort. It gives the railroad companies the right to clear a "fire line" ten feet in width where their tracks pass through timber lands.

The Governor also signed a bill giving the Prudential Insurance Company the right to build a bridge across a street so as to connect its buildings in Newark.

Bills that became laws without the Governor's signature are: The Otto act, giving Circuit Court sergeants-at-arms in first class counties $1,500 salary, and the Hinchliffe bill validating deeds in Paterson, where records were destroyed in the great Paterson fire.

CHOOSEN TO REPRESENT THE SECOND REGIMENT

Major W. B. Martin and Sergeant George L. Apgar, of Co. K, and Sergeant Dabb, of Co. C, of Elizabeth, have been selected to take part in the International Indoor cable shoot. It is not known just where the trio will conduct their part of the contest, but it is possible that it may be at Co. K's armory in this city.

The International match will be a competition between the crack shots of the United States and nearly all of the foreign countries and promises to be one of the most important events in rifle shooting. That Sergeant Apgar, of this city, was picked as one of the marksmen, is high honor. His friends predict that he will make a good.

E. A. PINTO SCORES IN A BROADWAY SUCCESS

"The Climax," a play by Edward Locke, with incidental music by Joseph Carl Breil, had its first New York production at Weber's theatre, Monday, and all of the dramatic criticisms appearing in the New York newspapers are favorable. Plainfield-ites will be especially interested in this production by reason of the fact that Effingham A. Pinto, son of Mr. and Mrs. William A. Pinto, of this city, has one of the four parts of the play and he made a hit last night.

This morning's New York Herald says concerning Mr. Pinto, that he was full of the "artistic temperament" and displayed it convincingly.

Mr. Pinto is a graduate of Leal's School. He achieved notable success here in amateur production at the Park Club, the old Casino and the New Plainfield, where his last appearance was in the kirmess given for the hospital. He studied for three years at the American Academy of Dramatic Arts and in his first metropolitan appearance he seems to have reached at least one goal of his ambition which promises greater things for the future.

CITY CUT DOWN TREE AND GETS INTO TROUBLE

Joseph F. Burke, of Monroe avenue, son of Mrs. John Brown, of South Second street, appeared before the Shade Tree Commission, Monday night, to enter a complaint against the cutting down of a tree in front of his mother's residence. He values the tree at $500 and informed the commission that it could be replaced with one equally as good he would commence suit against the city.

In speaking of the matter today, Mr. Burke said that the commission admitted last night that the tree in front of his mother's property was cut down for the convenience of the New York and New Jersey Telephone Company and that the concern was standing the expense in such cases.

Mr. Burke also complained against the practice of the commission in purchasing new trees without inviting bids and giving local growers a chance. This he considered all wrong in view of the fact that the commission is spending the taxpayers' money. He declares that the commission has no right to cut down trees on any person's property without first obtaining permission, but that it has done so apparently without any right. In referring to the tree cut down on his mother's property he said that it was not dead or dying as intimated by the commission, but was continued to bear foliage every year. The commissioners promised to investigate the complaint.

CUPID'S BURGLAR

By H. T. SEYMOUR.

"Estelle, I—I—"

"Yes, Jack."

"I shall look for you on the links to-morrow."

"Yes, Jack."

"Good night."

"Good night."

The girl moved out of the shadow of the big lilac bushes, where they had been sitting, and gliding across the moon-lighted lawn, entered the house.

"I wonder if I shall ever find courage to ask her to be my wife?" grumbled the man aloud. "Every night for two weeks I have lurked and every time I fail miserably. Why will a man be such an arrant coward when it comes to telling a woman he loves her?"

Jack Allerton, still growling at his own cowardice, walked down to the road and disappeared in the shadows. He was a handsome athletic fellow, who had never known what physical fear meant, but he had courted Estelle Williams for a winter and two summers, and, while he felt reasonably certain that his suit was not distasteful to her, he had been unable to screw up his courage to the point which would put his fate to the test.

As he had done innumerable nights before, he strolled down the road about half a mile and then returning took a position opposite the Williams cottage in the shadows of the roadside bushes and waited for the light in her room to be extinguished.

"Jack Allerton, for a sane man, you make a confounded monkey of yourself," he said finally as the light that he was watching went out and he turned to depart again.

Suddenly he stopped short with a catch in his breath.

A dark form had passed quickly across the lawn and been swallowed up by the shadow of the house.

Allerton sprang to the low fence that surrounded the Williams grounds, and vaulting over made his way stealthily toward the spot where the form had disappeared. The dining-room window was open, and a man was clambering clumsily into the room.

For a moment Allerton hesitated, while he rapidly thought out a plan of action. The house must not be aroused lest Estelle be alarmed. Whatever was to be done must be done quickly and quietly.

Allerton's mind was soon made up. Gliding from shadow to shadow he reached the open window by which the man had entered the house. Crouching beneath it he slowly raised his head so that he could look into the room.

As his eyes became accustomed to the darkness he could dimly make out the form of a man moving stealthily around the room with outstretched arms, feeling along the walls. When he reached the door he passed into the hall and out of sight.

Was it burglar or—?

Allerton's heart was in his mouth.

Placing his hands on the window seat he drew himself up and jumped lightly into the room. It was now a game of hide and seek, and Allerton was "it." For a moment he hesitated. But the man apparently knew his business well. Not a sound broke the stillness of the night.

Again he listened, but not a creaking board or stair gave him any hint of the direction in which the man had gone after leaving the dining-room. Allerton stopped and thought again. What would he do, were he a burglar? The sleeping rooms first for jewels and money, of course. The thought meant quick action. He, at least, had the advantage of a thorough knowledge of the house. He tip-toed to the foot of the stairs and taking one step up, stopped.

It could scarcely be called sound, but to Allerton's straining ears it seemed as loud as the roar of Niagara. It was a gurgling sound like that made by liquid poured from a bottle, and it seemed to come from the direction of the butler's pantry at the end of the hall. Allerton retraced his steps and he slipped down the hall he paused and involuntarily crouched against the wall.

There was his man in plain view. The pantry door was wide open, and standing in a patch of moonlight that came through a window stood the burglar. In one hand he held a bottle of beer, and in the other something edible, at which he was contentedly munching.

While he stood out in sharply defined silhouette, Allerton was invisible to the burglar, and would be until he reached the streak of moonlight that penetrated just outside the pantry door. Moving silently along close to the wall, he finally stepped quickly out in view.

There was a smothered oath the man dropped the bottle with a crash, and sprang at Allerton, who met the onslaught unflinchingly.

"You fool," whispered Allerton as he blocked the blow aimed at him and caught the man in a grasp of iron, "you'll rouse the house."

"What's your lay, anyway?" grumbled the man, as he ceased to struggle against his too powerful captor.

"First I want you to be quiet; second, I want you to pick up your shoes, climb out of the window through which you came, and just as silently, and then make tracks out of town. I know your face, and if I see you around I'll have you arrested."

"And ain't you going to have me pinched now?"

"No, all I want you to do, is to get out of this house."

"I'm your man, boss. You're the right sort, you are. Most of you swell blokes is apt to be hard on a poor chap."

"All right; now march."

Still keeping a firm hold on the man's collar, Allerton swung him around facing the door, when both started back in a gasp of surprise.

A woman in a long white dressing gown stood facing them with a revolver in her right hand, pointed firmly at them.

The crash of the falling bottle had done this mischief.

"Estelle," said Jack, softly.

"Jack," she gasped, as she recognized him.

"Two's company, three's a crowd. Don't you think I'd better be going, boss?" chuckled the burglar.

Giving the man's collar a vicious twist, Allerton led him, followed by Estelle and her pistol, into the dining room, where he lighted the gas. The burglar picked up his shoes, and, drawing himself on the edge of the seat, swung his feet out and prepared to jump when Allerton should release his hold.

"Say," he said, when he felt himself entirely free, "you're a couple of game uns. Don't you think you'd like to marry the young man, miss? He's been trying to ask you for a long time, but couldn't get up the grit. I heard him say so while I was laying low behind the bushes waiting to pull off the job he's spoiled.

"Youse have been good to me; and I'd like to see you happy. Take my word for it, he wants you bad, miss, but hasn't got the sand to tell it."

With a low chuckle of delight the burglar dodged a vicious uppercut that Allerton handed at him and dropping quickly to the ground disappeared.

Allerton looked at the girl, who had recovered from her fright.

"Estelle," he said, falteringly.

"Yes, Jack."

"What the burglar said was true."

"Was it, Jack?"

"Will you—will you—"

"Yes, Jack, only I don't like being proposed to by a burglar."

THE MOSQUITO IN LABRADOR.

Terrible Pest to Travelers and Natives in the Northland.

No account of travel in Labrador can be complete without some mention of the terrible pest of mosquitoes that swarm there. The first intimation of the immense swarms from the beginning of our trip to the end, and sometimes they made life almost unbearable. Nothing could be heard but their buzzing. Whenever we attempted to eat they settled thick, and so unfortunate as to be caught out at night without protection, he would be either crazy or dead by morning.

Our tents were provided with a fine mesh bobbinet inner tent, but some would always find their way inside or come to us from the ground. At times our light so attracted them we went outside to see if it were not raining, for the constant tapping of the mosquitoes against the canvas sounded so exactly like rain that it was impossible to tell the difference.

On many nights I had to give up the observation of stars for latitude and longitude because a candle could not be kept lit long enough to adjust the artificial horizon. We unfortunately had no chimney and the mosquitoes swarmed so thickly that without this protection the flame was quickly smothered. There were but few nights cool enough to afford us any relief; we usually required a temperature within a few degrees of actual freezing to subdue them.—Forest and Stream.

Decoration Worthily Bestowed.

President Falliéres' first list of decorations is out, and we are included the name of one man who is little known. This was a young physician named Louis Bozy, who lost an eye in the discharge of his duty. Dr. Bozy, while acting as assistant to an operating surgeon in one of the Paris hospitals, had an eye injured through a drop of poisonous matter coming in contact with it. He knew that an antidote must be applied immediately, but by doing this he would have left the chief surgeon unattended, and remained at his post with his eye uncared for until the operation was completed. In consequence of his heroism he lost an eye and was confined to a hospital for a long time. President Falliéres, in conferring the decoration, said that a wound received by a physician in the discharge of his duty was as honorable as one received on the battlefield.

Model Public Servant.

Mrs. Nancy Hall, postmaster at Charlotte, Vt., has just celebrated her seventy-eighth birthday. She has been in the postal service for 38 years, beginning as a telegraph operator and assistant postmaster. In response to a petition signed by almost every inhabitant of Charlotte, President Grant appointed her postmaster in 1875. Her office is said to be a model of neatness and her accounts always accurate to the last cent. She has never had a clerk and she superintends one sub station and two carriers, besides attending to an extensive money order business and the regular duties of postmaster.

NOT A DEALER IN FLATTERY.

African Native Gave Straight Answer to Straight Question.

The negroes of Africa are simple and direct in speech. It never occurs to them, writes Dr. R. H. Milligan in "The Jungle Folk of Africa," that the purpose of language is to conceal thought; and to commiserate the African for his color is a waste of sympathy. In illustration of this Mr. Milligan gives an amusing conversation with one of his pupils.

One day, when I was talking to Bojedi, something in the course of the conversation prompted be to ask him whether he would like to be a white man. He replied respectfully but emphatically in the negative. I wished to know his reason. He hesitated to tell me; but I was insistent, and at last he replied:

"Well, we think we are better looking."

I grasped when I thought of the vastly full-looking faces I had seen in the jungles, and in apology for myself, I said:

"But you have not seen us in our own country, where there is no malaria, and where we are not yellow and green."

He quietly asked what color we were in our own country, to which I promptly replied, "Pink and white."

Looking at me steadily for a moment, he remarked:

"Well, Milligan, if I should see you in your own country I don't believe I should know you."—Youth's Companion.

IN THE TEETH OF HURRICANE.

What Sailorman Meant When He Told of an Adventure in Force 10.

Doubtless there were many puzzled readers when a deep-sea skipper rolled into this harbor a few days ago and reported that his ship had been belated by a gale which had piped up to "Force 10." "Force 10," it was explained, meant something like a hurricane.

It is a term borrowed from the Beaufort scale, a scheme of wind measurements devised by the British admiral Beaufort, for use in the days of sailing steam. Force 1 was a calm, force 2 a light breeze, and so on up the hurricane velocity.

Perhaps, too, the Beaufort scale may give a clew to those who have been wondering for months at the title of a popular German picture. It is just one expanse of frowning cloud and storm tossed billow, and the artist has named it "Windstarke 10, 11."—New York Sun.

On Being Happy.

Pleasures are more beneficial than duties because, like the quality of mercy, they are not strained, and they are thrice blessed. These must always be two to a kiss, and there may be a score in a jest; but wherever there is an element of sacrifice, the favor is conferred with pain and received with confusion. There is no duty we so much underrate as the duty of being happy. By being happy, we shower anonymous benefits upon the world. A happy man or a happy woman is a better thing to find than a five-pound note. He or she is a radiating focus of good will; and their entrance into a room is as though another candle had been lighted.—Robert Louis Stevenson.

Bibulous Prisoner Punished.

In one of the Basque provinces of Spain there is a prison which opens the doors every morning and the prisoners go into the town for housework, gardening or some trade. Some act as commissioners. In the evening they quietly return at the appointed time to the prison, and the jailer most carefully identifies them before withdrawing the bolts for their admission. Once a prisoner ventured to present himself at the door of the prison in a state of inebriety, and the jailer refused to admit him. "To punish you," he said, "you will to-night sleep out of doors." And the prisoner, it is recorded, in spite of tears and entreaties, was condemned to pass the night outside of prison!

Where Dante May Have Studied.

St. Edmund's hall, Oxford, Eng., is now the sole survivor of the original "halls" from which university life arose at Oxford. It bears the name not of the martyred Saxon monarch, but of Archbishop Edmund Rich, who possibly about 1219 delivered near this spot the first Oxford lectures on Aristotle. This legend once enabled the present principal to retort that if Dante really visited Oxford he might conceivably have studied at St. Edmund's hall, but not at Queen's college, which did not then exist.

Penalty of Firmness.

The comptroller of the treasury is an autocrat whose decision overrides even that of the chief magistrate of the nation. Some years ago the chief executive of the ofice refused to sign a warrant for money which Gen. Grant thought it proper to expend. "That is right," the president said; "I admire your firmness. Where your conscience is concerned, never permit yourself to be coerced. You may consider yourself clear in this affair, for I shall appoint a new comptroller to-morrow."

PROPERTIES ALL TOO COSTLY.

Actor's Strenuousness Cost Him Regard of Worthy Lady.

David Garrick was the part best loved by the late E. A. Sothern, and concerning his acting in this play an amusing story is told. He was recorded a "benefit" one night, and selected "David Garrick" for this comedy; it will be remembered, Garrick feigns drunkenness, and in the drawing-room at Ada Ingot's he disguets the guests at the tea table, and plays havoc with the tea service. Just before this scene is discovered that the stage manager had forgotten the necessary crockery, and a messenger was dispatched to a neighboring house to borrow some teacups, etc. The worthy lady applied to had heard of the fame of the great actor, and anxious to display her treasures, sent back her best china tea service, a family heirloom of great value. That night Sothern was playing with unusual energy, and very soon the precious porcelain was smashed in fragments all scattered about the floor. The old lady's indignation may be imagined, and to her death she maintained that Sothern must have been really drunk, "for no sober man would have smashed such lovely china."

$4,000 RETURN ON TEN CENTS.

Purchaser of Old Material Found Really Good Investment.

John Roberts of Watkins, Schuyler county, a well driller, recently purchased of Angelo Dupree, a junk dealer, an old pump for ten cents. It was apparently of no value, but he thought there might be some parts that he could use in his business. When Mr. Roberts and his assistant took the pump to one of the wells they were drilling and began breaking it up they were greatly surprised to see gold coins drop out of the holes they made. They at once finished the job, and found $4,000, nearly all in $20 gold pieces. Whom the pump belonged to at the time the money was hidden or how long it had been there, is a mystery. The latest date of one of the coins was 1858. Mr. Roberts at once deposited his find in the Farmers' and Merchants' bank at Watkins. He is willing to surrender the find to anyone who can prove ownership, but no claimant has yet appeared. The junk man will make a memorandum to examine the inside of every old pump before disposing of it at any price.—Utica (N. Y.) Press.

An Unsavory Charity

In all the cafes and beer halls of Germany a large canister is placed on a table in the center of each establishment. Every time one of the guests lights a fresh cigar he gets up and deposits in the canister the end of the one he has just been smoking. This receptacle is a sort of alms-box with a funnel-shaped lid, secured by means of a padlock. A charitable association supplies all places of public resort with these boxes for the purpose of collecting odds and ends of tobacco, cigarettes and cigars. The produce of the sale is devoted to the purchase of clothing, which is distributed among poor children at Christmas. The charity is believed to be the most malodorous and unsatiitary on record.

Benefit of Gymnastics to Golfers.

On the subject of gymnastics and golf Capt. Hutchison, who holds a gymnastic appointment in the Coldstream Guards, reports: "While actually going through the various hours' daily work in the gymnasium I found that the heavy work was certainly detrimental to golf. But I think that it eventually proved of the greatest assistance, as it strengthened the muscles of the wrist and forearm, which play such important part in all golfing strokes. I found it necessary to shorten my swing a little, and took to the overlapping or Vardon grip, two changes that certainly improved my game."—London Standard.

His Qualifications.

Traveling along a country road a revenue officer was attracted by frightful screams coming from a house not far from the road. Tying his horse he ran to the house and found that a little boy had swallowed a quarter, and his mother, not knowing what to do, was frantic. The revenue officer caught the little fellow by the heels, and, holding him up, gave him a few shakes, whereupon the coin dropped to the floor. "Well, mister," said the grateful mother, "you certainly know how to get it out, and I'll bet you a dollar" "No, madam," replied the official, "I'm a collector of internal revenue."

What He Meant.

An old sea captain was visiting a certain exhibition, and was greatly interested in the mechanical section, where a large array of steam whistles was on show. "How far can that be heard?" he asked, pointing to a huge "buzzer." The young man in attendance was only a deputy, but he promptly replied: "Sixteen miles." "Sixteen miles!" said the old salt incredulously. "When I was a boy," elaborated the youth, "I mean eight miles this way and eight miles that way."

Keep Your Eyes on the Ground.

In walking about the Australian gold fields it is always advisable to keep your eyes on the ground. You can never tell when you may step up a nugget—or fall down a deserted shaft.

From Tarragulla, a district that has been very prolific in valuable nuggets, comes news of a remarkable find. A man walking across the fields picked up what he thought was a pebble. On it proved to be a nugget and contained £50 worth of gold.

FIRE APPARATUS BOUGHT

Combination Chemical Engine and Hose Wagon for East End House.

COMMON COUNCIL'S ROUTINE.

Closed Park Theatre Proprietor Wants Back Some of His License Fee—Other Matters.

The Common Council at its adjourned meeting Monday night purchased a combination chemical engine and hose wagon for the new east end fire-house, the action being taken through a resolution offered by Mr. Taylor, chairman of the fire committee, providing that the bid of J. Boyd & Bro., of Philadelphia, for $1,430 for such apparatus, be accepted. This will be a horse-drawn apparatus and will be ready by the time the new fire-house is completed.

Thomas Murphy, owner of the property where the Park theatre is located, and which was conducted as a moving picture place, asked the Council to refund him a portion of the $150 paid as a license on January 1, inasmuch as the theatre was closed. The matter was referred to the finance committee.

The contract and bond of the Watching Stone Company, for furnishing curbing with curbstone and crosswalks during the coming year, was referred to the corporation counsel for approval.

The League of American Municipalities, through its secretary, notified the Council that its annual convention will be held at Montreal, Canada, August 25-29, and requested it to be represented; also to join the league. This was referred to the public affairs committee.

The annual request of Winfield Scott Post, No. 73, G. A. R., for $150 in connection with which to observe Memorial Day, was referred to the finance committee. J. B. Conklin, who was a call-man in the fire department and who was recently appointed a clerk in the post-office and has moved to the borough presented his resignation and the same was accepted. The release of Harry Dencklau, upon the payment by the city of $30, for injuries to a horse, was filed.

The offer of Alexander Milne to equip the new East End fire-house with electrical apparatus, automatic doors, etc., for $104 was accepted and the contract ordered signed. This action was taken through a resolution offered by Mr. Taylor.

Councilman Clark called up the amendment to the ordinance to license inns and taverns, which imposes a fine of $20 for each violation instead of $100 and sixty days, and it was adopted on second reading and ordered advertised. The change is made so that police can arrest persons before the city magistrate, instead of permitting them to go before the county court.

Upon motion of Councilman Glonk, chairman of the street committee, the ordinances providing for the opening of Stelle avenue, from Madison avenue to Union street; Mariners place and the improvements of certain streets were adopted on third reading and await Mayor Fisk's signature.

WESTFIELD'S "BAD BOY" AT IT AGAIN.

Tony Maratio, the 8-year-old bad boy of Westfield, who robbed Cassey's drug store shortly after 12 o'clock on the morning of April 2, and who was given in custody of his parents until the town officials had decided what to do with him, broke into Councilman Schmitt's bakery, on Broad street, Sunday night.

He watched the police and seeing the coast clear got into the bakery through a rear door. He tried the safe in the store and fixed the combination so that Mr. Schmitt could not open his safe yesterday morning. He tapped the till for less than $2 and took a quantity of candy and Easter eggs.

The police thought it was one of Tony's jobs and promptly rounded him up, finding part of the stolen goods in his possession. He was taken to jail and paraded along with his father as if he were going to a circus. Spankings and iron bars long ago failed to scare this youthful burglar. Judge Toscey committed Tony to the county jail to await the action of the Juvenile Court. The authorities determined that the boy could not be kept in control by his parents, and that something must be done to keep him from running at large and stealing.

HOPE'S MINSTRELS GREAT

Amateur Talent Presents One Rattling Good Burnt-Cork Show.

TOPICAL SONG A SCREAM.

Interlocutor and End Men Are Clever—Chorus Work Exceptional—To Be Repeated.

A merry melange of minstrelsy, a pot-pourri of topical songs, "coon" dialect, clever semi-circle cross-fire of jokes, and some real acting, interpolated by the rattle of the minstrel "bones" and the tinkling crash of cymbals marked the launching of the Hope-Chapel Minstrel show on a three-night run at the chapel auditorium last night. The young men of the chapel have announced that the proceeds of the entertainment, to be repeated tonight and Friday night, will be "devoted to the organ fund," but if the show continues to draw the packed house that greeted the burnt-cork entertainers last night, that organ will be paid for and there will be enough left to equip a full brass band for the chapel. The show reflects Judge William N. Runyon from curtain to curtain, but, like all Hope chapel affairs, "everybody helps," so the credit for the success must be divided up.

It's a real cohanesque production, all right, for the curtain is an American flag and the company is dressed in white sailor suits, some with red and some with blue collars. Benjamin W. Evans, the interlocutor, wears an Admiral's uniform, and the company sings "The Star-Spangled Banner" just before that grand-old-flag curtain drops at the end of the first part.

There are four choruses and six solos in the first part, and spattered through this music is a choice assortment of minstrel wit. The song hit of the production is probably Clyde Doane's topical song, "That's a Thing That's Awfully Hard to Understand." The music and words are by "The Judge," and the singer got eight encorse last night. Here's how some of it sounds:

"Why is it the Public Service don't obey the law?
That's a thing that's awfully hard to understand.
Why is it that they can do whatever they see fit?
That's a thing that's awfully hard to understand.
Does His Majesty, McCarter, own the streets as well as tracks,
Does he think we are so easy he can shove it up our backs
Or is it because our Common Council is so lax?
That's a thing that's awfully hard to understand.

"What's the use in having censors to pass on all the shows?
That's a thing that's awfully hard to understand,
For they've never done a single thing, that anybody knows.
That's a thing that's awfully hard to understand.
They're dandy fellows, one and all, but every single man,
You'll notice, is a special friend of "Billy" Counihan.
I don't believe Bill worried much since all the fuss began.
That's a thing that's awfully hard to understand.

"How on earth can Charter Day be run without the aid of cash?
That's a thing that's awfully hard to understand.
How can folks, on wind alone, expect to make a splash?
That's a thing that's awfully hard to understand.
It a people who are running things don't want their efforts lost,
They had better get together now, no matter what the cost,
Or its ten to one, I sadly fear, the thing will be a frost.
That's a thing that's awfully hard to understand.

"Will you tell me why the Board of Trade and Merchants have their spats.
That's a thing that's awfully hard to understand?
Why on earth do they keep fighting like the old Kilkenny cats?
That's a thing that's awfully hard to understand.
First we hear from Mr. Marshall, and believe his tale, of course,
Until the contradiction comes from genial Mr. Force;
And then we don't know where we're at, it's simply horse and horse,
That's a thing that's awfully hard to understand."

William J. Firstbrook started the palms beating by his song, "Ephriam Johnson," and calmed the enthusiasm by repeated encores. The

Y. W. C. A. EXHIBITION A CREDITABLE AFFAIR

The exhibition given by the millinery dressmaking and embroidery classes of the Y. W. C. A. yesterday afternoon and night proved to be one of the biggest successes of the season. The classes under the direction of Misses Edith Capron, Amy Lough and Isabelle Scarborough, exhibited some fine specimens of work which were highly praised. Miss Lulu Weigman, of the embroidery class, had twelve pieces of fancy work that were much admired.

In the evening "Mrs. Jarley's Wax Work" show was the feature. Miss Anna May Campbell, as Mrs. Jarley, was particularly funny. Misses Anna Mackey and Helen Southard, dressed as two French clowns, sang a number of French songs. Misses Ada Stark and Anna Martin, of the Glee Club, sang a couple of comic songs.

The hit of the entertainment were Misses May Chamberlain and Nettie Blank, of the cooking school. Miss Chamberlain, as the sandwich man, kept the audience laughing, while Miss Blank took off the medicine man to perfection. Misses Elizabeth Becker, Edna Green and Bessie Conroy of the gymnasium class, gave some fine exhibitions of gymnastic work. At the conclusion of the entertainment refreshments were served.

IMPERILED TRAIN SAVED BY DE GROFF'S FIREMAN

The firemen, Percy Woolley, son of Baggagemaster George Woolley, of the Newark branch of the Jersey Central, was the real hero of the wrecked P. and R. fast train at Hamilton Saturday.

Young Woolley, like his father, is a well known resident of Roselle, where he is much honored for his bravery. He once broke his toe in the tender of a locomotive in Jersey City and fired his engine from New York to Philadelphia and return before caring for the injury.

On Saturday, while No. 5?? was running over thirty miles an hour at Hamilton, a rod broke and crashing into the cab broke both legs of the engineer, Fred DeGroff. Woolley was in the tender and saw his engineer hanging out of the cab window. The loose rod finally ripped the cab away and DeGroff fell to the roadway.

Realizing the danger the train was in, Woolley climbed over the tender of the locomtive and hanging down between the tender and the first car, uncoupled the air pipes. The train ran for nearly a half mile, when it finally came to a standstill. The driving wheels of the locomotive still spun around and kept going until the steam ran down. Nearly two inches of the rail was worn down before the wheel finally stopped.

Woolley then went back, found his engineer and helped place him upon a train for Trenton, where DeGroff was placed in a hospital and died. It was a sad parting between Woolley and DeGroff on the way to Trenton. They had run together for over a year. Percy Woolley has been a fireman on the road for the past eight years.

SUPPER AT HOLY CROSS

Women's Guild Hold Affair in Honor of Rector G. A. Warner's Birthday.

OTHER CLERGYMEN PRESENT.

The Birthday Cake Bore 21 Candles and Was Presented to the Genial Pastor.

Rev. George A. Warner, rector of Holy Cross church, had a birthday yesterday, and in observance of the event a "Rector's birthday supper" was given at the parish house in the evening under the auspices of the women's guild of the church. It proved a highly successful affair, and about $100 was realized as the net proceeds of the affair.

Mr. Warner was the guest of honor, and as a surprise to him, the three other local Episcopal church heads appeared to dine with him—Rev. E. V. Stevenson, of Grace church; Rev. Morgan Ashley, of St. Stephen's, and Rev. Charles Townsend, of the Church of the Heavenly Rest. Each clergymen had a dainily decorated table to themselves, massed with flowers, and their places were marked with novel initial place favors. Mr. Warner was the recipient of many birthday gifts from the members of the parish.

On a platform at the end of the supper room stood a mammoth birthday cake, baked in honor of the occasion by the women of the parish. The cake bore twenty-one small candles and a large one in the centre, and the parish statistician figured out that this must be a fifteen candle-power light. As the clergymen finished their supper, the candles were lighted, and the cake was afterwards presented to Mr. Warner.

The supper-room was lavishly decorated with cut flowers and potted plants of all sorts, and purple and white were the predominating colors, wisteria being used with a pleasing decorative effect at the end of the room. There were twenty-one supper tables, daintily decorated and presided over by young women of the church and Sunday-school as waitresses. The menu follows:

Consomme, olives, radishes, oyster patties, roast lamb, mint jelly, green peas, boiled ham, browned potatoes, chicken salad, wafers, cheese straws, cafe almonds, ice cream, peppermints, wintergreens, birthday cake, coffee.

Mrs. J. Oscar Stevens was chairman of the general committee in charge of the affair, and was assisted by various women of the parish, including Mrs. Samuel Townsend, Mrs. J. H. Carman, Mrs. Frank Allen, Mrs. Langford, Mrs. Coddington, Miss Perry and the Misses Davis. During the evening, Mrs. Juan Babcock sank several soprano solos, which were keenly appreciated.

VIOLATED EXCISE LAW?

Charges Against Dept. Store Drivers Not Based on Ordinance's Provisions.

FOUR HEARINGS TOMORROW.

Prosecution Believes that Interstate Commerce Rights' Defense Will Fall Flat.

That the sales were actually made in Plainfield, in prohibited districts and by persons not licensed to sell will be the contentions of the prosecution when the cases against the drivers of New York department stores are heard before Judge Runyon, sitting as a committing magistrate tomorrow. With one exception, the four defendants, who are out on $200 bail each, are employed as drivers by metropolitan stores which without paying any license fee here have conducted a regular traffic in liquor at wholesale.

It has become known that the counsel for the defendant drivers will attempt to prove that the arrests constitute a flagrant interference with interstate commerce rights and that the sales themselves were in law made in New York. The prosecution, however, it is reported, claim that any contention regarding the inter-state commerce law will not hold, for it will aim to show that the drivers have made it a habitual practice to take orders here and to receive the money when the goods are delivered here the following morning. Contrary to general belief the arrests were not made for a violation of the local excise ordinance, but were made on instructions from the prosecutor's office, it is reliably reported, for a violation of the second section of the Werts act.

Aside from the Werts act, however, it is said that the police supply the necessary testimony for the prosecution. To make out a prima facie case sufficient to warrant the defendants being held to await the action of the grand jury. The Tyler "saloon zone" ordinance enacted by the city fathers three years ago prohibits even the application for a license to sell liquor except in a restricted territory known as the business section. All the sales in question were made outside of this zone, in what is known as the purely residential section.

That the crusade started here by Mayor Frank will become a statewide effect has become known. Elizabeth, it is said, is only waiting for the local cases to be referred to the grand jury, as it is generally believed because of their importance that they will, before it takes similar action. Bayonne as well as some of the coast communities are also considering similar action.

A report is being circulated today that an advice of the affected department stores, the drivers' counsel will probably waive a hearing tomorrow in order to have the matter tried in the county court and then on appeal in the Federal courts. The prosecution, it is rumored, laughs at this line of campaign declaring that no question of Federal jurisdiction is contained in the actions.

Miss Gertrude Townley Entertains.

Miss Gertrude Townley, of Grandview avenue, entertained a number of friends at her home last night. The evening was spent playing games, after which dancing was enjoyed. During the evening there was a musical program, when Athol Newman, known as the "Coon Caruso," sang effectively "Drink to Me Only With Thine Eyes," to the pleasure of all present. Among those present were the Misses Bertha Cooper, Edith Bentley, Edith Mager, Edna Hyatt, Bessie Wyckoff, Hazel Williams, Ella Barrett and Messrs. Stutsman, Bentley, Jackson, Smalley, Newman, Murphy, Nash, Kuenstler and Cooper.

DEFENDS SUNDAY BALL

Professor Scudder, Who Lectured Before Local School Teachers, Won't Retract.

A HARMLESS RECREATION.

Opposed to Sunday Ball By Professionals, New Brunswick Pedagog Says It's a Good Game For Boys.

Declaring that baseball playing on Saturday is not an evil if the game is indulged in purely as a recreation by amateurs and not for profit or fame, Professor Jas. I. Scudder, head of Rutgers Preparatory School at New Brunswick, has issued a statement supporting, with certain limitations, his statement in a lecture before teachers of the city and borough schools given in the North Plainfield High School last week.

"Of course people will differ as to what constitutes proper observance of Sunday," says Dr. Scudder, "and views will vary all the way from the strict, Puritanical conception to the loose and undesirable European view. Let us hope that the great majority of the American people will always stand unwaveringly by the principle of maintaining one day in seven when order and decency shall be practically triumphant, when the secular shall be entirely subordinate to some form of recreation in the open air whether it be a stroll into the country, a ride in a carriage or automobile, a swim, a row, a game of golf or of ball. Of these, baseball, as being the most popular and the most available of our sports is naturally the most prominent and has thrust itself before the public with offensive notoriety. Each season it comes up in acute form we might say in a form more acute than ever before. Has not the time come when this entire subject must be looked squarely in the face and carefully discussed by Christian men to the end that what is threatening to become a national element of a community instead of being left to take care of itself (which would be disastrous) or left to be exploited for selfish gain by the disorderly element of society, the shoddy sports, the gamblers and lawbreakers?

"In regard to playing ball on Sunday, it must be maintained that professional baseball, and match games between trained teams, local or foreign, should be frowned down at the moment. Nor should school boys or college boys play ball on Sunday. Opportunity to play during six days is plenty enough for anybody. As for rounding them up into ball nines and attempting them to play on Sundays, the proposition is on the very face of it, manifestly absurd.

"An entirely different question comes up in connection with Sunday ball when we consider those who are confined during the entire week in shops, stores and other industrial enterprises. Here there will be differences of opinion amongst good people, but even many of the clergy admit that the question is fairly and squarely an open one. Put the question this way to a man: 'Suppose it were in your power by a turn of your hand to secure legislation forbidding it; would you dare turn that hand?' Some, of course, undoubtedly would, but many would hesitate and refuse.

"As a matter of fact the game of baseball, whether we desire it or not, is becoming firmly entrenched as a form of Sunday recreation.

"And as a matter of fact, too, a large number of boys and of people not closely confined during the week do actually play on Sundays and unfortunately this number is increasing.

"Shall ball players be left to themselves, unsupervised, or shall the game be permitted under adequate supervision? Unsupervised sports, plays and games always become a menace and give rise to hoodlumism and endless abuses. It is only when reasonable restrictions as to place, time and supervision are instituted that recreation, plays and games can be made the wholesome activities in society. This is the very essence of the modern playground movement.

"This question, like so many other civic problems, is not one that can be passed unnoticed by law abiding and Christian people. To decide between absolute repression, or restricted and supervised permission is the momentous question. If it is avoided by Christian men and women and if they shirk their share of responsibility in administering suitable laws, our Sabbaths are certainly in danger and the moral welfare of the American people threatened."

—Mr. and Mrs. John J. Swan and daughter have removed from Cynwyd, Pa., and are stopping temporarily at Truell Inn until the house on Watchung avenue, leased by Mr. Swan, is ready for occupancy.

WILL TAKE HIS BRIDE TO LABRADOR MISSION

Mr. and Mrs. John Seymour White, of Elmira, N. Y., have issued invitations to the marriage of their daughter, Miss Helen White, and William H. Webster, of Central avenue, this city. The ceremony will take place at the home of the bride's parents, 369 West First street, Elmira, on Tuesday night, May 11, at 6 o'clock. The couple will return to Plainfield the following day and on May 15 will leave for Labrador, where they will join Dr. Wilfred T. Grenfell in his mission work among the deep sea fishermen.

There is a bit of romance about the approaching wedding, that is of interest here. Miss White was for sometime a pupil nurse at the Muhlenberg Hospital Training School, and it was during her stay here that she met Mr. Webster. Prior to Miss White leaving Plainfield five months ago for her home, because of a breakdown in her health, the engagement of the couple was announced to a few intimate friends.

Mr. Webster, who has been a resident of Plainfield for three years, is a native of Ireland, and was educated in an English university. He is engaged in business in New York as an expert chartered accountant. During his residence here he has been active in the religious work at Hope chapel, being a teacher in the Sunday-school.

ATWOOD WELDY'S TRIAL NOW NEARING THE END

At the close of the second day yesterday at New Brunswick of the trial of Atwood Weldy, charged with the murder of his brother, Allen Weldy, on October 17, 1908, the defense had finished, with but one more witness to call. Justice Bergen announced that the case must be finished today even if he has to hold a night session of court.

The expectation that the State's case of circumstantial evidence would be strengthened by the testimony of Annie Neilson, of this city, who has posed as Mrs. Atwood Weldy, was dispelled today, when she went upon the stand. She was unable to state definitely at what hour Weldy returned to his home the night of the murder.

Mrs. Jacob Weldy, the mother of the boy on trial and also of the one murdered, took the stand yesterday afternoon for the defense. She testified that Atwood never seemed to have any more bitter feeling against Allen Weldy than the other brothers had. Allen frequently with all the brothers, she said, borrowed $5 but was cut off with $1 in his father's will.

"LITTLE WORKERS FOR LITTLE PEOPLE" TO ENTERTAIN.

Shellabarger; vice president, Mildred Miller; secretary, Louise Patterson; treasurer, Margaret Miller, and the other members are Katharine Shellabarger, Helen Irons, Helen Terry, Margaret Tyler, Julia Taylor, Lucile Stewart, Sadie Sandford, Mary Warren, Betty Wallace, Susan Barnhardt, May DeForest, Mary Beaton and Eleanor Beard.

A World Editor's Address.

Charles A. Selden, of the editorial staff of the New York World, delivered an address at the Plainfield High School this morning. He spoke of journalism generally, pointing out the opportunities in that line of pursuit. The speaker explained the methods by which the great dailies of New York are conducted.

"The Wine of the Puritans."

Van Wyck Brooks, of this city, has recently published a book in England entitled "The Wine of the Puritans." It is an attempt to interpret Americans to Englishmen, and will probably be republished in this country. Mr. Brooks is connected with one of the New York publishing houses.

Mrs. Dobbins to Speak.

Mrs. M. C. Dobbins, superintendent of work among the soldiers and sailors, will have charge of the W. C. T. U. meeting tomorrow afternoon. She will present news from Captain George Benn and his mission yacht and other items will make the meeting an interesting one.

WANTS SHARE OF ESTATE

Sister Files Caveat Against Probate of Mrs. Emma F. Ege's Will.

LEFT $10,000 TO CHARITY.

Wm. F. Arnold Remembered For His Services As Financial Adviser—His Daughters Also Get Bequests.

Mrs. Louise Worthington, of New York, a sister of Mrs. Emma F. Ege, who died at Truell Inn, this city, on March 7, will contest the will, having attempted to prevent its admission to probate by filing a caveat. The contest will be made on the grounds that Mrs. Worthington was ignored in the will. Most of the estate, personal and real, was left to William F. Arnold, who was named as executor and who was Mrs. Ege's financial adviser for many years, while the residuary estate is given to be divided equally between two daughters of Mr. Arnold.

Shortly before her death Mrs. Ege gave Mr. Arnold the handsome residence which she was building for her occupancy. At the same time she executed a codicil to her will revoking a number of legacies. By this change the Children's Home will receive $4,000 in addition to the $1,000 previously given and Muhlenberg Hospital will also receive a like amount in addition to $1,000 given to the latter institution. Prior to her death she gave Warren chapel a handsome new organ costing about $2,600 and for that reason left the chapel nothing additional in her will.

Before her death Mrs. Ege gave explicit instructions as to the disposition of her property, both real and personal. It is said that she had spoken to her sister, Mrs. Worthington, but once since 1900. The latter is reputed to be worth about $100,000; is about seventy years of age and has two daughters, who are also interested in the effort to break the will. Among the bequests by Mrs. Ege were those to two cousins residing in Trenton. So far as known they have not joined in an effort to break the instrument as drawn at the direction of Mrs. Ege.

L. V. F. RANDOLPH SAILS FOR HOME TOMORROW.

Former Mayor L. V. F. Randolph, of East Front street, who has been touring Mediterannean countries for the past nine weeks, will sail for home from Genoa tomorrow. He and his wife will be passengers out the North German Lloyd liner "Konigen Luise," on which they crossed at the start of the trip.

Mr. Randolph writes of his enjoyment in touring Algeria, Southern Italy and Sicily. The party spent Holy Week in Rome, attending services at St. Peter's. From Rome they went two weeks ago to Perugia and made their way to Genoa, stopping for several days at Florence and Pisa. Mr. Randolph reports that his wife's health is much improved by the trip and says he has been enjoying every minute of it.

N. P. H. S. Dramatics.

The members of the junior class of the North Plainfield High School are rehearsing a three act comedy entitled "Pro Tem," to be given some time next month. The place has not yet been decided upon. The rehearsals are under the direction of Miss Agnes Crander, teacher of history, and those in the cast are the Misses Dorothy Randall, Stella Kline, Marjorie Cooley and Helen George and Messrs. Preston Dunning, Allan Overton, Leon Zeglio, William Geise and Fred Becker.

WANT TO LIVE ALWAYS?

Mrs. S. F. Marsh Has the Prescription for Perpetual Existence.

"Dreams are actualities, just as our waking incidents are. The subconscious mind is most active by us when we close our eyes and rest our bodies and the conscious mind. We are all more asleep when we are walking about and exercising than when we lie quiet at night." So says Mrs. Caroline S. F. Marsh, director of the New Thought church movement at Aurora Grata Cathedral, Brooklyn, who gave a lecture on "The Mystery of Sleep" at the Babcock building, Friday night.

The speaker, in this connection, declared to her audience that anything and everything can be done with thought, and explained the power of consciousness, sub-consciousness and super-human consciousness with the statement that every man is what he makes himself. Mrs. Marsh is a real live New Thoughtist all right, and came to this city from Brooklyn last night with Mrs. E. Timmerman, who plays the piano, to show Plainfielders how to grasp the truth and live forever. It is estimated that only a dozen people attended the lecture, but there is to be another talk next Thursday night at the same place. As a speaker, Mrs. Marsh is well worth hearing. She says she is a grandmother, but so powerfully has her sub-conscious mind been at work to keep herself free from care that she doesn't look as if she was even married. She says she doesn't believe she'll ever die, but adds that when the time comes for her, she'll go to another plane where she can be of more service. Mrs. Marsh is willing to heal Plainfield people, too, if they'll pay $5 for absent treatment and a dollar for visiting treatment. Perfect health and New Thought was for sale last night, and there was a collection.

With its key-note "Cheerfulness," the New Thought theory is essentially a subjective religion. It follows closely the Greek ideas of Hedonism, but has incorporated some bold ideas about eternal earthly life and healing. Its fundamental principle is "God is all," and this statement is just as true, New Thoughtists declare, however you may juggle the three words. Everyone is a part of God and one with God, and the essence of God, in everyone, comprises the religion. The religion is primarily a religion of rest, universal love, and a subjective attitude of cheerfulness, brought about by praise.

It is a "one-generation religion," for it was first "realized" in 1868, and for a time, Mrs. Mary G. Baker Eddy, now dead, was the head of the Christian Science church, was a disciple. Its founder was a Massachusetts physician, one Dr. Evans, and he with Phineas Quimby, a Vermonter, worked out the subjective happiness idea accomplished in the teachings of Socrates, Aristotle and Jesus Christ, and called it "New Thought." Mrs. Marsh says that there are now a million believers, centered principally in Brooklyn, Chicago, Denver and California in this country, with a large following in England and Australia.

Mrs. Marsh says that the Christian Scientists can't believe in their original theory that God is all because they deny the body. New Thoughtists don't set themselves against the churches, and believe that Christians and Jews alike are fine people, but mislead. The lecturer quoted freely from the Bible during her entire talk, and the book, with its meanings trimmed to suit the New Thought movement, is the keystone of the religion.

Some of the statements made by Mrs. Marsh in the course of her lecture follow:

"Our translation of the Lord's prayer starts: 'Our progress, which is Heaven, hallowed by thy name,' because we believe that the word "father" means "further," or "furthering," that is, "progress."

"Self is the 'great judgment seat' mentioned in the Bible. We are just what we makes ourselves, and we can control our future.'"

"We are not reformers. If you want to drink, why drink. You sink to a lower plane by so doing, but if you don't like that plane, you can rise again. You are all-powerful."

"Heaven, like God, is a condition. Bad is only a lesser good. The great God is yourself, and everything in the world is good, for good means God."

"No one need ever die. I can stop arterial bleeding instantly without touching the person. I do not heal anyone. I make you heal yourself. Soon it will be an insult to say that he is sick. He's got the power to be well, if he wants to."

"Where it says in the Bible, 'Be ye lifted up, ye everlasting doors,' it means ye everlasting doors. Man improves himself by doing, and goes from one plane of thought into a higher one."

"In the next world we'll be known by color. Red means physical and some of us will be green, yellow or the richer violet and purple, which show the highest mental development. This is all based on science. We'll meet our friends in the next world, but they may be of a different color, on a different plane. We can make them raise themselves or we can change our color by going to their plane. It all rests with self."

"New Thought says to everyone: 'Stand still and think of what you are. Make up your mind what you want to be, and be that.'"

"The English language is so mixed up by poor word meanings that it isn't any wonder that we don't know what we're talking about."

At the conclusion of the lecture, an opportunity was given for questions, and at the request of last night's audience, Mrs. Marsh will talk on "The New Thought Healing" next Thursday night. Mrs. Timmerman played several piano selections, and acted as accompanist while Mrs. Marsh sang two New Thought hymns: "Open My Eyes" and "Fulfillment."

MEMORIAL WINDOW IN FIRST M. E. CHURCH

A beautiful window, "The Ascension," has been placed in the First M. E. church by James W. Jackson, in memory of his father and mother. The inscription at the base of the window reads: "To the Glory of God and in loving memory of James Jackson, Died Dec. 19, 1882. Susan E. Jackson, Died April 5, 1887." Just above the inscription appears the verse, Luke XXIV: 51, "And it came to pass, while he blessed them, he was parted from them, and carried up into heaven."

The composition of the window is remarkable for strength and simplicity. In the foreground are the eleven apostles, with faces that are filled with adoration and wonderment at the glorious figure of Christ above them. The color scheme admirably interprets and supplements the arrangement of the figures. In the foreground, rich reds, dull blues and greens. Above the head of the Christ, a golden radiance that makes ethereal His ascending form and the draperies that enfold him. The blending of color in this window is most remarkable, demonstrating the bold freedom that is wonderfully successful when practiced by a master, and by a master only.

The window was designed and made by the Duffner & Kimberly Co., of New York.

Smith—Connelly.

Miss Mary A. Connelly, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Connelly, of East Fifth street, and Joseph F. Smith, of New York city, were married at St. Mary's church, at 5 Wednesday night. The ceremony was performed by Father Smith, of Nesbit, Pa., a brother of the groom. The bride, dressed in a traveling suit, was attended by Miss Theresa McGinley. The best man was Joseph Noell, of Wilkesbarre, Pa. After a wedding supper had been served at the bride's home, the young couple left for a short trip. Upon their return they will make their home in New York city.

COUNTY C. E. CONFERENCE

Elizabeth and Roselle Endeavorers Attend Local Workers' Meeting.

MISS N. K. FOOTE PRESIDES.

Rev. John Y. Brock Makes an Address—Group Conferences as a Feature.

Under the auspices of the Union County Christian Endeavor extension committee, a conference of *Endeavorers was held at the Seventh-*Day Baptist church Thursday. There were about fifty members present representing the societies at Hope and Warren chapels, First Presbyterian, Park Avenue Baptist and Seventh-Day Baptist churches. Miss Nellie K. Foote, district secretary, who was in charge of the conference, led a delegation of seven Endeavorers from Elizabeth.

The conference opened with a song service in charge of Miss Mildred Greene, president of the Seventh-Day Baptist church society. This was followed with a prayer by Purdy F. Benedict.

The feature of the meeting was an address by Rev. John Y. Brock, pastor of Trinity Reformed church, who was introduced by Miss Foote. He took his text from Philippians 3 13-14: "Brethren I count myself not to have apprended, but this one thing I do, forgetting those things which are behind, and reaching forth unto those things which are before, I press on toward the mark for the prize of the high calling of God in Christ Jesus." Mr. Brock's theme was "The Ideal of the Christian Endeavorer." He offered a number of valuable suggestions for consistent Christian Endeavor work. He said, that the Endeavorers should forge what has been accomplished in the past, whether good or bad, and work together as a body in doing any and all good possible.

Mr. Brock said that the Endeavorers should press on, show signs of activity, or progress; of a willingness to work hard and unselfishly for the cause for which they are committed. He spoke of stagnation, inactivity and lack of forgetting those things which are behind, and reaching forth unto those things which are before, I press on toward the mark for the

CAPT. BREEM DROPS DEAD

Well Known Resident Succumbs to Heart Failure at His Borough Home.

WAS A NATIVE OF HOLLAND.

After Abandoning Life at Sea, Aged Man Became a Painter and Decorator.

Captain Paul Breem, of Somerset street, a well-known resident, aged seventy years, dropped dead in front of his home Thursday, from heart failure. At the time he was stricken he was coming down stairs to meet a carriage which his son had sent for him to make a call. He had just reached the bottom of the stairs, when he gave a short gasp and fell on the sidewalk, which is close to the door. Passers-by were attracted and they hastened to assist the aged man.

In the meantime calls were sent out for a physician and Dr. C. A. Gesswein was the first to respond. An examination showed that the man was dead and beyond help. He pronounced death due to heart failure.

Captain Breem was a native of Holland and came to this country when eleven years of age. For a number of years he followed the sea as a sailor, later becoming captain of a sailing vessel. Later he learned the painting trade and followed it for many years.

During Captain Breem's residence in Clinfield, about fifteen years, he was engaged at his trade for himself and local firms. He was an expert decorator as well and some of the finest work in that line in the city was executed by him. Captain Breem's wife died about six years ago and since that time he has lived alone in a few rooms at 30 Somerset street. He is survived by two sons, Frederick Breem, who for many years was employed in the fire department as a driver, and William Breem, also of this city.

MAJOR-GENERAL CASLER TELLS OF S. A. WORK

Giving a most interesting outline of the work of the Salvation Army in this country and abroad during the forty-four years since its organization by General Booth, at Mile End Waste, Whitechapel, England, Major-General George F. Casler, of Newark, spoke at Salvation Army hall Thursday before a large audience. His talk was illustrated by stereopticon views, and during the lecture three vocal selections were rendered by Mrs. Casler. The speaker took for his subject "Forty-four Years of Salvation Army Work," and told of the spiritual, rescue, slum and social work of the Army, and of its steady growth since organization.

At the conclusion of the lecture, a life-sized painting of Christ on the Cross was unveiled by Captain S. A. Hewitt, of the local corps. The painting is the gift of Christopher Thorp, of West Front street. Major-General Casler made a few remarks, accepting the painting in the name of the local corps and tendering thanks to the donor for his gift. At the unveiling, the hall was darkened and the stereopticon lantern turned on the painting, producing an excellent effect.

ORCHESTRAL CONCERT GIVEN AT PARK CLUB

The fourth concert, given by the pupils of Harry W. Weber's National School of Music, took place at the Park Club Thursday before a large and enthusiastic audience. The orchestra, consisting of about forty pieces under the direction of Mr. Weber, did remarkably well, and rendered the program in a manner that reflected much credit to both teacher and pupils. The audience seem to appreciate that Mr. Weber has pupils of marked musical ability.

The program consisted of twelve numbers, each being rendered in a manner that received a hearty applause. The most appreciated number was the concert zither solo, played by Mr. Weber, while Carl Eisenman's "Fanchon" and "Morean Caprice" were the best rendered by the pupils. The cornet trio, "Mighty Lik' a Rose," by Nevin, and played by Messrs. H. W. Weber, Arthur Lolzeaux and Charles Englehard, received much applause.

After the concert there was a dance given by the pupils.

LAST TRIBUTE PAID TO MRS. ELIAS H. BIRD

The funeral of Mrs. Ella Staats Bird, wife of Postmaster Elias H. Bird, was held at 2:30 Thursday afternoon from the late home on Sandford avenue. There was a very large gathering of relatives and friends, filling the house to its utmost capacity. Prior to the service, twenty-seven employes of the local postoffice, including letter-carriers and clerks, called at the home in a body to view the remains out of respect to Mr. Bird.

The services was conducted by Rev. John Y. Broek, pastor of Trinity Reformed church, who based his remarks on the last sentence in Matt. 14: 12, "Went and Told Jesus." After offering an earnest and fervent prayer he spoke beautiful words concerning the life of the departed, recalling her words of Sunday last that she was tired and wanted to go home. He referred to her quick transition from an earthly to a heavenly home. TOURED ROOSEVELT'S ROUTE THROUGH AFRICA

After having spent six months in roaming about much of the country which Theodore Roosevelt has mapped out as his route, Robert A. Suffern, of North Plainfield, returned Friday from an outing in Africa. The trip was taken solely for the benefit of his health and Mr. Suffern is home again bronzed in face and apparently physically benefited.

The North Plainfielder declined to discuss his journey, but gave it as his opinion that Mr. Roosevelt runs a great risk of contracting the dreaded fever while in the jungles. He added that the disagreeable experiences of the hunt will be many and that the former President will not find things as pleasant as he may anticipate. The people generally are when he left for home they were eagerly awaiting the coming of the "great white chief," who appeared to be the general topic of discussion.

Mr. Suffern is the junior member of the firm of A. S. Suffern & Son, of New York, his partner being his father.

BRETHREN ARE DIVIDED

Paul Loizeaux to Represent Local Congregation at Peace Conference.

Paul Loizeaux, of Brook avenue, who is one of the leading members of the meeting of Christians, sometimes referred to as "Plymouth Brethren," whose place of worship is at East Front street and Bank place, will leave on Saturday, May 1, for Western-Super-Mare, in the South of England, where there is to *be an important gathering of mem*bers from both this country and England.

The object of the meeting is to adjust vital points of difference which have existed between the members in this country and those in England for a great many years. One of the chief points of dissention is that for years the members in England were of the belief that the Holy Spirit was only possessed by certain Christians, while in this country the members believe that every Christian alike possesses the Holy Spirit. This difference results in an ecclesiastical division and then followed a number of side issues which only tended to keep the members apart and prevented a Christian unity that has long been desired by the members in this country.

During the past few years there has been an effort made to bring all the members together and as a result a meeting has been arranged and will be held at Western-Super-Mare commencing on Wednesday, May 2 and will continue for a considerable time. At this meeting all points of difference will be thoroughly considered in a spirit of reverence and prayer, solely with the idea of effecting Christianity unity.

There are two or three meetings in this city, a difference existing as to church discipline. Those who meet on East Front street believe that while they constitute an independent body of Christians, they are accountable in a way to all Christians of similar faith. Those who meet on Liberty street believe that they are not accountable to anyone but themselves and rather resent the idea of being called to account by others of the faith. It is possible that the meeting to be held abroad may result in bringing all the members of this country, as well as abroad, together, in one large Christian body and that is one of the things hoped and prayed for by the Christians.

Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Fawcett, of Rockview avenue, leave today for England to attend the meeting to be held at Western-Super-Mare and take part in the conference.

FATHER MILLER TELLS OF MIRACULOUS SHRINE

Rev. William H. Miller, pastor of St. Joseph's church, the borough, addressed the faculty and students at Mt. St. Mary's College, Wednesday, it being the first of a series of lectures for the spring term. His subject was "The Miraculous Shrine of Lourdes." Father Miller's portrayal of the life and character of Bernadette, the little peasant girl to whom the Mother of God appeared, was surely a great treat to all his listeners.

Father Miller displayed great knowledge of his subject. Episodes from his pilgrimage to Lourdes a few years ago, aptly worded and related naturally gave an added realism which was apparent to the audience. At the conclusion of the lecture, Father Miller presented medals to the students, which had been given him by the brother of Bernadette and blessed at the shrine of "Our Lady of Lourdes."

George J. Bosterie, of this city, who will soon finish the course at New Brunswick Theological Seminary, applied for examination for admission to the ministry, and it was decided to meet in special session, at the call of the clerk, to examine the applicant.

It is of stucco the material being left in its natural color, while the cornice and trimmings are of ivory white. The roofline is of glazed tile of a pleasing shade of green.

The main auditorium has a seating capacity of three hundred. This is connected with a Sunday-school room thirty feet square, which can be opened into the main auditorium. Under the direction of the retiring organist and choirmaster, William E. MacClymont, Mendelssohn's oratorio, "Elijah," was rendered by sixty voices at Grace Episcopal church Thursday. The edifice was filled by a congregation of music lovers. E. church's vested choir, and others.

The soloists were Miss Grace Carroll, contralto soloist of the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church, who rendered "O, Rest in the Lord;" Mrs. Theodore Mantz, soprano soloist of the Grace church choir, who sang "Hear Ye, Israel;" William Tallamy, tenor of Grace, who contributed the two solo parts "If With All Your Hearts" and "Then Shall the Righteous," and Arthur Chamberlain, basso of Grace, rendered "Lord God of Abraham" and "It Is Enough."

Dion Kennedy, of the Brick Presbyterian church, New York, was the organist. The vocalists were assisted by an orchestra of five pieces from Elizabeth.

Hall, of Fanwood, jumped off an Arlington and Kearny trolley car on East Fourth street, opposite the railroad station at 1 o'clock Friday afternoon landing in a trench six feet deep and received injuries which necessitated his removal to the hospital, in the police patrol. The lad was considerably bruised, scratched and shaken up, while physicians thought there might be a slight concussion of the brain.

Young Hall was on his way to the railroad station and had signalled the conductor to stop opposite the station park. He rushed to the rear platform and before the car stopped jumped off and landed in a trench which had been opened in the street for repair work.

Lawrence Lawritzen, of this city, was the motorman of the car and P. Durr, of South Bound Brook, the conductor. They were taken to police headquarters and released on their own recognizance. The lad's condition is not considered serious, although he will be detained at the hospital for some days.

Bullet Barely Misses Chauffeur.

John J. Ring, a chauffeur of the Newark Board of Works, had a close call while speeding his machine through Fifteenth avenue, that city, yesterday, when a stray bullet crashed through the glass wind shield and whistled close to his head. Ring said "he saw no one in the vicinity at the time," but believed that the bullet came from a cellar.

ADVOCATES SUNDAY BALL

Rutgers Prep. School Says Boys Should Be Allowed to Play on Sabbath.

SPEAKS ON "BOY PROBLEM."

Every Whipping Given Child Is for Parent's Fault Declares M. T. Scudder.

Addressing the teachers of the city and borough schools gathered in the auditorium of the North Plainfield High School Thursday afternoon, Myron T. Scudder, principal of Rutgers Preparatory School, of New Brunswick, delivered an excellent address on child training in the schools which was entitled "The Boy Problem," and he showed how the boy could be aided to reach the most efficient state of manhood by training in the home, the school and the church.

"In training the boys of the present day," the speaker said, "we should aim to inculcate the will-power, instead of employing moral suasion. By this, I mean that we should try to make the boy do right because he clearly sees that it is the right and fair thing to do, and does it for his own free will."

The speaker said that he thinks school discipline is too rigid, and tends to crush rather than train character development, an important feature of school life. Leniency with a pupil, he claimed, brings out his bad points so that a teacher can more easily correct them. The speaker said that in his opinion military schools are inefficient for just this reason. There is a different attitude toward the child today than there was years ago, and Mr. Scudder presented figures to show that juvenile crime in increasing, saying that license was brought about by too much liberty." In speaking of corporal punishment, he said that every whipping given a boy is for the parent's fault, because the parent should be able to train the boy to do right for the love of it.

The New Brunswick principal is an advocate of Sunday baseball for boys. "I come of a family of ministers for a hundred years back," he said in this connection," but if I could stop Sunday baseball by a wave of my hand, I don't believe I'd wave my hand. The boys of a town should be organized into ball teams, in charge of grownups, and should be allowed and encouraged to play Sunday. At the Yale Divinity School the students are urged to go out each Sunday and, if not play ball with the boys, at least umpire their games."

"Sunday can be made a great deal more enjoyable and beneficial for boys. Religion is the most important concern of life, I believe, but few of the Sunday-school methods of today can't hold the interest of a boy. The lessons should be made interesting by the teachers, and there should be talks on manners and customs, and maps of the countries and study courses that will allow the pupil to find things for himself, instead of 'be taught.'"

A strong advocate of manual training and gymnastic work for growing boys, the speaker said that the will power is best developed by training of the muscles, stating that up to the age of twenty years, the muscles of the average boy develope thirty-fold, while the brain develops but three-fold. He said that to get the best results, there should be but little effort made to train a child's mind until after he reaches the age of twelve.

In concluding his remarks, Mr. Scudder emphasized the duty of parents and teachers in the development of a boy. "There are 10,000 murderers and 10,000 drunkards published in this country every year. We grownups are making these criminals for the next generation, if we don't train the boys right." The New Brunswick principal made the address at the invitation of Dr. Henry M. Maxson, superintendent of the city schools.

A mass meeting in the interest of Walker Institute, of Augusta, Ga., was held Thursday night in Reform Hall. There was a large attendance of interested people. Rev. F. D. HORSE GOES A MILE WITH BROKEN NECK

One of the most unusual incidents of a steeplechase occurred at the meet at Cedarhurst, L. I., Saturday afternoon, when Charles W. Fisk up on "Midlothian," and Rufus Finch up on "Bounder," were thrown in one of the big races, both being injured. Mr. Fisk had two ribs broken, while Mr. Finch's collarbone was fractured, as told in The Daily Press yesterday.

The remarkable thing about the accident was that when "Bounder" stumbled and fell, throwing his rider, the animal broke his neck, but immediately afterward regained his feet and ran a distance of a mile to the finish, taking all of the hurdles and other obstacles, and then fell from exhaustion.

Mr. Finch was assisted from the field by several friends and in the meantime others were looking after his horse. The animal, after he fell a second time, was unable to get up and an examination by a veterinarian showed that his neck was broken and at the request of the owner he was shot.

The performance of the horse was probably never equaled before, and it attracted great attention on the part of all horsemen present. After the animal was killed Mr. Finch had the neck preserved and brought to the home of his parents on Park avenue, where it has been the object of much curiosity. The break in the neck was a clean one as though cut with a sharp axe. The horse's tail was also preserved, while some enthusiastic spectators at the track secured the animal's shoes as remembrances of "Bounder's" notable achievements.

This was "Bounder's" first appearance in a steeplechase event, although he has frequently been in Watchung Hunt Club classes. The animal was seven years old.

JOURNALISTIC OPINIONS

Down With the Signs.

The Governor has approved the Eppinger bill, and it is now a law. It prohibits the display of all great, gilded signs over the places in which liquors are sold, and brewers' trademarks are also to be eliminated from over saloon doors and in saloon or liquor store windows. No alluring pictures will be permitted in the doors or windows or on the outside of saloons, so the passer-by who wants a drink will have nothing to guide him excepting the name of the man, firm or corporation running the saloon.

Two questions have been raised with reference to the law. The one is, whether it referred to old signs already in place, or merely prohibited the erecting of new ones. The act reads: "It shall be unlawful to display" any signs, etc. This covers both old and new. The other question is, whether such a law is constitutional; whether a man has not a right to erect any sign he pleases on his own premises. The Governor evidently thinks that there are no constitutional privileges inhering in the liquor business. He decided this point in practically so many words while a Supreme Court Justice, and has not changed his views.

If, then, these glaring signs can be prohibited over saloons, why may they not be suppressed in other places? What, for example, is to hinder the next Legislature from enacting that the great, glaring, obtrusive liquor signs now scarifying the landscape all along the railroads in the State, shall be peremptorily removed? If such signs are bad in one locality they are bad in another. If they are harmful over saloons they are harmful out in the open country.—Newark News.

REV. DIGGS RETURNED.

A. M. E. Church Conference Makes Appointments.

The annual conference of the A. M. E. church, Jersey City, was held Monday night, when the pastoral appointments for the year were made. Rev. J. T. Diggs was returned for another year to the A. M. E. Mt. Zion church on West Fourth street, his congregation having extended the invitation.

Rev. H. C. Ashley, formerly of this city, but in New Brunswick, last year, was sent to Long Branch, and Rev. A. A. Collins, of Gouldtown, was sent to New Brunswick. The conference was considered the best in the history of the church. The invitation to meet next year was with the Methodists A. M. E. church, Camden was accepted.

PARADES' ARRANGEMENTS

Charter Day Celebration Committee Plans for Three Demonstrations.

General Parade, Automobile Parade and Firemen's Parade—A Mummers' Frolic Too.

Definite plans for the daily parades which will be a feature of the Charter Day celebration to be held July 5, 6 and 7, were made at the meeting of the parade committee held at the office of Secretary Hetr, of the Board of Trade, Monday. J. Hervey Doane, chairman of the committee, presided. George Ballantyne was elected secretary.

As Monday, July 5, will be a holiday, the parade on that day, marking the commencement of the celebration, will be started at 10 o'clock in the morning. This general parade will form on East Seventh street, with the right resting on Watchung avenue, and the various divisions forming in the intersecting streets. The float division, which will comprise numerous elaborately decorated floats in charge of the various lodges and societies, will form with East Seventh street, and, according to reports as to the number of floats to be entered, the line will extend nearly to Woodland avenue.

The big automobile parade will be held the afternoon of Tuesday, the second day of the celebration, starting at 2 o'clock. The motors will form for the parade on West End avenue, the right of line resting on West Front street. Elaborately decorated automobile floats will be a features of this parade, and the line of march will be a long one, comprising probably about ten miles through the principal streets of city and borough.

Wednesday, the last day of the celebration, will be the "Big Day," for in the evening the celebration will end with a Mummers' Frolic, when grotesquely costumed men, women and children will parade the streets, throw confetti, agitate tickelers and make lots of noise. On this day, too, there will be a big parade of the firemen. The fire fighters will be in line with all the apparatus that can be spared and the line will start at 2 o'clock in the afternoon from Front street and Watchung avenue. A feature of this parade will be the appearance of fire companies, with their apparatus, from various nearby cities and towns. Already a list of fire companies to be invited has been made out, and these include the companies from cities within a hundred miles of Plainfield.

The committee has not definitely decided upon the line of march for the parades, but the routes will be arranged to include the principal business and residential streets of city and borough. It is planned to appoint parade marshals in the near future, and these will be in full charge of the parade each day of the celebration. This committee of marshals will complete the arrangements for the parades and will jointly decide upon the line of march each day.

The matter of arranging for the erection of grand stands has been left with the citizens' committee, of which Mayor C. J. Fisk and Mayor Townsend are the joint chairmen. The parade committee at its meeting last night recommended that the reviewing stand be located on Park avenue, between the railroad bridge and Fourth street.

The parade on the last day will include a delegation of the city and borough police as a special feature, although there will be police sections in each of the daily parades, according to the plans of the parade committee. On the night of the Mummers' Frolic, however, no policeman will be allowed at large, but the entire force, both city and borough, will be locked up in their respective headquarters.

Y.M.C.A.'S EASY VICTORY OVER DUNELLEN'S TEAM

The Y. M. C. A. baseball team easily defeated the Dunellen A. C. Saturday afternoon, at the latter's grounds by a score of 8 to 3. The home team put up a miserable game allowing the Association nine to make the majority of runs on errors. The batting of the visitors was exceedingly heavy, three men getting two base hits. Peacock and Russell pitched for the Y. M. C. A. and Harney for Dunellen.

The Y. M. C. A. showed a weakness both at shortstop and third base, Schoonmaker and Lolreaux each making three errors. Burns made his first appearance with the winners and put up a good game.

WARREN'S APPRECIATION OF WILLIAM P. DUNN

In appreciation of his faithful services for several years as a pianist and also as a teacher of the Young Men's Bible class, two handsome volumes were presented to William P. Dunn at the Sunday-school session at Warren chapel on Sunday. Words of praise for his fine work at the chapel were spoken by Rev. J. O. McKelvey, pastor, and Joseph W. Gavett, superintendent of the Sunday-school, and best wishes for his success when he enters the ministry were expressed.

After the session nearly everyone remained to bid farewell to Mr. Dunn, who in the future will live in New York. Sunday was his last day at the chapel. Mr. Dunn, who has been the organist at the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church, was a prize student at Princeton University and a brilliant future is predicted for him. He is the son of Rev. Charles Dunn, whose parents, Mr. and Mrs. Solomon Dunn, reside on Park avenue.

Strait Case Dismissed.

The case against Freeman Strait, of Watchung, who was charged by Miss Anna Oglesby, of Long Island, with beating and overworking his horse last summer was called before Justice Snape on Thursday. Mr. Strait's lawyer and witnesses were on hand at the appointed time, but the plaintiff failed to appear. After waiting for a reasonable time Justice Snape dismissed the proceedings, the

CLINTON AVENUE WINS RATTLING GOOD GAME

The Clinton Avenue Baseball Club opened the local season, Saturday afternoon, at Crescent Oval, by defeating the Elizabeth A. C. by a score of 4 to 3. The game was not marked by any special features, in fact the weather was too cold to permit of good playing. It was bad enough for the spectators who sat watching the game, but the players in the grandstand, but the players suffered a great deal more from the cold.

The fans were interested in the work of Ortleb, the local's new pitcher, and he measured up to expectations. He held his opponents to two hits until the eighth inning, and allowed but five singles in the whole contest. He fanned seven batsmen and his work generally gave satisfaction, as did that of the rest of the home nine. The club undoubtedly has a stronger aggregation than last year and promises a good articles of ball. The score:

P. S. C. TO CO-OPERATE WITH UNION FREEHOLDERS.

The bridge committee from the Union County Board of Freeholders, of which S. P. T. Wilbur is the chairman, met representatives of the P. S. C. at Terrill road and East Second street,, Monday, to examine the culverts at that point. For a long time there has been considerable trouble there, the culverts not being of sufficient size to carry off the surface water. An arrangement was decided upon whereby the trolley company will co-operate with the freeholders in making the necessary changes.

At the next meeting of the board, Mr. Wilbur will offer a resolution authorizing the laying of concrete walks on the Prospect and Park avenue bridges in this city, replacing the present board walks. This improvement is practically assured.

WARREN BIBLE CLASS RECEPTION FOR TEACHER

The Women's Bible Class of Warren chapel, of which Charles Place is the teacher, arranged a social time for him and Mrs. Place at the chapel, Monday. There were nearly sixty women present, all being members of the class and a delightful time was had. The class has one of the upper parlors, which was attractively decorated with American flags for the occasion. The evening was spent in playing all kinds of games and later all adjourned to another room, where refreshments were served.

The banquet room was tastefully decorated by Alfred Everett, the prevailing colors being lavender and white, while there was a profusion of violets. A feature of the evening was the presentation of a handsome palm in a jardiniere to Mr. and Mrs. Place. The presentation was made by Rev. J. O. McKelvey, pastor of the chapel, in which he praised Mr. Place for his faithful service. In response, Mr. Place referred to his service of nine years as teacher of the class as being the most pleasant in his life and he expressed the hope that the cordial relations would continue. There are seventy-three women enrolled in the class.

The committee in charge of last night's affair comprised Mrs. Benjamin Moore, Mrs. Allen Green, Mrs. A. J. Stiglitz, Mrs. William Bacon, Mrs. Gibson Smith, Mrs. William Newmiller and Mrs. Theodore Martin.

DR. HARRISON THANKS TRINITY CONGREGATION

Dr. Paul W. Harrison, an interne at the Massachusetts General Hospital, Boston, who has been selected to do missionary work in Arabia as a result of an effort made by Trinity Reformed church, is highly pleased over his prospective work. Trinity has raised over $1,000 to enable him to labor in the foreign mission field. In a letter addressed to Rev. John Y. Brock, Mr. Harrison says:

"It was with a full heart that I read your letter. I hope I may prove myself worthy of the confidence you all have in me. I have some idea of the sacrifice such a splendid response means. As to a message I have nothing of my own. First Cor. 4:1-2 is all the message I have to send. The value of the trust given makes sacrifice a privilege. I will try and see if I can arrange to be in Plainfield some Sunday soon. I don't need to add that I should look forward to it with the greatest anticipation. With best wishes for you and the whole work in Plainfield."

Referring to the local congregation's effort, Rev. Dr. A. V. V. Raymond, of Buffalo, a former pastor, writes to a friend here:

"I am delighted with the response which Trinity church made to Dr. Zwemer's appeal, notice of which has just come to me in The Daily Press. You may imagine how gratified I am at this evidence of missionary interest on the part of the church which it was my privilege to serve at the beginning of its career of usefulness. I have never lost my interest in Plainfield, nor in Trinity church, and if you have opportunity, I hope you will offer my hearty congratulations to my good friends of Trinity."

ODD FELLOWS OBSERVE NINETIETH ANNIVERSARY

The ninetieth anniversary of the I. O. O. F., which occurred yesterday, was celebrated here Monday. Plainfield Lodge, No. 44, had over 100 guests including members of Queen City Lodge, No. 226, and delegations from the lodges at Westfield, Elizabeth and Rahway. The speaker of the evening was Past Grand Master Dr. Frank Crowther, of Perth Amboy, who dwelt on the history of the order and the good it is doing.

The first lodge, which was started in Baltimore ninety years ago, said Dr. Crowther, was a split of what was known at that time as the Manchester Union of England. Of the two hundred and seventy-six lodges in New Jersey every one is in perfect financial condition. The orphans' home at Newark is being well supported and is educating sixteen children.

Deputy B. I. Crosby, of Rahway, made a few remarks regarding the progress of the local lodge in district. At the close of the meeing a supper was served.

Against Sunday Land Sales.

Feeling that Sunday excursions conducted under the auspices of real estate interests tend to cheapen the character of the town as well as desecrate the Sabbath, the Westfield Board of Trade has taken a decided stand against Sunday excursions to the town. The prosecuting authorities of the town have been requested to prosecute all offenders to the fullest extent of the law. Sunday excursions were run frequently from *New York to Graceland, by a Grace*land promoter.

PLAINFIELD'S AERIE HOLDS ANNUAL DANCE

Local Eagledom got in the big ring of the social spot-light Monday night when Plainfield Aerie, No. 866, Fraternal Order of Eagles, held its annual dance at Truell Hall. About a hundred local Eagles turned out for the affair, and the dance was declared to be the most successful in the history of the organization. There were sixteen dances on the card, including the Paul Jones, schottische and barn dance, and the music was by Suhr's Imperial orchestra. Refreshments were served at about midnight and the dancers did not leave the ball room for their homes until well along toward morning.

Horace O. Adams was chairman of the committee on arrangements, and Rudolph Kampf and Hugh Reilly comprised the floor committee. The reception committee was composed of Arthur G. Adams, Edward J. McCann and Harry H. Coddington.

COUNTRY CLUB SEASON WILL OPEN SATURDAY

Everything is in readiness for the opening of the active season at the Plainfield Country Club on Saturday. All departments will be formally opened that day and if the weather is favorable it should be an auspicious occasion. The summer greens are to be cut and rolled every day this week, and players will find them in splendid condition on Saturday, as the new grass has come up well and the turf is of a better quality than ever before.

John Duncan, formerly of the Ajawamis Club at Rye, has been engaged as superintendent on trial until June 1. If he gives satisfaction a permanent arrangement will then be made.

There will be golf and tennis competitions on Saturday and the schedules will be sent to the members before that time. There will be the customary weekly competition for the Spring and Fall handicap cups, in addition to many new competitions. A large number of handsome cups have been offered in competition.

A buffet luncheon will be served on Saturday, and on succeeding Saturdays, until the clubhouse extension is completed. Members desiring luncheon on Saturdays should notify the superintendent, if possible, later than 9 o'clock on the morning as the facilities just now are greatly restricted. Every effort will be made to give as good service as possible during the work of reconstruction; but the present accommodations will limit the service considerably.

The golf committee for the season comprises Willard Wadsworth, W. Lester Greeney and Roger F. Murray.

RANDOLPH RELEASED BY THE NEWARK CLUB

Clifford Randolph, of this city, who has been on the pitching staff of the Newark Eastern League Club, was unconditionally released Monday to the Williamsport Club in the Tri-State League. This announcement is somewhat of a surprise for as late as last week it was intimated that he would remain with the Newark club this season.

However, the Newark club is pretty well supplied with pitchers and Manager Wolverton believes that a season with a minor league club will do a lot for Randolph and put him in line for a steady berth in the future. The fact that Randolph was released unconditionally makes it appear that Wolverton wants a string on him so that in case he does need his services he can recall him at a moment's notice. It is understood that Randolph will join the Williamsport club at once.

VOGUE OF JET.

It is a little early to say good-bye to jet, since it has scarcely made a definite impression upon us yet, but already in Paris there is a feeling against it in the most exclusive quarters because of the sudden vast amount of popularity it has gained.

Jet as an ornament is most effectively worn by the woman of extremes in coloring. The beauty with very dark hair and a very carmine tinted complexion may on her very white throat wear a dog collar of sparkling jet, with one or the new chains of heavy jet beads to accentuate the snowiness of her shoulders.

The blonde may also wear it—that is to say, the extremely fair woman—but those of an intermediate coloring should not be close friends with the dense blackness of jet.

EXPOUNDS NEW THOUGHT

"Do Not Shun the Cult," Says Rev. George A. Warner of Holy Cross.

IT IS CHRIST'S TEACHING.

Religious Questions* Must Be Met Face to Face, Declares P. E. Rector.

Declaring that the fundamental principles of New Thought should be accepted and lived up to by every good Christian, Rev. George A. Warner, rector of Holy Cross church, upheld beliefs of the "new" sect in his sermon Sunday morning. "These followers of New Thought," said the speaker, "serve by the rehearsal of their beliefs to stimulate us in faith, and their claims on this point are sound and founded upon Bible teaching.

The rector's topic was "The Value of Temptation." "In these days of advanced thought and great scientific achievements," he said, "Christians are often puzzled over 'new' interpretations of the long-accepted Christian philosophy of life. 'New' religions and beliefs have sprung up in this generation—Christian Science, New Thought and the Emmanuel Movement. We should not shun these beliefs as fanatics because of the beliefs they hold. Their religion is Christianity only in that, perhaps, a freer interpretation of the Bible than we have been taught to accept. We should meet the questions face to face—not dodge them, and we should give them considerable deep thought.

"These New Thought believers claim that a man is just what he makes himself. And so he is. If we believe that we can be successful, or healthy, or particularly valuable in some field of work, why this faith will enable us to live up to our beliefs. Why it's the same truth that we read in the New Testament over and over again. Jesus Christ himself advocated just this strong faith as a means for accomplishment of desire. Don't then believe?" He asked, in miracles of healing. And we read the answer: 'Lord, I believe.' And when the cure was completed, we read Christ's words, 'Go, thy faith hath cured thee.' This New Thought truth, then, is Christ's own teaching, and as such ought to be accepted by us. It has its practical, every-day value in our lives, but it has remained for New Thought believers to set it before us. The man or the woman who suffers from insomnia, who tosses all night unsleepingly, for the sleeplessness is due to worry and nervous strain brought on by lack of faith. This same lack of faith causes some of us lots of suffering in other illness, real or fancied.

"People say to me: 'I don't like to go to these lectures on new religious movements, or read of the tenets of their followers, because I am afraid they will take away some of the props of my religion.' True Christianity is not strengthened by any 'props.' It is a religion of a thinker, and varies slightly according to the interpretations of the individual. We frequently read in the newspapers and magazines today of New Thought, Christian Science and the Emanuel Movement, and the average Christian sects base their religion on the Bible. We must not shut a thoughtful investigation of their principles.

"There are many disciples of New Thought today, and the thinking Christian must see that the religion is not fanatical by considering its followers. They are in every instance cheerful and healthy people, and theirs is a religion of faith. We must judge by results."

Mrs. Caroline S. F. Marsh, head of the New Thought center in Brooklyn, lectured at the Babcock building Friday night. Assuring a Daily Press reporter of the utter absence of antagonism to the churches, she said that clergymen of all sects were coming to realize the practical side of the belief.

"A Brooklyn minister told me the other day," she said in this connection, "that he frequently preached New Thought from his pulpit. He said that at the morning service, he had to keep pretty close to the old Christian beliefs of the church because he felt that some of the older members of the congregation might feel that a New Thought sermon would shake their long-standing ideas of Christianity; but in the evening, he preaches our tenets. The Christian church is going to keep pace with twentieth century advancement through science and philosophy, and this minister believes, as we do, that it will be merely a matter of time before New Thought is universally adopted." Mrs. Marsh will speak at the Babcock building Thursday night, when her topic will be "New Thought Healing."

THIRTY TAKEN IN RAID

S. P. C. A. Agent Rounds Up Crowd at Cock Fight near Scotch Plains.

SOME ARE SENT TO JAIL.

Fines Aggregate $250—Pit and Drinkables Are Found In Place.

Twenty-five constables under command of Lewis C. Teed, agent of the New Jersey Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals, swooped down upon a barn in Scotch Plains shortly before dawn Sunday and after a vigorous battle, in which cries of alarm, the dull thuds of clubs, revolver shots and shouts were mixed and mingled, captured thirty men who had spent the night watching game cocks armed with steel spurs in a series of cruel fights to the death.

From the moment they dentitely located the spot where the mains mains were to be held the agents of the society had left loophole in their preprations. In the raiding party was Justice of the Peace Albert P. Cain, of Springfield. Once the frightened prisoners had been corralled, Judge Cain held court on the scene of the carnage and with dead and crippled birds as certain evidence of the brutal nature and illegality of the affair, dispensed justice with that traditional rapidity which has made Jersey famous. Twenty-three prisoners from New York and New Jersey towns paid fines and costs of $12 each. Eight more of the prisoners, unable to rustle a roll of that proportion, were sent to the Union county jail at Elizabeth for thirty days each.

William Perrine, proprietor of the barn in which the affair with its sequel was held, unable to pay his fine of $100 and costs, was sent to jail for ninety days.

Admittedly the most successful raid of its kind ever negotiated by the S. P. C. A. in this State, the raid is deserving of detailed account. News of the big series of cock fights to be held Saturday night was noised abroad as early as Thursday *morning, when Colonel E. S. Ed*wards, State superintendent of the S. P. C. A., received a registered letter from a life member of the society which contained the tip that the mains were to be held in Union county. The writer had overheard a conversation in a restaurant which convinced him beyond a doubt that cock fighting was afoot.

Colonel Edwards lost no time. He summoned his faithful lieutenant, Teed, and with a cock fighting map of Union county the two endeavored to pick the probable locality where the bird battles were to be conducted. It was decided that either Scotch Plains, Fanwood or Westfield would be the chosen spot. Teed, with a number of assistants, looked over the three localities Friday and Saturday. One of the latter saw, Saturday night, small groups of men moving in the same direction along the Fanwood road. He followed one of these groups, and was led to Perrine's barn. Hurrying back to his superior officer he reported.

Teed came to Newark, gathered his posse of twenty-five men, notified Justice of the Peace Cain that he would be needed, and with his *fighting force in two large vans, ad*vanced as rapidly as possible toward the position occupied by the enemy.

It is believed the fight started about 11 o'clock Saturday night. One bout was in full swing at 5 o'clock the following morning, when the raiders reached the vicinity of the stable. Disembarking from the vans, they surrounded the barn, and began cautiously to approach it. It was growing light, and before any of the advancing party reached the door they were discovered by lookouts.

A shrill warning cry started all of the thirty-seven men in the barn toward the front and rear doors and windows. Several fierce individual battles were waged, in which the fugitives invariably came out second best. So great was the confusion that seven managed to escape. Five who got quite a distance on their way to somewhere else were captured and brought back.

Menaced by the drawn revolvers of the constables, the prisoners were quickly collected in one sorry group inside the meagrely-lighted stable. Then it was that one of the deputies discovered Perrine among the rafters.

Perrine was tried first, and fined $100 and costs. He could not pay and was sent aside for a trip to Union county jjail in Elizabeth. The following, unable to pay their fines, were made his companions: Hallett S. Perrine, James Connors, Jack Manning and William Connolly, of Fanwood; Robert Moore, William Foster and James Doyle, of Plainfield, and John Herder, of Westfield.

The twenty-one who were able to pay the fines and thus gain their liberty gave the following names, many of which are believed to be fictitious:

The fines aggregated $272. In each instance the charge of cruelty to animals was made against the prisoners. Colonel Edwards appeared in person as the prosecutor and Judge Toucey was summoned from Westfield to look after the interes's of the defendants.

Perrine and his eight companions were taken to the jail in one of the vans which had borne the members of the raiding party to the barn. In the raid Teed divided the command with Charles A. Sickles and Horace S. Miller, agents of the N. J. S. P. C. A.

In addition to the gamecocks captured the police confiscated the portable pit, in which the fights were held, the scales on which the birds were weighed in, a tally sheet, a double swinging lamp, which hung over the pit, several pairs of steel spurs, five cases of beer, three bottles of whiskey, crates, boxes and bags.

It had been known for a long time that mains were being conducted in Union county, but it was not until yesterday that this knowledge could be used to such distinct advantage by the officers of the S. P. C. A.

INJURED MACHINIST DIES IN THE HOSPITAL

Patrick Gore, a "punch runner" at the Levering & Garrigues Steel Works, who was fatally injured at the shop Friday afternoon, when a heavy casting fell on him, died early Monday at Muhlenberg Hospital, where he has been since the accident. The dead man's home was on East Second street, Bound Brook, and the body was taken there today for burial. He is survived by a widow and daughter. Death was due to internal injuries according to the statement of hospital physicians.

Gore' right arm and leg were crushed and mangled by the heavy weight, which pinned him between the truck from which it slipped and the wall. The arm was amputated at the hospital Monday, and the injured man stood the operation very well.

Gore is forty-three years of age. He has been employed at the Levering & Garrigues works for about six years, and was considered one of the most careful workmen in the shop.

SCOTCH PLAINS FOLK PLEASED BY "MR. BOB"

"Mr. Bob" was greeted with a capacity house Saturday night when he made a two hours' call at Excelsior Hall as the guest of the B. Y. P. U. of the Baptist church. During the entertainment the candy booth was kept busy and when the proceeds are figured a neat little sum will be realized. The entertainment was arranged for the benefit of the newly organized Sunday-school Athletic League, the amount netted will not be known for several days, but it is an assured thing that the new association will have a healthy treasury to start with.

The cast: Eugent Lidgate as Philip Royson; Henry Demarest as Bursons Clerk; Percy Mygrant as Jenkins; Miss Rebecca Lukes, butler; Mrs. Edward Johnson as Rebecca Lukes, servant girl; Miss Louise Mygrant as Katherine, her niece; Miss Lottie Conger, Katherine's friend; "Marion Bryant," Miss Margaret Demarest.

ATE DINNER PREPARED BY THE COOKING CLASS.

North Plainfield's Board of Education Monday decided that the over-crowded condition in the kindergarten department would necessitate short time in that department next year and therefore two sessions instead of one will be held. Before the meeting Mayor Samuel Townsend, Supervising Principal H. C. Krebs and the members of the board were given a dinner by the cooking class under the direction of Miss Ingersoll.

Bills aggregating $3,700 were ordered paid and the supply committee was instructed to purchase fuel for next year. An average increase of $25 was granted to all the teachers.

Korea.

Korea is about 600 miles long and 135 wide. It is very mountainous, and the climate is one of the finest in the world. Nine months in the year the skies are bright, and the winter is superb, with its extreme dryness, clear skies and crisp, frosty nights. From September to June there are no extremes of heat or cold.

Burglars at Fruit Store.

The fruit store of Aaron Bender, on Somerset street, was broken into Sunday morning between 3 and 4 o'clock, and about $5 worth of tobacco and candies was taken. Bender claims it was the third time his store has been entered by burglars.

THIS RUNAWAY CAUSED A LOT OF EXCITEMENT

After a wild ride behind a spirited team of horses down Park avenue, Saturday night, William Poland, who is employed by Harry B. MacDonald, a liveryman, was arrested on Somerset street by Patrolman Tobias Nolan. In the course of the trip, which the prisoner declares was a runaway, a rig belonging to James Melick was run into and damaged near Second street, and the speeding horses narrowly escaped injury by another collision near Front street, when a second rig was hit. In the wagon were three women and another man beside the driver.

Pedestrians on the crowded street were furnished with lots of excitement by the speeding horses, which were well managed by the driver, and were finally swung into Somerset street after a circus-like "S" turn behind a trolley car and around an automobile. Melick was in court, wanted a settlement for his damaged rig, declaring that the shafts, cross-bar and some spokes were smashed. The liveryman declares that Melick's fig was in pretty bad shape before the collision, and, while willing to repair damages, takes exception to some of the breakage, declaring it was not caused in the accident. City Judge Runyon has given the two a week to arbitrate repair charges, and next Monday morning will take a judicial hand in ruling just what the liveryman ought to pay.

Poland says that the horses were running away, having taken fright under the Park avenue railroad bridge. None of the occupants of the carriage was injured.

SATURDAY NIGHT SPREE COST 'EM $15. APIECE

When Patrolman Tobias Nolan appeared in the city court Monday with two prisoners, George Ferguson, of East Fifth street, and *Leonard Callaway, of Potter's Sta*tion, whom he arrested on Somerset street Saturday night, his lip was cut and swollen, and he told City Judge Runyon that Callaway had struck him in the mouth as he overtook the running pair to make the arrest. Nolan also says that a front tooth was loosened by the blow.

The arrest followed an attack by Ferguson on John Poland, who was knocked senseless by a blow in the jaw at Front and Somerset street by the man, who came out of a saloon. Poland sustained an ugly looking bruise on the jaw and was revived by Patrolman Vanderweg, who saw him fall senseless in the gutter. After striking the man, Fer*guson, with Callaway*, set off up Somerset street. Nolan gave chase and caught the pair just at the county line bridge. He says that Callaway swung at him and landed heavily on his jaw, jarring his teeth and cutting his lip. Both of the men had been in various saloons, and Judge Runyon fined them $15 apiece.

According to Ferguson's story in court, Poland, who is an elderly man, was on the war-path Saturday night, and came to his boarding-place to "clean him up." The two met in a Front street saloon and Poland, according to the prisoner's story, wanted Ferguson to come to a vacant lot and have a fight. Ferguson then met Callaway, and the *latter declares that he tried to pro*tect him and get him home safely. Callaway said in court that when he heard someone pursuing them on Somerset street, he thought it was Poland, and fearing that he would attack Ferguson (who, by the way, looks able to take care of himself) he pushed the man away. Noland, who was the man, says it was a knock-out punch, and momentarily stunned him.

MARRIAGE AND FAMILY CUSTOMS IN HAITI.

Haitian family life is as curious from our point of view that some mention of it is necessary in any discussion of Haitian manners and customs, although there is no space here to give this complex subject the consideration it deserves. As is pretty generally known, marriage, as we know it, is very little practised in Haiti. Indeed, it is almost unknown outside of what is called "In societe haitienne," which, so educated Haitians will assure you is "a rigorous guardian of the principles and, in certain respects, the prejudices of French education." Mothers are only addressed that their daughters be placed with some reliable man, preferably a young unmarried man who will take good care of them and their children. This custom, established by long usage, seems to them quite as natural and proper as our "engaging a governess." Without going into the final results of such a system, it can at least be said that it bestows certain temporary mercies—natural children are received on practically the same basis as legitimate ones, and no disgrace whatever attaches to motherhood without marriage.—Collier's April Fiction Number.

2 HURT IN STEEPLECHASE

C. W. Fisk and R. L. Finch Sustain Injuries at Cedarhurst L. I. Meet.

MR. FISK'S RIBS FRACTURED.

Finch's Collarbone Broken—Horse's Stumble the Cause of the Mishap.

Charles W. Fisk and Rufus L. Finch, representing the Watchung Hunt Club in the steeplechase meet at Cedarhurst, L. I., on Saturday, came to grief in one of the big races of the afternoon. Mr. Fisk had two ribs fractured, while Mr. Finch's collarbone was broken. The former was brought to Plainfield by Edwin S. Hooley in his big touring car. Mr. Finch returned in a train yesterday. He returned to his home on Waverly place, New York, last night, and will be detained from business for sometime.

The Plainfielders were on the homestretch and were about to take a hurdle, when the rider ahead of Mr. Finch was thrown just after his mount, "Night Hawk," stumbled going over the hurdle. Mr. Finch's horse tried to clear the hurdle and "Night Hawk," and fell in the effort, and Mr. Fisk followed close behind, causing both riders to go off in a ditch, with the result that they were injured. The horses were about winded and could not finish the race. Mr. Fisk was riding Fred Bull's horse, "Midlothian," while Mr. Finch was up on his own mount, "Bounder." The horses were not injured.

LECTURER PRESUMPTIOUS SAYS REV. DR. HERRING

During the course of a brief talk on "Music" at the First Presbyterian church Sunday night, the pastor, Rev. Dr. Charles E. Herring, took occasion to refer to the recent address of Mrs. Caraline S. F. Marsh on the "New Thought," an account of which appeared in The Daily Press on Saturday.

"I think it is the height of presumption on the part of any speaker to put his or her own interpretation on the Word of God,' said Dr. Herring. He took exception to Mrs. Marsh's statement that the word "father" means "further," or "furthering," that is "progress," declaring that the Scripture gives no such meaning.

As to the woman's statement regarding drink and that a person is "all powerful," Dr. Herring denied that a man is "all powerful" and as to her statement that "The great God is yourself, and everything in the world is good, for good stems God," Dr. Herring said that Paten, who has been cornering the wheat market must be a good man, according to her interpretation.

Referring to her interpretation of "Be ye lifted up, ye everlasting doors," meaning "Ye everlasting doors," the speaker said that no such meaning was intended by the Scriptural words. "Let us have high thoughts," said Dr. Herring, "but don't put interpretations on the Word of God not there."

Auto and Motorcycle Collide.

A motorcycle ridden by Arthur Olsepy, of 153 Avenue E, Bayonne, and an automobile driven by F. P. Spanker, of 57 Washington Terrace, East Orange, collided at North and Watchung avenues, about 4 o'clock Sunday afternoon. The automobile was but slightly damaged, chiefly a bent wheel, but the motorcycle was practically put out of commission for awhile. Neither Mr. Olsepy nor the occupants of the automobile were injured. Bystanders who witnessed the collision say that the motorcyclist was to blame

N. W. AYERS AND SONS FORTIETH ANNIVERSARY

Philadelphia, April 26.—The fortieth anniversary of the founding of the house of N. W. Ayer & Son, the leading advertising agency of the country, as well as the successor of the pioneer advertising agency, was celebrated Saturday night at the Bellevue-Stratford by a banquet tendered by the firm to upward of 500 guests, comprising their 260 odd employes and the most prominent men of the country in advertising circles journalism and immense enterprises and industries in commercial lines.

The immense second-floor ballroom of the Bellevue-Stratford, *beautifully decorated with a profu*sion of flowers, was taxed to its capacity to accommodate the large assembly. Perhaps never has there been a gathering so representative of the three forces which make advertising—the advertiser, the agent and the press. With the latter can be classed the exponents of that branch of advertising known as "out-door"—the billboard and the street car.

It would be impossible to conceive of a more fitting illustration of the growth of the advertising idea as a business—its importance as a factor in modern commerce.

The history of the firm thus celebrating its fortieth birthday is in itself a classic, recording advertising *progress in America. From its be*ginning the firm of N. W. Ayer & Son has blazed the way—evolved and improved methods and established the principles which have won for it a prestige and which, as a composite, have created the principles upon which the best in the entire advertising business is today conducted.

The guests at this notable banquet were seated at about nine great tables—one table running the entire length of the ballroom, and, projecting therefrom, eight prongs, each one over fifty feet long and accommodating over fifty guests. At the head table were the active members of the firm—F. Wayland Ayer, Henry N. McKinney, Albert O. Bradford and Jarvis A. Wood—together with the guests of honor.

Following the invocation the good things provided were heartily discussed. During the progress of the banquet, speech and pleasantry were indulged, entirely in an impromptu manner, rendering the occation still more social and familiar in its aspect. There was no formal program of speech-making.

At a given signal, James A. Buchanan, the dean of the businessgetting staff, rose in his place, and, catching Mr. Ayer's attention, in a very apt speech presented him with a massive sterling silver loving cup. Mr. Ayer, although taken completely by surprise, accepted the gift in a most felicitouos way, even though he found it difficult to express himself under the circumstances. This he veiled in a modest way. Miller, of St. Joseph church, in view of the fact that his mother is a communicant of that church. Everything possible will be done to put the boy on the straight path.

When questioned today, Comiskey told an entirely different story than that of yesterday. He said today that he and several companions of his own age "chipped in" and got a man to purchase a case of beer which they drank. They took the beer to the vacant lot on Harmount street, the boy said. In answer to a question Comiskey said he did not know the name of the man who purchased the beer for himself and companions.

Definite arrangements will be made at a meeting next month.

MISS NELLIE APGAR G. J. MORTON'S BRIDE

Miss Nellie Apgar, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Apgar, of East Front street, and George J. Morton, eldest son of Mr. and Mrs. John Morton, of Orchard Park, were quietly married at 5 o'clock Saturday afternoon at the home of the bride's parents. Rev. Dr. Charles E. Herring, pastor of the First Presbyterian church, performed the ceremony in the presence of about twenty-five relatives and intimate friends.

The couple was unattended and following the ceremony which took place in the parlor, a reception was held and congratulations offered. Afterward supper was served. The bride was gowned in white tissue crepe and she carried a bouquet of bride roses.

The rooms were attractively decorated for the affair with palms, ferns and daisies, the arrangement being especially effective in the parlor, where the large mantelpiece was banked with daisies. Mrs. G. J. Apgar played the wedding march.

After the reception the couple left for a wedding trip. They will be away a week and later will reside on Mountain avenue, near Watchung, where the groom has built a new home. Mr. Morton is associated with his father in the ice business and both he and his wife are well known and popular in a large circle of friends. The bride received a large number of gifts from relatives and friends.

PRIEST TO TAKE CHARGE OF YOUNG COMISKEY

Michael Comiskey, the sixteen-year-old boy, who was found in an intoxicated condition in the rear of a shop on Somerset street, Saturday night, was Monday turned over to Rev. J. O. McKelvey, of Grandview avenue, who, upon further investigation, decided to place the boy in the custody of Father J. Miller, of St. Joseph church, in view of the fact that his mother is a communicant of that church. Everything possible will be done to put the boy on the straight path.

When questioned today, Comiskey told an entirely different story than that of yesterday. He said today that he and several companions of his own age "chipped in" and got a man to purchase a case of beer which they drank. The first trial in the new Court House, at Somerville, Monday, resulted in a victory for Edward S. P. Bretherton, of Bernardsville, defendant in an action brought by John C. Gray, of New York. Bretherton was represented by Robert Gordon Cragg. This case Gray was represented by Kingsley Twining, of the firm of Lindabury, Depue & Faulks.

The action was brought to recover damages for an alleged breach of contract in conveying a farm at Bernardsville. Judge Van Syckel non-suited the plaintiff because he rescinded his contract prematurely.

CONTRIBUTIONS NEEDED FOR UNFORTUNATE MEN

The Board of Trade's delegates, who visited the Self Master Colony at Rahway are interesting the people of Plainfield to assist with donations and contributions for the Home. The family consists of poor boys and young men between 16 and 35 years of age who through intemperance, lack of employment discouragement are trying to make a new start to build themselves up physically, mentally and morally. They are put upon their honor, surrounded with home influence and kindly treatment and assisted to positions.

The lodge is non-sectarian and the young men work each day in exchange for clothes, board and small pay. They do everything, such as cooking, gardening, weave beautiful rugs, make by hand clever novelties and plain furniture, utility boxes for men and women, etc. Supported by voluntary contributions and sale of articles, subscriptions to Self Master Magazine, we need clothing, shoes, books, in fact anything is very acceptable.

Donations are collected at the People's Clothing Co. by Mr. Adelberg. There is need of money for tools, materials to help more young men who apply weekly and need just such a home temporarily or permanently. Money contributions sent to A. E. Force, president of the Merchants' Association, or A. S. Floyd, president and active leader of Self Master Lodge, 201 East Hazlewood avenue, Rahway, N. J. Telephone 159-W.

DRUNKARDS' GUARDIANS APPOINTMENT OPTIONAL

An examination of the official copy in the office of the secretary of State of the Hillery law for the appointment of boards of protectors for the prevention of drunkenness shows that there has been a misapprehension as to the exact provisions of the measure and that it is not such a drastic law as has been claimed. A certified copy of the law has been received by William R. Townsend, secretary to the mayor.

The general understanding has been that the law was compulsory and compelled every municipality to appoint a board of protectors to investigate drunkenness and proceed against drunkards or liquor dealers who sell to drunkards after being officially notified by mail not to do so.

The second official reprint copy of the bill which was last printed and was the copy under discussion in the Senate gives the provisions as here stated. The copy signed by the Governor, however, shows that the measure was amended at the last minute in the Senate and the amendment was not printed. In the first section of the bill the word "shall," which made the provision for the appointment of such a board compulsory in every municipality, was changed to "may," thus making it optional in every city and town.

As the law stands, therefore, not a city or town in the State need have such a board unless the governing body chooses to act in the matter and appoint one. Of course, if no board be appointed there will be no procedure whatever in the matter of drunkenness, and the whole proposition will stand as present.

In the copy of the bill approved by the Governor, the change from "shall" to "may" was made with pen and ink, and opposite the amendment on the margin are the initials "E. A. S.," this being the certification of Edward A. Sexsmith, supervisor of bills, that the amendment passed the Senate. In the rush of the last hours in the Assembly the fact that the change had been made escaped notice.

OSTEOPATHS WILL FIGHT FOR ACTION ON MEASURE.

Should the Governor decide to call an extra session of the Legislature an effort will be made to bring up for consideration the osteopath bill, House 101, introduced by H. Stacy Smith. The bill provides for the appointing of a State board of osteopathic examiners of five members, who shall organize and shall examine and license all persons who desire to practise osteopathy.

This measure, which failed to get through, has a large number of supporters, particularly in Essex county, and its adherents have announced their determination of continuing the battle for legal recognition.

The osteopath bill was before the House on third reading for several weeks, and since similar legislation has been enacted in Pennsylvania, it has been decided by the osteopaths that action should be taken by New Jersey to protect its people from those who have not qualified in neighboring States. It is understood that the State Medical Examining Board is now in favor of this bill.

George Schwartz, of East Front street, is improving from an attack of pneumonia.

"The Gay Life," Harrison Grey Fiske's production of Roy L. McCardell's comedy, began an engagement at Daly's theatre on Monday, April 19. It is a comedy satire of New York life of today, especially the frivolous, flashy life of upper Broadway. Yet back of the surface fun there is a deep moral lesson which teaches that after all the flashy life is only "Dead Sea." The play is based on Mr. McCardel's famous stories of chorus girl life which have appeared from time to time in different newspapers. The mere names of the characters depict comedy. There is Mama de Branscombe, growing old but still in the theatrical game; Amy le Branscombe, her daughter; Lulu, a chorus girl; Puss Montgomery, who marries a tightwad from Marieta, Ohio; Dopey McKnight, the continuous piano player always smoking cigarettes; George, the wine agent; Abe Wogglebaum and Louie Zinzlsimer, two friends of the chorus girls, and many other characters all members of their Bohemian circle. The play tells about a young stage-struck girl in a Pennsylvania town who is a drudge in a railroadmen's boarding house kept by Mrs. Lorrime; into this house comes a party of stranded show people, decidedly frayed out at the edges. Lulu goes with them to New York, partly from stage craze and partly to get away from the man she loves, who has just wounded her to the heart with an unjust suspicion.

Klaw & Erlanger's revival of "The Mascot" at the New Amsterdam theatre in New York is a big success, both artistically and financially. No doubt other managers will follow in the wake of the firm and make other revivals. "The Mascot," however, is the best of the old operas. Only an other, "La Fille de Madame Angot," would attract as much attention, but it is almost impossible to get a competent singer and actress combined for the leading role. "The Mascot" was written by Edmund Audran. It was first produced at the Paris Bouffes December 29, 1880. Edwin Jordan, of the firm of Jordan & Marsh, the builder of the Boston Opera House, was in Paris at the time and acquired the rights for the American production. He returned to Boston in the spring and submitted the book and score to Helen Grayson, of the Grayson-Horcross Opera Company, then playing Audran's "Olivette" at the Gaiety theatre, Boston. Mr. Jordan played the music in his rooms. The opera was accepted at once for production. A translation of the book and an adaptation of the score were made by I. W. Norcross. An orchestration was made by John E. Brahm. The original music

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Prayer Meeting Topic For the Week Beginning May 2, 1909.

By REV. S. H. DOYLE.

Topic—Life lessons from the book of Isaiah.—Isa. vi, 1-9.

The book of Isaiah! The mere mention of this literary masterpiece, this gospel of the Old Testament, which speaks of the birth of the Messiah, describes his life and pictures his crucifixion as if the author's words might have been historic instead of prophetic, should thrill us with reverence for his great genius as a writer, his noble consecration to God, and bring our own souls into closer touch with our Divine Lord and Saviour.

Isaiah was not the first of the prophets, but his writings are placed first because of their superior character to those of all other Hebrew prophets. He prophesied during "the reigns Uzziah, Jotham, Ahaz and Hezekiah, kings of Judah." These were times of great material prosperity in Judah, but great spiritual decline. In the first chapter of his book we find the moral and spiritual corruption portrayed as only a master of literature could do it. Human language could scarcely describe the awful conditions that prevailed. At this time also Judah faced captivity in Babylon. This fact gave Isaiah his great opportunity for seeing in the ultimate return of Judah the salvation of all through the Messiah, the Christ, the true "servant of the Lord."

The book of Isaiah may be divided into three parts:

First.—Prophetical, chapters i-xxxv. The main enemy of Judah in this part was Assyria.

Second.—Historical, chapters xxxvi-xxxix. These chapters contain a plain and simple history of the reign of Hezekiah.

Third.—Prophetical, chapters xl-lxvi. In this part Babylon is the chief enemy of Israel.

Both part first and part third are messianic in character. In part first the Messiah is presented as a mighty king and ruler. "Unto us a child is born, unto us a son is given, and the government shall be upon His shoulder, and His name shall be called Wonderful, Counselor, the Mighty God, the Everlasting Father, the Prince of Peace" (Isa. ix, 6, a passage from part first). Part second is that the Christ as a suffering victim, an atoning sacrifice, a meek and lowly Redeemer. The best illustration of this character of part second is found in Isa. liii, which should be carefully read by every Endeavorer in part preparation for this service.

In these prophecies of Isaiah great moral and spiritual truths stand out. He denounces sin and pleads for righteousness. At the same time he speaks almost like one of the evangelists in his references to Christ. His book has therefore been called "the fifth gospel." 1. Moral and political teachings. These pervade his book throughout. He calls upon Israel to cease to do evil and learn to do good. He declares that, though their sins may be as scarlet, yet they may be forgiven. He calls upon the sinner to forsake his ways and the unrighteous man his thoughts and turn to God, who Will abundantly pardon. 2. Denunciation of idolatry. In the time of Ahaz gross idolatry was practiced. Isaiah severely denounced it and saw it overthrown in the good King Hezekiah's reign. But it was restored under Manasseh. 3. He spoke of the coming Messiah and indicated His true character. This is the greatest value of his book and what gives it its highest standing. 4. Isaiah also declared salvation to the gentiles. As Paul was the apostle to the gentiles, Isaiah was their prophet. Frequent passages point to the time of coming to Mount Zion, and in direct language he emphasized his prophecy. Paul quotes Isaiah as saying (referring to chapter xi): "There shall be a root out of Jesse, and He shall rise to rule over the gentiles. In Him shall the gentiles hope" (Rom. xv, 12).

BIBLE READINGS.

Isa. i, 4-6; 16-18, ii, 1-3; iv, 22-24; ix, 6; xi, 1-7; xxvii, 1-7, 16; xxxv, 1-12; xl, 1-11; lii, 1-7; liii, 1-12; lv, 1-7.

Dr. Conwell's Societies.

In an interview in the Christian Endeavor Times Dr. Russell H. Conwell of Philadelphia, the successful pastor of one of the largest congregations in America, speaking of Christian Endeavor in his church, says: "We have no fewer than fourteen Christian Endeavor societies. They are doing a real practical service, meeting a need for prayer and song, but for definite work. For example, one society devotes itself entirely to a local mission, another to helping drunkards, a third to orphanage work, and so on. The church backs the societies up, and the latter are doing a valuable work in creating an interest in the various objects and thus getting the church as a whole interested. It is entirely due to Christian Endeavor that these agencies are thus taken up. I am convinced that our societies must work along this line if we are to keep alive. Mere meetings are not enough when there is such a vast field in which to work."

Work of Foreign Societies.

The south sea islands have some interesting Christian Endeavor societies. There are thirty-four in the Marshall and Caroline islands, and one of them meets in a church built all of whalebone and coral. In Samoa the Endeavorers issue a manual of their own in the Samoan language and have sold 5,000 copies of it. In the Loyalty islands there are 2,000 members, who gave $8,000 for missions last year. That average may well make some young Christians who do not live in the Loyalty islands feel ashamed.

The following petition was presented and read:

To the Honorable Board of Chosen Freeholders of the County of Union, N. J.

Gentlemen—We, the undersigned, residents and property-owners of the Borough of Roselle Park, N. J., do respectfully petition your honorable body to improve the conditions now existing on the county road of Westfield avenue, running through this borough.

The avenue has been nothing but a mud road during the past winter, and now we are having the benefit of three or four automobiles daily which the automobiles and winds are carrying through the air, and annoying the residents and pedestrians to such an extent as to render life in this vicinity. These conditions are a detriment to health, and a drawback to prospective property buyers and tenants.

Westfield avenue is one of the roads most used in the county, and is now and has been, in the worst condition of any county road in our county. The section it runs through is one of the fast-growing and developing sections of the county. When Westfield avenue shall be opened, the people of the county were assured that it would be one of the finest boulevards in the State.

We, the undersigned, pray and petition your honorable body to have repaired the macadam road and made dust proof, and also request that the Public Service Corporation to repair the road between their trolley tracks, which now is in a deplorable condition, dangerous for conveyances to cross, as the rails are three or four inches above the road in places.

Trusting that this petition will meet with your hearty approval, and be granted at the earliest possible date, we are

Respectfully yours,
WM. C. CLEVERIDGE,
JOHN C. BENDER,
ROBERT GORDON,
And 56 others.

On motion of Freeholder Swain, received and referred to the County Road Committee.

From John T. Earl as follows:

Union Township, Union County, N. J., March 29, 1909.

Aaron D. Crane, Esq., Member Board of Chosen Freeholders.

Dear Sir—I write you in behalf of myself and other property-owners residing on Morris avenue, in Union Township, between Cherry street and the Elizabeth City line.

During the past summer automobiles has become almost intolerable. As you know, most of the houses at that point are situated on the east side of the road, so that in the evening summer winds give us the full benefit of the clouds of dust thrown up by the large and ever increasing number of automobiles passing that way, most of them at high speed. I leave you to imagine the discomfort and annoyance to those who desire to sit on their front porches or even keep their front windows open on a hot day.

The terrific speed at which these vehicles are driven at this end of the township continualy arouses the indignation of us all (particularly those families in which there are small children), and this is an evil which we have come to regard as beyond the power of the authorities to cope with. However, what we would greatly appreciate is sufficient oil on the street to keep down most of the dust. I am therefore writing you in the hope that you will look into the matter, and if necessary, present it to the propery committee, or at the next meeting of the Board of Chosen Freeholders.

Once last summer Morris avenue was pretty thoroughly oiled above Cherry street, and also Cherry street from Morris avenue to the city line, but that little strip of roadway to which I have called your attention would have been neglected entirely had it not been for the interference of one or two ladies of the neighborhood, who, with some difficulty, induced the men to put some oil on that part of the street, so that it received a thin dressing. I am under the impression that this difficulty was due to a mistake on the part of the men interpreting their orders, but in order that we may get at least all that is coming to us this year under the regular ruling, and as we have no honorable body to see fit to give us, I have thought it well to lay the facts before you.

Thanking you in advance for your kind attention to the matter, I am

Yours respectfully,
JOHN T. EARL,
565 Morris avenue,
Elizabeth, N. J.

By Committee to Settle with the Sheriff:

To the Board of Chosen Freeholders of the County of Union.

Gentlemen—Your Committee on Sheriff's Account beg leave to report that the receipts from the Sheriff's office from November 15, 1908, to April 1, 1909, amount to $1,633.32, and the disbursements for the same period to $2,309.37.

Your committee further reports that it will be difficult to ascertain whether or not the Sheriff's office being on a salary basis has elapsed, for the reason that numerous items, which under the fee system were paid in, and Sheriff charged to the Court account, are not now paid to the Sheriff under the salary basis, so that there should be a considerable saving in the Court account by reason of the Sheriff being placed in a salary basis.

Very respectfully,
JOHN KRONE,
J. HERVEY DOANE,
E. K. ADAMS,
Committee.

On motion of Freeholder Smith, received and placed on file.

By Committee on Surrogate's Accounts.

By Committee on Fifth Avenue Bridge, Roselle, N. J.

Elizabeth, April 1, 1909.

To the Board of Chosen Freeholders.

Gentlemen—Your committee appointed to make an examination and report on the condition of the bridge over stream on Fifth avenue, near Spruce street, Roselle, N. J., would respectfully report as follows:

We have examined the bridge, and find the walls in very good condition; the bridge flooring is very rotten, and has gone in pieces in several places; the bridge is unsafe for travel. The present bridge is about forty feet in length between the gutter lines of the avenue.

Your committee would respectfully recommend that the bridge walls be extended at the southerly end, so as to run across the sidewalk of the street, the extension being about fourteen feet in length. They also recommend that the whole bridge be covered with a deck of steel beams and brick or concrete arches, the whole of the work not to exceed the sum of $900.

Respectfully submitted,
HENRY KROUSE,
JOSEPH PERRY,
W. H. SWAIN,
Committee.

KILLED BY DRIVING ROD

Fred DeGroff, Reading Flyer Engineer, Meets Death at His Post.

ACCIDENT NEAR HAMILTON. A USE FOR DREADNAUGHTS.

Engine's Driving Rod Snapped and Victim Was Terribly Injured —Died In Hospital.

Fred DeGroff, of North avenue, an engineer on the St. Louis express of the Philadelphia and Reading Railroad, was fatally injured Saturday afternoon, while making his last trip home for the day, and he died at 8:50 o'clock in the Mercer Hospital, Trenton, where he was taken after the accident. He remained conscious to the last.

The accident which caused DeGroff his life happened on the Reading road near Hamilton, when the right guide rod, directly under the engineer's side of the cab, suddenly snapped, tearing up that side of the engine and cab. DeGroff remained at his post and the train, which was running at a high rate of speed, went a distance of two lengths before it was brought to a stop.

Conductor D. S. Horton, Jr., and his crew hastened to the front of the engine, where they found DeGroff lying along the track. An examination showed that both legs were broken at the ankle and he was suffering from a deep scalp wound. He remained conscious while the crew carried him to a place of safety on the embankment. To one of the trainmen he said: "I guess I am done for now and I will never run an engine again."

A westbound passenger train came along a few minutes after the accident and DeGroff was taken with all possible speed to the Trenton hospital, where everything was done to save his life. The scalp wound, together with internal injuries caused his death.

The passengers on the disabled train were transferred to the Reading train leaving the Terminal, Philadelphia, at 5 o'clock, and the other one was due to Bound Brook by the aid of another engine.

DeGroff has been in the employ of the railroad for many years as an engineer, and for two years and a half has been running the St. Louis train, which leaves 24th and Chestnut streets, Philadelphia, at 5:02 every afternoon. He was considered one of the best engineers in the employ of the company and he had a clean record of which he was very proud. His train was due in Plainfield at 5:44 going east, while on this trip west he passed through Plainfield about 12:42 in the afternoon.

About four months ago while running east one night for some unexplained reason the glass door in his cab was broken and his face and arms were so severely cut that DeGroff was obliged to leave his train and another engineer was summoned to take the train to Jersey City. The accident on Saturday night is one of those things that railroad men cannot explain, and they say that it is likely to happen any time.

Mr. DeGroff leaves a wife and two children; a brother, John DeGroff, of Bayonne; a sister, Mrs. George Jackson, of Roselle, and a sister and nephew in Fresno, Cal.

SEAT OF LEARNING FRACTURED REGION

The ancient seat of learning, Princeton, may be wiped out at any time by an earthquake. So declared Dr. William Herbert Hobbs, of the University of Michigan, in the course of a lecture Monday night on "Earthquakes and Earthquake-Proof Buildings," at Princeton.

Dr. Hobbs declared that practically all geologists agree that earthquakes are due to the oscillation of the level of the ground or to what is technically called the growth of mountains. They manifest themselves in regions where there are fractures in the earth's crust. It was at this juncture Dr. Hobbs made the startling statement that one of these fractured regions includes Princeton, and he furthermore stated that he would not be at all surprised if an earthquake destroyed Princeton and its surroundings at any time with little or no warning.

Dr. Hobbs is one of the leading authorities on earth tremors in the United States and his standard work on "Earthquakes" is used in all the leading universities as a text book. He illustrated his lecture with many lantern slides.

Among the preventions which may be made against earthquakes are earthquake proof buildings, he said. Such a building is one which moves as a unit when subjected to any violent shock and must be built on the plan of an inverted physical pendulum, for all danger of a building collapsing in an earthquake is due to its inertia. A structure ought to be strong enough to separate part from vibrate in the same period of time.

misguided partianship. We nominate straight tickets often made up of crooked candidates. The right of a man to become a candidate should be found in his record. I wish we could get rid of the idea that there is a something watching over the affairs of men.

"Bigness is from without and greatness is from within. If we want a big country let us fashion it after Russia. What nation has left the greatest impress—Judea. Her territory is limited, but it was big enough to give us The Book and great enough to be the home of patriarchs and one whom we regard as our great Prophet. Greece is small in territory, but what has it not given to the world. England is comparatively small, but it gave to the western world the idea of Democracy.

"Democracy in direct nominations, the initiative, the referendum and many political reforms, yet all these things will not change the civic life of Americans. We must reach the consciences of Americans men is always being watched. What wouldn't Russia give if our Democracy should prove a failure? We will fall unless there is a re-birth of patriotism and American Democracy made a blessing, a light and a benediction to all."

MRS. JULIA WARD HOWE WILL BE NINETY IN MAY

Julia Ward Howe, the mother of Miss Florence Howe Hall, of this city, will be ninety years old May 27. An interesting article, written by Florence Painter, on Mrs. Howe's activities so wonderfully continued, appears in Putnam's Magazine for May. Mrs. Howe's view of life is summed in these noted words:

"The deeper I drink of the cup of life, the sweeter it grows—the sugar is all at the bottom.

"Yes," Mrs. Howe says, "that is quite true. You see, my husband was a very great man; and I had very dear children; and I have delightful grandchildren; and I have two great-grandchildren—and am very fond of little children."

"That," says the contributor to Putnam's, "was all. Wide fame, memories of great days dead, honors of many years; and of days present of these she did not think. The secret of life kept fresh and sweet at ninety years she felt to be another matter, far nearer to 'the human heart, by which we live.'"

To quote further from the article:

"Mrs. Howe's one friend of long standing says that her charm is to-day the same in quality as at middle age, and far greater; and another, that she grows not only in largeness of spirit, but in vigor of mind and power of presentation. Another editor of a suffrage organ testifies that, at the age when most humanity has reached 'second childishness, and mere oblivion,' even her business notes are full of delightfulness, and her occasional visit brings into the office a breath of the open air. Within a year she has attended and spoken at hearings on woman's suffrage at the (Massachusetts) State house. In a single week she has given three public addresses on technical subjects, and in receiving her niece, Miss Mabel C. Peterson, and her only child, Miss Louise M. Peter on.

Mr. and Mrs. Peterson were married April 21, 1857, at New Brunswick, by Rev. T. W. Kingshall, of the First Baptist church, of that place. The only guest who attended the wedding fifty-two years ago was a sister, Mrs. John W. Potter, of Newark. Mr. and Mrs. Peterson lived in Plainfield for over forty years. Mr. Peterson is a brother of the late Thomas H. Peterson, of Perth Amboy, who was the first colored voter after passage of the fourteenth amendment. He received a gold medal for the same from the Government.

Many handsome and costly presents were received, including gold, cut glass, china, a large amount of cut flowers and potted plants and money. Friends were present from Rahway, Perth Amboy, Newark, Bound Brook and this city. The couple received the hearty congratulations of all present and the hope that they would live many years more.

LAW MAY OUST SQUIRES

Almost Impossible for Many to Comply With New Provisions.

COUNTY CLERK IS NOTIFIED.

Irksome Conditions Are Imposed by the Legislature on the Justices of the Peace.

Numerous justices of the peace throughout the State, including a number in this county, are threatened with loss of office as a result of a law recently passed, whose provisions must be complied with by May 1 according to a letter received from Secretary of State Dickinson by County Clerk Calvert.

According to the old law, the justices of the peace would have from May 1 to July 1 to qualify, and therefore they have not made any effort to qualify as yet. According to the new law, which was only approved on Monday, all those who were elected as justices of the peace last fall must appear before the county clerk and qualify by paying the necessary fees and filing a bond for $500, have the same approved by the Judge of the Court of Common Pleas, and have a certification of this qualification filed with the Secretary of State by law.

The time is so short in which to accomplish this that it will probably be impossible for all who were elected last fall to fulfil the condition of the new law in time. It is thought that scores who were elected in different parts of the State at the last election may be eligislated out unless the time is extended.

Another complication, as far as Union county is concerned, is the fact that Judge Atwater, who must approve the qualifications, is on a short vacation to Old Point Comfort, and is not expected to return before May 3. As there remains but a week before the certificates of those who have qualified must be filed with the Secretary of State, those who are to qualify must do so by the first part of next week. County Clerk Calvert is today sending special delivery letters to the different persons who were elected to the office of justice of the peace in this county, as shown in the list sent to him by the Secretary of State. As stated in the letter of the Secretary of State to Mr. Calvert a record of election as kept by the State may be incomplete, and in that case it may be that some of these will not receive notice of the new law until after the time to qualify is past.

To a reporter Mr. Calvert stated that he was putting the county clerks of the State to great trouble and in his opinion seemed unconstitutional.

According to the new law, the fees have been more than trebled. The fee required in qualification under the old law was $2.50, the new law provides for a fee of $5 for the use of the State and $1.50 for the use of the county, making a total fee of $6.50.

Following is the letter which has been received by County Clerk Calvert from the Secretary of State, in which notice of an appeal to the attorney-general is given:

"In compliance with the provisions of Chapter 168 of the laws of 1909, a copy of which is herewith enclosed, it becomes necessary for this department to send herewith a list of the names of the justices of peace elected in your county as shown by the returns from the election held last fall, said returns being filed with this department.

"In accordance with the provisions of said act, you will notify these parties to appear before you, if they so desire, for the purpose of qualifying and filing the necessary bond, the returns of which must be made to this department on or before May first.

"The passage of the law at this late date will no doubt greatly embarass justices of the peace desiring to qualify, and it might be advisable for you to notify them by wire.

"It may also be that the returns on file in this office, from which the enclosed list is made, may in some instances be completed, and if so the returns should be completed immediately so that the proper qualifications can be made. It may be that you may be able to facilitate the work in this respect.

"In view of this condition, we have today asked the attorney-general whether or not an extension of time could not be given, but we are advised that the law is specific in this respect and that the justices must qualify before the date fixed.

"The fee for qualifying has been fixed at $5.00, with $1.50 additional fee for the use of the county."

The Causes of Consumption

Miss Mary Wagener, of Jersey City, has returned home after a visit with Plainfield friends.

WARREN CHAPEL NOW HAS 304 MEMBERS

Reports of the year's work of Warren chapel and it various societies were submitted at the annual church meeting held at the chapel, Wednesday, and each report presented showed an encouraging increase in receipts, membership, growth and scope of work which marks the congregation as one of the most flourishing local churches of its size. According to the report of Joseph W. Gavett, the church clerk, the membership is now 304, a net increase of seventeen since April 1 of last year. At that time the membership was 287, and during the year ten new members have been received by confession and seventeen by letter. Five of the members have died during the year and five have been dismissed. The church has raised $1,447.02, and Mr. Gavett's report shows a balance of $7.41 on hand at the close of the church year. The church has sent $835 to foreign and domestic missions. There was an increase of 33 1-3 per cent. in the collections for the year.

In the Sunday-school, too, there has been "encouraging growth." There are 329 members, an increase of but two in the year, but the average attendance has been 248. There are thirty-one officers and teachers. The report of Arthur Lovell, treasurer of the school, showed that $165.5 has been raised during the year, and there is a balance of $193.26. A box of clothing and necessities valued at $70 has been sent south.

The reports of the various church organizations showed a gratifying increase in membership. Each case had a splendid scope of work. The men's class, of which E. E. Parvin is teacher, has been changed during the year to the adult Bible class and now has a membership of 24. A newly organized home department already has a membership of 30. The boys' brigade organized last year, is now a thriving organization, and is in charge of DeWitt Brokaw. Its membership is eighteen, and the organization is uniformed.

The report for the Missionary and Benevolent society of the church was submitted by Mrs. John Green, its treasurer. There are 141 members, and $537.66 has been raised during the year. Of this amount about $153 has been sent to home and foreign missions and boxes and barrels valued at $70 have been sent to the settlement organization to Dr. Grenfell, Rev. L. D. Ewing, of Springfield, Mo., the Allison School at Santa Fe, New Mexico, and Freedmen's schools at Danville and Clarkton, Virginia.

The report of the Y. P. S. C. E., an organization numbering thirty-seven members, was read by Charles Windham, as treasurer, and showed that of the $262.60 raised during the year, $223.18 has been paid out to local, home and foreign societies of a missionary character. Raising the money entirely by freewill offerings, the society numbers, who are sixty in number, have raised $37.57 during the year.

Last November the sewing school was started, and Miss Laura Lovell is its superintendent. There is a total enrollment of eighty-four, including fifty-seven children. There are nine teachers and the work is divided into three classes—plain sewing, cooking and dress-making. Many of the children have made dresses for themselves and the organization is partially self-supporting. Charles Wheeler, secretary of the men's club, presented the report of the organization, which now has a membership of fifty-four. Regular monthly meetings have been held and there have been several enjoyable lectures an dtalks. The organization contributes a neat sum for the refreshments of the church expenses. William Demarest, as treasurer for the Wednesday Evening Missionary Society, reported that during the year $188.50 has been raised and forwarded to various home and foreign missions.

REV. L. R. HOWARD PREACHES INTERESTING SERMON TO MEN

Rev. L. R. Howard, pastor, preached a strong sermon to a large congregation of men at Hope chapel Sunday morning. The Scripture lesson was a portion of the fourth and sixth chapters of Nehemiah, the text being "and I said, should such a man as I flee? and who is there, that, as I am would go into the temple to save his life? I will not go in."

The theme was "The Man Who Would Not Flee." In the evening Mr. Howard preached on "Soul-Winning," before a large congregation. In the morning service the congregation chiefly composed men, a special effort being made to secure the attendance of men from the West End of the city.

OUTLINE LEAGUE'S WORK

Miss Jaynes Tells of the Consumers' League's Efforts in New Jersey.

BEFORE EQUAL SUFFRAGISTS.

No Store in This State on "White List," Declares the Secretary of the Order.

Urging organization among women to protest against the conditions under which food and wearing apparel are produced and sold in this State and to insist upon a betterment of conditions, Miss Alice Dixon Jaynes secretary of the Consumers' League of New Jersey, addressed the members of the local Equal Suffrage League at the home of its president, Mrs. Stephen Haff, of Sherman avenue, Monday afternoon.

"The American woman," said the speaker, "is an important factor in the economic situation of today, because it is she who spends the American dollars. Single handed, we can do nothing, but by organization we can effect this betterment of conditions."

The Consumers' League, the speaker said, should be known as the Women's Organization of Protest, and should be active in its insistence upon sanitary and healthful conditions where clothing and food is produced. Miss Jaynes scored the Price child labor law as weak and ineffectual, declaring that the provision about the necessity of issuing upon school attendence is inefficient, inasmuch as the law reads that "truant officers may be appointed," and does not make such appointment mandatory. In many cities and towns of South Jersey, the speaker said, there are no truant officers, and the child labor conditions are bad.

"Not a single store in this State," said Miss Jaynes "is on the 'White List,' which includes all stores where goods are produced or sold under conditions satisfactory to the requirements of the Consumers' League. This is a record to be ashamed of, for New York State has a long list of such stores. Then too, in New York, the homes where wearing apparel is made are inspected at frequent periods to insure proper health conditions, while in this State there is no such system of inspection. New Jersey is a large field, and there is lots of work to be done here. We women can secure ideal conditions in time if we organize in this field."

At the conclusion of the lecture, several members of the local organization signified their intention of joining the Consumers' League. A short business session of the Equal Suffrage League was held at which a program of work for the season was outlined. It is planned to have Mrs. Laddie, president of the New Jersey State Suffrage Association, address the local association Monday afternoon, May 24. After the meeting, tea was served and the members spent a social hour together.

At a meeting of the directors of the National State Bank, of Newark, held on April 21, William Rockwell, of East Front street, this city, tendered his resignation as cashier. The resignation was accepted and the following resolution unanimously adopted:

"Whereas, Mr. William Rockwell has tendered his resignation as cashier of this bank, after occupying that position for thirty-one years, of which time serving as a director thirty years, it is meet and proper, as it is manifestly the duty of his associates on this board, as well as their great pleasure, to express their opinion of the manner in which he has performed his duties.

"Therefore Be It Resolved, That the hearty thanks of the board of directors of the National State Bank of East Front street, this city, tendered to Mr. Rockwell for his untiring fidelity to the interests of this bank, and the board desires to express its regrets that circumstances lead him to decide to sever his connection with this institution, and to deprive the bank of the active co-operation of his ability and judgment.

"We realize, in his retirement, that this bank loses an honest, able, efficient and courteous officer. We extend him our best wishes and sincerely trust that his future will be as happy as his past has been useful, and that we may still enjoy the benefit of his counsel and advice.

"Resolved, That these resolutions be entered on the minutes of this bank, and that an engrossed copy be sent to Mr. Rockwell."

William I. Cooper, assistant cashier, was elected to fill the vacancy caused by Mr. Rockwell's resignation.

SUPERB SONG RECITAL

William T. Carleton Charms Fashionable Audience with Baritone Solos.

PROGRAM WAS WELL VARIED.

A Snug Sum Is Made For The King's Daughters' Baby Camp Fund—At Hartridge Auditorium.

A considerable sum will be realized for the maintenance of the work of the King's Daughters' Baby Camp as the net proceeds of a delightful song recital given by William T. Carleton at the Hartridge auditorium last night. The program comprised five groups of songs, seventeen numbers in all, and these allowed for a wide range of subject as well as style of rendition, the singer's voice ranging from the wild crescendo passages of Carmen's "Toreador" to the dainty pathos of Ethelbert Nevin's arrangement of "Little Boy Blue," Eugene Field's pathetic poem about his son. Mr. Carleton's singing won the keen appreciation of the large audience.

Between the various groups of songs, Mr. Carleton took occasion to speak briefly about the songs and their composers, and his remarks proved a feature of particular interest. Although the variety of the music was great, the old time beauty of Mr. Carleton's voice was perhaps most noticeable in the group of Italian songs, which came second on the program. The musical adaptations of Kipling's poems won genuine applause, and they comprised the song "Mother O' Mine," with music by Frank E. Tours, and two of the Barrack Room Ballads, "Gunga Din" and "Danny Deever."

Mr. Carleton's singing was accompanied by M. de M. Woodcock at the piano, and the rendition of "Danny Deever, the concluding song, was particularly noteworthy because of the music. The selection is arranged by Walter Damrosch and the accompaniment for the opening verses suggests the dead march, while the final stanzas show the lively music of the military quickstep. The singer's rendition of A. F. Loud's dainty lullaby, "The Slumber Island," in the third group of songs won appreciative applause that made several recalls to the stage necessary, while there was clever music and humor in the song "A China Tragedy," and the Old Irish Air, "The Stuttering Lovers." This is the program:

Descriptive song, "The Village Blacksmith," words by Longfellow, music by Weiss; song, "Mother o' Mine," words by Rudyard Kipling, music by Frank E. Tours; Boat Song (new), Ware; Old Scotch Piper Song, "The Piper of Dundee," (Traditional).

Serenade, "Dormi pure," Scudere; Canzone, "Caro mio ben," Giordani; Aria, "Dio possente," (Faust), Gounod.

Song, "Little Boy Blue," words by Eugene Field, music by Ethelbert Nevin; Lullaby, "The Slumber Islands," music by A. F. Loud; Old Welsh Air, "All Through the Night," (Traditional), (by request); Song, "A China Tragedy," words by R. S. Hichens, music by Clayton Thomas; Old Irish Air (new), "The Stuttering Lovers," (Traditional), arranged by Herbert Hughes.

Ballad, "Addio," Behrens; song, (new) "A Little Blue Flower," Trotere; song, "The Toreador (Carmen), Bizet.

MUECK'S MIND A BLANK FOR WEEKS

The family of young Emil Mueck, who suddenly left his home in Elizabeth early in April and about whose whereabouts nothing was known for weeks by his parents, say that all the time he was away his mind was a blank. Returning home last Saturday, he has been confined to his bed ever since. He had just recovered from an attack of the grip when he disapeared.

He has had little to say, but from what he has said members of his family are convinced that from the time he disappeared from Elizabeth until he had been in Chicago several days his mind was a blank. He does not know how he reached the Windy City, whether he paid his fare or by what railroad he traveled.

He declares that after he had paid several bills for his mother he was suddenly seized with a desire to go away from Elizabeth. He remembers standing in Broad street trying to fight down his impulse, but that it overcame him completely. Of events occuring between that time and when he found himself walking "round in circles" in Chicago he has but a very hazy recollection. When his memory did return he remembered who he was, but why he was in Chicago he could not understand. He finally decided the only thing to do was to find relatives, and with the aid of a directory he located an uncle, with whom he remained until he started back to Elizabeth.

Whether it was because of the fact that his father frowned on his attachment for Miss Edith Guenther, of 951 Olive street, who was the first person in Elizabeth to learn of the missing lad's whereabouts, after he went away from home, Emil refuses to say.

NEPHEW FIGHTS FILING OF G. O. HETFIELD'S WILL

The admission of the will of Cora O. Hetfield to probate in the Union County Court, today, is being opposed by his nephew, Scott Terry, of Fanwood, who claims that undue influence was used in the making of the instrument. Mr. Hetfield, who resided in Bridges, near Dog Corners, was one of the best known men in Union county. He died a few weeks ago, and when his will was read it was learned that he had left practically his whole estate, valued at about $75,000, to Joseph Gallagher, Rahway, saloonkeeper.

Mr. Terry is represented by Judge William Newcorn in contesting the will, while Charles A. Trimble, of Elizabeth, represents the estate. Mr. Hetfield was a bachelor and for a great many years lived with a bachelor brother at Two Bridges. Terry was of a saving disposition and when he died it was generally known that he was worth considerable. Why he left his estate to Mr. Gallagher, of Rahway, was not made known at the hearing today.

William Slade.

William Slade, aged fifty-eight years, of West Fourth street, died at his home in the hospital, this morning, from a complication of asthma and pneumonia. He was taken to the hospital on Saturday, but his condition was such that he failed to respond to the treatment. Mr. Slade has been a resident of this city for many years. He is survived by a wife and two daughters, one of whom being Mrs. Howard Woolston, of West Front street. The funeral will be private.

"Black Rock" Recital.

For the benefit of the women, the Men's Club of the Congregational church presented a dramatic recital of "Black Rock" by Miss Charille Runals, of New York. Miss Runals is well known in Plainfield as a dramatic reader, having appeared at the Y. M. C. A. last winter. Her readings last night which were partly recitation and partly songs were much enjoyed by a large and appreciative audience.

Bonfire Started Barn Fire.

Mrs. Frederick Goodhue Mead gave a charming tea at her home, "Sunnyside," yesterday afternoon, for Mrs. George C. Buell and her daughter, Miss Alice Buell, of Rochester, N. Y., who have been her guests for several days. The home was thronged with fashionable society people of Plainfield and North Plainfield and there were many delightful features. The rooms were lavishly decorated for the occasion, the color scheme in the dining-room being lavendar and white, while deep-wood was used with pleasant effect.

SIAM AND ITS MISSIONS

Dr. L. Duncan Bulkley Addresses Crescent Avenue Church Women.

DISPELLS INCORRECT IDEAS.

Praises for King of Siam for His Democracy—Missionary's Life a Hard One.

The Women's Foreign Missionary Society of the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church held its last meeting for the season, yesterday, when Dr. L. Duncan Bulkley, of New York, was invited to address the members. He is a brother-in-law to George P. Mellick, of East Seventh street, and a practicing physician in New York. His son, Dr. Duncan Bulkley, is a medical missionary in Siam, and the father has just returned from a visit to Siam. For this reason he was asked to tell about the mission work there.

The speaker was very enthusiastic over the progress of the mission work in Siam. He explained that his son Dr. Bulkley and Dr. Dunlap, and the natives, being especially interested in the presence of the "medical man" make it easy for the minister to get near them and teach them about the Christ. Dr. Bulkley spoke words of praise about the King of Siam, adding that he is most American in his ideas, and in fact has an American for an advisor. He is considered a wide-awake man and one who is very anxious that his people should progress and become thoroughly acquainted with modern ideas as found in America and Europe. Whenever possible he always helps the missionaries.

Dr. Bulkley said that the people in this country so often get erroneous ideas about the work of the missionary, believing that he lives a life of luxury and with plenty of means furnished by the missionary boards. He wished to dispel this fanciful thought, explaining that frequently the foreign governments and others through interest in the work provide quarters for the missionaries and that they are not extravagant, as reported.

At the conclusion of Dr. Bulkley's address, Miss Julia Scribner, who was a delegate from the society to the Presbyterial meeting held recently at Clinton, presented an interesting report of that gathering. Dr. Duncan Bulkley, the medical missionary, is supported in his work by the members of the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church.

METAL WORK CONCERN WITH $25,000 CAPITAL

The capital stock is $25,000, divided into 12,500 shares at a par value of $10. Of the shares, 2,500 are preferred and the other 10,000 common.

The purpose for which the company is incorporated is to manufacture architectural and ornamental metal work in the non-ferrous alloys, a business which has been carried on here by Mr. Hinman for sometime. The incorporators are Lewis Bond, who is the agent, with eighty shares; Charles M. Hummer, of North Plainfield, ten shares, and I. B. Vail, ten shares.

GOVERNMENT OR RAILROAD TO PAY FOR MESSENGERS

For the purpose of revising the statistics regarding the distances between postoffices and railroad stations, a Government official has been engaged in that work along the line of the New Jersey Central this week. Yesterday the distances at Fanwood and Plainfield were measured. The idea of doing this is to ascertain whether it is up to the postal authorities or the railroad company to carry the mail between the offices and the stations.

Where the postoffice is under eighty rods of the railroad station the railroad company is obliged by law to carry the mail between it and the postoffice. Here in Plainfield the distance is just a trifle over the eighty rods and for that reason the Government lets the contract to the lowest bidder. When the new postoffice building is erected efforts will be made to locate it within the eighty rods of the railroad station.

WIDOW CELEBRATES GOLDEN WEDDING DAY

Although her husband has been dead for several years, yesterday marked the fiftieth anniversary of the marriage of Mrs. Jeffery Heenan, of South Plainfield, and the event was celebrated in a pleasant way by a family reunion. The day was given up entirely to social features, and Mrs. Heenan was congratulated upon reaching a ripe age and still being in possession of excellent health. She was the recipient of many useful gifts, including a purse of $50 in gold. Mrs. Heenan is one of the oldest residents of South Plainfield and she has a host of friends.

Among those present at the reunion were Mr. and Mrs. John Kilbride, Mr. and Mrs. Jeffery Heenan, Jr., of New York; Mr. and Mrs. Morris Heenan, of Oyster Bay; Mr. and Mrs. Charles Shirley, Mr. and Mrs. John Manley, of Plainfield; Mr. and Mrs. Harry Sofield and Cornelius Heenan, of South Plainfield.

WEDDING BELLS CLIMAX OF LOVE FOR A NURSE

Miss Helen White, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Seymour White, of Elmira, N. Y., and William H. Webster, of this city, were married last night at the home of the bride's parents in the presence of a large gathering of relatives and friends. A romantic incident of the love affair is that Mr. Webster met his bride while she, as a nurse, was caring for him at Muhlenberg Hospital. Another interesting incident is that the couple will leave on Saturday with Dr. Wilfred T. Grenfell, to join the latter in his work among the deep sea fishermen of Labrador.

The bride served as a pupil nurse and was graduated from the training school at Muhlenberg Hospital, and while there Mr. Webster was admitted there for treatment, and she was assigned to special on the case. Not long after leaving the institution the couple became engaged and then plans for the wedding and trip to Labrador were made. Mr. Webster is an expert accountant and became converted through the influence of Dr. Grenfell, after which he became interested in his work in Labrador.

During his residence in this city, Mr. Webster has been deeply interested in the work at Hope chapel, where he has been a teacher in the Sunday-school. His wife is also enthusiastic about the work in Labrador, and because of her training as a nurse she will be of great value in the mission work there.

GREAT TURNOUT FOR TOM MUIR TESTIMONIAL

With an attendance of 120 of Tom Muir's friends as volunteers for the chorus of the mammoth benefit minstrel show to be held at the New Plainfield theatre Friday night, June 19, the first rehearsal of the big company was conducted in the Elks' lodge rooms last night under the direction of City Judge William N. Runyon. It had been hoped, if possible, to secure enough singers to make up a black-face chorus of a hundred, but there were so many candidates that Mr. Runyon now plans to increase the big semi-circle to number 150 singers. Although over a hundred singers "registered" in the chorus last night, more than a score in addition have assured the Judge that they will turn out for the next rehearsal, which will be held Friday night.

The big chorus got right down to business at the first rehearsal, and practised half a dozen choruses for a solid hour. It is planned to have rehearsals at the lodge rooms each Friday and Tuesday night, and the tickets for the benefit show are to be issued within a week. There is very little "green" material among the chorus volunteers and the list includes delegations from the Hope Minstrels, the Franklin and Dixie troupes, the Elks and a Plainfield High School organization. Boroughites and North Plainfield High School boys have volunteered and the personel of the big chorus shows the universal sympathy felt for Tom Muir in his trouble.

With such a big chorus, it is planned to have eight end men and reports as to the make-up of the show lead to the belief of its unqualified success as the largest affair of its kind ever held in this State.

Y. M. C. A. ORCHESTRA PLEASES BIG AUDIENCE

The thirty-third and last concert of the season, given by the Y. M. C. A. orchestra, took place last night before one of the largest audiences ever assembled in the auditorium. The concert was without doubt the best given by the orchestra this season. The program consisted of fourteen numbers, each of which was rendered in a manner that brought forth much applause. The selections the "Poet and Peasant" and the Polish dance, "Klaswrak," by Wieniawski, were the best received and by far the best rendered, especially in time and shading.

Mrs. Theodore Mantz, the soloist, was never in better voice, her two selections, "A Song of Sunshine," by Goring-Thomas, and the "Serenade," from Schubert, were well sung, especially the latter. One of the features of the concert was the 'cello solo work of Miss Emily Moffitt. There was also a cornet solo by Whitney Frazee, and a violin solo by George Spicer, which were well received by the audience. Miss May Vincent Whitney acted as accompanist.

Will Try to Amend Ordinance.

The Common Council will hold an adjourned meeting Monday night, May 24, when among other business to be considered will be the proposed amendment to the police ordinance which provides for the abolishing of the office of roundsmen. It is the purpose of the police board to substitute the word "sergeants" for "roundsmen," which will mean an increase of salary for the new appointee to the office of sergeant, which it is proposed to fill by the appointment of Roundsman Maurice Higgins.

Lodge Women Hold Euchre.

After the business session of Friendship Lodge, No. 4, Daughters of Rebecca, last night, when one proposition was received, the members enjoyed a euchre party. The diversion was a pleasing feature. The highest number of points for the women were scored by Miss May VanFleet. Mrs. J. M. Lewin, Mrs. William Johnson, while J. M. Lewin, William Dunham and William Snyder scored the most points for the men. Refreshments were served afterward.

To Hold Recognition Services.

Rev. J. W. Musson, pastor, and the officers of the Temple Baptist church, have arranged for a "recognition service" to be held at the church, Friday night, June 4, marking in an appropriate manner the establishment of the church as an independent body set apart from the First Baptist church. There will be several interest addresses, a program of special music, in which Pastor Chamblisa and others of the First Baptist church will have a part.

MANY BIG DEMONSTRATIONS.

Prizes To Be Awarded At All Parades — Headquarters at Boice, Runyon & Co. Building.

Definite plans for the "big times" in connection with the three-day Charter Day anniversary to be held July 5, 6 and 7 are being framed by the various committees and arrangements for the parades and contests were discussed at the meetings of the parade and finance committees held last night. The celebration headquarters will be in the vacant store in Boice, Runyon & Company's building at Park and North avenues, where Wm. H. Drayton will be in charge. The offer of the use of the building was made for the firm by H. A. Todd at the meeting of the finance committee held last night. The store will be fitted up as general headquarters for all the committees and officials and a competent stenographer will be in attendance.

That residents of the city and borough are willing to support the anniversary movement in a solid financial manner is shown by the fact that although no appeals for funds have yet been made, a substantial amount has already been voluntarily pledged, according to the report made last night by E. M. Lsing, chairman of the finance committee. It was decided at the meeting of this committee to start the campaign for funds this week, and circular letters, appealing for financial support, will be sent out before many days.

Fire Chiefs Doane and Woolston attended the meeting of the parade committee last night, when plans for the firemen's parade were formulated. It was decided to hold this parade on the last day of the celebration, when the firemen will start their march from Watchung avenue and East Front street at 2:30 o'clock in the afternoon. Invitations were to be sent out today inviting sixty-two fire companies to participate in this parade, and there is every reason to believe that the line will be a long one.

The parade committee will recommend to the finance committee that four prizes be given in connection with the firemen's parade. It is planned to have a prize for the best drilled company, the company having the greatest number of men in line passing the reviewing stand, the best uniformed company of Exempts, and the company coming from the greatest distance.

Plans for Tuesday, July 6,—the second day of the anniversary celebration—show that this will be a particularly "big day." Arrangements were completed last night for a bicycle and motor-cycle section which will form a part of the automobile parade to be held Tuesday morning, adn "Jack" Horner, of the Plainfield Cycle Club, has been appointed to complete the arrangements for this two-wheeled section. The various automobile dealers will form a committee in charge of the auto parade, and it is reported plans are under way to enter some elaborately decorated machines. The prizes have not yet been decided upon.

The athletic games will be held Tuesday afternoon, and at last night's meeting of the finance committee, Physical Director G. L. Lissman, of the Y. M. C. A., was appointed chairman of the committee in charge of these sports. F. A. Duttenhofer, M. C. VanArsdale and Herman Schwed were named as a committee to decide upon and select badges and trophies to be presented to winners of the various athletic events.

City and borough will be turned over to the "Mummers" the Tuesday night of the celebration, when the parade will be made up of grotesquefeul costumed men, women and children, and all sorts of practical jokes will be in order. This parade will conclude with a typical Mardi Gras "Mummers' Frolic."

Winfield Scott Post, No. 73, G. A. R., held a regular meeting, last night, to further complete details for the annual observance of Memorial Day. All reports showed progress.

CITY TROUNCES BOROUGH

Plainfield High School Defeats North Plainfield by a Score of 13 to 3.

BOROUGH PITCHERS WEAK.

Heavy Hitting By Doane and Conroy Features of First Game For Championship.

The Plainfield High School baseball nine overwhelmingly defeated the team from the borough High School at Crescent Oval Wednesday afternoon, when the first game for the local scholastic championship between the nines resulted in a victory for the city school boys by a score of 13 to 3. Particularly weak in pitchers, the borough boys played an unsteady game in the field as well, for eight errors are scored up against them. The city boys had to shift their players considerably for the game, because Frank Clark, the third baseman, is sick. Dodwell was stationed at the left-hand corner in his place, Lidgate went behind the bat, Doane was put on first, Riffert moved over to centre field and Lyness, the reserve pitcher, let loose in the right garden. This juggling of players made a strong nine, but the team's three errors were made at first base.

The boroughites started scoring in the first inning, when Doane juggled a grounder for Smith. Stealing around, Smith came in on "Russ" Conroy's clean single to short stop. The lead didn't last long, however, because in the second inning the P. H. S. run-making began. It was Doane who brought in the tallies at this time, for there were two on when he came to bat and in the third the bases were full. In each case his single brought two runners home. During the third, Day was taken out of the box and Smith was sent to the slab, while Adams went in at first. Smith was steadier, but the team wasn't, and the city boys scored three runs in the fifth and four in the sixth. With two on in the eighth, Conroy connected with one of Van Zand's curves and landed on second base, with two runs in. Conroy excelled with the stick and in the field, making three hits and accepting six chances without an error. His line catch in the first was a feature.

Van Zandt was in his best form, fanning eight and keeping the seven hits well scattered. He gave no passes. Day and Smith each struck out three and Day gave a pass. Doane and Lyness each made a two-bagger.

SURPRISE PARTY FOR MRS. OBADIAH CRANE.

A birthday surprise party was tendered to Mrs. Obadiah Crane, of Westervelt avenue, Thursday, by about thirty of her friends, who called to help her celebrate the occasion. Mrs. Crane was presented with a large mission chair and a bouquet. Mr. and Mrs. Crane have just purchased the house in which they live and the affair last night was in the nature of a "housewarming" as well as a surprise on Mrs. Crane. Progressive euchre was the feature of the evening. Piano and violin music was furnished for dancing and during the playing of cards.

At the conclusion of the euchre it was learned that Mrs. H. D. Templin had scored the greatest number of points for the women, Mrs. William N. Tier second and Mrs. Corra Rynn third. For the men, H. D. Templin scored the greatest number of points, William N. Tier was second and P. Van Fleet third. Refreshments were then served and the party broke up at an early hour this morning.

HOPE ENDEAVORERS HAVE A BUSY SESSION

The postponed April business meeting of Hope chapel's Christian Endeavor Society, held Wednesday night at the close of the regular devotional meeting. President Snyder called for reports of officers and committees which were read and adopted. The society received an invitation to attend the county convention to be held on Tuesday night, May 18, at Summit, and after some discussion it was decided to accept. Frank Rimmer and Miss Bertha A. Jones were appointed a committee of two to complete arrangements.

The Warren chapel Endeavorers sent an invitation to its anniversary exercises to be held on Tuesday, May 25, and the secretary was instructed to send a letter of acceptance. A congress meeting of the local Christian Endeavor Union will be held in Hope chapel on Monday night. The social committee was authorized to make all arrangements for the entertainment of the members of the union for the occasion. Walter Smith was appointed chairman of a committee to investigate the advisability of establishing a junior society at Hope chapel. He was authorized to select two others to assist him in the matter.

It was decided to take a barge of the Sunday evening services on July 4, that day being "Christian Endeavor Sunday" throughout the world. The subject will be "Patriotism that Counts." The matter was referred to the prayer-meeting committee.

These committees were announced for next year: Missionary, Mary N. Mortimer, Mr. and Mrs. Mary W. Clark, Jessie Duncan and Frank Rimmer; prayer-meeting, Bertha A. Jones, Clara Hunter, Peter G. Sweeney, Walter Firstbrook and Mary N. Mortimer; social, Mrs. Harry Keen, William Baker, Elizabeth Slorah, James Roberson and Harry Kenny; Becker, W. It Never Fails.

A child's Irish lace collar was advertised in Daily Press as lost by Mrs. I. N. Van Sickle, of this city. The collar was found by Mrs. W. W. Coriell, of 1200 Denmark road, a reader of this newspaper, and returned to the owner. Another instance showing how advertising in The Daily Press pays is found in the way H. Hanson, of 322 West Front street, secured her gold watch which was lost. She inserted a small adv. in The Daily Press, and Charles Emmons, of Shelter drive, the borough, a subscriber, found it and returned it to the owner, refusing a reward.

AUTO BUS SERVICE PLAN

The Board of Trade Hears of Scheme for Bringing More Trade to This City.

LAUDS THE "CITY BEAUTIFUL."

New Resident Writes Board How Pleased He is Here—Another Industry.

The proposition to establish an auto bus line between this city and Metuchen was reported upon at the Board of Trade meeting Thursday, by Milton Swende, who arranged a "personally conducted tour" with reporters on Tuesday. He gave a description of this trip in the auto, explaining that it required forty-five minutes to cover the nine miles, allowing for usual stops.

The plan is to operate these autos hourly, charge a five cent fare to the Plainfield Country Club, another five cents to Oak Tree and a third nickel to Metuchen and fix a rate of twenty-five cents for the round trip. There will be a meeting of interested citizens tonight for the purpose of organizing a company. It was explained that the Lehigh Valley Railroad Company had decided that if the line is established, it would advertise the fact and sell tickets to Plainfield by this route.

A letter was read from G. M. Christian, of a New York dry milk concern, who has purchased a property at 65 Westervelt avenue. He declared that he intended to come here through an advertisement of "The City Beautiful" in a Sunday edition of the New York Herald, and in his letter to the Board he was enthusiastic over the city, adding that he is now trying to get a number of his friends to locate in the "banner town of the country." Mr. Christian said that he spent months in trying to find a suitable place to live and it was not until he came to Plainfield did he see "the desire of his heart." He offered his services toward making the Charter-Day celebration a success. Mr. Christian also said that he had prepared a printed circular which he is sending to his friends, advertising "The City Beautiful," a copy of which was sent to the Board.

F. A. Duttenhofer explained that Levy & Julius, manufacturers of lace waists, had leased quarters on West Front street and the plant would soon be in operation. The Central Park Realty Company was given a vote of thanks for the handsome illustrated booklet published by it under the endorsement of the Board, advertising "The City Beautiful."

During the evening Harry S. Sanderson, Dr. R. S. Stevens and H. R. Palmer were elected members of the Board.

HENRY HAURAND WINS IN DOUBLE RENT SUIT

Judge Vail in the Union County Court Friday granted a non-suit in the action of Mrs. Josephine Mason, one of the heirs of the Schorb estate, against Henry Haurand, of North Plainfield, to recover double rental on the property at 115 East Front street, formerly occupied by the defendant. The plaintiff sued to recover double rental from January 1, 1907, to March 1, 1908, because the defendant remained on the premises after the time when notice was given to move.

Mr. Haurand was in a peculiar position at the time, having been granted his license and the Schorb estate was striving to get possession of the property. It is understood that the defendant stood ready to pay the regular rental, $125 a month, but refused to pay twice the sum.

Judge Vail, in granting a non-suit, stated that the plaintiff had failed to show under the statutes that any relation of landlord and tenant existed between the parties and could not collect double rent. Francis J. Blatz represented the defendant and Melosh & Morten, of Jersey City, the plaintiff.

PRESIDENT MARSH IN CHAIR.

Westfield, Somerville, Dunellen and Mount Horeb Sends Delegates.

Attended by delegates from eight of the eleven Epworth Leagues of this district, a highly successful rally was held at the Monroe Avenue church Thursday, when the members of the local church society acted as the hosts. The Monroe Avenue leaguers turned out ninety-five strong, a delegation of sixty-four came from the Somerville M. E. church, forty-five from the First M. E., thirty-three from Grace M. E., thirty-two from the Westfield M. E., twenty from the Somerville M. E., twelve from the Dunellen M. E., and one from Mount Horeb.

Marsh, of Elizabeth, who is president of the district, spoke in response. Following prayer by Rev. C. S. Kemble, pastor of the church, and the singing of a hymn, Mr. Marsh introduced Rev. D. F. Diefendorf, of the Roseville Avenue M. E. church, of Newark, who delivered the address of the evening. Mr. Diefendorf spoke on the topic, "The Heroism of Gideon," and proved to be an interesting speaker.

At the conclusion of the address, Mrs. C. K. Shreve rendered a soprano solo and was forced to respond with an encore. Miss Charlotte Aldrich was at the piano. At the conclusion of the meeting, a delightful social hour was spent, and refreshments consisting of ice cream and cake were served.

The church was tastefully decorated with red and white bunting and a large Epworth League emblem hung directly over the pulpit. The various committees in charge of the rally comprised these persons: John McCormick, decorating; Miss Olive de Cline, Mrs. H. Gardiner, Mrs. C. S. Kemble, Mrs. H. W. Fleming, of Maplewood, will make an address at that time. Group rallies, similar to last night's affair are held every six weeks and at the meeting May 20 the place of the next meeting will be decided upon.

FOR CATHEDRAL IDEA; NO BISHOP CO-ADJUTOR

Advocates of a cathedral system in the New Jersey Diocese of the Episcopal church gained a victory at the closing session of the diocesan convention at Burlington. Rev. Albert B. Baker presented the report of the cathedral committee. By a very close majority resolutions were adopted which stated that, in the opinion of the convention, it is desirable to establish a cathedral system when it seems probable that it can be properly supported. The bishop was authorized to appoint a provisional cathedral chapter of ten laymen and ten presbyters to present a cathedral plan at the next convention.

Plans to appoint a bishop coadjutor, which have been in the minds of church leaders for three years, were quashed by Bishop Scarborough. In his annual address he expressed his opposition to the scheme, asserting that he desired to serve unaided as long as his health permitted.

John B. Dumont, of Grace church, this city, was again chosen as trustee of church property. Rev. E. Vicars Stevenson, rector of Grace church, was chosen a member of the missionary council.

Next year's convention will be held at Trenton.

A. G. STEBBINS DIVORCED

After Hearing Sensational Testimony Against Wife, Decree is Quickly Given.

CASE OF BASE DECEPTION.

Chief Kiely Does Good Work in Collecting Abundant Evidence Against Woman.

Following testimony of a highly sensational character at a hearing in the Chancery Court, in Newark, Thursday, Vice Chancellor Howell granted a decree of absolute divorce against Anna Marie Stebbins, on statutory charges brought by her husband, Albert C. Stebbins, vice president of the Miles-Stebbins Coal Tool Company, whose home is on West Seventh street. The couple were married at Warren chapel June 10, 1908, Rev. J. O. McKelvey, pastor of the church, officiating. The couple lived together at Mr. Stebbins' home on West Seventh street for about a month last summer.

The story revealed in the testimony is that of a woman who took advantage of the wealth and position of an honorable man and sought to deceive him as her husband by tales of a sick mother in Staten Island, while she really traveled from place to place with a race track bookmaker, whom she was found living with at a hotel at Sheepshead Bay, Coney Island.

Mr. Stebbins met his wife in New York city in December, 1906, when she claimed she was Mrs. Hammerstadt, a widow. Her maiden name is Nelson and she lives at New Dorp, Staten Island. The couple were married at Warren chapel in June, 1908, and spent their honeymoon at Pittsfield, Mass. Upon their return to this city they made their home on West Seventh street, but Mrs. Stebbins soon left her husband for a time, declaring that her mother was seriously ill at her Staten Island home. She made three or four trips "to her mother," according to the testimony, and on one occasion sent Mr. Stebbins $150 for "physician's and nurse's expenses" for the "sick woman."

On July 18, when Mrs. Stebbins had been away for several days on one of these trips, her husband telegraphed to her and, receiving no reply, went to Newark to see if his wife was with her mother, Mrs. Nelson. The woman, it was shown, said she had not seen her daughter in months, and did not know that she had been married. She said that she had not been ill. This statement aroused the husband's suspicions. He consulted Reed & Coddington as his counsel and an investigation started.

Chief Kiely secured several Newark detectives and worked on the case for several months, and it is through his efforts that the case was brought to a successful issue. Together with James T. MacMurray, and two men and a woman detective, Chief Kiely located the woman in the Sheepshead Bay hotel the latter part of July. She was located with Tony Girard, a race-track book-maker, with whom she had been living for two years previous. She had registered as "Mrs. Girard," according to the testimony.

Although certain admissions were made at the hotel, and other things were definitely learned, the woman secured counsel and prepared to fight the application for divorce. Her attorneys were Doremus and Lecour, of Rutherford, and she also had New York counsel. Mrs. Stebbins was not at the trial yesterday at Newark, but her counsel fought the case with rigid cross-examinations. There were eight witnesses for Mr. Stebbins, including City Clerk MacMurray and Rev. J. O. McKelvey. Mrs. Hammerstadt is a strikingly handsome woman of about twenty-nine years of age. Although the final divorce decree will not be issued until six months have elapsed, it is said that the woman will make no further contest.

Miss Carrie VanArsdale Entertains.

Miss Carrie VanArsdale, of Somerset street, entertained a number of her friends at her home Thursday night. The evening was spent in enjoying a musical program, several selections being rendered by Miss Edith Meyers and vocal solos by Robert Lowrie, of Dunellen. A feature was the unwinding of cobwebs by the guests. Refreshments were served. Those present were Mr. and Mrs. Charles Harden, Mrs. Helen Grant, the Misses Fern Hand, Blanche Sherwood, Emma Voorhees, Nellie Dodwell, Bertha Wilcox, Edith Meyers, Carrie VanArsdale and Mildren Harden and Messrs. George Apgar, Robert Lowrie, Robert Runyon, William Hand, Walter Hand, Robert Mettler and Lloyd VanMiddlesworth.

Queer Justice.

REV. MR. D'AUBIGNE'S TALK ON M'ALL WORK

The feature of the closing session of the twenty-six annual convention of the American McAll Association in the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church, Thursday, was the address by Rev. Charles Merle d'Aubigne, of Paris, who spoke on the great work being accomplished by the association throughout France. Of all the mission work in France, said the speaker, none had progressed so rapidly and none had accomplished more real good for the poor than the McAll Association.

"Since the separation of the church and State," said the speaker, "the number of free thinkers has grown rapidly. There is no less infidelism among the middle classes than ever before. There is now a crusade going on among those of the poor class and it will not be long before the strength of the Protestant religion will be felt throughout France."

Mr. d'Aubigne's address was listened to with the greatest interest and at the close he was heartily applauded. With the reading of the minutes the convention closed after the benediction was pronounced by Rev. George T. Scott. The one hundred or more delegates attending the convention had nothing but words of praise for the hospitable entertainment provided by the local branch of the association.

CHILDREN'S HOME ASS'N HOLDS ANNUAL MEETING

Reports for the past year and the election of officers comprised the chief business at the annual meeting of the Children's Home Association, Thursday. The resignation of Miss Lucy Everitt, as corresponding secretary, and Miss Ruth Leonard, as recording secretary, were accepted with regret. Both have served the association for a great many years, but a pressure of other duties compelled them to give up their offices.

These officers were chosen for the year: President, Mrs. Martin I. Codey; first vice-president, Mrs. Laura S. Gilbert; second vice-president, Mrs. James C. Peck; third vice-president, Mrs. Andrew A. Bell; recording secretary, Mrs. Frank Rowley; corresponding secretary, Mrs. E. E. Parvin; treasurer, Miss Ella Serrell.

The report of the treasurer showed that about $3,000 was raised during the year and the expenses averaged between $250 and $300 a month. An urgent appeal has been made for more regular subscribers to the association work, owing to constantly increasing needs. The association is glad to accept any amount from $1 upwards and it hopes that during the coming year many new friends will be added to the list of subscribers.

EXPECT DISAGREEMENT ON ACCUSATION CHARGE

The case of the State against Leonard Martine, in which the latter was tried on two indictments by the Middlesex County Grand Jury, was continued in New Brunswick, yesterday afternoon, when the State concluded its side of the case. Some surprise was occasioned this morning, when Layer Harry Cook of counsel for Martine, announced that he would introduce no witnesses in the defense. Instead, he occupied about an hour and a half in summing up. Prosecutor taking about the same time. The case was given to the jury at 11:30 o'clock and it is the general opinion that there will be a disagreement.

Martine was indicted on charges of arson and attempted incendiarism, it being alleged that he set fire to William E. Van Court's barn at Oak Tree and attempted to set fire to his house. The barn and contents were destroyed. The move of Lawyer Cook in making no defense was considered a clever one by disinterested parties.

CHARTER DAY REPORTS

Considerable Progress Made by Committees Board of Trade Hears.

WANT THE CITY TO GIVE $1,000.

Trade Board Appropriates $300—Some Members Contribute $300 More.

Encouraging reports from the heads of the various committees in charge of the arrangements for the Charter-Day celebration, July 5, 6 and 7, were received at the monthly meeting of the Board of Trade Thursday, and incidentally there was some straight talk right from the shoulder, which made the members sit up and listen. Among those who spoke their minds were Newton B. Smalley and F. A. Duttenhofer.

The former Mayor of the borough said that he was glad to learn that the celebration was to include not only the fortieth anniversary of the granting of the city charter, but also the twenty-fifth anniversary of the borough. He believed that the affair should be a first-class one in every respect and that the city and borough governments together should appropriate not less than $2,500 and an equal sum should be raised outside. "Only $5,000 will do nothing," said Mr. Smalley. "This Board of Trade is not a financial institution. Judging by the past the members are looking for 'the long green' to conduct their business and the most satisfactory way of raising funds for such a celebration is through the governing bodies."

F. A. Duttenhofer referred to the fact that there had been some dissention because of an impression that the Board wanted to "run the whole thing." This he declared was a mistake. He urged that the Board be made not too prominent, but that it do all that is possible to bring about the united co-operation of all the civic organizations, lodges, etc., which in his opinion is the only way to insure success. He declared that this is no one-man affair and the quicker this was understood the better it would be for everybody.

L. B. Woolston, who presided in the absence of President H. W. Marshall, as chairman of the grounds and fireworks' committee, stated that efforts are being made to secure the Hyde property, back of the Children's Home on Franklin street, the borough.

As to the music, Chairman B. Frank Coriell said that nothing had been done except to get options on bands. It was found that at least $100 and expenses would be needed for each band, but further plans would be delayed until some idea of the amount of money to be available is learned.

Reporting for the finance committee, E. M. Laing stated that the work is progressing and that he had received assurances of receiving several good sized subscriptions. The committee had decided that at least $5,000 will be needed to celebrate properly.

Speaking for the borough, Mayor Samuel Townsend said that he was glad to know that it was to be a joint affair, although Mr. Laing explained that this had been merely a suggestion to the incorporators if it met with the approval of the borough. Mr. Townsend said that the matter would be considered at the meeting of the Borough Council tonight. He was pleased to think that there is no difference in the enthusiasm shown in Plainfield and North Plainfield members of the Board; all seem to be working toward one common end.

Captain W. C. Smith, general chairman of all committees, presented a brief report, showing that progress is being made by each committee and he said that there is no doubt but that the first day of the celebration will be a great success. As to the other two days, it is up to the merchants of the city to see that the program is carried out successfully.

It being the opinion of the Board that as a body it should make an appropriation, it was decided to contribute $300 toward the general fund. William R. Townsend, secretary to Mayor Hadley Fisk, was introduced, and he explained that at the request of Mr. Fisk he had come to the meeting to learn exactly what the Board desired of Mr. Fisk and how much money would be required from the city. He was given to understand that $1,000 from the city would be acceptable.

The Board decided to present a regular request to both the Common Council of Plainfield and the Borough Council for appropriations, it having been understood that under the law these bodies are at liberty to contribute toward such affairs.

After the meeting all were invited to subscribe to the general fund and in this way about $300 was pledged toward the celebration.

HUNT CLUB BALL TEAM

Watchung to Meet Englewood, Montclair and Other Clubs on the Diamond.

MORRIS J. DUMONT CAPTAIN.

Plans Made at a Dinner Last Night

—H. E. Butler Manager

—To Arrange Schedule.

In addition to promoting such sports as steeplechases and tennis, the members of the Watchung Hunt Club have now decided to organize a baseball team and devote considerable time to developing a strong aggregation to compete with the Englewood Field Club, New York A. C., Orange, Montclair and others of like strength and popularity. Among the membership of the club are to be found many old college players and they are just as enthusiastic as ever.

For the purpose of getting matters in shape, plans were discussed at a dinner given at the club Friday to about twenty-five interested members. At this time Morris J. Dumont was chosen captain of the team; H. E. Butler, manager, and these two together with Arthur E. Otterson will comprise the committee on baseball. A team will be organized at once, practice begun and a schedule arranged. The club has about forty acres which can be used for baseball, making one of the finest fields in the State for that purpose.

The tennis courts are about completed and the work on the steeplechase, which will be the finest in the country, is being pushed with all possible speed and everything will be in readiness for the race meeting on May 29. Other improvements at the clubhouse is the building of an addition, with a floor space almost equal to that at the Casino, to be used for dancing and receptions of all kinds. This will be completed early in the summer.

MRS. JOHN H. HONEYMAN IS DEAD AT KNOXVILLE

Mrs. Kate Ellis Honeyman, wife of John H. Honeyman, formerly of this city, died Friday night at her home in Knoxville, Tenn., following a severe illness which began last February, shortly following a visit at the home of Dr. and Mrs. D. C. Adams and Mrs. Elizabeth A. Parse on Grove street. After leaving Plainfield she went to New York to consult a specialist and after she reached her home she was never able to leave it again. Death was due to a complication of troubles.

Mrs. Honeyman, who resided in Plainfield nineteen years ago and who was a frequent visitor here since, had a large number of friends and acquaintances in Plainfield. She was a step-daughter of the late R. H. Westervelt, of New York. She was a devoted Christian woman and a faithful member of the Congregational church, in Knoxville. For several years prior to her death she was totally blind. Besides a husband, who is also well-known here, having been engaged in business in Plainfield for many years, Mrs. Honeyman leaves two children, Miss Edith Honeyman, who lived at home, and Ellis Honeyman, who resides in Arizona, where he holds a responsible position with a large chemical works.

MEDICAL INSPECTION OF SCHOOLS HIS THEME

On account of illness Dr. D. Richards Graff, of Somerville, was unable to read her paper on "Medical Inspection of School Children," before the Plainfield Mothers' Association at the High School, Friday afternoon and Miss Marjorie Phillips, of this city, was called upon to present the paper, which treated with advanced ideas relative to the medical inspection of school children. Dr. Graff is a practicing physician at Somerville, and has had considerable experience in the inspection of children, especially in New York, where she formerly lived.

Some of the suggestions offered were considered excellent, a few of them have already been incorporated in the conduct of the Plainfield schools. After the reading of the paper there was an informal discussion of the subject, which proved beneficial. In the absence of the president, Mrs. F. L. Holt was in the chair.

To Parade Amity Cart.

The North Plainfield Council last night granted a request fro mthe Borough Exempts allowing them to store the Amity silver hose cart, owned by the Plainfield Exempt Firemen's Association, at the borough headquarters while it is being repolished. The North Plainfield exempts plan to haul it in a parade at Newark on June 14. The cart originally was the property of the old Amity Volunteer Fire Company, of New York, and cost $10,000.

ARBOR DAY EXERCISES AT OAK TREE SCHOOL

Arbor day exercises at the Oak Tree public school were held in Marconnier chapel Friday afternoon and were a decided success. There was a full attendance and the pupils performed their part in marching, speaking and singing perfectly, reflecting great credit on those who had instructed and trained them. There was a large attendance of parents and friends to witness the exercises and they showed their delight and appreciation of all that was done.

The exercises were in charge of Miss Josephine Flanagan, the teacher, and her assistant teacher, Miss Jenny Lupo. Miss Helen Martin was the pianist.

The program follows:

REV. SAMUEL HERVITZ TELLS OF MISSION WORK

On the invitation of Mrs. Charles F. Dayton, of East Sixth street, the Women's Mission Circle of the Second Reformed church held a conference at her home, Friday afternoon. The feature was the address by Rev. Samuel Hervitz, who is engaged in work in Newark among the Jews, under the auspices of the New Jersey Baptist State Convention.

Mr. Hervitz explained that he entered upon this work twelve years ago and during that time a free medical dispensary has been established, also a sewing school and there have been many conversions. The speaker told of the manner in which he was persecuted by those who are constantly opposing him, but stated that he is encouraged by the good results.

After the address, there was a social hour and refreshments were served by Mrs. Dayton. During this time there was an informal discussion of home mission work and all had an opportunity to meet Mr. Hervitz and speak words of encouragement.

"THE MAGISTRATE."

A. M. Abbott to Take a Juvenile Part.

One of the members of the Park Comedy Club, who will take part in the play, "The Magistrate," to be presented at the New Plainfield theatre, on Friday evening, May 21, will be A. M. Abbott, who, it will be remembered, gave such a humorous portrayal of "Reddy" the burglar in "Officer Cavilkan" given by the Comedy Club last year. Mr. Abbott is cast for Cis Farringdon in this year's play and it is said will render this juvenile part in a highly creditable manner.

Herbert R. Rogers will take the double role of Sergeant Lugg and Constable Harris. This will be Mr. Rogers' first appearance as a member of the Comedy Club, but it is predicted that these parts will be extremely well done by this clever young actor.

Tickets will be on sale and may be exchanged at the box office next Friday.

To Study Medicine.

R. F. Kieffer, instructor in mathematics and science at the North Plainfield High School, will enter the Johns Hopkins University, Baltimore, Md., next fall, where he will take up the study of medicine. Mr. Kieffer has been an instructor in the borough schools since his graduation from Franklin and Marshall College two years ago.

CHURCH ATTENDANCE WORKERS AT SUPPER

Seventy-two members of the church attendance bands of Hope chapel enjoyed an excellent supper in the chapel last night. Of the two bands, the boys, who are the reds, had thirty-seven present, the blues, represented by the girls, had thirty-five present. The supper was served in the part of the Sunday-school room, the tables being decorated with peach and almond blossoms.

Rev. L. R. Howard, pastor, gave a talk in which he reviewed the excellent record in church attendance on the part of the members during the past four months. He said that a picnic would be given the bands during the summer. This announcement was met with shouts and laughter. The girls had for favors fancy paper napkins and paper caps to match.

A few remarks were also made by G. Herbert Condict, superintendent of the Sunday-school; also by George Leighs, Clinton Firstbrook and Miss Mabel Hunter, all of the speeches were in an optimistic vein in which the members were praised for their faithful attendance and expressive of the hope that the enthusiasm would continue.

The committee which had charge of the affair and served the supper comprised George Leighs, chairman; Mrs. Walter Bradford, Mrs. Marcus W. Clark, Miss Bertha Jones, Miss Clara Hunter, Mrs. G. H. Whyte, Rev. L. R. Howard and Allen Snyder.

TYPICAL COUNTRY FAIR ON WEDNESDAY, MAY 26

The Cheerful Workers' Circle of The King's Daughters is planning a unique entertainment this spring to be in the form of an old-tashioned country fair, with a tin-type man, a gypsy fortune-teller, a side-show and boats on the lake as a few of the attractions. The affair is to be held on Wednesday, May 26, at the residence of Mrs. Frederick G. Mead on East Front street.

The officers of the circle are: President, Miss Dorothy Fleming; vice president, Miss Grace Kaufman; secretary, Miss Euphemia Bakewell; treasurer, Miss Margaret Mead. The members are the Misses Grace Burke, Florence Curtis, Louise Curtis, Maysie Day, Elsie Goddard, Jean Griscom, Elsie Harman, Helen Harman, Virginia Hegeman, Malda Hyde, Jeanette Kieffert, Margaret Leal, Ursula Rowland, Abi Sykes, Nancy VanDeventer, Marguerite VanDeventer, Mary T. Wadsworth, Eva G. Browne and Mrs. R. S. Rowland and Mrs. Lewis Squires.

The officers and members are now busily engaged in completing the details for the affair, and the plans, if carried out on the proposed elaborate scale, will be one of the most attractive held here this season.

DR. CLARK, C.E. FOUNDER, COMING TO CONVENTION

Rev. Dr. Francis E. Clark, the founder of the Christian Endeavor movement and society, will be one of the chief speakers at the State Endeavor convention to be held in Plainfield in October. Announcement of this was made today by the committee in charge of the program. Of significant, is that the last time Dr. Clark spoke here, it was just prior to making a trip around the world. His presence here in October will be just prior to taking his fifth world tour.

The first Christian Endeavor Society was organized in Williston church, Portland, Maine, in 1881, and today the society numbers four million members, there being eighty languages represented and sixty denominations. There is a society in every country on the globe. Rev. Abraham Duryea is chairman of the program committee and he will make the important announcements from time to time.

Miss Shinn Resigns from Board.

At a recent board meeting at Boston of the Woman's Baptist Foreign Missionary Society, the resignation of Miss Julia G. Shinn from the office of secretary of the Home Department, was regretfully accepted. Many friends in this city will be interested to know that Miss Shinn will be married next month to Professor St. John, of Rangon College, Burmah, and at this country on furlough at the home of his parents in St. Louis, Mo.

Will Sing the Old Songs.

The concert to be given at the Plainfield High School, Monday night, May 17, to consist of old-time songs which are now famous, should be of unusual interest, especially when one considers the ability of the artists. The singers will be Dr. Cuthbert Bufft, base; Miss Ellen Learned, contralto; Mrs. Edith Chapman-Goold, soprano; John Young, tenor. The program will consist entirely of the old songs, such as "Rocked in the Cradle of the Deep," "Robin Adair," "Home, Sweet Home," and many others

SOPHOMORES WIN THE CUP.

Many Closely Contested Events in Annual Track Meet of Plainfield High School Athletic Association.

NEWLY-WEDDED COUPLE IS HAPPILY SURPRISED.

Mr. and Mrs. Harry W. Gilmore, who were recently married, were given a complete surprise Friday by the Young Men's Bible Class of Monroe Avenue M. E. church, of which Mr. Gilmore is the president. The surprise was given at the home of Mr. and Mrs. John J. Praed, of West Sixth street. Mr. Praed is the teacher and leader of the class and he had invited Mr. and Mrs. Gilmore to dinner. The couple was greatly surprised after dinner, when sixteen members of the class walked into the room.

Mr. and Mrs. Gilmore received a handsome mahogany rocking chair, the gift of the class. Mr. Gilmore made a happy response to the presentation, thanking the entire class for the remembrance. A program of vocal and instrumental music was then enjoyed and refreshments were served.

TO SAVE A WOMAN HE STRUCK HUSBAND

Because, as he alleged, he didn't want to see Mrs. Edward B. Ivory brought into police court on an assault charge, Walter Gulick deliberately struck the husband on East Front street Friday when the married couple had attracted the attention of Patrolman Vanderweg by a street quarrel, and was himself arrested, while Mrs. Ivory, with a woman friend of Gulick's passed on home free from police court troubles. This strategy was the reason for his arrest, according to the story told by Gulick before City Judge Runyon at the session of court today. Each of the men was fined $3.

It appears that Ivory has a jealous disposition and a quick temper, according to his own acknowledgment; apparently his wife has the same temperamental qualities. At about noon yesterday, Mrs. Ivory answered a telephone call from the wife of her husband's "boss," and her jealousy was aroused because the woman refused to tell her name over the 'phone. When husband and wife went out together in the evening, along with Gulick and a woman friend of his, the married pair had some words, prompted by jealousy. Ivory got pretty well worked up and is said to have threatened his wife. The officer came along to find out the trouble, but Gulick, urging the woman to pass on, went up to his friend and struck him, so as to give the appearance that the two men were in a fight and free Mrs. Ivory from blame.

FIGHT REFEREE BROKE JOHN NEWMAN'S NOSE

Thomas Sheridan, who attempted to referee a private mill between John Cahill and John Newman on the Liberty street railroad embankment last Saturday night, was so disgusted with the pugilistic exhibition that he sailed in himself and broke Newman's nose with one powerful blow. Sheridan says: "If anybody can fight, he ought to be able to make a living at it," but his ability landed him in police court, along with Newman. The arrests were made by Patrolman Sweeney.

Sheridan is a good fight manager all right, because when he found that the two men wanted to scrap, he studied up the location of the cop and led them quietly toward the brook, where the mill was to have been held. Considerable beer, absorbed by the principals, asserted itself by thoroughly arousing their fighting blood by the time they reached the railroad bridge. They would hear of no further delay and, climbing the embankment, sailed into each other. "Say, Judge, that fight made me sick," said Sheridan in court this morning, "why those fellows couldn't hardly stand up long enough to hit each other. I tell you it was awful."

Sheridan told a straight story at his hearing Saturday and enlightened the court on some puzzling points about the encounter. Sentence was suspended. Newman and he have been in police court once before. That was on October 11, 1905, when they were arrested together. They s cured their freedom by promising the court that they would stay away from police headquarters for four years more, and bade a thankful farewell to Judge Runyon until 1913.

HOLY NAME SOCIETY ENJOY SOCIAL EVENING.

The Holy Name Society of St. Mary's church held a social last night for members and friends. A feature of which was a euchre and checker party. Frank Donnelly won the checker game, Edward Murphy being second. Edward Hanrahan won the euchre game, and Frank Winnefield was second.

After the games there was a lively debate on the question, "Resolved, That Summer Sports are Preferable to Those of Winter." The affirmative side was represented by William Sullivan, Frank Donnelly and Frank Cullen, and won the debate, although James McName, Edward Hanrahan and Garret Keating presented a strong argument. The society was then entertained by James Moore, who appeared in monologue work. The affair was in charge of Father B. M. Bogan.

Elected Member of Exchange.

Edmund Rushmore, the real estate broker, of this city, has received notification of his election to membership in the New Jersey-New York Real Estate Exchange. Since engaging in the real estate business Mr. Rushmore has made rapid progress, having completed a number of important deals in local property. He is president of the Park Club, a member of the Borough Board of Education and vice president of the Board of Trade. He has been a resident of this city for nineteen years. Yesterday Mr. Rushmore rented to J. R. Hefti, of Boston, a member of the firm of Lawrence & Co., Boston, New York and Philadelphia, Mrs. Julia Wyckoff's residence on Putnam avenue, and will occupy the same June 1.

TO REMEDY DEFECTS IN VETOED MARRIAGE ACT

An effort will be made at the next session of the Legislature to secure the passage of a marriage license law remedying the defects which caused Governor Fort to veto the Brown bill passed at the last session. At the present time New Jersey and South Carolina are the only States which permit marriages without first obtaining a license, and this fact is said to be responsible for many of the runaway matches which are now consummated in this State. Speaking of the failure of the Brown bill to become a law, David S. South, registrar of vital statistics of New Jersey, said yesterday:

"For a number of years New Jersey has been the matrimonial dumping ground for runaway couples from the States of Pennsylvania and New York, where a marriage license is necessary. In 1897 a marriage license act was passed by the Legislature, for the purpose of preventing persons who wished to evade the marriage license laws of New York and Pennsylvania coming to New Jersey and marrying, and for a short period of time served the purpose. At the present time, however, this State is again the Gretna Green for runaway couples, and there appears to be no restraint on hasty and improper marriages.

"In most countries it has not been considered objectionable to demand that either the church or State have due notice of, the contemplated union, on the ground that their interests are deeply involved in the act. The constitutional governments of modern civilization concern themselves with the act and conditions of marriage, not merely because of certain legal necessities growing out of it as a compact and contract, but because its conditions concern national existence and national permanency.

"The State authorities regularly have requests from the parents of runaway sons and daughters for information as to the fact of their marriage, and many times, when the certificate is produced, a tearful scene ensues. Midnight marriages are a regular thing in some cities of this State, and it is hardly necessary to say that a large percentage of such marriages end in disgrace and divorce."

FORT TO RE-APPOINT FREDERIC H. ANDREWS

Frederic H. Andrews will be reappointed a member of the Union County Board for the Equalization of Taxes, Governor Fort having so informed Senator Frank E. Ackerman. The Union solon, in compliance with numerous requests throughout the county, recommended that Mr. Andrews be reappointed explaining to the Governor that he had done good work in that capacity and that the best interests of the county would be served by continuing him in office.

At present the Union county board consists of but two members although the law provides for three. This condition is due to the fact that the Governor has been slow in making appointments and as Mr. Andrews' term expired on May 1, it is impossible for his colleagues to legally do business until the vacancy is filled. It is generally expected that Mr. Andrews will receive his new certificate some time next week.

WESTFIELD BOY SAYS HE WON'T DRINK AGAIN

Befuddled with liquor, Charles Eustice, a nineteen-year-old Westfield boy, climbed in the window of a Park avenue place of business early Saturday, while looking for his home, and went to sleep. He was found by Patrolman Tobias Nolan at about 4 o'clock this morning, and was arrested.

Eustice went to the circus yesterday, and while at the grounds, met a fresh friend who handed the contents of a pint flask with him. He contracted quite a jag, and hasn't a very clear idea of anything that happened after he left the show grounds. He assured the court that he had not bought the liquor, and although he has been drinking "just to be sociable with the fellows" for about two years, he said he had never taken anything in a saloon. Judge Runyon assured him that a person could get drunk into a drunkard just by taking the stuff "off the hip," and advised him to be less "sociable" in future, as a necessity dependant upon his growing up to be a decent man. Eustice was much mortified by his night of debauchery, and took his lesson with keen contrition. He assured the court that he would never drink again, and sentence was suspended.

N. P. H. S. Honors.

BOROUGH COUNCIL BUSY

Plans to Deposit Funds in New Bank and to Take Part in a Celebration.

MAYOR TOWNSEND'S VIEWS.

Special Meeting Next Wednesday for Consideration of Banking Proposition—Matters of Routine.

Mayor Samuel Townsend at the No. Plainfield Council meeting Friday proposed that inasmuch as the borough now has a National bank of its own, the municipal funds should be deposited with that institution. His Honor stated that he was a firm believer in "home trade" and that as the Borough National Bank is a local institution it should be given preference. He also suggested that the finance committee ascertain what rate of interest could be obtained and what charge would be made for temporary loans from time to time.

Councilman M. C. VanArsdale, a director of the North Plainfield bank, coincided with Mayor Townsend's views and said that he was glad to see a local institution patronized whether he was personally concerned or not. At the suggestion of Councilman Charles L. Nichols, it was decided that the finance committee should immediately confer with the bank's directors and that a special meeting be held by the borough fathers on Wednesday night to receive its report.

Councilman Lemuel B. Woolston, M. C. VanArsdale and William L. Smalley, Jr., were appointed a committee to consult with the committee of the Plainfield Common Council as to what part the two municipalities should take in the Charter Day celebration to be held on July 5, 6 and 7. Mayor Townsend explained that he had conferred with Mayor Mark and that the city executive had expressed himself as heartily in favor of the celebration. The borough mayor added that as originally planned the event was to mark the fortieth anniversary of the granting of the city charter but as it could also mark the twenty-fifth anniversary of the incorporation of the borough, in his opinion a joint celebration would be desirable.

The city fathers have been asked to appropriate $1,000 for the affair but as yet the North Plainfield Council has not been requested to make any appropriation. It is expected, however, that the borough will gladly bear its proportionate share of the expense.

It was explained by Mayor Townsend that the time is drawing near for the annual tax assessments and that therefore he advised each taxpayer to confer with the assessor provided he had any complaint regarding his assessments.

R. A. STOUT IN CHARGE OF REFORMED CHAPEL

Further progress in the matter of inaugurating a religious work in the East End of the city under the auspices of the Board of Domestic Missions of the Reformed Church in America, was made Friday, when it was decided that Royal A. Stout, a young man now a student in the Theological Seminary, New Brunswick, should be placed in charge of the work.

Mr. Stout was sent to Plainfield yesterday by the board to consult with Rev. John Y. Brock, pastor of Trinity Reformed church and took over the territory. If everything was satisfactory, Mr. Broek was instructed to inform Mr. Stout of that fact and make arrangements for starting the work. Mr. Stout will commence his visitation work on Monday, May 24, and have charge of the chapel during the summer months. He was formerly engaged in a similar work in Oklohoma, and has a promising future.

Mr. Broek has received word from the board of missions that the work on the new chapel to be erected on Leland avenue be pushed as rapidly as possible so that there may be no delay in the religious undertaking. The expenses of Mr. Stout will be borne by the board of missions.

Mr. Phelps Engaged.

The current issue of the Yale Alumni Weekly contains the following item, which will be of interest to the people of Plainfield: "Mr. and Mrs. Edmund Halladay, of Suffield, Conn., announce the engagement of their daughter, Miss Clarissa J. Halladay, to Benjamin C. Phelps, of North Plainfield." Mr. Phelps is the principal of the North Plainfield High School. He is a graduate of Yale and he has many friends in both city and borough.

Swedish Iron Ore for America.

An attempt is to be made to ship Swedish iron ore to the United States, and a few days ago the first cargo of 5,000 tons left Narvik for Philadelphia. If the results of the first shipment are satisfactory, regular shipments will be made, and in the opinion of the Swedish iron producers the sale of the ore in the United States will compensate them for the present stagnation in the markets of Europe.

SEVEN COURSE DINNER; NO KNIFE, FORK OR SPOON

Perhaps the most novel dinner given in this city in years was a seven-course birthday repast, arranged by a Plainfielder for his wife, to which a dozen friends were invited on Saturday night. The remarkable feature of the dinner was that not a knife, fork or spoon of any kind was used, the guests partaking of the meal only with their fingers. The Plainfielder attempted the affair to prove that one can eat a dinner without such conveniences and at the same time not be put to any trouble.

The family silver was placed in a large bowl in the centre of the table to let the guests know that they owned such things, but the use of it was not permitted. The menu consisted of lettuce, soup, broiled mushrooms, lamb, asparagus, German fried potatoes, grape-fruit salad, strawberries and cream, coffee and cigars.

The experiment was greatly enjoyed by all the guests and they were quite surprised to find that they could eat such a meal without even soiling their fingers to any appreciable extent. When first the proposition was suggested by the man in his wife, she laughed, but he explained that he wanted to take her back to childhood days, and the scheme worked so well that it is said that it is likely to become a fad in Plainfield.

GOLF SEASON OPENS AT THE COUNTRY CLUB

The Plainfield Country Club began its active season on Saturday with the initial play for the spring handicap cups. It was an ideal day for the event and with the course in perfect condition, there was nothing to mar the competition. There was a large field out to engage in play for the cups and everything started off under most favorable auspices. The clubhouse, while not just suited for the best of service at present, was the mecca for the members and their friends and it is hoped that when the improvements are completed, it will meet "a long felt want."

The Golf committee has divided the Classes A and B this year by placing all players with a handicap of 14 or under in Class A and those of 18 and over in Class B. This will make it a little harder for Class A contestants and serve to encourage those of the other class.

On Saturday the honors for Class A were won by Owen H. Fleming, W. Lester Glenney and Roger F. Murray, while in Class B the point-winners were E. P. Goodman, Hugh F. Fox and Howard Lapsley. The best scores for the day are as follows:

Class A—Owen H. Fleming, 88, 12-76; W. Lester Glenney, 83, 4-79; Roger F. Murray, 90, 10-80; 18-87; Arthur Murphy, 97, 8-89; Arthur L. Wills, 99, 10-89.

Funeral of Mrs. Phebe H. Vail.

The funeral services of Mrs. Phebe H. Vail were held from the Friends' meeting-house on Watchung avenue, Sunday afternoon at 3 o'clock and were largely attended by relatives and friends. There were two addresses, one by W. D. Williams, of this city, and the other by James C. Adams, of Newark, both speaking words of eulogy concerning the devoted Christian life of the departed. The burial was in the cemetery back of the meeting-house, the pall-bearers being Charles E. Vail, Fowler W. Vail, E. M. Vail, C. B. Vail, W. H. Vail and R. W. Vail, all relatives of Mrs. Vail.

Held a Successful Cake Sale.

Henry Seader's Sunday-school class of young women held a successful cake sale in the lecture room of the church Saturday afternoon. Between $11 and $12 was realized and this sum will be used to assist in paying the cost for re-graining the front doors of the church.

N. Y. AMUSEMENTS.

Whatever "Going Some" does, it never belies its name. The action and the laughs are so rapid—or, rather, constant, for there are no intervals of inaction or rest from laughter—that one does not wonder that it took two scintillating brains to produce it. Both Paul Armstrong and Rex E. Beach are spontaneous humorists, and this rattling Western farce, which is playing at the Belasco theatre, plainly shows the originality of the former and the rugged strength of the latter. It is abounding in youth and beauty, and who does not enjoy these two factors in a play? Belasco perfection as to atmosphere, costuming and accuracy of detail seems to be a part of the house, for though this is a Shubert and not a Belasco production, it is there as apparently as in any of the Belasco handiwork. This is a play which is so breezy and refreshing that even the humid breath of a New York summer cannot wither the crisp bloom of its vivacity.—Philip Mindil, N. Y. Journal of Commerce.

Eva Tanguay is at the head of an excellent bill at the Colonial for the week ensuing where she begins her second and last week. Several new songs are in the cyclonic comedienne's repertoire and she interprets them in her own inimitable style. "I Don't Care," one of the latest successes is among the topliners. This is a musical comedy with twenty-five people, included in which are several pretty girls in handsome costumes and plenty of tuneful musical numbers. Stuart Hall, the clever monologist, will be on hand to entertain with his funny stories and songs. Among the other attractions are: Linton & Lawrence in a singing and talking act; Jean Clermont's Circus; Griff, the English comedy juggler; the Carlsey Brothers, dancers, and several minor features. On Sunday, concerts will be given as usual.

Ten thousand persons will have an opportunity of witnessing Maude Adams' first appearance as "Joan of Arc"—in The Stadium at Harvard, on the evening of June 22. The "bowl" of The Stadium will be used for seating purposes and will give the capacity mentioned above. At this rate Miss Adams will more than maintain her record for playing to large audiences. All that portion of the field and a large section of the Gridiron that faces the "bowl" will be used for the stage. The actors will tread upon the turf. A special scenic setting, adaptable to the Stadium, is being built under the direction of Ernest Gros. In the matter of costumes Miss Adams has the co-operation of John Alexander, the artist. Thousand supernumeraries will be employed by Miss Adams. These will be in charge of fifty super captains, and to dress them there will be a small host of armorers, costume masters, wardrobe masters, etc. Every essential, down to a pin, necessary for the costuming of this horde, will be transplanted to The Stadium. In addition Miss Adams' master electrician will install a complete electrical plant in The Stadium, sufficient to furnish every requisite of lighting, etc., known to the modern theatre, only on a scale vastly larger than any hitherto contemplated in America.

The ninth week of Mr. Mantell's season in New York and the fourth week of his engagement at the Academy of Music will be ushered in Monday with "Richard III," a role in which Mr. Mantell stands pre-eminent. The concensus of opinion of the best critics of the English speaking stage voices the noble authority and splendid conception with which the tragedian invests the role of the crooked limbed king. This great and striking play, always a favorite with theatre-goers, should arouse interest in this revival next week. "Richard III" will be repeated Tuesday, Wednesday and Saturday nights. The first romantic play of Mr. Mantell's season is announced in the production on "The Lady of Lyons" at the Wednesday matinee in which Mr. Mantell will appear as the sentimental hero, Claude Melnotte, in Bulwer Lytton's play. Thursday, Friday and Saturday matinee Mr. Mantell will reappear in Richelieu in which he scored such a triumph last month on Broadway. This striking and picturesque drama is always a prime favorite in the classic repertoire and its announcement has already stimulated a large seat sale for the engagement. On Mr. Mantell will make a digression into the romantic field, reappearing as Raphael, the sculptor, in the classic romance, "The Marble Heart" or "The Sculptor's Dream."

Abraham Lincoln Erlanger, of the firm of Klaw & Erlanger, is back at his desk after a month's tour in Europe. While abroad he visited about twenty theatres. He observed that without a single exception every popular song in the plays he saw was written by an American. The plays themselves were taken without credit, financial or otherwise, from American authors. The performances, Mr. Erlanger witnessed proved profitable in showing him what to avoid when he begins to rehearse the productions for next season. The only features of the foreign stage which excel those of America is the painting of scenery, which is magnificent, and the superiority of the European orchestras. The arrangements for the production of "Little Nemo" in London were left in the hands of his partner, Charles Frohman. His visit, he announces, gave *him the ambition to present in Lon*don, Berlin, Paris and Vienna a company of ladies and gentlemen in a real American production. In order that the venture may have the advantage of reputation and not be a setback instead of an advance, the attraction that he has in mind for this purpose (which in Europe they call an American invasion) is Mlle. Genec in her new play by Harry B. Smith, with an American company, costumes, scenery and music.

LITERARY

Jack London is represented in the May issue of the Smart Set by one of the most charming stories he has ever written. "Aloha Oe" is a tale of Hawaii, full of the romance and perfume of that sun-bathed island empire. In the development of the story is shown the basic idea of race-difference that introduces an interesting problem apropos of this country and its island dependencies.

A score of unusual articles of timely interest to all people who love the outdoors are to be found in the May number of Recreation which is now on news-stands. Recreation makes one claim for distinction, which is certainly warranted by the current issue. Its articles and pictures—there are 123 fine reproductions from photographs in the May number—are from the pens and cameras of men who have "been there."

LIFE OF JOHN MILTON THEME OF DR. LOOMIS

Rev. Dr. S. L. Loomis, formerly of Boston, made an address on the life of John Milton at the Congregational church Sunday in connection with the evening service. The speaker particularly emphasized the religious life of the great author and poet, declaring that his religious writings place him as one of the deepest thinkers of his time, and that as a composer of hymns, his work is at least on a par with that of any church music.

Mr. Loomis said that of all the men of letters there is none who can or will compare with the great poet, except, perhaps, Carlisle, and he spoke at length upon the religious influences which acted upon the young Milton. He was the grandson of a staunch Catholic, he said, and his father was a Puritan by conviction. The son was a prominent factor in the era of the Reformation, and spent years of his life in earnest work and writing upon the movement.

Only Lost a Few Planks.

One of the early morning commuter trains to New York Saturday morning wrecked a wagon at Cranford, the horse escaping. The demolished wagon landed parallel with the train. Andrew McCardell was asked by Jabez Gilbert if the Republican party had gone to pieces. "No," replied Mr. McCardell, "we've only lost a few planks."

CLINTON AVE. SHUT OUT BY THE M'NULTY BROS.

Because of a misplay in right field the McNulty Brothers nine, of New York, defeated the Clinton Avenue team at Crescent Oval Saturday afternoon, by a score of 2-0. The runs were made in the second inning. The contest was a pitchers' battle between Ortlieb and Morris; the Clinton Avenue twirler was touched for four hits and fanned eleven, while Morris allowed but three singles.

WHAT NEW JERSEY COULD DO IN IRELAND

The Irish home going movement, which is expected to culminate in 1910 with the emigration of 50,000 Irish Americans back to the "old sod," is a matter of much interest to New Jersey, as well as to the rest of this great country, says the Newark Evening News. It is a movement that has its natural springs in the heart of every man who has true Irish blood in his veins, and it is a movement that appeals to the patriotic of every nationality on the globe.

The object is to promote an industrial revival in that beautiful but long misgoverned island, to develop its natural resources, to build up its agriculture, its manufacturers, its commerce; to inspire new life, new interest, new hope, new enthusiasm in the people who have not left the evergreen isle but have struggled hard and unsuccessfully to better their conditions, happily now measurable success in the past decade or two.

The idea is that Irishmen who have attained success in the United States can go back to Ireland and tell the people there how it is done; how they can make the best of their opportunities; how they can secure legislation; how they can make Ireland great, even if they cannot make it free and independent.

It is worth while to think what New Jersey could contribute to this army of 50,000 professional men; men who were either born in Ireland or who are proud of their Irish parentage. There's David Baird for example. He could tell how to beat the government and how to control members of Parliament. And next might come Congressman Hughes, of Paterson, and Kinkead, of Jersey City, both natives of Ireland, who could tell what laws should be made and how to make them. And at this work Assemblyman Davidson, of Jersey City, a native Irishman, could give valuable points.

Going a little wider afield, William McAdoo, a somewhat interesting personage in New Jersey, would no doubt undertake to tunnel from Dublin to Hollyhead. Mayor McBride, of Paterson, might govern Sligo for a while, the two cities being about of a size, and Brigadier General Meany might put the whole Irish army on a war footing.

This by no means exhausts the list, for there is yet "Tom" Hillery, who was born in Ireland, and "Jimmy" Kerney and "Bob" Bremer, who could show the newspaper fraternity in Ireland many tricks they never yet dreamed of. New Jersey could in a word, supply a very *large proportion of the 50,000 visi*tors to Erin in 1910, and Kilkenny, their meeting place would not be able to hold them. A very few of them, perhaps, Ireland might keep if it wanted to, but New Jersey would insist all the rest return when their mission is accomplished.

THE PARK CLUB BEATS Y. M. C. A. AGGREGATION

The newly organized Park Club nine defeated the Y. M. C. A. team by a score of 6 to 2 in a well-played game at Hope Common Saturday afternoon. The new team showed its strength both in the field and at the bat, and Van Zandt was effective in the box, fanning seven and keeping the six hits scattered.

Music was furnished by Miss Mary Collier. The committee in charge comprised C. Bttram Leggett and Geoge Bentley.

KEEPING NEGRO OUT OF HOME HE BOUGHT

With a negro clergyman unquestionably the legal owner of the handsome dwelling house at East Orange just sold by their mother, Floyd D. and Elmer V. Soverel, members of one of the original families of the Oranges, stand guard today and refused to let the new purchaser take possession of his property. They assert that their mother, Mrs. Wallace M. Soverel, was tricked by a real estate dealer, and had no suspicion that the sale was to be made to a negro.

The rightful owner, the Rev. Solomon P. Hood, who is connected with the Board of Foreign Missions and formerly was pastor of a negro church in Orange, attempted to move in yesterday, and it was only then that the significance of the deal became known to Mrs. Soverel. She communicated with her sons and they took up the guard, summoning a policeman to help them out. Under the presentations made at the time by the Soverels the police induced the Hoods not to attempt to move in at that time, and the van carrying their household effects was hauled away again. Late yesterday afternoon Mrs. Soverel moved back into the house, and now the contest will be fought out in the courts.

The sale price as arranged between Mrs. Soverel and the agent was $10,000. Edward D. Berkholz, the agent, who purchased the property ostensibly for Benjamin F. Stasse, required a first payment of $100, it is said, and also demanded the posting of a forfeit of $500 in case the deal should not be consummated. *The significance of the for*feit was not appreciated by the seller until she learned who in fact was the purchaser. No sooner had Stasse obtained the title than he transferred it to Hood. The house is in the centre of an undeveloped tract, and values will tumble if the negro holds possession.

GRACE M. E.'S PASTOR ADDRESSES JR. O. U. A. M.

About one hundred members of the Jr. O. U. A. M., representing Franklin, Somerset, Benevolent and Plainfield Councils, attended divine services at Grace M. E. church, last Sunday, and heard a sermon by Rev. Ora J. Shoop. The quartet choir of the church rendered special music, appropriate to the occasion.

The subject of the discourse was "Remember the Brotherhood," and he based his remarks on the three cardinal principles of the order; "Virtue, Liberty and Patriotism." He lauded these principles taking occasion to explain their true meaning. He said that any organization that would follow the essentials of virtue, liberty and patriotism would become a strong factor in the world and would exert a wide influence for good. The speaker sounded the praises of the order in a way that showed that he had a thorough *knowledge of it. He urged the mem*bers to continue their good work and maintain their stand for the open Bible in the public schools, an American flag from every public school and their protection of the interests of all Americans. The discourse lasted for more than an hour and was listened to with much interest.

Parent Fined One Dollar.

Peter Blume, of Race street, who was arrested a few days ago on a complaint made by Truant Officer Richard McDonald for keeping his daughter out of school, was fined by Borough Recorder Dollyer Tuesday morning. Blume contended that his daughter was old enough to work in the silk factory, but the school records show the girl to be but twelve years of age. At the conclusion of the case Blume promised to send the child to school. He was warned by the Recorder that should any more complaints be made he would be sent to the county jail.

KNIGHTS OF MALTA IN ANNUAL SESSION

The seventeenth annual convoca*tion of the Grand Commandery of* New Jersey, Ancient and Illustrious Order of Knights of Malta, met Friday at Asbury Park, with about 100 delegates from subordinate commanderies and officers of the Grand Commandery in attendance. The convocation elected Somerville for its annual meeting place after two ballots were taken, as Plainfield, Phillipsburg and Elizabeth were also after the honor. At the session yesterday afternoon there was an installation of the following officers:

Grand commander, Edward E. Sa*vill; grand generalissimo*, Walter R. Swift; grand captain-general, Robert Smith; grand recorder, I. C. Bleam; grand treasurer, Charles L. Mohler.

The officers who presided over the session were: Grand Commander William Rolleston, of Paterson; Grand Generalissimo Edward E. Seville, of Trenton; Grand Captain-General Walter R. Swift, of Elizabeth; Grand Prelate James Chalmers, of Paterson; Grand Recorder I. C. Bleam, of Trenton; Grand Treasurer William Brindle, of Pat*erson*; Grand Senior Warden William C. Wigley, of Trenton, and Grand Second Guard William Saunders, of Paterson.

Mr. Cochran, of Paterson, supreme representative, made his annual report, and there was a report of the committee on conditions of the order showing a light decrease in membership of the body since last year, but a growth in financial strength. While in Asbury Park the knights are making their headquarters at the Grand Avenue Hotel. The order was founded in 1048 in Jeru*salem by Crusaders, and has a total* membership of 30,000.

EXCHANGE TO GIVE DELEGATES DINNER

The Board of Governors of the New Jersey-New York Real Estate Exchange are planning a reception to the delegates of the New Jersey Development Federation, which meets for final organization at the rooms of the exchange on Tuesday. On that occasion the federation is to be permanently organized, and at the conclusion of the meeting the delegates are to be the guests of the exchange at a dinner to be tendered in their honor.

The following new members of the exchange were elected at the last meeting: Oliver H. Holt and H. R. Gillette, of New York city, and Charles B. Thomson, of New Monmouth, New Jersey. The board also elected four new governors in the persons of George B. Corsa, Eugene V. Magee, P. S. Parish and Edmund Richmond. A special committee consisting of Messrs. H. A. Rounds, E. H. Lambert and Wm. A. Lambert, was appointed to devise ways and means for listing the property of the members of the exchange and circulating among the members their real estate wants and offers, similar to the plan in use by the Real Estate Board of Brokers of New York city.

The report of the committee in charge of the annual dinner of the exchange was received, and it was the consensus of opinion that the second annual function of the exchange at the Plaza on April 21 was a signal success, and by unanimous vote the dinner committee received the thanks of the board of governors.

GENERAL D. F. COLLINS LOSES HIS LIBEL SUIT

A jury found a verdict of "not guilty" at Elizabeth yesterday for the defendant in the $15,000 libel suit brought by General Dennis F. Collins against the Daily Journal. The case went to the jury soon before four o'clock Monday afternoon. The jury was out fifty minutes.

The trial was one of the most in*teresting ever before Judge Benja*min A. Vail in the Supreme Court. About two score of the most prominent men in the county testified as *witnesses for the plaintiff and de*fendant.

General Collins brought suit because of a published account of an address made by him at the Kern mass meeting in that city last October. He was the Democratic candidate for Mayor at the time.

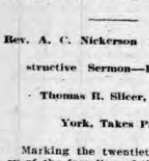
UNITARIANS CELEBRATE TWENTIETH ANNIVERSARY

Reception and Special Services Mark the Anniversary of All Souls' Parish.

PASTOR REVIEWS HISTORY.

Rev. A. C. Nickerson Delivers Instructive Sermon—Rev. Dr. Thomas R. Slicer, of New York, Takes Part.

Marking the twentieth anniversary of the founding of the First Unitarian Society of Plainfield, past and present members gathered at All Souls' church Saturday and Sunday, when a reception and special services were held. The first service was held twenty years ago on Wednesday. The church now has a membership of about a hundred families.



Rev. A. C. Nickerson.

The anniversary reception was held at the church Saturday night, when many former members of the congregation came from out of town to celebrate the occasion. A notable feature was the presence of five of the church members who had attended the first Unitarian services held here. These were Mr. and Mrs. J. O. Osgood, Mrs. Ruth Leonard, Miss Caroline Barber and Miss Edith Leonard. Other former members present were Mrs. William P. Tildon, wife of the first pastor, of Milton, Mass.; Mr. and Mrs. Lewis P. Gaston, of Somerville; Mr. and Mrs. Edgar H. Mumford, of Philadelphia, and Mrs. Edwin W. Conklin, of New York. The reception committee comprised Rev. and Mrs. A. C. Nickerson, Samuel Huntington, Mrs. Ruth Leonard, Mr. and Mrs. J. O. Osgood, Rev. Hobart Clark, the second pastor, and his wife, and Mrs. W. P. Tildon. The church parlors were tastefully decorated with spring flowers and blossoms, and music was furnished by Suhr's orchestra. Refreshments were served.

The anniversary observation Sunday was marked by a historical sermon, delivered by Rev. A. C. Nickerson, the pastor. At the service, he read a letter of congratulation from the venerable Rev. Robert Collyer, former pastor of the Church of the Messiah, New York, who preached at the first Unitarian service held in this city. Rev. Mr. Collyer is now 86 years old. A commemoration ode, written by Mrs. Warren B. Travell, was sung to the tune of "Auld Lang Syne." In the evening, Rev. Thomas R. Slicer, of All Souls' church, New York, preached. The committee in charge of the celebration comprised Warren B. Travell, Stephen R. Krom, Rev. and Mrs. A. C. Nickerson, Mrs. P. K. White and Miss Laura Osgood.

Rev. Mr. Nickerson's sermon follows:

Of the nine Unitarian societies in Northern New Jersey ours is the oldest parish. Could the faithful who were here at its birth have known that their initativewould be followed in two decades by eight groups of people as near them they would have been greatly encouraged. Could they have foreseen all the local difficulties which would beset the coming years they would have been greatly discouraged. Happily for us the spirit of the Most High, which is a spirit of righteousness and peace is making such gains in our day as compensate for all the difficulties which beset those who are in its service. The good spirit has been the Maker and Preserver of this church. We have not been a mighty folk in any ways; we have not had social influence and power in the community, but we have had here the spirit which Paul commends in his wonderful 13th chapter of First Corinthians and which is the heart of the Beatitudes of Jesus. I think the people of this church have lived their religion.

I have been in the ministry long enough to know when the prevailing spirit of a parish is one of kindness and forbearance (always interpreting intentions kindly), considerate, hopeful, generous, appreciative of every good. You make less and less profession, as you go on, either theologically or socially, but I think you "make good" today, and that you will, in the future, grow to better and best.

It is told of the beloved disciple of Jesus, St. John, that, in his old age and feebleness, he was carried by his followers in their arms from place to place, and that his one sermon or text everywhere, was "Little children, love one another!" You were most fortunate in your earliest years to have as your first pastor one in face and tone, a child of the Holy Spirit, who, having served long in larger fields, came in his old age, a most gracious personage, to bless your start with his benediction. I think that the spirit of William P. Tilden, whose name honors our walls today, has been a spirit interfused here, a sacred spirit—

"The fountain light of all our day."

A master light of all our seeing. And when I note here the general absence of that irritating spirit, born of the world and of selfishness, which is at least occasionally transiently present in too many Christians and which you, too, must have striven to avoid. I thank God that the spirit of Jesus Christ, so early come to you in Mr. Tilden, is today here "full of grace and truth."

The first service of Unitarian Christians was held in Plainfield May 12, 1889, and by the courtesy of that parish, in the Seventh-Day Baptist church, the now venerable Dr. Robert Collyer, of New York, preaching the sermon. Before that, however, Mrs. David W. Pond had written on the back of her visiting card an invitation to any sufficiently interested in the formation of a Unitarian society to assemble at the Public Library. She left this card wherever it seemed wise to do so, and the first meeting of Unitarians here was at the library April 10, 1889.

The Rev. Daniel W. Morehouse was at that time our secretary of the Middle States Conference, and he continued the preaching here, begun by Dr. Collyer. Back of Mr. Morehouse were the first trustees of the new church. Mr. Job Male, the first Mayor of Plainfield, was one of these trustees. Rev. Hobart Clark, a former pastor, writes me that Mr. Morehouse, Mr. Male and Mr. Tilden were the real founders of the church. Neither Mr. Tilden nor Mr. Male lived to see the church building dedicated. Of Mr. Male, Mr. Clark writes, "He was an octogenarian, a man widely known and highly respected by every one; English born, self-made, large hearted, broad minded and practical. He might well be called the Father of the city of Plainfield." The other members of that first board of trustees were Henry Bartlett Wells, our first president, whose name we have memorialized here; George B. Patten, Charles W. Opdyke (deceased), I. W. Nicholls, Mrs. D. W. Pond and Mrs. Ruth C. Leonard. Mr. Morehouse preached at first in a shop on Park street, but the society soon availed itself of an offer made by Mr. Male of a house of his on Second place, where Mr. Tilden found and plac. Mr. George V. George V. Pierce occupied the second story with his family and his daughter, Eva, was the organist at the services in the house. Many of us remember well the Pierces (all now gone), their devotion to and interest in the church, later the devotion of the church to their necessities, both before and after their self-sacrificing daughter broke under the strain of her parents age and misfortunes, dying quite suddenly.

The society seems to have had a very happy time when it was "the church in the house," Mr. Tilden's invaluable service was rendered there. Mrs. Julia Ward Howe there gave a lecture, the receipts from which were given (the first money so given) to start a building fund—a "nest egg" Mr. Tilden called it; and, it is of this time of early growth that Mr. Tilden wrote, "Our history is brief but our hopes are boundless. If our small tree does not bring forth much fruit we hope that it may prove a good quality. We value most not unity of belief but unity of spirit, a life filled and animated with love to God and love to man." About this time many lectures were given in Seminary hall for the benefit of the new society. Prof. John Fiske gave the proceeds of his lecture to our treasury. Mr. Tilden, who came to be the apostolic pastor, December 1, 1889, was obliged by ill-health to withdraw March 1, and died at his home in Milton in October. Mr. Clark says that "the influence of Mr. Tilden was the best gift the society ever had." Verily, "the virtues of the just small sweet and blossom in the dust." Mr. Clark also tells me that three of the most faithful, diligent and useful men of the early years, all three now departed, were Mr. Wells, Mr. Broadway and Mr. Pond.

Mr. Clark, Mr. Tilden's immediate successor, was installed pastor of the society in Seminary hall, June 13, 1890. Dr. Edward Everett Hale, now (in his 87th year) chaplain of the United States Senate, preaching the sermon. On January 27, 1890, the society proceeded to raise funds for the erection of a stone church building. Mrs. Pond and Mr. Opdyke were requested to act as a committee and to their names that of Mr. Male was later added. The canvass proved very successful, and Mr. Male soon after gave the lot on which this building stands (worth then $5,000) with certain conditions, which are a matter of record. A building committee was appointed October 13, consisting of D. W. Pond, Joseph O. Osgood, H. B. Wells, L. B. Woolston and William T. Broadway. Plans were submitted May 28, 1891, and the committee was authorized to proceed with the building. Contracts were made soon after, and the cornerstone was laid by Rev. D. W. Morehouse, November 8, 1891. The church was dedicated, almost free from debt, (and the deficit was soon provided for) May 14, 1892. Dr. Minot J. Savage preaching the sermon. I think it well for us to hear again today the words of dedication which Mr. Clark and his people read responsively, that we may have them well in mind in the understanding for the spirit of this church:

"To the reverent search for the truth that maketh free; to that religion of righteousnes which createth clean hearts and giveth the peace which passeth all; to the religion of love; to the memory of all saints; to the service of all people! To the spread of pure gospel of Jesus Christ, and to a growing tolerance and union of his followers. To the fellowship of hearts, to the gospel of universal brotherhood and to the bearing of one another's burdens. To the memory of dear ones, to the defenders of the nation's righteousness; to the prophet souls of all ages; to him who died upon the cross; to God and man. To the sanctity of home ties; to the honoring of our country; to an ever broadening Christianity, and to the cause of universal religion. To worship, to reverence, to thanksgiving and praise. To the consecration of babes, the sanctification of marriage vows, the lifting of the shadow of death, the church of All Souls was dedicated." Dr. Collyer offered the praper of dedication.

In Mr. Clark's pastorate the society grew and we have taken on much literary activity, not only in its Women's Branch Alliance, which was soon organized, and which now directs the women's work in the church, but also by lectures in the church by our own people and others. This work, I am told, was under the direction of a committee consisting of Mrs. Bret Harte, Mrs. E. W. Conklin, Miss Edith Leonard and others. "The meetings and lectures arranged by them were wonderfully successful for many years, the attendance steadily increasing from a handful in the Second place house to audiences that completely filled the church. It was during this pastorate that Mrs. Sarah Stout, Mrs. Male's sister-in-law, became the largest financial benefactor the church has ever had, giving the parish $3,400, after rendering it other service. Mr. Clark would have recalled today the names of other women—not now with us, but who were helpful in his work. Miss Mary B. Brown, Mrs. Hodges, Mrs. Fiske, Mrs. Krom, and several men, Messrs. Nichols, Hodges and Lyons, men whom this ministry has not known. He also recalls gratefully the advent into the parish in his time of Mr. Edgar H. Mumford, wife and mother, the Riley family, Mr. Edgar B. Smith and the Hon. Roswell G. Horr and his family, Mr. and Mrs. Wm. J. Leonard, found an especially happy home here then. Mrs. Leonard becoming a "All Souls" a church of her own faith and Mr. Leonard becoming a convert, and an enthusiastic one, from another Christian body. Mr. Leonard became later one of our ministry, going from the editorial chair to the pulpit. It was during this pastorate that some one dropped a quarter into the colection basket one Sunday with these lines;

"Should every one his quarter give,
This church, which now is small,
With such capacious quarters have
So will prove for all.
So herewith find the quarter, which
I freely give to thee.
And some day may the good Lord show
Some quarter unto me."

We now come to the present pastorate, which covers more than half the years of our existence as a society. It was begun on the first Sunday of January, 1897, although the installation services were not held until January 20, when Dr. Samuel A. Eliot, now president of the American Unitarian Association, preached the sermon. Rev. Stephen Camp (our St. Stephen, as John Chadwick called him), of Brooklyn Third church, gave the charge to the new pastor. Mr. Morehouse made the installation prayer, Mr. Badger gave the right hand of fellowship and Rev. Wm. I. Nichols the charge to the people. There has been nothing to talk about in this ministry. It has been very quietly pursued. Neither pastor nor people have been favorites of sensationalism. In its very beginning an advance in the Christian spirit of the community was noted, due perhaps to the influence of the preceding pastorate, for, whereas all the pastors of the city were invited to Mr. Clark's reception, and none of them came, four responded to the invitation to meet the present minister, showing a decided advance in Christian courtesy in six years. And there was very soon another indication of growth in the Christian spirit inside the society, where after the first cold plunge, our women so far forgot their differences in their duties and their agreements, that an harmonious, united "bearing and forbearing" society has been for all these years an especial joy of the pastor's heart.

How often disagreements arise simply from misunderstandings! How often there are positively favorable traits in those from whom we differ! Sometimes they will do better and benedicent work which we neglect. How rarely is opposition to our personal opinion really malicious. How frequently it arises from intense zeal for a cause, or a misken notion of what is best, or sometimes sheer mental inability to comprehend more than one side! As we get older we positively sigh to get, at least for ourselves, that religious spirit which is more than Christian, which is godly, and which was exemplified by the Hindu Christ Gotoma Buddha, who said, "The more evil a man does to me the more good will I do to him." I would that men might say of me, when I am gone, "He could not hold a grudge against any. It was easy for him to forgive." I think there must be many of us who thoughtfully pray, "Remember not, O Lord, our offences, nor the offences of our forefathers. Spare us, Good Lord!" If we remember indelicely offenders against our wish or judgment we cannot pray this, nor any prayer, for if the Christian's brother trespass against him he is to be forgiven seventy times seven times.

Sometimes it is said that Unitarians are conceited, and I have been known to assent to this accusation. Socially and historically we have had so much that is complimentary to us as a church, complimentary to the men and women in it, we are reporting in such good sort of character we stand for has been stimulated and we have stood a little straighter and looked a bit more confident, probably because of it. But our conceit is as Unitarians, not as Christians, conceit of the body, not of the spirit. It is an intellectual and moral satisfaction—not any personal pride of heart! I have never known more modest or self-distrustful Christians than some in our church, who, although learned and deeply read contenders, too, for the truth as they saw it—bold, when speaking for God and right, were personally retiring and often self-deprecatory. I sometimes think that the very fact that our beliefs are frowned upon, by the ignorant crowd, makes us desire to be the more sedueously careful in our daily walks and ways, broad minded, pure hearted, helpful to any in distress, believing good things of people, and even warming them sometimes to good things by assuming their probably disposition to ally themselves with whatever is excellent. Call a person bad and you have gone a long way to make him so. No, we are not conceited as to our private selves or blind to our many deficiencies!

And, in this discourse to day I am most forcibly reminded that ous is a Congregational church and, that in it we are "all kings and priests unto God." We all preach by our lives, and the pastor, over and over, sees, hears and heeds the excellent admonitions which his people's lives set before him. It his been so here! It has been most pleasant for one born in New England, where the liberal atmosphere so strongly prevails, to note the appreciation of the simple fact that here our cause has "a local habitation and a name."

I can seem to see today the serene satisfaction, smiling in the face of Miss Mary Brown, as she came on a Sunday morning to the church tower doorway. It was impossible for her to conceal her heart's gratification at the establishment of this church, and well we all know, who knew her, that her many friends of other faiths here, were made aware of the location of the heart's religious treasure. And another I recall, with a man's strength and fervor; whose attitude and word were ever as a clarion call to a rejoicing fidelity Mr. Henry Bartlett Wells—one to trust and be reunited even where his religious faith was much spoken against, to count it all joy in frankly saying to his neighbors, as St. Paul once said to his, that, "after the manner which men call heresy, so worship I the God of my fathers." Mr. Wells stayed with us just long enough for me to know his loyal spirit, and to see what one, of the liberal faith all compact, could do, anywhere, for its upbuilding. I think in those early days, when the wing for the church was often scened doubtful, Mr. Wells's cherry optimism and thorough confidence must have proved over and over a tonic 'gainst despair. And Mr. Wells was in other ways an ideal layman. Superintendent of the Sunday-school, first president of the "New York Sunday-school Union," and a director, for some years, of the American Unitarian Association, he exemplified that enthusiasm for "the cause" when when himself not in matters, becomes miserably inefficient. Perhaps no one among us in my day more fully illustrated the typical Unitarian layman from Dr. Hale's point of view, than Mr. Wm. H. Riley. With an extremely active mind, ever open to and searching for the truth, most appreciative of its religious presentation, as his faithful attendance here and generous co-operation with all our projects sufficiently evinced, very public spirit, really anxious to minister to the general good, feeling, with Dr. Hale, that the good Unitarian always means the good citizen, alert, cheerful and interested in all true reforms, political, social, religious, his life, so suddenly ended, (and to our great dismay, we think back upon as a living dynamo, electrifying us all into greater earnestness and more widely availing moral activity! We hailed him here one Sunday, and are the 'next had said to him our last farewell.

We are more and more, and one of the old and conservative school, not much known, I take it, to many of you, was Mr. Horace Cunningham, a Boston Unitarian, with Harvard ah his Alma Mater, and very appreciative of the spiritual is best, or sometimes sheer mental inability to comprehend more than one side! He shunned publicity, did good by stealth, lived plainly, travelled far, read much, and although so well provided for that he never had to earn a dollar, was not spoiled by idleness, or morally undermined by freedom to do as he chose. He "kept his soul's great chamber free from wrong, when, in old age, he died, he left our church $500.

If, on an anniversary occasion like this, a Unitarian church is asked what it has done, our reply is usually a pointing to the sort of lives our Unitarian atmosphere is favorable to, in the spirit of these lives, to the marks they bear that are indicative of imperishable virtues, and to have enumerated our conversions to exhibit today, although many conversions these years have seen, from the narrower to our more inclusive faith.

We are not working with our people for conversion, but for education and growth, the sort of evolution and growth, the sort of evolution in character which Jesus knew, but only a story of natural conservation and growth in wisdom and stature, in favor with God and man. We are reporting no such memberships, although such we have and greatly prize. The pastor brings today no statistics as to baptisms, marriages and funerals. These duties have been attended to as they befell. We point to what our people do most and strive to exemplify; to sacred human lives, the fruit of righteousness, which grows untrellised by a creed, unsupported by a dogma, untended by ecclesiastical nurserymen, not recommended to the public by any traditional guarantees of apostolic succession, but, growing, in the open, common way, where daily the feet of traffic tread, and where secular occupation hedges its every hour and is yet wholesome and good to live by! Neither says, for us, "The dear Lord's best interpreters are humble, human souls!"

In outward service here, however, these souls advanced in ways of serving, and I may be pardoned for mentioning briefly as examples of new ways, in which we find we can do good, outside the parish, the comparatively recent taking on by us, of the support of a free bed at the Muhlenberg Hospital, its cost $600 a year; the adoption of the Service Pension Society, for aged ministers, into our list of annual collections, and the giving each year, by individuals in the socity, to the Calhoun Colored school in Alabama. May our giving continually expand as our resources increase! But, better yet, may we become more and more children of the good spirit, helpful wherever any good cause needs us giving our lives; peacemakers among our neighbors, strong for righteousness where evils corrupt and defile; peace lovers, where brutal war rears its horrid head; brothers of our fellow-men, of every creed and clime and just to them, if they be rich or poor; loyal to our country's democratic ideals, and to the religious democracy of our free faith!

A. C. NICKERSON.

JERSEY'S SENATORS DINE THE GOVERNOR

New Jersey State senators gave a dinner in honor of Governor Fort at the Arrowhead Inn, New York, last Monday night.

Of Jersey's living senators there was only one absentee, Mr. Osborne, of Essex, who defeated Mr. Colby not long ago. There was, of course, one vacant chair, that of William J. Harrison, who died during the session. Those who sat down in the Colonial room of the Arrowhead were Governor J. Franklin Fort, were Senators Robbins, Fielder, Minch, Cornish, Silzer, Wakelee, Plummer, Ackerman, Brown, Hand, Bradley, Wilson, Gaunt, Leavitt, Frelinghuysen, Hillery, Hinchliffe, Gebhardt and Price; and there also sat Secretary of the Senate Howard Tyler.

According the Senator Frelinghuysen, who may be the next governor of New Jersey, according to some of his happy friends of last night, he was a light among the senators and they felt that they really need not make their speeches public.

Thurlow Still In Charge.

The report that Assistant Health Officer John O'Brien, of the Plainfield Board of Health, has been appointed health officer to succeed Leon Thurlow, was denied today by a member of the Board. Mr. Thurlow, who has taken a position in New York, is still acting as health officer. Mr. O'Brien, who resigned his office as health inspector of North Plainfield a short time ago, will be continued as assistant under Mr. Thurlow, who will hold the position indefinitely.

FUNERAL SERVICES OF MRS. GEORGE H. BURGESS

The funeral service of Mrs. George H. Burgess was held from the late home on Central avenue, yesterday afternoon at 3 o'clock, and was largely attended by relatives and friends, including many from the First M. E. church, of which Mrs. Burgess was a prominent member for thirt-seven years. There was a large number of floral tributes.

Rev. Dr. Charles M. Anderson, pastor of the First M. E. church, was in charge of the service, and there were impressive eulogistic remarks by two former pastors of the church, Rev. Dr. W. C. Snodgrass and Rev. Dr. A. C. McCrea, both speaking words of tribute concerning the exemplary Christian life of Mrs. Burgess, referring to her great devotion to the church and all its interests as well as the strong home ties. Appropriate scripture selections and fervent prayers and the committal service by Dr. Anderson concluded the rites. There were four selections sung by a quarter, comprising Miss S. Etta Raybert, soprano; Miss Grace Carroll, contralto; Elmer D. Cutting, tenor, and William Holmes, baritone. They sang "Jesus Lover of My Soul," "Abide With Me," "Nearer My God to Thee," and "Shall We Gather at the River?"

The remains were taken today to Albany, N. Y., where the burial will be in the Rural cemetery.

SEVENTH-DAY BAPTIST ENDEAVORERS' MUSICALE

The Christian Endeavor Society of the Seventh-Day Baptist church gave another one of its enjoyable musicales Thursday. It was largely attended. The program consisted of both vocal and instrumental music, and some monologues by W. K. Flannigan, of Newark. The violin selections of Mrs. Violet Truell Johnson were especially well received. The duet "Calm Is the Night" as sung by Mr. and Mrs. Theodore Davis, was particularly fine. There were also two vocal solos that were well rendered, the first being the "Spring Song," sung by Mrs. John Cottrell, and the other, "O Dry Those Tears," sung by Mrs. Theodore Davis. The quartet, consisting of Roy Titsworth, Dr. O. B. Whitford, Theodore and Arthur Titsworth, rendered a number of selections. Mr. Flannigan in his monologues made a decided hit.

At the conclusion of the entertainment a silver offering was taken.

LOCAL SYNDICATE ACQUIRES CATHERINE WEBSTER'S LAND.

The property of the late Catherine Webster, on Watchung avenue, 202x123 feet, was disposed of at public sale Monday by the executor, John H. Van Winkle. P. H. Lattarett, upon the auctioneer, L. B. Manning purchased the tract for a syndicate for $54 a front foot.

The land is located on the southwesterly side of Watchung avenue, between Fourth and Fifth streets, and adjoins that owned by H. W. Marshall, upon which he has just erected a handsome business block. It is considered one of the most desirable tracts in the business section of the city. The plans of the syndicate have not yet been announced.

800 PRESBYTERIANS TO BE IN ASSEMBLY

Presbyterians all over the country have their eyes turned toward Denver, Col., where will be held the one hundred and twenty-first General Assembly of the Presbyterian church in the United States of America, beginning Thursday, May 20, and continuing a week or more. The business sessions will be held in the First Presbyterian church, of which the Rev. Dr. Robert F. Cole, a former moderator of the assembly, is pastor, and the popular meetings each evening in an auditorium. The eight hundred clergymen and elders from all parts of the country who will be commissioners will be the guests of the Synod of Colorado, presbyteries of the State and several civic organizations.

This is the first time the assembly ever met in Denver, and in connection with the great gathering the semi-centennial of Presbyterianism in the West will be celebrated. Fifty years ago the first home mission effort was made in Colorado. Now, there are more than one thousand Presbyterian churches, with one hundred thousand members; seven synods and forty presbyteries among the Rockies and beyond to the coast.

The matter which is interesting the whole church is who will be the next moderator. The present incumbent is the Rev. Dr. Hunter B. Fullerton, of Nashville and Chicago. Never have more candidates appeared for this highest position which the Church has to give.

Men who have looked into the matter, are laughing at a story widely reported in the press that John Marshall Harlan, Associate Justice of the United States Supreme Court and an elder in a Presbyterian church in Washington, is a candidate and will be there in person to push his candidacy. Provided a layman was eligible for the office, Mr. Harlan would not be elected because he was not chosen a commissioner from the Presbytery of Washington. Those who have studied up the church government find that no layman can be a moderator.

No layman ever has been made moderator. The vice-moderator has often been a layman. The late Darwin R. James held this position when he died.

Candidates whose names have been widely mentioned are the Rev. Dr. Robert MacKenzie, retiring pastor of the Rutgers church, this city, and president elect of the San Francisco Theological Seminary, the Rev. Dr. William L. McEwan, of the Third church, Pittsburg; the Rev. Dr. James M. Barkley, of the Forest Avenue church, Detroit; the Rev. Dr. Howard Agnew Johnston, of Colorado Springs, and the Rev. Dr. Edgar P. Hill, of McCormack Theological Seminary, Chicago. The most prominent layman who is a commissioner is Rear Admiral Watson, of the Louisville Presbytery.

One of the important questions to come up will be that of the meeting only every four years, as does the Methodist Episcopal church, or once in three years, as does the Protestant Episcopal church, instead of each year. The Presbytery of West Jersey has sent up an overture asking for a meeting every three years. Advocates of this plan argue that thereby about $120,000 will be saved.

The Rev. Dr. William Henry Roberts, of Philadelphia, long stated clerk of the General Assembly, a former moderator, in an interview this week with a reporter said:

"This would be a failure both as to *the letter and the spirit of Pres*byterian government. A triennial assembly means the loss of stimulus for all church work for three years. The Presbyterian church does not have a board or a house of bishops that attends to all the administration between national assemblies. The Presbyterian General Assembly will cost about $60,000. The Methodist Board of Bishops last year cost the church $140,000. The cheapest governed body of the kind in the world is the Presbyterian church. The assembly, synods and presbyteries, including four millions of people, last year cost only $137,000."

Another question to come up will be the reduction of the size of the assembly. Since the absorption of the Cumberland Assembly the body has become too large, many think. At present each presbytery is allowed a commissioner, clerical and lay, for every twenty-four ministers and moiety thereof. Now there is a proposition to make the representation from synods rather than presbyteries, and allow one delegate for every 10,000 communicants. A commission will ask for $3,000,000 for a uniform budget for benevolent and mission boards.

FIND HIDDEN GOLD.

Two men working in a clay pit in the Staten brick yard at Paterson, that had not been pumped out in seventeen years, overturned an old stump and found a quantity of gold coins among the roots. The coins were French and American pieces. The American pieces were of the denomination of $5, $10 and $20. The total value of the gold pieces is believed to be about $300.

Bert Beattie, owner of the brickyard, bought one of the old coins for $20 and the workmen kept the rest.

GOOD DRIED FRUITS

THEIR POSSIBILITIES IN THE WAY OF DESSERTS.

Are Most Delicious and Wholesome When Properly Cooked—How to Retain Sweetness and Flavor of Fresh Fruit.

At this season, as the preserve closet stores are dwindling on the shelves, the housewife naturally turns to dried and evaporated fruits. Properly cooked, the dried fruits are delicious and wholesome. The only reason that their popularity has ever waned has been due to bad cooking. All dried fruits require long soaking to restore the lost juices, then slow cooking to develop the latent sweetness and fruit flavor. Prunes cooked in this way need no sugar at all, unless one has a phenomenally sweet tooth. Currants and raisins lend themselves to a great variety of wholesome dishes, the currant particularly being now recognized as a real health food. Carefully dried apples make a sauce almost as good as the fresh apples, to say nothing of delicious pies and cakes. Cherries, plums and pears properly treated may be used satisfactorily almost any way that fresh fruits are cooked.

Few housekeepers realize the possibilities of dried apricots as the basis of delicious desserts. Added to mince meat or combined with other dried fruit their delicate acid flavor serves to bring out the rich flavor of other ingredients. They require long soaking—from ten to twenty hours—using plenty of sugar in the water in which they are soaked; if they are ripe and appetizing they are then ready for use, without any cooking whatever. Simply drain, boil the syrup down one-half and pour over the fruit. If the fruit was put up a little green they may need some cooking; but it must be a gentle simmer, not a rapid boil, which toughens.

A nice combination of flavors is found by using equal quantities of prunes and apricots. Wash thoroughly and soak over night in water to cover. The next morning simmer until tender, then press through a colander. Sweeten to taste and cook a little longer. Serve as sauce or allow a tablespoonful gelatin to each pint of the cooked fruit. Soak the gelatin in cold water for half an hour, then dissolve in boiling water or over the tea kettle. Stir thoroughly in with the fruit, turn into a mold and set in a cool place to harden. Serve with cream.

Cherry Salad.

Two cups of canned cherries, one cup canned pineapple cut in small pieces, one cup white grapes, from which the seeds are removed, cut in quarter, and one-half cup English walnut kernels. Mix fruit and nuts together. Add mayonnaise dressing mixed with cream. Do not mix until before serving. This serves six or seven people.

Tapioca Salad.

Cook one cup of tapioca until transparent. Remove seeds from half a pound of large white grapes and cut in halves; three large bananas, two oranges, one cup of pineapple, all cut in small pieces, and one cup of cherries. Add to this the cooked tapioca, mix thoroughly, spread with shredded cocoanut and serve with whipped cream.

Dainty Orange Baskets.

Use large, well-formed oranges. Cut out two corners to make a handle to the basket, scoop out inside. Make a filling of tapioca cream flavored with the orange juice; let cream cool, fill the orange basket with the cream and top with whipped cream. Add either a maraschino cherry or a dot of red jelly to either side of handle.

Winter Chili Sauce.

One can of tomatoes, two large onions, one tablespoon of salt, one teaspoon of pepper or a pinch of cayenne, one cup of sugar, one-half cup of vinegar, one-half teaspoon each of the different spices. Let cook slowly about two hours. It is nice on beans or cold meats and can hardly be told from fresh tomatoes.

Apple Sauce Pie.

Line a plate with plain paste. Cover bottom with pieces of bread spread with butter. Over this pour custard made of one egg, one tablespoon sugar, one-half teaspoonful cornstarch and one cup milk. Upon this spread apple sauce thickly and sprinkle with cinnamon, then bake until custard is thick.

Sardine Appetizer.

Have bread toasted crisp, hard crust removed. Beat together one teaspoonful of butter, one-half teaspoonful of mustard, a little cayenne pepper, one teaspoonful of Worcestershire sauce and a little lemon juice. Spread on toast, lay on sardines and set in oven a few minutes before serving.

Sandwich Ham.

After boiling a piece of ham the short, shank end is generally stringy and often wasted. If this is passed twice through a meat chopper and then mixed with a little sweet cream, it makes ham which is excellent for sandwiches.

Time Savers.

When ready to core apples, if you do not own a corer, use a common wooden clothes pin—does the work just as well.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Prayer Meeting Topic For the Week Beginning May 16, 1909.

By REV. S. H. DOYLE.

Topic.—"Pilgrim's Progress" series—V. At the cross.—John xix, 16-27; Luke xxiii, 33-43.

The parting words of Interpreter to Christian were, "The comforter always be with thee, good Christian, to guide thee in the way that leads to the city." Christian then continued his way. There was "a highway up which Christian was to go that was fenced on either side with a wall, and that wall was called Salvation." Through the walled way of Salvation every sinner seeking salvation and the celestial city must pass. As he nears the cross he still feels' even more than ever the burden of his guilt and is often bowed down with fears. That at the cross he can have the burden of sin rolled away seems too wonderful, and until it is an actual experience with him doubts and fears remain, only in an instant to be wiped away completely when the actual experience has taken place. And when he knows that such has been the case his joy is great, the change being so sudden, and he wonders how he ever could have been possessed of doubts or fears.

Along the highway of Salvation Christian ran, still with great difficulty because of the burden on his back. "He ran thus till he came at a place somewhat ascending, and upon that place stood a cross and a little below, in the bottom, a sepulcher." * * * Just as Christian came up with the cross his burden loosed from off his back and so continued to do till it came to the mouth of the sepulcher, where it fell in." With all sinners seeking the celestial city, through the walls of Salvation in Christ, it is the same. When convicted of our sins, burdened with them as a load, we come up with the cross, trusting in Christ's atoning sacrifice for our sins, the burden of sin falls from off us and we feel it no more.

At the cross, at the cross,
Where I first saw the light
And the burden of my sins came rolled away.
It was there by faith I received my sight,
And now I am happy all the day.

May this be the experience of every one who has not found Christ as his Saviour.

The vision of the cross, which removed the burden of sin, made Christian very happy. "Then was Christian glad and lightsome and said, with a merry heart, 'He hath given me rest by His sorrow and life by His death.'" He looked and looked at the cross, and "as he stood looking and weeping, behold, three shining ones came to him and saluted him with 'Peace be to thee.' So the first said to him, 'Thy sins be forgiven thee;' the second stripped him of his rags and clothed him with a change of raiment; the third also set a mark on his head and gave him a roll with a seal upon it, which he bid him look at as he ran and that he should give it in at the celestial gate. So they went their way. Then Christian gave three leaps for joy and went on singing:

"Blest cross, blest sepulcher, blest rather
The Man that there was put to shame for me."

Oh, the joy of being saved at the cross and knowing it! The cross is able to save all men. If not saved let us come to it, for there alone can we find salvation.

Hymns Cut in Two.

Dr. Cowan, the new editor of the Christian Endeavor department in the Hawaiian paper, the Friend, is making those pages fairly shine. Here is a sample of his pointed paragraphs:

"I like the Hawaiian practice of singing the hymns through. In the east too many Endeavor societies chop off the head of the hymn—the first two stanzas—and throw the rest away."

It's Mission Is Its Strength.

No organization has a right to exist which has not a distinct mission, a unique place which none other fills. All others are cumberers of the ground. Because Christian Endeavor has such a mission and fills such a place it will, with God's blessing, go on from strength to strength in the years to come.—Rev. Francis E. Clark, D. D.

FAME.

Beloved of all the earth, woo'd of all men,
She smiles and frowns, favors and spurns again;
Mistress of wide-eyed nights, or visionary tide!
Maid-o'-the-Mist upon the marsh of care—
Fame—so like a woman!

I send her all the sweetness of my lands;
I send her all the labors of my hands;
And all my pride of youth before her lay.
She curtseys low, but, then—she turns away.
Fame—so like a woman!

I rose up with the sun and wove a chain
Of blossoms, jewel'd with the leaf-born rain.
She paid no heed to me or mine,
She smiled on one who had not sought her smile.
Fame—so like a woman!

He came. He conquered! For he met her eyes,
With no abatement—nay, nor pleading sighs.
Definately, despite her frown, he stood.
Strange! But she fell to loving in that mood.
Fame—so like a woman!

MISS MAUDE ADAMS TO MAKE A TOUR OF EUROPE.

Charles Frohman, who recently left Berlin for London, accompanied by J. M. Barrie, announces that a year from now Miss Maude Adams will make a continental tour in a cycle of Barrie's plays; also in "L'Aiglon," "Twelfth Night" and "Romeo and Juliet." She will bring her entire American company to Europe for the purpose of this tour, which will be the first American theatrical enterprise of such magnitude ever undertaken on the other side of the Atlantic.

Mr. Frohman has also arranged for his London "Peter Pan" company, numbering one hundred persons, to appear in Berlin, Vienna, and other continental centres next season, while arrangements are also under way for both English and American companies to appear over a Continental circuit.

The latter will include the appearance of Mr. Frohman's London repertory company in Berlin after which has given a sufficient number of performances in London to make up its repertory of English plays. The engagement will be limited to ten days.

Dogs Must Be in Before Dark.

Under a new order dogs are arrested in Middlesex if they are found roaming after dark. The first case was heard at Highgate yesterday, when Stanley Smeeton, of High street, Whetstone, was fined two shillings inclusive for allowing his dog to stray at night. The object of the rule which provides for a maximum penalty of £20, is to prevent sheep and cattle from being worried.—London Express.

A Measly Trick.

A Kansas City boy told the teacher that his sister had the measles. The teacher sent him home and told him to stay there until his sister got well. PROGRESS OF THE DAY ALL OVER THE WORLD.

Sheriff Valpert has just liberated at Peru, Ind., a man believed to be the largest tramp in the country. He has no name except "Doc," weighs 275 pounds, is always hungry, and, strange to say, prefers walking to riding.

It has been reported to the guardians at Taum, County Galway, Ireland, that a man named Hasty, whose age is alleged to be 120 years, is living at Gallew in a cabin which is surrounded by snow, and an effort is to be made to induce the hermit to go into the work-house.

Joseph Anderson, aged 60 years, of St. Louis, formerly a workman in a quarry where the fine dust affected his eyes, has been compelled to sleep for twenty years with his eyes open. Physicians say that neglected inflammation has caused the eyelids to grow fast to the eyeballs, making it impossible for the man to close his eyes.

Accumulating evidence shows that lightning flashes may have a much more varied structure than was formerly supposed. Photographs by A. Larsen, a Danish photographer, indicate that flashes may be made up of small electric discharges, or rushes of which forty may follow along nearly the same path in half a minute.

There has been secured by a New ork State pulp company an option on 4,000 acres of sunken pine now lying submerged in the Rideau river and lakes back of Kingston, Ont. The piling was sunk about 80 years ago when the Rideau river was a centre of commercial activity. The piling will be converted by mechanical process into the finest grade of stationery.

During the excavations on the Janiculum hill in Rome some interesting discoveries have been made. A chamber with an altar has been found in the temple, and on the walls was a tablet commemorating the Emperors Antonius and Commodus. There were also discovered a small statue of Jupiter, the shaft of a column, a statue of acchus in marble, three skeletons placed in a line before the chamber, and a little figure representing Chronos.

KITCHEN INFORMATION FOR THRIFTY HOUSEWIFE.

Discolored china baking dishes can be made as clean as when new by rubbing them with whiting.

Roasted chestnuts are said to be very delicious when salted the same as peanuts.

Most stains will disappear from cloth by the following method of cleansing: After brushing the dry mud away, sponge the remaining stain with a weak solution of ammonia and water. This is absolutely safe to apply to black cloth. Colored goods, however, should be sponged with a solution of bicarbonate of soda, as the latter does not affect coloring matter.

*The care of drippings in the kitch*en with the price of food so high should command attention. In cooking all meats, poultry and in making soup the grease should be carefully skimmed off and saved. Render it out once a week and after a good boiling strain through cheesecloth. When cool skim the *fat off and use in place of lard ex*cept for pie and biscuit.

The Man Himself.

A lady employing a colored man asked him his name.

"Mah name is Poe, ma'am."

"Poe? Perhaps some of your family worked for Edgar Allan Poe."

The darkey's eyes opened with great surprise.

"Why," he grasped, pointing a dusky forefinger at himself, "why, Ah am Edward Allan Poe!"—Everybody's Magazine.

Man to Man.

After the last wagon had rattled up and left its precious package on Christmas Eve, Dolly's mother thought the occasion a suitable one for impressing something of the religious significance of the festive season upon her small consciousness.

So while she undressed her she pointed out the window to where Mars burned in the heavens and said:

"That beautiful star is your heavenly father wishing you a happy Christmas. Now what should you do to show him how grateful you are?"

Small Dolly looked perfunctorily at the glowing planet, then between yarns she said:

"Wish the same to him, I 'spose."—Lippincott's.

SOME SIMPLE AIDS TO BEAUTY AND HEALTH.

A glass of rich, creamy milk should conclude each of the thin woman's meals.

A fine-tooth comb, valuable for certain purposes, is capable of injuring the scalp if used unwisely. Use the tiny points, close together, irritate the skin, and, far from removing the dandruff, as many persons think, will increase it.

Though you may think so, your face is not entirely clean after even the most thorough washing with soap and water. Put a little cold cream on, rub in well and then rub off with a dry towel. You will be surprised at the amount of dirt on the towel.

This is pre-eminently the time when fresh green vegetables should be eaten, even if it is necessary to give up some other article of diet for them. The system craves just the properties they contain and the best aid to digestion will be much better if spinach, greens of any other kind, string beans and the like are eaten once, and preferably twice, a day. Fresh salads should be considered a daily necessity. Lettuce, with oil and vinegar, is wholesome, but not more so than other fresh leaves. Apples, both baked and raw, will be effective, as well as tomatoes, the system requiring acid to an unusual degree for several months now.

There is nothing so indispensable to beauty of form as the proper exercise of all the muscles. It is rarely, if ever, the case in this nation that any care is taken in this respect. Children, in their sports, do not do—especially if they have full run in the country—to accomplish this; but grown persons generally confine their exercise to a small portion of the body. In this way the perfect and rounded form of childhood is rarely preserved to mature years. It is not a matter of proper care. This shows the need of the rule: Let special care be directed to the gen*eral development of all the muscles* during the period of childhood and youth, and take care that, all through life, the muscles of the whole body be duly exercised.

FEMININE SPIRIT OF '76.

"One summer afternoon in 1176, Jemima Boone and two sisters, named Callaway, while boating on the Kentucky, allowed their canoe to drift close to the opposite bank. Here, behind a bush, five Shawnee warriors were in hiding, and although the spot was not more than ten rods from Boonesborough, one of the Shawnees struck boldly out into the water, seized the canoe, and dragged it to shore with its screaming occupants.

"Once in the power of the Indians, however, these youthful daughters of the wilderness betrayed a wonderful self-possession and resourcefulness. They knew enough of the Indian customs to realize that if their strength failed them, and they should prove unequal to the struggle, all was to the Shawnee town on the Ohio, they would be slaughtered mercilessly. So they stifled their sobs, and calmly accompanied their captors without protest or struggle. At every opportunity, though, they secretly tore little *pieces from their clothing and at*tached them to bushes on the trail. Nothing more was needed to inform Boone and his fellow settlers, who had quickly started in pursuit, that they were on the right track, and on the second day the captives they caught up with the Indians. A volley laid two Shawnees low, the rest fled, and by the close of another day the girls were safe in the arms of their thankful mothers."—H. Addington Bruce in an article on "Woman in the Making of America," in the May Smith's.

Egg Cutlets.

Remove the shells from six hard-boiled eggs and chop eggs in small pieces. Make a thick white sauce with two tablespoonfuls of butter, rubbed smooth with four tablespoonfuls of flour and stirred into one and a half cupfuls of boiling milk. Season with one-half teaspoonful of salt, a saltspoonful of paprika and a few drops of onion juice. Take from the fire, add one tablespoonful of minced parsley and the chopped eggs. When cold form into cutlets, roll in crackercrumbs and fry in smoking hot fat. Nice served with cream sauce.

Lady Baltimore Cake Filling.

Dissolve three cups of sugar in a cup of boiling water and boil until it threads. Have ready beaten the whites of two eggs, and pour the syrup gradually upon these, whipping them steadily. To this mix*ture add a cup of seeded and chop*ped raisins, a cupful of chopped pecan meats and five figs cut into thin strips. Cover the layers and top of the cake with this mixture.

Skirts Are Full.

Skirts incline to greater fullness. For the street they are instep length, with a few plaits sometimes set in about the bottom. For the evening costume they are much fuller than the extremely narrow models of the winter, but these will cling about the figure owing to the soft fabrics employed. Trained skirts are correct for costumes intended for formal afternoon occasions.

VALUE OF EDUCATING CHILDREN AT THE TABLE.

To borrow from the slang dictionary: the child needs the ten or twelve hours' sleep in his business of growing tall and robust, steady of nerve and sane of mind. Furthermore, he needs food adapted to his needs; plenty of cereals, plenty of milk, plenty of ripe fruit in the season thereof, meat once a day, nourishing broths and a few green vegetables; no fried things whatsoever; neither tea nor coffee; no pastry, no mince pie or plum puddings or highly seasoned entrees. Time enough for these delicacies when the inches (and feet) are all in, the muscles in splendid working order, the gray matter of the brain "all there" and ready to do the duties of a man's brain for fifty years to come.

One branch of the child's education, surely neglected in tens and thousands of homes, is mastication. As soon as he cuts his teeth teach him why they were given him. Make his chew everything he takes into his mouth. Able dietitians are proclaiming bodily that milk should be chewed, a mouthful at a time, if one would not have it change to cure about the diaphragh. The child's meat should be finely minced for him, that he will lay the foundation of sound digestion. He will have better chance of long life and no dyspepsia than if he had been allowed to gulp down milk by the glassful without drawing breath, and to gobble steaks and chops in two-inch chunks.

Insist that the child shall behave decorously at the table, as well as eat properly, from the time he can comprehend an order conveyed in the simplest language. Do not let him make a porridge of his soup by crumbling bread into it, or churn crackers into cocoa, or work vegetables and gravy into a mound, using the knife as a trowel. He should be reproved for sipping soup and coffee audibly, and for loud inspirations after drinking. Line upon line and precept upon precept, gently but regularly enforced, will make a well-bred boy of him. And right habits learned in childhood last a lifetime.

There is common sense in each of the conventions at which vulgarians scoff.

Every time patent leather shoes are removed they should be wiped off with a soft piece of old linen or cheesecloth. BIG CYCLING EVENT WANTED IN THIS CITY

What promises in the future to be a big cycling event in Plainfield is being planned by the Plainfield Cycle Club, application having been made to the National Cycling Association for the annual bicycle race formerly held over the famous Irvington-Milburn course. The promoters of that event abandoned the project after last year's race.

Now the Plainfield Cycle Club wants to continue it, and the chances are that the national association will give the local association the date, May 31, and also its sanction for holding the race. It is proposed to make it twenty-five miles, the same as the Irvington-Milburn contest, and the officers of the club are now engaged in deciding upon the course, provided promission is given to hold it here. The has been considerable correspondence and a majority of the crack bicycle riders who have heretofore taken part in the annual event have promised to come to Plainfield if the race is held.

The club is one of the best in this part of the State and Metropolitan district and has been assured of sufficient support to make the race a success. Suitable prizes will be offered which will attract the best riders in the country.

Another event planned is an annual bicycle parade of the club-championship of Plainfield, to be held on Labor Day. This will also be under the auspices of the Plainfield Cycle Club. It is expected that sanction for the twenty-five mile race will be granted so that it can be held on May 31 next.

SECOND REGIMENT TO "HIKE IT" TO SEA GIRT

Although no official announcement has been made, it is generally understood that the members of the Second Regiment, New Jersey National Guard, will "hike" it to Sea Girt, the scene of the annual encampment, this year, departing from the customary mode of traveling by train.

Arrangements to this effect are now under advisement by Brigadier General Dennis F. Collins, commanding the Second brigade, and Major General Wanser, chief officer of division headquarters, from both of whom consent must be secured before the long walk will be undertaken.

Adjutant John M. Rogers, of the Second regiment, when interviewed in reference to the matter last evening, said: "While no notice has been officially given to the guardsmen of the Second regiment to travel by foot to the Sea Girt encampment this year, it is the presumption that such orders will be issued in a few days."

The idea of "hiking" it to the shore resort originated after a troop of Philadelphia guardsmen set a precedent a few weeks ago by walking from the Quaker City to New York, a distance of nearly 100 miles.

The route to the metropolis, the soldiers camped at the Trenton armory over Saturday night and left early Sunday morning.

This troop was under command of Captain Harriman, a relative of the famous financier of the same name. Captain Rogers and a number of other local officers were much im*pressed with* the appearance of the men and conceived the idea of having the guardsmen of the Second regiment walk to Sea Girt this summer.

If the "hike" is taken, the guardsmen will be allowed three days in which to complete the journey, a distance of about sixty miles. By walk*ing to the encampment, the guards*men will lose a day or two of the regular camp week, as they will not arrive until some time on Tuesday. The start will be made on Sunday. The week of August 7 has been set aside for the Second Regiment this year.

The practice of taking "hikes" has become quite prevalent of late, and last summer a number of the local companies went on short trips during the day. On several occasions a squad of men would suggest a "hike" and would walk fifteen or twenty miles in a day.

The trips proved to be not only beneficial, but rather enjoyable to the men, and it is thought that they will look forward to the walk to Sea Girt this year with more eagerness than if they were to travel in the usual way by special trains.

PRESERVE THE BOOKSTORES!

An injury to the small bookstores of the country is in reality an injury to one of the sources of national culture. The old-fashioned bookstore, conducted by a bookish man who loves his stock-in-trade, always has about it the quieter atmosphere of the library. A capable director of such a shop always insists that his clerks shall have some familiarity with the commodities which they handle; that they shall have read the more important of the new publications, and shall have "read at" the books of lesser reputation sufficiently to be able to describe the character of their contents. The greatest foe to these old-fashioned bookshops exists chiefly in the large cities; it is the great department store. There the book counter is used chiefly for advertising purposes. The individual sale often is made to make no profits on its books, but to announce them at cost for the purpose of drawing people to the building.—Leslie's Weekly.

FISH CHOWDER.

To make fish chowder, skin a four-pound haddock, wash thoroughly and cut the flesh from the bones in pieces about two inches square. Cover the head and bones with cold water and boil one-half hour. Slice two small white onions in a pan with four slices of thin, fat salt pork. When tender skim out the pork and onions and add the strained bone liquor and one quart of hot milk which has been thickened with two ounces of butter and flour mixed together. Do not break the fish by needless stirring. Butter six slices pilot bread, arrange in a tureen and pour the fish chowder over them.

PREACHES ON SOCIALISM

Rev. C. S. Kemble Urges Socialists to Accept Christ as Their Leader.

ITS HOPE IS IN HIM ONLY.

Simon, the Zealot, a Socialist, Followed the Master, Says M. E. Pastor.

An instructive sermon on "The Social Reformer and Jesus" was preached by Rev. Charles A. Kemble before a large congregation at the Monroe Avenue M. E. church last Sunday. His discourse follows:

The universality of the appeal of Christ's personality is, one of the marvels of history. When fairly interpreted to any nationality, this Jewish Messiah never fails to win adherents. Prince and pauper, philosopher and peasant feel equally his charm. We need not be surprised therefore to find on investigation a decided variety of temperaments represented among his first disciples. The nineteenth century doubter was found had his prototype in Thomas; the materialistic business man in Philip; the impulsive, impetuous, frank blundering, lovable fellow in Peter; we are looking tonight at one if not revolutionary firebrand, any socialist, he will say, was drawn into that remarkable inner circle of intimate companions of Jesus. Strangely enough we find such a one, although there is no recorded act or word of his in the gospels to assist us in any way to define his character. In the two lists given of the Twelve, afterward called Apostles, we have in Matthew X: 4, the name of Simon, the Kanaite (not Canaanite), which scholars inform us is not a geographical but a political designation, and in Luke VI: 15, "Simon called Zeloter," that is Simon the Zealot, or revolutionary patriot of the party formed to revolt against Roman taxation, when Judea and Samaria some twenty years before had been brought under direct Roman rule. He was an ardent Jewish patriot, a believer in the prophecies of Jewish supremacy, looking for and willing to help on the coming kingdom of righteousness under the direct rule of God, even if need be by force of arms.

The Jewish monarchy had always been regarded by the prophets as a theocracy, an earthly government run upon a heavenly schedule unsuccessful only in so far as it departed from the direct commands of God, halting today, perhaps, because of a deobedient king but looking forward to a distant day when under a true king, the Messiah, the perfect will of God should be done on earth as it is done in heaven. The anathema of the prophet-patriots were hurled not at private but at national sins. During the captivity private delinquencies were denounced and personal piety cultivated, while a messianic deliverer was fervidly expected. The New Testament times, like the captivity, presented a congregation in no way responsible for social condition, hence it is filled with advices as to personal relationship and responsibilities, but scarcely anything of materialistic pictures of the coming king—done he quietly inaugurated the kingdom which comes without observation, propagates itself like leaven, grown surely as the mustard seed.

The leaders of the Jews were filled with expectation of this kingdom but they failed to recognize in Christ the promised Messiah and in His kingdom of heaven their restored Jewish theocracy. Instead of accepting Him they exclaimed "we have no king but Caesar," although they hated Caesar. Simon, the Zealot, was filled with just such false notions as led these chief priests to reject and crucify Jesus but he accepted Jesus as his Master and let Him teach him the proper interpretation of the Messianic hope. The prophets had differed very radically in their pictures but their inspired hope was one. Their pictures are far from photographs of Christ—their maps most inaccurately portrayed the kingdom, yet Christ and His kingdom are now seen to be the essential fulfillment of them all.

So with Socialism, it too is an ideal and a program, open to criticism and perhaps with good reason this, that and the other program of Socialism for they differ radically from each other, the burning ideal of humanity living as a real brotherhood under laws seeming only justice and the universal welfare, that underlies all the conflicting programs, and that ideal is the Christian ideal of the kingdom of heaven, which is this earth transformed by Christ's spirit working in the hearts of men.

O, Socialist enthusiasts with hearts buring with enthusiasm for humanity don't make the mistake of the rulers of the Jews, don't turn your back on Jesus because of poor sketches of Him, such like Simon, the Zealot, the revolutionist, with plans that may be impracticable, accept Christ as your leader for none else has ever proved capable of arousing this enthusiasm for humanity which alone can make Socialism possible. This passionate brother feeling even among agnostic, asthetic Socialists had its origin in the same source as among avowedly Christian Socialists; it sprang up spontaneously in an environment created by Christianity, Confucius and Buddha never inspired it; it is a constant product of heart contact with Christ. Follow Him; He only can lead us into this land of promise; He only can unify by a glorious realization the imperfect programs presented by the many who have sincerely "followed the gleam."

NEW JERSEY TEACHERS ARE NOW UP IN ARMS

At a joint meeting of the executive and legislative committee of the New Jersey State Teachers' Association held at the Hotel Albert, New York city, some important matters were considered. Because of the aggressive action of some boards of education towards their teachers, caused by the recent enactment of a teachers' tenure of office law, the committee, realizing the gravity of the situation, unanimously decided to call a special meeting of the association for Saturday afternoon, May 23, in Jersey City, to consider questions that may arise in regard to the duty of the association towards those members whose interests may be jeopardized in the interim before the recently enacted law goes into effect on Sept. 1, 1909.

The teachers who are in most danger of dismissal are those who are wearing their fiftyfifth year of service in the State which would render them eligible to the district thirty-five year pension act. This pension has to be paid by the district in which the teacher has been employed the last twenty years. In order to escape this "burden" some teachers have already been dismissed.

In view of this situation, the committee decided that it was now time to take action in defense of such cases, hence the meeting to be held on May 29.

The association numbers about six thousand, and, of course, such action would not apply to teachers who are not members.

PERTH AMBOY CHURCH IS NINETY YEARS OLD

Simpson Methodist Episcopal church, of Perth Amboy, began the celebration of the ninefieth anniversary of its organization with special services Sunday at which former pastors assisted Rev. George C. Wil*ding, now in charge of the church.*

Sunday Rev. Dr. W. S. Galloway, the oldest living former pastor, preached at the initial service of the series. Tuesday night the addresses will be made by Rev. W. V. Trumbower, of Bayonne. Rev. Dr. S. T. Jackson, of Arlington, will discuss "The Value of the Church in the City." Thursday, Rev. Wesley Martin will speak, and Rev. Dr. W. C. Snodgrass, formerly of Plainfield, who immediately preceded Dr. Wilding, will be the speaker. Saturday night, May 15, Rev. Dr. D. F. Randolph, also formerly of Plainfield, who was pastor of the church twenty-five years ago and who is now a district superintendent, will hold the first quarterly conference of the church year, and on Sunday he will preach at the morning service. Dr. Wilding will preach at the final service in the evening.

NEW STAMP ISSUE WILL MARK BIG EXPOSITION

Postage stamps commemorative of the Alaska-Yukon Pacific Exposition will be put on sale at the local post-office on the first of next month, according to information received by Postmaster Elias H. Bird yesterday. The stamp is somewhat larger than the regular 2-cent stamp and is printed in red ink. No books containing the stamps will be issued, and it will not appear on wrappers or newspaper wrappers kept for sale. *These stamps will not be used ex*clusively, but postoffices will be required to keep a sufficient supply on hand.

In the panels at the top and bottom will be the words, "U. S. Postage" and "Two Cents," respectively. In the centre the larger part of a circle rests upon the lower panel and in*closes a ribbon bearing the words.* "Alaska-Yukon-Pacific. 1909."

In the centre is a portrait of William H. Seward, Secretary of State at the time of the purchase of the Alaskan Territory from Russia, and below this is his name. On each side is an eclipse containing the number "11," in Roman numerals.

Wedding Announcement.

Mr. and Mrs. Clarence E. Bond, of East Front street, have issued invitations to the marriage of their daughter, Miss Bessie Wright Bond, to Allen Edward Beale, also of this city. The affair will be celebrated at the home of the bride's parents, Thursday night, June 1, at 7:30 o'clock. Mr. Beale was formerly on the reportorial staff of The Daily Press and is now editor of a trade magazine.

PRESIDENT MAY ATTEND CARRIERS' CONVENTION

Delegates have been chosen by the Plainfield Letter Carriers' Association to the annual State convention of letter carriers, which will be conducted in Jersey City on May 20 and 21. President William H. Taft has announced that he will attend the convention, providing he can get away from Gettysburg in time. Postmaster General Hitchcock will be present, as will the postmasters of all the larger cities of the State.

This convention is expected to be quite the biggest affair that the carriers of New Jersey have ever had. Practically every letter carrier in the State will be in attendance, and there are to be large complimentary delegations from New York, Brooklyn and Philadelphia. New York has promised 2,000 men and Brook*lyn about 1,000.* Of the New Jersey offices, Newark is expected to take the lead with 250 men.

The actual work of the convention is to be done during the afternoon and evening of May 30. The next day (Monday) will be observed as a general holiday by Jersey City folks, and the letter carriers will be per*mitted to parade and have a ban*quet and to be generally popular.

That Jersey City is taking great pride in the convention of letter carriers is perhaps best shown by the fact that Mayor Wittpenn some weeks ago appointed a citizens' committee of fifty to arrange for the affair. The Mayor and Postmaster Wanser, of Jersey City, are much interested in the local letter carriers from all over the State, and their friends. The convention and the aftermath on the next day will probably mark one of the biggest gathering of postal men ever held in this section of the country. The Postmaster General will have some men with him, and the postmaster guests are to be accompanied by their staffs, and it is tactily understood that there will be a little—maybe more—shop talk.

CHARLES DESHLER DEAD IN NINETY-FIRST YEAR

Charles Dunham Dreshler, widely known as a literary critic and historian, once connected with the Newark Daily Advertiser, died at his home at New Brunswick Monday, aged 90 years. He had written literary criticisms for Harper's Magazines for years. He owned a valuable historical library, and was one of the best-informed men in the State upon New Jersey history.

He was one of the most active workers in developing the public school system in New Brunswick, and was one of the founders of the original New Brunswick gas company, the New Brunswick Savings Institution and the New Brunswick Free Library. For a number of years he was lay judge of Middlesex county, and was the first superintendent of schools in New Brunswick. He was appointed postmaster under President Cleveland.

Mr. Deshler was born in Easton, Pa., on March 1, 1819, and came to New Brunswick to live with his grandfather, Dr. Jacob Dunham, when but four years old. He was educated in private schools and finished his education at the Rutgers *College Preparatory School. He en*tered the drug business as a clerk and rose to owner. In 1859 he retired from this business and went to Jersey City, where he edited the Jersey City Standard. From there he went to Newark and edited the Newark Daily Advertiser. He then went to the Pennsylvania oil fields, where he remained until 1868, when he moved to New Brunswick and had lived there continuously since. Death was due to old age and general debility.

The funeral will be held at Christ church, New Brunswick, of which he had been a life-long member, on Thursday afternoon at 4 o'clock.

Churchmen's Summer Festival.

Under the auspices of the Men's Association of the Church of the Heavenly Rest, a summer festival will be held on the church grounds, Saturday, June 19. An entertainment will also be held in the parish house and among those who will appear will be City Judge W. N. Runyon, bass; Mrs. Edward Hawthorne, contralto; Bayard Hawthorne, tenor; Prof. H. Warren Rathkin, prestidigitateur; Dr. J. Hervey *Buchanan and his orchestra will as*sist. The grounds will be illuminated with electric lights and Chinese lanterns. The committee in charge comprises J. M. Hull, chairman; Juan A. Babcock, J. S. Forster, L. M. Leek, Robert Larmour, William J. Ochiltree, Charles Graves, John Krisey and Peter Mauger, Jr.

Y. M. C. A. Summer Camp.

Fred S. Coombs, Paul Manning, Delmore Weinberger, Robert Gavett, Gerald Linke and Joseph Sattels will be among the boys from the local Y. M. C. A. to go to Camp Wanayanga Lake, N. Y., from July 15 to 29. The seventh boy will be sent by the Ladies' Auxiliary of the association, while the eighth boy will be chosen by J. Harry Manning and C. William Bingaman.

OBSERVED ANNIVERSARY

Ladies' Christian Work Society of Trinity Reformed Church 28 Years Old.

PASTOR PRAISES MEMBERS

Splendid Reports Heard by Enthusiastic Organization at Special Service Sunday Night.

The twenty-eighth anniversary of the Ladies' Christian Work Society of Trinity Reformed church was observed at the church Sunday. The platform and pulpit were tastefully decorated with cut flowers, apple blossoms, etc. There was special music by the quartet choir and Rev. Dr. E. T. Johnson, of New Brunswick, made the anniversary prayer. The members of the society, wearing their badges, occupied pews in the front of the church reserved for them.

Before delivering his sermon the pastor, Rev. John Y. Brock, addressed the society in these words:

"I congratulate you upon this celebration of the twenty-fifth anniversary of your society. It is an inspiration to have you present and a privilege for me to address you. I have heard a great deal concerning the Ladies' Christian Work Society before and after I came to Plainfield and find that all I have heard is true. The Consistory places utmost confidence in you, recognizing that your ingenuity in church work is unsurpassable. You are, therefore, an indispensable asset to the church's activities. Your record of the past year's achievement is perfectly splendid."

Mr. Brock's text was taken from Mark 14:9: "This also that she hath done shall be spoken of for a memorial of her." "The incident tells us plainly," continued Mr. Brock, "that there comes a time when the heart must liberate its affections. If the heart's affections were more liberated, how vastly happier this world would be. No words could express Mary's feelings. The fragrance of such diffused love and service did not end in that home, but it became fragrant to all within reach of its influence.

"The world often condemns love's effort. It considers service waste, as being so much effort expended without visible return, for all love from a commercial standpoint is waste. Although the world may often condemn our service, Christ will always commend it. He always makes our deeds more than we in*tend them to mean, and consequent*ly all our service should be made worthy of His love. A good deed for Christ does not end in simple performance, but it lives on to stimulate others to similar action. Like Mary's ointment, it spreads its fragrance of diffused love."

During the service the secretary, *Mrs. Mary G. Woodruff, read her re*port, which was an excellent one, and the annual report of Mrs. Mary E. M. Dunavan, the treasurer, was read by an elder of the church.

The secretary's report showed that the society was organized in 1881 and grown to have 60 members and at Easter a donation was made for the work among the Japanese in America. In addition $80 was given to the Missionary League.

At Thanksgiving and Christmas generous dinners were given to those poor in purse, and fruit to fourteen others, who were shut in by sickness. In many other ways the society has accomplished much for Christ and His church.

The report of the treasurer showed the total receipts to be $975.15, the disbursements $589.70, leaving a balance on hand at present of $385.45.

Find Quick Boy's Body.

The body of George Quick, eight years old, who was drowned at Boonton Falls, Wednesday afternoon, was found last night in a pool below Boonton Falls, about two hundred feet from where he fell into the river, Young Quick and another boy "played hookey." They were at the river bank when the school bell rang, announcing the day's session ended. Quick's companion heard the bell add he turned to the other boy to tell him that it was time to go home, but Quick had disappeared.

SERIOUS PRANK OF BOYS

Edward J. Olssen Almost Blinded by Ashes Thrown in His Eyes.

ONE CULPRIT IS PUNISHED.

Frank Mowrey Given a Three Days' Sentence for the Assault By Recorder Dolliver.

Almost blinded by a handful of fine ashes thrown in his eyes by Frank Mowrey, a borough boy, Edward J. Olssen, a Civil War veteran, who keeps a confectionery store on Grove street, is in a serious condition at his home today as the result of an outrageous attack Sunday night. Mowrey, who lives on Howard street, is a prisoner in the borough lock-up, having been sentenced to a three-day term of imprisonment by Borough Recorder Charles Dolliver. The Mowrey boy, who is but seventeen years of age, was arrested Monday upon complaint of Mrs. Olssen, wife of the injured man. He was accompanied by another boy, but has stubbornly refused to divulge his name to the police.

According to Olssen's story of the attack, Mowrey and his companion entered his store at about 8 o'clock Sunday night and asked for some candy. Mr. Olssen, who is about seventy-five years old, went to the confectionary case and as he bent over it, Mowrey came close to him and threw a handful of fine ashes full in his face. Temporarily blinded by the dust, the shop-keeper staggered and clutched the counter for support. The two boys dashed from the place, laughing.

Mrs. Olssen, wife of the veteran, heard his groans and rushed to his assistance. The shop-keeper was removed to his rooms in the rear of the little store, and a physician was summoned. A large quantity of the dust had gone in his eyes and for some hours he was unable to see at all. His condition is still serious.

A complaint was made by Mrs. Olssen for her husband to the North Plainfield police, and Mowrey was arrested Monday. He acknowledged that he had thrown the ashes, but said that his companion, whose *name he positively refused to di*vulge, had also thrown a handful at the same time. At his hearing before Recorder Dolliver Tuesday he said that the ashes were thrown as a joke, and it is not believed that the boys planned to make any purchase. The police are at work in an effort to find out who Mowrey's companion.

SURPRISED ON 35TH WEDDING ANNIVERSARY

In celebration of the thirty-fifth anniversary of their wedding, which occurred in Elizabeth, May 10, 1874, Mr. and Mrs. Peter A. Van Fleet were pleasantly surprised by about a score of their friends at their home on North avenue Monday. A handsome cut-glass punch bowl and glasses were presented to the couple as an anniversary gift, and the guests brought the materials for a prime collation with them.

After congratulations had been tendered, the party played progressive euchre. At the conclusion of the play, it was announced that the greatest number of points had been scored by Mrs. Obadiah Crane, while Mrs. J. M. Lewin had the second greatest number. Of the men, H. D. Templin and William N. Tier had the highest scores.

Mr. and Mrs. Van Fleet have been life-long residents of this city. They were married at Elizabeth thirty-five years ago yesterday, the ceremony being performed by Rev. Dr. E. G. Read, now a resident of this city.

MRS. WILLIAM RUNYON, AGED 63 YRS., DEAD

Mrs. William M. Runyon, aged sixty-three years, daughter of the late Dr. Randolph Titsworth, for many years one of the best known physicians in this city, died at 11:40 Monday night at her home on East Front street. She had been ill for the past three years with a complication of diseases and has been confined to her bed for nearly four months.

Mrs. Runyon was born in New Brunswick, but spent the greater part of her life in this city, where her father was a practicing physician for many years. She was almost a life-long member of the First Presbyterian church and always interested in the work there. She is survived by a husband and two sons, Louis R. Runyon, of Brooklyn, and Thomas Albert Runyon, who lived at home. The funeral service will be held from the late home Thursday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock and the burial will be in Hillside cemetery.

CRANFORD MAN MISSING

Mysteriously Disappears in Detroit and Friends Hunt for Him.

HAS BEEN ABSENT TWO WEEKS.

Started For Mackinac—Wife Believes Him Ill in Some Hospital.

The police of Cranford Monday sent to many cities descriptions of Frank S. Curtis, for some time a resident of that place, and who has mysteriously disappeared. He was last seen at Detroit, Mich., on April 28, but since then not a trace of him has been found. His wife, who lives at 48 Bernard avenue, Cranford, got a letter from him bearing that date and in it he said he was suffering with sever pains in his head. It is her belief that he is unconscious and unknown in some hospital.

Curtis, who was a civil engineer, went to Cranford from New York some months ago, and but little is known of him there as most of his time was spent away from home on engineering work. On April 26 he attended a dinner at the Transportation Club, New York, and next morning, with Frank Grannis, an engineer, left the city. Grannis to go to Buffalo and Curtis to Mackinac.

Grannis was ill when the train reached Buffalo, and Curtis got off there with him and saw him safely to the home of Grannis' sister. Curtis checked his suitcase to Mackinac from Buffalo and took the next train. When Grannis soon he got off at Detroit and was registered at the Wayne House. He paid for two days' board, but the first night did not re*turn to the hotel, and up to last* night had not been seen there since.

Curtis was subject to severe headaches and Mrs. Curtis is confident he has been stricken ill somewhere and is unable to make his identity known. All the Detroit hospitals have been communicated with, but no man of his description is in any of them. He is said to be a sober man, and when Cranford did not have much money with him. He was a member of Masonic Lodge, 703, of New York, and its members are interesting themselves trying to locate him.

LINEMAN IS SHOCKED BY AN ELECTRIC WIRE

Walter Murley, aged about thirty years, employed by the New York and New Jersey Telephone Company, as a lineman in this city, received several severe electric shocks Tuesday morning while helping to string wires at West Front street and Rock avenue. He was sitting on one telephone line and at the same time pulling up on another. The lose line came in contact with an electric light wire and in the mixup he received the shock in the back of the neck.

Murley was partially dazed, but managed to descend the pole as far as an automobile sign. There he was assisted to the ground, where he fainted away. A telephone message to the company's office on East Fourth street resulted in Dr. W. H. Murray being sent to the scene of the accident. By that time the lineman had recovered consciousness and was removed to the company's office. Later he was able to return to his home in Elizabeth. His injuries were not serious. He is a new man in the Plainfield gang, hav*ing been employed here but a short* time.

MUST HUNT FOR BEER AFTER JULY FOURTH

The discomforts of hot weather will be increased this summer by an added obstacle to the quenching of a sever thirst, for after next there will have been removed from the exterior of every saloon, restaurant hotel in New Jersey the hundreds of dollars worth of signs, advertising various makes of beer and ale and brands of whiskey and other liquors, in compliance with a law passed at the recent session of the New Jersey Legislature and signed by Governor Fort.

It provides that all signs advertising breweries and wholesale liq*uor dealers or manufacturers must* be removed from the outside of the establishments of retail dealers in intoxicating beverages by July 4. Failure to do so will result in criminal action against the violator of the law.

In Trenton while the bill was under consideration by the Legislature it was freely said that the brewers were behind the bill. The retail liquor interests were widely opposed to it, but no serious clash resulted.

CRANFORD MAN MISSING

Robert Dixon Thrown 20 Feet But Other Passengers Escape.

SPLIT SWITCH THE CAUSE.

Women Become Hysterical When Car Jumps the Track at West Front Street.

A "split switch" caused the rear trucks of a main line trolley car, westbound, to jump the tracks at West Front street and Grant avenue, at 5:20 o'clock Monday afternoon. One passenger, Robert Dixon, of 815 South avenue, who stood on the rear platform, intending to alight at the corner, was hurled about twenty feet, landing on his face and head, which were severely cut, bruised and scratched.

Dixon started for the hospital in a carriage, but the police patrol overtook him and he was removed to his home. Dr. P. B. Cregar was summoned. It was found that he was not seriously hurt. The car was filled with passengers, mostly women, who were shaken up as the car ran over the macadam road. Motorman Newton C. Martin and Conductor Joseph Tompkins, over Elizabeth, were in charge of the car which just passed the switch light on West Front street, near Grant avenue, and had started up the hill. The front trucks passed over the "run-out" switch at the corner, but when the rear trucks followed the tracks into Grant avenue as far as possible and then skidded toward the gutter. The car swayed, but fortunately righted itself, not until half the passengers, however, were thrown from their seats into the aisle.

While the car was doing these "stunts" Dixon took his aerial flight. He was carrying a large bundle of clothing and at first it was taken for a small child by those who saw the mishap. Most of the women in the car became hysterical and it was some time before they recovered their composure.

Motorman Martin shut off his controller as quickly as possible after the tracks left the track. He was uninjured. The conductor, who had just entered the car a moment before the accident to collect fares, calmed the women, with the assistance of the male passengers.

A telephone message to police headquarters brought the police patrol in charge of Lieutenant Overbaugh, but its services were not required. *Another telephone mes*sage summoned the wrecking crew of the P. S. C. from Dunellen and within an hour the car was put on the tracks and traffic was resumed. Immediately after the rear trucks left the track, the chains which hold them to the body of the car, snapped, allowing the body to swing at will.

Division Superintendent George Luhr was among the first to arrive at the scene and he took charge of affairs. Among those who suffered from shock were Miss Ella Boice and Miss Dealaman, of Dunellen; Chas. Rice and Philip De Hart, of this city.

UNION OF ENDEAVORERS MEET AT HOPE CHAPEL

The Plainfield Christian Endeavor Union held held a Congress meeting at Hope chapel Monday night, which was attended by members of every society. Rev. L. R. Howard opened the meeting with devotional exercises, after which the business session was held.

William La Tourette, treasurer, *reported a balance on hand for con*vention needs of $194.75. An amendment to the constitution providing for a pastor's advisory committee, was adopted on third reading. Charles F. Windham, secretary, was authorized to prepare a report of the year's work and to give a summary of the committee work. This will be presented at the meeting to be held at the Park Avenue Baptist church, Thursday night, May 20.

President Clarence B. LaRue spoke of the Endeavor meeting and rally which will be held in Summit Tuesday night, May 18. He urged all Endeavorers to go if possible. He also called attention to the fact that the next mass meeting will be held at the Park Avenue Baptist church May 20. Rev. Herbert J. T. Sproull will make the address. Last night's Congress will be the last until September.

Following the business session the Endeavorers were invited to the Sunday-school rooms where ice cream and cake were served and a social hour enjoyed. The finance committee held a short meeting after the social. The general committee held a lengthy session at which the question of badges, music, place of holding convention and other detail matters came up for considera*tion.*

SOCIETY 21 YEARS OLD

Warren Chapel Endeavorers Celebrate "Majority Anniversary" of Organization.

REPORTS SHOW FAST GROWTH.

Rev. W. B. Greenway, of Jersey City, the Principal Speaker—President Windham Names Committees.

In celebration of the twenty-first anniversary of the founding of the Christian Endeavor Society of Warren chapel the members acted as hosts to delegations from other societies of the local Christian Endeavor Union at the chapel last night, when a delightful program, including addresses and reports by the society's officers, was rendered, and a pleasant social hour passed at its conclusion. Delegations from the societies of Dunellen, Hope chapel, the Monroe Avenue church, Trinity Reformed church, the Congregational church, the Park Avenue Baptist church, the Temple Baptist church, and Grace M. E. church joined with the Warren Endeavorers in the celebration of the anniversary.

The edifice was beautifully decorated for the occasion, red and green being the predominating colors, although white flowers were used in abundance. Over the pulpit, the anniversary dates, "1888-1909," were displayed, and festoons of red and green paper were strung in ropes from the central chandelier.

Following music by Martin A. Korff, accompanied by Miss Berg, Charles F. Windham, president of the Warren chapel society and vice-president of the local union, made an address of welcome, and Rev. J. O. McKelvey, pastor of the chapel, conducted devotional exercises. Mrs. E. D. Young sang a solo and following this came the report of the secretary, William Kenney, read by Mrs. E. D. Schenck. This report, which summarized the growth and work of the society since its foundation in 1888, showed that there are now thirty-eight active and four associate members, and the earnest work of the various committees has resulted in the steady growth of the organization.

Mrs. J. O. McKelvey reported for the Junior Endeavorers a flourishing organization with a membership of sixty and an average attendance of forty-two. The Juniors have had a prosperous growth during their fifteen years of existence in the chapel and their bounteous weekly offerings have been used to aid in the support of the King's Daughters' Baby Camp as well as various domestic and foreign missions. Miss Nora B. Schenck read the report of Treasurer Windham, and this showed that during the year $329 has been raised by the society. Of this $101 has been sent to missions and the balance has been devoted to the needs of the various departments of the chapel, including $40 given toward the new library fund, and $27 for flowers for the pulpit desk during the year.

Rev. W. B. Greenway, of Jersey City, delivered the principal address. His topic was "Ditch Digging," using his thought and following Old Testament history. He spoke of the valuable work of the society since its organization by Rev. Francis E. Clark, and urged a maintainance of its strength and an increase of its usefulness by the efforts of its members to "talk up, pray up, cheer up and stick to the Warren chapel Christian Endeavor Society." After the singing of the hymn "Stand Up, Stand Up for Jesus," the benediction was given by Rev. O. J. Shoop, pastor of Grace M. E. church. Following the meeting, refreshments were served.

The anniversary committee comprised Charles F. Windham, T. J. Martin, Miss Adele Kirby, Miss Harriet Squier and Miss Nora Schenck. The social committee was under the direction of Mrs. John Schenck and A. J. Everitt headed the decorating committee. These committees were announced by President C. W. Windham:

Prayer Meeting Committee—Miss Adelaide Stiglitz, chairman; Miss Adele H. Kirby, Miss Hattie Taynor, Miss Florence Newmiller, Miss Elizabeth Kline and Miss Nora Schenck.

FINE DINNER ENJOYED BY MASTER MASONS

The annual dinner of the Master Masons' Association was held at the Hotel Kensington, last night, and it was one of the most enjoyable affairs in the history of the organization. After a fine dinner was served by Proprietor Burns, the evening was devoted to speech-making in which the interests of the association were advanced.

Captain William C. Smith was the toastmaster and began the speeches with one of his characteristic after-dinner talks. He lauded the association, its objects and urged a continuance of the cordial relations among the members. Those present, all of whom spoke, were Captain William C. Smith, Seaman Williams, Warren Townley, Lorenzo Townley, Chief T. O. Doane, Albert Pangborn, Richard B. Van Arsdale, Walter Mundy, Joseph Brandt, Titus Lange, John Cuniff and Frank Meinerney.

PLAINFIELD WOMEN HEAR MR. HOCKMAN

Arthur Hochman, of the Damrosch school, New York, appeared for the first time in Plainfield yesterday at the home of Mrs. John P. Stevens, Hillside avenue. The program was of great interest to an audience which crowded Mrs. Stevens' home. The concert by Lizzie Lashan piano is not often rendered except by an artist of the greatest virtuosity on account of extreme difficulties in technique. Mr. Hochman, however, did full justice to the great work. His rendition was brilliant, artistic and wonderfully clear.

The songs which Miss Hulda Lashan sang with exquisite feeling were all from Heine, the music composed by Mr. Hochman. Miss Lashan has shown well how to interpret the sadness which blends with all joy in the German poet's songs and in the modern Russian's music. Miss Lashan was obliged to give an encore, the favorite, "Mother 'o Mine."

Mr. Hochman's closing numbers were a beautiful melody by Brahm's given with a lyric touch as consummate as the pianist's dramatic style. The Barcarolle by Mr. Hochman won such applause that he was forced to give an encore, one of Gluck's loviest pieces from "Alceste." This brought to a close one of the most noteworthy musical events which has taken place this season.

ATE AT "CAFE CHANTANT"

Novel Church Entertainment at St. Stephen's Parish House Well Attended.

AUDITORIUM A FRENCH CAFE.

Program of Music and Dancing Rendered While "Patrons" Dined at the Dainty Tables.

Reflecting Parisian life in a French cafe, as well as could be, a highly novel and successful entertainment was given at St. Stephen's parish house last night, when the auditorium was thronged with merry diners, seated at typical French cafe tables, while a program of songs, recitations and dances was rendered by local and New York talent. The seats had been removed and little tables substituted, where light refreshments were served, members of St. Faith's and St. Mary's guilds of the church, acting as waitresses. Those who took part in the program gave their numbers from the platform at the end of the auditorium, and the entertainment was furnished as the patrons ate and chatted at the various tables. A Parisian effect was produced by elaborate floral decorations and the electric lights were shaded with colored papers and flowers. Light for the tables was furnished by dainty candelabra.

Previous to the presentation of the musical program, those who took part sang the Marseillaise in chorus behind the scenes, and the opening number was by Harry E. Hayden, who told some clever dialect stories, and later appeared in a monologue. Six-year-old Elizabeth Johnston, daughter of Mrs. Violet Truell-Johnston, gave a dainty French dance, which won enthusiastic applause. Her mother furnished the music at the piano. Frederick J. Pope and G. H. Smith sang a duet, and later in the evening each sang a solo.

J. M. Beck and J. P. Scott, who came out from New York city, made a big hit in singing and dancing in which they apepared. Particularly clever was the former's appearance as "The Camphell Kid," introducing "The Yama Yama Man," and some excellent dancing. He later won lots of applause by a clog dance. Mr. Scott sang various songs in costume and was enthusiastically received. Albert Crawford acted as accompanist for the pair. Fred Van Eps delighted the patrons of the "cafe" by some excellent banjo music, appearing in two numbers.

The proceeds from the affair will amount to about $80, and the money will be used for the church work. Mrs. Robert H. McCready was at the head of the general committee in charge, and was assisted by members of St. Faith's and St. Mary's guilds.

HOPE SUNDAY-SCHOOL TO HAVE HOME DEPARTMENT.

Interested members of Hope Chapel will form a Home Department of the Sunday-school this week, a number of persons already having signified their intention of joining. Mrs. Donald McInness has been appointed superintendent and the visitors are Mrs. F. A. Weber, Mrs. James Busby and Mrs. Willard H. Cook. The movement has the hearty support of Superintendent G. Herbert Condict, assistant Superintendent Ira W. Travell, of the Sunday-school, and Rev. L. R. Howard, pastor of the chapel. The quarterlies will be received this week and work will be started at once.

The aim of the Home Department of the Sunday-school is to encourage and systematize the study of the Holy Bible at home, along the line of the international lessons, by those who for any reason are unable to attend the regular services of the school. The sole condition of membership is that he or she devote at least half an hour each week to Bible study unless prevented by sickness or other cause.

CHARTER DAY SOUVENIRS

The Committee Arranges for Handsome Badges to Commemorate Celebration.

MANY BANDS ARE ENGAGED.

City to Be Asked to Give $1,000—Contributions Are Coming in Rapidly from Business Men and Private Citizens.

Handsome souvenir badges to commemorate the occasion have been provided for by the Charter Day celebration committee, a committee having been made by the executive committee last night with Grove Hinman, of New York, to furnish many thousands of these mementoes for the observance. They will be sold by the committee at ten cents apiece and the design is sure to make them popular.

The music committee, of which B. Frank Coriell is chairman, last night arranged with Benjamin LaVere for six bands and a drum corps for the first day's parade. These will be in addition to any bands engaged by private organizations. For the firemen's parade on July 7, there will be six or seven bands to be brought here by various volunteer and exempt associations. For the entire three days, an agreement has been made with Benjamin LaVere to furnish a band of eighteen pieces and this organization will provide music at open air concerts each afternoon and night.

Mayor Charles J. Fisk has found an old law which permits the city to make an appropriation for the demonstration. The committee will request the Common Council to donate $1,000 towards the expense, which will aggregate about $8,000, and it is believed that the mayor and city fathers will grant the petition. It is also expected that the borough will find some legal way of making an appropriation.

Private citizens and business houses are responding liberally to the finance committee's appeal. Since yesterday, these are numbered among the larger contributors:

Hope Men's Club Meets.

The Hope Chapel's Men's Club met at the home of Rev. L. R. Howard on West 10th street, last night, chiefly for the purpose of devising ways and means of raising money to defray the expense of publishing the church bulletin. Communications will be received from magazines offering to furnish programs on a 70 per cent. basis, but these were rejected. It was the concensus of opinion of those present that the club dispense with an entertainment and that each member give according to his means. In this way $13 was subscribed. Refreshments were served. It was suggested that hereafter the club meet once a month at the home of a member, and was approved.

Bike Club Meeting.

The Plainfield Cycle Club will hold a regular meeting tonight at the home of Jack Horner on Dover street. It is urged that all members be present as this will be the last meeting before the twenty-five mile race will be held and there are matters of importance to be brought before the club.

HERO WOOLLEY'S PLUCK REWARDED BY RAILROAD

Percy R. Woolley, of Roselle, the fireman on the Baltimore and Ohio fast line train who saved his train from being wrecked at Hamilton, on April 24, when, after his engineer had been killed and the cab of the locomotive ripped off by a broken driving rod, he crawled over the tank and under the tender and disconnected the air brakes, stopping the train, was summoned before the directors and officers of the railroad yesterday in New York.

Fireman Woolley had no idea what he was wanted for, and after being ushered into the presence of the railroad men was presented with a handsome gold watch for his bravery. W. G. Bester made the presentation speech. The watch bears the inscription, "Presented to Percy R. Woolley by the Central Railroad of New Jersey, in recognition of exemplary service at Hamilton, N. J., on April 24, 1909."

MR. FORT ON GOVERNMENT

At Westfield Banquet, Governor Says People are Responsible for Bosses.

PRAISES BOARDS OF TRADE.

Frank Bergen and William G. Bester Also Address the Diners.

Good fellowship and good citizenship, together with those essentials which combine to make a town all that it should be were features of the first annual banquet of the Board of Trade held at the Westfield Casino, last night, and were made the keynote of several excellent speeches. The board had for its guests Governor J. Franklin Fort, Frank Bergen, of Elizabeth; William G. Bester, of Plainfield, who is vice-president and general manager of the New Jersey Central, and Mayor Augustus L. Alpers, while the Governor was accompanied by one of his aides, Col. Condict.

More than two hundred members and other citizens of Westfield and the guests sat down at the banquet and the affair proved to be a great success. The Board of Trade was organized in October last and has been an active force for Westfield's good ever since.

President W. E. Tuttle was the toastmaster, and in his introductory remarks set forth the objects for which the board was organized, namely, the promotion of the best interests of Westfield, co-operation with other boards of trade, the investigation and solution of difficult problems, the encouragement of home trade and not to meddle with affairs that do not concern the board. He said that during the past five years the population of Westfield had doubled, while the real estate values had doubled in that time. He urged the people of Westfield to be an ideal suburban home town and one of the best governed in the State.

After a few remarks by Mayor Alpers in which he said among other things that it was within the power of the citizens by way that Westfield was to be an "open town" on Sunday, that the saloons and hotel bars were closed every week day night at 11:30 and all day Sunday, the principal speech of the evening was made by Governor Fort. He was given a rousing reception when introduced by President Tuttle.

In part the Governor spoke as follows:

"I recall that one evening during my campaign last October I stood in this hall and addressed a large meeting of citizens. Tonight I am somewhat embarrassed for I realize that I may have made some promises then that I have not kept. However, I do say that I have tried and mean to keep all those promises. I am glad that you have a Board of Trade here and I only wish that every community had one. What we need mostly today is a quickening of civic spirit on the part of every citizen.

"The great danger lies in the indifference of citizens. If the republic fails it will be through the neglect of citizens as well as indifference. You are not good citizens when you fail to take proper interest in public affairs. It is easy to criticise, but it is worse to neglect to criticize or pray.

"The basis of good government is the primary. There is where you should be found at the proper time. You talk for months prior to the primaries about the campaign, but it is impossible to get men out to vote. In my town we have to send carriages for the respectable citizens if we want to get them out to a primary. The quickened interest of citizenship will bring the improvements you so desire. We must make New Jersey a paradise if we are to bring people into our State.

"New Jersey has often been called a corporation State, which is true. We should encourage corporations and give them the support of the State in what is right. I believe in State regulation of public utilities, to control, not manage. That should be left to a board of directors and all differences should be settled by a commission on a fair basis.

"We haven't go to that yet, according to my promise. I have not had, as you perhaps know, the corporation of everybody to accomplish this object. There are legislators who want a little more time to think things over, but I hope to accomplish this and other things next year. What we want is courage. There are lots of people who fail at the important moment in public affairs. Today man counts for more than ever before. The time has arrived when men do not follow the strict party lines and it is one of

"TRAFFIC COP" IS INSANE

W. W. Elliott, Piscataway Man Who Stopped Vehicles, Sent to Asylum.

A NUISANCE TO THE POLICE.

Aged Former Postoffice Employe Was Only Released From Morris Plains Last Fall.

Plainfield's self-appointed traffic "cop," William Wallace Elliott, was arrested Wednesday afternoon on West Front street by Patrolman Charles Flynn, and was committed to the State asylum for the Insane at Morris Plains. Examined by City Physician C. B. Lufburrow and Dr. J. H. Carman at police headquarters Wednesday, the man was declared insane. Elliott's himself is heart-broken over the action of the police in interrupting his duties as controller of the traffic in the business section of the city. For the past week he has been on his job day and night, although the police have urged him to return to his home in South Plainfield.

Arraigned for creating a disturbance in the brick pavement section about a week ago, Elliott told City Judge William N. Runyon that he felt it his duty to secure better traffic arrangements. He secured a whistle and a section of a broomhandle for a club and went right on the job. He would dart into the street in front of an automobile or trolley car, stand directly in its path and signal it to stop. Some sudden stops had to be made and Elliott, who is more than fifty years of age, had some narrow escapes from being run down. When the vehicle would stop, the "traffic cop" would stand aside, blow his whistle, and with a lordly bow, allow the driver to proceed.

Elliott is songful, too. When he would become tired from his duties as policeman, he would seat himself on the curbstone and start singing. Upon the completion of his "selection," he would applaud himself loudly and long, and these subjective encores always resulted in more singing.

The "traffic cop," who told Judge Runyon that he has been crazy since he has been seven years old, was discharged from Morris Plains last fall. He is a widower and has a son and a married daughter. When Postmaster Wallace Vail was in charge of the local postoffice, Elliott was an employe. Freeholder Bunting, Piscataway, Postmaster of the Poor John M. Dayton, of Piscataway, and Dr. Whitford, of Dunellen, were at police headquarters today, when the commitment papers were completed. Elliott spent a sleepless night in his cell, talking about his plans for regulating traffic much to the disgust of a fellow-prisoner.

COMMISSION SOON TO SPRAY ELM TREES

The Shade Tree Commission is now making preparations to begin the annual spraying of the elms on the city streets to protect them from the elm-leaf beetle. This year the work will be done by two gangs of men instead of by the one that did the work last year, so that the whole city can be covered promptly and all the trees sprayed at the right time.

Arrangements have been made by which trees on private grounds may be sprayed at the same price that it costs to spray the street trees, if the commission is notified in advance, so that the spraying of such trees can be done when the men are working in the street near which such trees are located. An extra price may have to be charged if the men have to come back to do private spraying after they have sprayed the street trees in that section. Application should be made to the Shade Tree Commission at 151 North avenue. It is understood that R. P. Gay and some other local men will also do private spraying.

MAY DAY DANCE AT HOLY CROSS PARISH HOUSE.

The May Day dance given at the parish house of the Church of the Holy Cross Wednesday by Miss Eva Kelly, was a success. About sixty couples attended the affair. The parish house was attractively decorated with dogwood, which with its white flowers and green branches was very effective.

The gowns worn by the young women were attractive and the men with light trousers and dark coats, combined to make a pretty picture. While all the dances were enjoyed, the May Pole Cotillion was undoubtedly the best one on the card. With the May pole in the centre, with long streamers attached and sixty couples waltzing in figure, the young people had a jolly time.

Miss Eva Kelly and Leslie Stewart were the cotillion leaders and many of the figures they introduced were original. The young women brought baskets of lunch and ice cream and lemonade were served by the committee in charge.

CHARLES B. OVERBAUGH, AN INVENTOR, IS DEAD

Charles B. Overbaugh, of this city, an inventor of some note, died Thursday following a long illness from a complication of disease. During the past year he was under treatment in a sanitarium, but his condition was such that the best of medical skill was unavailing. Mr. Overbaugh was born at Scotch Plains and spent his early life in this vicinity. After his marriage he lived in Baltimore for a time, later moving to Plainfield, where he continued to reside until about a year ago.

During recent years he turned his attention to works of invention, and among his most notable achievements were the invention of a non-refillable bottle and a non-clogging salt-cellar, both being a success. The salt-cellar is used in hotels and restaurants throughout the entire country.

Mr. Overbaugh is survived by one daughter, who lives in New York; two sons, Charles F. and Paul Overbaugh, of this city; also four sisters, Mrs. Amos Gray, of this city; Mrs. Charles Dow, of Elizabeth, and two residing in Washington Territory, and five brothers, Sergeant Herbert L. Overbaugh, of the local police department, and T. W. Overbaugh, also of this city.

The funeral was held from the residence of his son, Charles F. Overbaugh, 148 Fifth street, Friday night at 8 o'clock.

LINCOLN SCHOOL'S ANNUAL EXHIBITION

The pupils of the Lincoln School received their parents and friends Thursday to see what has been accomplished during the year in sewing, wood-cutting, basketry, rug-making, drawing, etc. Since there is no assembly room in the building, the work of each class was shown in its own room.

In the Fifth grade the girls have sewing and the boys wood-cutting for the first time. The products exhibited showed not only painstaking work on the part of the teachers but interest and delight in the work on the part of the pupils. Many of the drawings would reflect credit on much more advanced pupils.

The manual training in the Fourth grade for both boys and girls is basketmaking. Some of the baskets with nicely fitted covers, show the deftness that the pupils have acquired—a skill which may be applied in a very practical way later in life.

The Third grade exhibited hammocks which made one long for summer days and shady trees. They also showed a great variety of rugs—in these as well as the hammocks, each child was allowed to follow his own fancy in arrangement of color and design. In addition to this work each pupil had a large card on which were mounted specimens of his own work, thus giving an excellent chance for comparison. The work of the little Second grade boys and girls was to furnish a house—constructing the furniture from heavy paper, decorating the wall paper, and weaving the floor covering. The completeness and daintiness with which the houses were furnished brought forth exclamations of admiration and surprise from old and young alike.

The mothers of the little people in the First grades were justly proud of their work. In one room a model farm and in the other a model village were represented on sand tables, everything from the barns and grain to the pretentious churches and school buildings to the pump and watering-trough and the gay borders of tulips, sunflowers, fields of cabbage, etc.

The kindergarten had no formal exhibit although the room was made most attractive by the work which has been mounted from time to time during the year.

BOROUGH HIGH DEFEATS ROSELLE HIGH SCHOOL

North Plainfield High School added another victory to its list Wednesday afternoon when defeating the Roselle High School by a score of 9 to 6. The feature of the game was the pitching of Smith who fanned twelve batters. "Tone" Overton wielded the willow in lively fashion. The fast second baseman also made three runs. For the visitors Dedrick pitched good ball. Besides fanning ten men he allowed but two men to walk to first on balls.

BACON KILLED BY TRAIN AT HOME IN THE HOSPITAL

Real Estate Broker Mortally Hurt at the North Avenue Station.

HE DIES IN THE HOSPITAL

The Victim, Francis M. Bacon, Aged Seventy-two Years, a Familiar Figure in This City.

Struck by the west-bound local train due in this city at 3:27 o'clock in the afternoon, Francis M. Bacon, a real estate broker, of 419 West Fifth street, was mortally injured at the North Ave. station Wednesday, and died at Muhlenberg Hospital twenty minutes after being taken there in an ambulance. The victim, who was 72 years of age, sustained a severely crushed foot and was bruised and cut about the head. The hospital physicians say that death resulted from shock; the aged man never recovered consciousness.

Mr. Bacon, who was negotiating the deal for the sale of the A. C. Bechstein place at Holly Park, had been in consultation with J. T. Vail at his North avenue office for half an hour before the accident. He left the broker to go to the station where he said he was to meet a man. As he approached the track, an east-bound train drew in, and Mr. Bacon, recognizing a friend in one of the cars, went out to the fence to talk with him at the window. His first intimation of the approach of the 3:27 train was the warning whistle of the engine. Seeing the train, the old man became confused, and realizing that he could not escape injury by squeezing close to the fence, he tried to cross to the west-bound platform again. The train, which was moving very slowly, struck his foot, crushing it, and throwing Mr. Bacon. Bystanders rushed to his assistance as the train stopped, but shock and pain rendered the old man unconscious. He was removed to the hospital, where he died as an examination was being made.

Mr. Bacon had been a resident of this city for thirty-eight years, living at 419 East Fifth street. He was at one time a Republican, later a prominent Prohibitionist, but of recent years has supported the Democratic party. He was one of the few Plainfielders who knew President Lincoln well. Mr. Bacon was a member of the Asbestos Club. His only living relative is a brother, residing in Greenbush, N. Y., also a familiar figure in the business section of this city for many years.

The accident is very similar to the one in which Mrs. I. V. Bond, of Newark, met her death, in 1901. She was struck and instantly killed by 4 fast trains as she was about to take a train for home, after being here for the wedding of a niece.

The Funeral service was held from his late residence, 419 West Fifth street, Saturday afternoon at 3 o'clock.

RUTGER "PREPS" DEFEAT HOLY CROSS BY 7 TO 4

The Holy Cross baseball team proved an easy victim for the Rutgers Prep. nine at the Cricket Field Wednesday afternoon, being defeated by a score of 7 to 4.

For the Preps, Zeiger, who won many laurels on the gridiron last year, pitched a magnificent game. At no time during the contest did he give his opponents a chance to win, even when his support was ragged he never lost his head but kept cool and steady. His batting was also a feature, Todd caught a pretty game. Hoe at second accepted many hard chances in grand style.

The weakness of the home boys was due to the switching of players from one position to another. For Holy Cross, Capt. Todd put up a good game as did Coyle at short. The "Preps." got at Harriman early in the contest and for three innings touched him up in lively fashion. In the fifth inning they added three more runs. In the sixth, Russell was sent to his relief and for the next three innings stopped the slaughter. The final score ended 7 to 4. The line up:

Rutgers Prep.—Scanlon, ss; Zleger, p; Hoe, 2b; Prentiss, 3b; Phelps, lf; Dunham, 1b; Smith, cf; Fingry, rf; Todd, c.

Holy Cross—Russell, p; Blazier, rf-lf; Wilson, c-rf; Coyle, ss; Brokaw, 1b; Mosher, cf; Stein, cf; Hush, 3b; Bailey, 2b; Harriman, p-c.

N. J. EXEMPT FIREMEN ELECT JAMES MANNING

James Manning, of Elizabeth, was elected president at the twenty-third annual convention of the New Jersey Exempt Firemen's Association at Phillipsburg Wednesday. The meeting was held in Parochial Hall at 11 o'clock, followed by dinner at Ortygia Hall and a parade of twenty-seven organizations. State President D. W. Littell, of Plainfield, presided.

After prayer by Monsignor Connelly, Mayor Firth welcomed the visiting firemen and extended the freedom of the town. The chief feature of the convention was the contest for the presidency between Manning and D. W. Littell, of this city, the latter being defeated in a meeting by two votes out of a poll of 224. E. T. Humphrey, of Nutley, secretary, and Nicholas Snyder, of Trenton, treasurer, were re-elected without opposition.

The following vice-presidents were named for the ensuing year: Fred Kruston, J. L. Agnew, John Clancy, John Kenkle, J. E. Booth, H. R. Scott, E. H. Paulus, D. C. Benedict and John A. Burn.

The new executive committeemen are George Kenkle, H. G. Adams, P. W. Walsh, C. A. Howlett, W. J. Hagerman, James McDonald, James Fitzpatrick, J. C. Tier and John D. Perchner.

Seventy-one associations are enrolled in the organization, an increase of forty-one during the incumbency of the present secretary and of eight during the past year.

The treasurer's report showed receipts for the year of $913.71 and expenses of $549.87, with a cash balance May 18, 1909, of $281.90.

The next session of the place for holding the next convention was left to the executive committee.

The parade was viewed by hundreds of spectators an decorations and displays of the national emblem all along the route of the march gave the city a holiday appearance.

The feature of the parade that was most applauded and appreciated was the Newark Exempt Firemen's delegation of forty-two men, ranging in age from 62 to 83 years, with their unique hand pump of a hundred years ago.

The festivities closed with a ball at Ortygia Hall last night.

HE OFFERS PRINCETON HALF MILLION DOLLARS

Princeton University has just received an offer of a gift of $500,000 for the proposed Graduate college. Although not officially announced it is known that the donor is William Cooper Proctor, '83, of Cincinnati, O. The gift, which is given on certain conditions, is the largest one which university has received in a long time. The conditions are that an equal sum of $500,000 be pledged by May 1, 1910, and that a site satisfactory to the donor be chosen instead of the "prospect site." The Prospect site referred to is that on which President Woodrow Wilson's home is located.

There have been a great many objections to the location for the Graduate college, and the alumni of Princeton generally will be glad to learn of the new plan. There is little doubt that the additional $500,000 will be subscribed. Already $100,000 is practically assured, and the remainder will probably be forthcoming in less than a year.

There are now nearly one hundred names of men in Plainfield and vicinity who are veterans of the Spanish War, Philippine insurrection and Chinese campaign. Any man who served in the army or navy, regulars or volunteers, during the above campaigns prior to July 4, 1902, is eligible. Those who have not been notified should send their names to Adjutant Dr. Harold D. Corbusier, 612 Park avenue, so that they may become charter members. The charter roll will close Thursday night, June 3, the date of the next meeting.

Article 2, of the constitution of the organization, provides that all honorably discharged officers, soldiers, sailors and acting assistant surgeons of the regular and volunteer army, navy and Marine Corps of the United States who honorably served during the war with Spain or in the incidental insurrection in the Philippines prior to July 4, and all officers or enlisted men, in the U. ORDERS ISSUED FOR SEA GIRT ENCAMPMENT

Major General P. Farmer Wanser has issued the following orders, carrying out the encampment of the national guard at Sea Girt this summer. The full details of the plans have been worked out and the orders provide for a five weeks' camp.

A feature of this order is that no man, unless he has been enlisted prior to March 31, is eligible for service at the camp. Men who have not had experience have gone there in the past, proving themselves the rawest kind of recruits, not knowing the first duties of a soldier, and the United States war department has asked that this thing stop.

The full order carrying out the 1909 encampment follows:

"Pursuant to special orders No. 6, office of the adjutant general, dated January 21, 1909, the several commands comprising the Division National Guard will encamp upon the State camp grounds at Sea Girt, N. J., as follows:

"First brigade—First Infantry and First Troop, Cavalry, Monday, July 19, to Saturday, July 24, inclusive; Fourth Infantry and Signal Corps, Monday, July 26, to Saturday, July 31, inclusive; Fifth Infantry and Battery A, Field Artillery, Monday, July 12, to Saturday, July 17, inclusive.

"Second brigade—Second Infantry and Battery B, Field Artillery, Monday, August 9, to Saturday, August 14, inclusive; Third Infantry and Second Troop, Cavalry, Monday, August 2, to Saturday, August 7, inclusive.

"The several organizations may enter camp on Saturdays, July 10, 17, 24, 31, and August 7 respectively; provided, it is understood that the command so entered will receive no pay for the additional two days.

"No enlisted man (original enlistment) unless enlisted prior to March 31 this year will be taken to encampment. Regimental, troop and battery commanders will cause their commands to be mustered each day of the encampment, and will allow no man to be present in uniform and as a part of the command who has not been regularly enlisted.

"Transportation, camp equipage and subsistence will be furnished by the quartermaster general and commissary general, upon requisition duly approved.

"The troops so encamped will be paid by the paymaster general, as provided for in paragraph 123 of 'An act concerning the militia of the State of New Jersey,' May 16, 1906. Company pay rolls must show the correct names of the entire command, whether present for duty or not; the absentees will be marked 'absent with leave, 'absent without leave,' or 'absent sick,' as the case may be. No man will be paid for duty at camp whose name is not of record in the office of the adjutant general. To avoid delay in payment for services at camp, regimental, troop and battery commanders will cause the pay rolls to be audited and see that they are properly and correctly made before forwarding.

"The commanding officers of brigades, with their staffs, will encamp in the time of the organizations of their respective brigades and be in command of the camp during that period.

"The commanding officer of the First brigade will detail one commissioned officer, one corporal and four privates from Battery A, Field Artillery, for the purpose of firing salutes at the encampment, July 31 to August 7, inclusive.

"The encampment hereby ordered will be named 'Camp Fort.'

"By command of Major General Wanser.

STATEN ISLAND COURT REPRIMANDS MR. RADEL.

FREEMAN STRAIT WINS TENANTCY LITIGATION.

Reversing the decision of Justice of the Peace David D. Smalley in the dispossess proceedings instituted by Annie H. and Gerard Underhill against Freeman Strait, Chief Justice Parker of the Supreme Court at Trenton has ruled that the constable may continue as the tenant of Fairview Farm at Watchung. Justice Smalley gave his decision in the matter on April 14, in favor of the Underhills.

Upon the advice of his counsel, Francis H. McGee, Mr. Strait commenced certiorari action, and appealed the case to the higher court. The contention was that the justice of the peace had no legal power to judge in such a case, and this was sustained by the higher court.

TRUSTEE FOR SAFE CO

Directors of Defunct Manganese to Wind Up the Concern's Affairs.

ARGUE FOR AN INJUNCTION.

Application Made to Permanently Restrain Sale of Company's Assets.

While Vice Chancellor Walker was making an order in the Court of Chancery, Trenton, advising the appointment of the directors of the Manganese Steel Safe Company, of this city, as trustees to wind up the affairs of the concern, final argument was heard before Vice Chancellor Howell in Trenton, on an application to make a temporary injunction permanent to prevent the sale of the assets as a whole. Decision was reserved. The petitioners are Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Rodman, minority stockholders, who are represented by George Ball and Winfield S. Angleman.

The company has a plant here said to be worth $440,000, and the directors are Alexander C. Humphreys, Robert E. Jennings, Henry D. Hibbard, Howard D. White, James H. Sullivan, Knox Taylor, Lewis H. Taylor, Jr., Edward J. Jennings and Clifton F. Williamson.

The application for the appointment of the trustees was made by Pitney, Hardin & Skinner, of Newark, counsel for Henry D. Hibbard, of this city, complainant in the action, and was consented to by McCarter & English, of Newark, for the company. In the argument before Vice Chancellor Howell, John R. Hart, Judge Skinner and former Attorney-General McCarter represented the company.

The order directs the trustees to take charge of the assets of the company, to collect the debts and perform other duties necessary to the dissolution of the corporation. They are not to make any disposition of the assets except as directed by the Court of Chancery.

On March 5 last the directors resolved that the company should be dissolved as a corporation and that action was indorsed by the stockholders. Subsequently the certificate of dissolution was filed with the Secretary of State. The action for the appointment of trustees was taken to dispose of the property and other assets to the best advantage.

MUST DELIVER DEED TO PISCATAWAY FARM

Charles Brickoff, of Piscataway township, succeeded Wednesday in suit in the Court of Chancery against the executors and twenty heirs of the Taylor Jelliffe estate to compel them to reorganize a contract which he had made with Taylor Jelliffe for the purchase of the farm which he had occupied for a number of years in Piscataway township.

Jelliffe came into the ownership of the property eight or nine years ago by the foreclosure of a mortgage. The Brickoff family then occupied the place, and Charles Brickoff proposed to Jelliffe to buy the place on installments and agreed to pay them the amount of money which Jelliffe had in the place. Jelliffe agreed to this proposition, and Brickoff continued to occupy the farm and paid moneys to Jelliffe from time to time, before the entire amount was paid, however, Jelliffe became insane and later died.

As there was no written contract the executors of the Jelliffe estate refused to recognize to give him a deed when the small balance due was tendered them. They also claimed that there were certain trust provisions in the will and the rights of infant heirs in the estate which prevented them from recognizing the agreement.

Brickoff then brought suit in the Court of Chancery through his lawyer, Henry S. Suydam, to compel the executors and heirs to give him a deed to the property, and the case came to trial yesterday in Jersey City before Vice-Chancellor Garrison. The defendants were represented by Pennington Enlight, of Jersey City; Clark and Case, of Somerville, and Vredenburgh, Wall and Carey, of Jersey City. The complaint's interests were looked after by Counsellor Henry C. Suydam and Counsellor W. S. Angleman, of this city.

After hearing the testimony the Vice-Chancellor gave a decree in favor of the complainant and directed *that a deed be given the complain*ant by the defendants on the complainant paying the balance between $500 and $400 due under the agreement.

'THE MAGISTRATE' SCORES

Park Comedy Club Makes Decided Hit in Pinero's Great Comedy.

SOCIETY THRONGS THEATRE.

Most Pretentious Show Yet Presented By Talented Amateurs to Be Reproduced.

The presentation of A. W. Pinero's famous three-act comedy, "The Magistrate," by the Park Comedy Club at the local Plainfield theatre, Friday night, was the most notable achievement of this ambitious organization. The performance was witnessed by a capacity audience of enthusiastic and admiring friends, that was generous in its applause of the praiseworthy work of the cast. The play was by far the most pretentious thing yet undertaken by the club and was a success in every detail.

While every member of the cast scored heavily, the leading honors were divided by Miss Elizabeth Goddard, as "Agatha Posket;" Charles H. Lyman, as "Mr. Posket," and Walter Vaughan McGee, as "Mr. Bullamy," magistrates of the Mulberry Street Police Court; Alson M. Abbott, "Cis Farringdon," in his first marriage; Miss Frances L. Vandeventer, Mrs. Posket's sister; Alson M. Abbott, as "Popham," a servant; Miss Helen Ray Hooley, as "Beatie Tomlinson," a young lady reduced to teaching music, and John F. Myers, as "Ingadore," a waiter, and "Mr. Worthington," chief clerk at Mulberry street.

The entire cast was line perfect and acted with an ease and grace that made it impossible to distinguish between the amateur and professional. The play furnished one great big laugh from the first act, when "The Family Skeleton," at Mr. Posket's home starts the trouble. Mrs. Posket and her sister are called away, under pretence to see a sick friend, but in reality go to see an old beau, Colonel Lukyn, to warn him not to divulge the correct age of her son, "Cis Farringdon." The two women meet Col Luykn and Captain Horace Vale at the Hotel des Princes, and while there Mr. Posket and his step-son, who have gone out for a lark, occupy an adjoining room at the hotel, although Mrs. Posket believes that they are at home. The amusing situations that follow, trying to keep the women in ignorance of the presence of the two men in the other room, while they themselves are endeavoring to prevent their identity becoming known, is well carried out. Col. Lukyn has a troublesome time entertaining the women, while his friend, Captain Vale, is compelled to stand outside on the balcony in a driving storm.

The women stay so long that the closing hours have been violated, and the hotel is "pinched," by the police. When the officers of the law arrive they find the whole party in one room, except Mr. Posket and his step-son, who escape. The rest of the men and the women are arrested, taken to jail, where they are held to await appearance before Mr. Posket, a magistrate. It seems that he does not know that one of the women is his wife, only complicates matters. His son has led him a fearful chase and when he appears the next morning in police court he is "all in" himself. He is still in ignorance of the predicament of the two women, until he faces them and then the whole party becomes hysterical.

The women are given seven days, but Magistrate Bullamy is called in, reopens the case and releases the women on their own recognizance and they return home to learn the true facts, that Mr. Posket and the step-son were implicated in the night's celebration.

Mr. Lyman as "The Magistrate" could not be improved upon. His interpretation of the character was such as to call forth the loudest praise. In the first act he was very prone to disregard the wishes of his wife, even when she insisted that he remain at home, instead of going to the club. But his stepson persuaded him to go to the Hotel des Princes. His appearance at the hotel and upon his return the next morning after his escapade, brought down the house. He had a black eye, and was the most woe-begone looking person imaginable as he tried to look enlightened out for the session of court.

Col. Lukyn tried his best to persuade Mr. Posket to release the women before he saw them, but he was obdurate and scorned any interference with court affairs, explaining that justice must not be tampered with. Mr. Lyman was very much at ease in his part and one would think that he had been a "Magistrate" for years.

The play is concluded with scene two in the third act, when all return to Mr. Posket's home and after much explanation everything is straightened out to the satisfaction of all. Much of the plot of the whole affair centers about "Cis Farringdon," impersonated by Mr. Abbott, and he is the life of the whole play. Miss Hooley, as the young woman reduced to teaching music, devotes most of her time to Cis, one of her pupils, and after his escapades, he promises to be good and she promises to marry him.

Frederick W. Goddard made a typical Englishman, and convulsed the audience with laughter, while Henry Crofut White, as "Colonel Lukyn," a soldier and a proud record, made a hit. As a French waiter, John P. Myers was fine, and he also scored as the chief clerk in the police station.

Kerro Knox as "Inspector Messiter;" Herbert S. Rogers, as "Sergeant Lugg," and "Constable Harris," and Hugh S. Jarvis as "Wyke," the servant at Mr. Posket's, gave a true interpretation of their parts. It was Mrs. Abbott's first appearance as an active member of the club, and she left nothing to be desired in the character of "Popham," the sentimental parlor maid.

The whole performance was given without a hitch of any kind. Special mention is due to those in charge of the stage settings. The decorations were both and appropriate in every detail. The production was given under the supervision of Frederick C. Patterson, of New York, and much credit is due him for the success attained.

The officers of the Park Comedy Club are as follows: President and stage manager, Henry C. White; business manager and treasurer, Alson M. Abbott; assistant stage manager, Charles H. Lyman; stage committee, Charles H. Lyman, Henry C. White, Mr. and Mrs. H. L. McGee. Following the performance a flash-light of the company was taken. Between act three and scene two, every member of the cast was generously remembered with beautiful flowers, while Magistrate Bullamy and Posket, as well as William Flanders, who was the proprietor of the Hotel des Princes, each received a bunch of rhubarb tied with satin ribbon.

ON MARRIAGE AND THE WORKING WOMAN.

"I know, of course, that many learned gentlemen who view with the gravest apprehension' everything that women have done since they stopped making their own soft soap and lye, worry themselves a good deal about the tendency of the working woman not to marry. Sometimes they ascribe her failure in that respect to her loss of charm—ye gods! when they see the women who do marry, too!—and sometimes to her reluctance to give up a paying occupation for one which is pecuniarily less secure. They have pages on pages of statistics to prove that fewer women marry today than in our revered grandmothers' time, and they ascribe it all to the curse of higher education and the opening of professions and industries to women. I'm not much of a statistician myself—when one conducts current events classes one's mind becomes too fluttery-flighty to retain many statistics except in notebooks—but I think I'm right when I state the percentage of marriage has lessened all along the line, among the working women and the non-working women, among the higher educated and the lower educated, and among men themselves. However, be that as it may, here's my friend Sarah and her four daughters, all beautifully trained in the old-fashioned way so highly commended by the gentlemen who view with apprehension,' and all husbandless. And my friend Sarah is the representative of a large class."—Smith's for June.

The Wedding.

The young pair had so many friends that the police were quite unable to cope with the situation. She bride was headed up in a barrel and thrown into the river, while the groom was bound and gagged and suspended by his feet from a tall tree.

At this point the military was called out and arrived at double-quick just in time to save the baggage from being pasted over with insulting placards.

A number of shots were exchanged.

At a late hour the city was reported quiet and the authorities, though not denying the popularity of the high contracting parties, were confident that there would be no more violence."—Puck.

AT THE ANNUAL MEETING.

Mrs. F. W. Jones Re-elected President and Mrs. F. W. Butler Vice President.

The City Union of The King's Daughters at its annual meeting in the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church, Friday, decided to make good use of the Charter Day celebration to be held here July 5, 6 and 7, by holding a "tag day" on the first day of the affair, similar to the one held at Paterson and proposed at Elizabeth. All the proceeds from this souce will be used for the summer work of the King's Daughters.

There were eleven circles represented at the meeting, the Benevolent Band, Charity Circle, Cheerful Workers, the Cup Bearers, the Brightside, Golden Rule, Young Daughters, Daughters of the Cross, Whatsoever, Silver Cross and the youngest circle, In His Name.

After the devotional exercises, which were conducted by Rev. Dr. A. Chambliss, of the First Baptist church, these officers were chosen for the coming year: President, Mrs. Frank W. Jones; vice-president, Mrs. F. W. Butler; recording secretary, Mrs. A. N. Lagren; corresponding secretary, Mrs. E. P. Pelckert; treasurer, Mrs. Anna M. Mott.

The reports from each circle showed that much was accomplished during the past year both at the summer camp on the mountain and The Day Nursery, where thousands of children have been cared for through the means of charity. The report of the treasurer was most gratifying. On December last there was a cash balance of $169.29, and the balance at present is $755.60, due to several benefits given. "The Chorus Lady" netted $245; "The Blue Stocking Tea" $263 and the recital by W. T. Carlton $77, while the balance, $160, represent cash donations.

Each circle represented Friday reported its pledge for the coming year, according to the annual custom, and this giving a working cash capital to carry on the various charitable enterprises in which the union is engaged. The necessity for more money was urged as The Day Nursery is an expensive proposition, while the summer camp work demands are always great. About $1,200 was subscribed.

COUNTY PARK SITE FOR LYONS FARMS

Residents of Lyons Farms have under way a well-defined movement looking to the purchase of a tract of land in that vicinity by Union county for the formation of a public park. There is a section containing about twenty-eight acres adjoining the quaint little village, which is ideally situated naturally laid out for park purposes, and the residents have succeeded in arousing strong sentiment in favor of the plan. The tract referred to runs into Weequahic Park on the north, and those interested in the present movement say that it would be possible to merge the properties and afford a continuous stretch of park land from the cemetery at Lyons Farms to Meeker avenue in Newark, and extending from Elizabeth avenue on the west to the old Lower road on the east.

The site can be reached by the Elizabeth-Newark or Main Line cars in a ten-minute ride from the Broad street arch. The promoters of the park scheme refer to the fact that the property is within the limits of the city and all the territory between Elizabeth and Newark. Two years ago an amusement company made an effort to secure the tract mentioned for a pleasure resort. The staid villagers were greatly perturbed on learning that merry-go-rounds, shoot-the-chute attractions and the other amusement features being set in the heart of their natural Eden and a remonstrance was framed. The opposition was so strong that the plan of locating at Lyons Farms was abandoned. It is explained that the tract would not be suitable for building lots and that its geographical make-up fits it for nothing so much as a park. On the property there is a chain of small spring-fed lakes and the beauty of the site could scarcely be enhanced. There are wooded sections and a gentle undulating country throughout the twenty-eight acres.

It is shown that the section is the continuation of the surface scheme of Weequahic Park, which the Essex County Park Commission is now beautifying at a heavy outlay. The Lyons Farms residents have always been proud of their natural park, which is referred to as "The Cove," and they will oppose any movement which aims to sacrifice the beauty of the spot for an amusement or manufacturing site.

N. Y. STOCK EXCHANGE OUT WITH CONSOLIDATED

The New York Stock Exchange authorities, who have been trying to minimize the connection of exchange members with the Newark Consolidated Exchange, in both of which many Plainfieldens are members, has entered into an aggressive campaign to sever every relation by prohibiting any business intercourse at all between active members of the two boards.

At the same time is put forward another resolution, yet to be passed, which asks for an investigation of the curb market, and implies a chance for a like sundering of relations with the curb.

It is said that if this contemplated prohibition becomes effective it will be put through with the design of driving several good curb securities, such as Standard Oil, to apply for listing on the Stock Exchange.

E. S. Mendels, agent of the curb market, said yesterday that the curb would keep on doing business as hitherto.

VETERANS NOT TO SEEK ANY STATE PENSIONS

The Legislative Committee of the State Encampment of the Grand Army of the Republic in session at Atlantic City reported that the heads of the departments in the organization were not favorable to further pressing the demand for a State pension in addition to the one received from the government.

The statement was made that the committee found both Houses indisposed to consider an appropriation because of the lack of funds, and the committee did not believe it advisable to again seek it.

The State Encampment gave its enthusiastic indorsement to the State invitation to have the next national encampment in Atlantic City, for which the State has appropriated $25,000.

The roller flour mill erected by an American company for La Compania Anonima de Molinos de Trigo de Venezuela, with headquarters at Caracas and mills at Maiquetia, Venezuela, has been compelled to shut down owing to adverse circumstances affecting the condition of the flour trade in the country. Its output was 600 barrels a day, making a high grade flour from Manitoba and Duluth wheat. Changes in the wheat and flour tariffs injured the company's business, though it is still sound financially.

The Mills of the Gods.

They tell us that ever so slight a change in the earth's tipping on its axis brought the glacial period that swallowed up all life in the north as the ice crept down from the pole inch by inch, year by year. When it righted itself again our present day broke and the river wore its way through the rock, draining the migaty glaciers. So the dawn of a new humanity in which man, facing toward the ideal of brotherhood, shall do justice and love mercy is upon us now. It is good, when one gets impatient, to remember that these things are so, that though the mills of God grind slowly they grind exceedingly small.—The Survey for May.

Will Hold a Lawn Fete.

Under the auspices of the Benevolent Band, King's Daughters, a lawn fete will be held Thursday afternoon, June 3, at the home of Mrs. Stephen Ginna on Watchung avenue. Elaborate plans for the affair are now underway and there will be a sale of candy, cake, ice cream and novelties of all kind. The decorations will be especially attractive.

NEGROES SENT TO JAIL

Ten Women and Three Men Branded as Dogs Given Thirty Days Each.

WERE CAUGHT IN A RAID.

Two Others Taken by the Police to Be Given Hearings Next Saturday.

Thirteen negroes, ten of them women were sentenced Saturday by Judge Runyon to thirty days in the Union county jail, the court branding them as "a disgrace to themselves, their race and the community," adding that their depravity showed that they had no respect "for the laws of God or the laws of man," and that their "morality is no better than that of dogs." They were caught in a raid made by the police early Friday morning on No. 214 New street. Two others found by the police at the time, William Hackett and James Scott, were each held in $200 by request of their counsel, for a hearing next Saturday.

The inmates of the place sent to Elizabeth were Charles Carr, Robert Brokaw, Harry Parker, Henrietta Lewis, Ennie Carr, Mittie Jones, Mary Mason, Brown, Annabel Wilson, Hattie VanByke, Julie Fleming, Emmline Connet, Ethel Tims and Pearly Webster. They had been occupying cells at headquarters since 2 o'clock Friday morning when they were gathered in by Roundsman Higgins with Patrolmen VanDerweg, McGinley, Saffron and Sweeney. The resort had been under surveillance for some time.

Robert Crane, as counsel for Hackett and William G. DeMeza as Scott's lawyer alleged that there were mitigating circumstances in their cases and asked that the hearings be postponed. The request was granted by the court and the pair were held in bail until next Saturday morning.

NEW JERSEY STATE BAR ASSOCIATION TO MEET

The eleventh annual meeting of the New Jersey Bar Association will be held at the Marlborough-Blenheim Hotel, Atlantic City, on June 11 and 12, the call having been just issued by William J. Kraft, the secretary.

Associate Justice David J. Brewer, of the United States Supreme Court, will deliver an address to the meeting, as will Clarence L. Cole, president of the association.

Governor Fort will be present, and invitations have been extended to United States Senators Kean and Briggs, ex-Governors Stokes, Murphy, Voorhees, Griggs and Werts; Chancellor Mahlon Pitney, Chief Justice William S. Gummere and all the associate justices of the Supreme Court and vice-chancellors and judges of the Court of Errors and Appeals.

A large and interesting meeting is anticipated.

GENESIS OF GHOSTS.

Although it might be difficult for Elliott O'Donnell to find a haunted house today, in the seventies one stood ready to hand almost in the very heart of London. Every one then knew the famous haunted house in Berkeley square, the subject of many stories and speculative articles. Three people are said to have died as a result of their experiences while sleeping in a certain room, one, at any rate, of them being a skeptic bent on solving the mystery. The late Bishop Thirwall is credited with finally laying the ghost, just as Bishop Wilberforce dealt with another spirit in a Kensington mansion—by bell, book and candle.

The genesis of ghosts was well understood by Scrooge. "You may be an undigested bit of beef, a blot of mustard, a crumb of cheese, a fragment of underdone potato," he said to the ghost of his whilom partner, Marley, to its face on that memorable Christmas eve told of in "A Christmas Carol." And the association of ghost stories with the Christmas season may in this be traced to its origin.

"There!" growled Mr. Suburanite, as he stored the snow shovel in the farthest corner of the basement. "Ding you, I won't have to wrestle with you for a few months, anyway!"

Turning suddenly around in the dark, he fell over something that gave forth a nerve-tearing rattle and clank. With a wild shriek he fled up the cellar stairs before the lawn mower could catch him.—From Judge's Library.

CHARTER DAY!

Nothing of the kind that has ever taken place in New Jersey can be compared with the promised program for the Charter Day celebration to be held here on July 5, 6 and 7, under the supervision of the progressive Board of Trade. This is the assurance given by the chairmen of the committees working most energetically for the success of the greatest undertaking ever attempted in "The City Beautiful," whose claim to greatness as a model and advanced municipality is not confined to the State in which it is situated.

Plainfield has ever been known for superb civic pride and for its consequent unexcelled government. Two months hence, the municipality will have reached its fortieth year as a chartered city and it is to appropriately commemorate this fact that the demonstration is planned. In truth, the project is on a broader scale for the ultimate aim is to call out among the homeseekers in other parts, particularly among the cramped apartment-dwellers in New York what we have to offer. The campaign of publicity inaugurated by the Board of Trade in New York papers, particularly in the Herald, has had results that have surpassed the most sanguine expectations. There will be no let-up in that policy, but in addition this celebration is arranged to draw attention to our city.

Readers of The Daily Press have been kept informed of the elaborate plans for the huge demonstration. It is, therefore, useless to rehearse here the programs for parades, band concerts, fireworks' display and the multitude of other attractions. What we want our readers to do is to open up their purse strings and contribute, according to their means, the few thousands that will be needed to defray the expense. This appeal will not be in vain, as experience has demonstrated. We want them also to write to their friends extending an invitation to visit this city during the Charter Day celebration. Do it now!

DON'T BE DECEIVED.

New Yorkers should not be misled by misleading advertisements in Metropolitan papers apparently offering Plainfield realty at ridiculous prices. One concern is running a display advertisement which reads in bold type, "Plainfield, one-quarter acre for $95," and in small type through the word "Plainfield" is run the word "South." The offer is also made of five "city lots" at $19 per lot. South Plainfield is not a city; not even a borough. It is a village in Middlesex county, which has no means of communication with this city, three miles distant, except over a wagon road. Plainfield property is not and never has been on the realty bargain counter. We say this in response to inquiries from New York investors who might have been gullible enough to believe that they were buying Plainfield property. Many of these advertisements, of other concerns, have appeared recently, and it is only fair to warn the public that South Plainfield is as near being Plainfield as the Hackensack meadows are to be being New York city.

"THE CITY BEAUTIFUL."

Of the many booklets advertising Plainfield as the ideal suburban community, none equals in attractiveness the recent publication of the Central Park Realty Company. The booklet in question, "The City Beautiful," presents in a concise, interesting and convincing form the multitude of advantages offered to home-seekers; advantages that certainly cannot be offered by any other city in New Jersey and in all probability by any other municipality in the East. This may seem like a vain boast, but certainly none who has resided within our gates or who has visited this queenly city will dare dispute the assertion. If this reads like an advertisement for the Central Park Realty Company, all the better. It is entitled to all the free publicity it can get for it has heralded abroad in a most effective manner the grandeur of "The City Beautiful."

THE DUST NUISANCE.

In recommending to the street committee at a hearing last night that some practical patent preparation be used to allay the dust nuisance, the public spirited citizens who appeared before that body corrected instance. It is said, one forty odd miles of improved macadam roads have been damaged by it. What is needed, and without delay, is the introduction of a modern method. Assurance is given by road experts that the cost would be practically the same and the results would be vastly superior. Results are what we want and we are not getting them by continuing the expensive and unsatisfactory sprinkler system.

DO IT NOW!

It is roughly estimated that some eight or ten thousand dollars will be needed to defray the expenses of the Charter Day celebration and as a means of raising this amount the finance committee is addressed an appeal to the residents of both city and borough urging prompt contributions. Past experience has amply demonstrated that such appeals have never been made in vain and the Board of Trade is confident that there will be a favorable response to its committee's request. It is important, however, that the fund be obtained as speedily as possible in order that the various committees may be guided in making contracts. Don't put the matter off. Mail your check today to Eugene M. Laing, chairman finance committee, Charter Day headquarters or hand it to the duly authorized collector, Wm. H. Drayton.

That seismographic disturbance probably emanated from the jungle when The Mighty Hunter let loose a special message branding the Nai robi staff correspondents as "nature fakirs."

The report that James E. Martine's float in the Charter Day celebration will be a hearse labelled "the lost cause" is lacking of confirmation.

JOURNALISTIC OPINIONS

Congratulations.

We desire to congratulate Plainfield on the way in which it does many things. We have now before us the prize list of the sixth annual Plainfield Horse Show, which will be held by the Plainfield Riding and Driving Club on June 10, 11 and 12.

The prize list before us is a good illustration of the progress that has been made in the printing art, and of the progress that Plainfield is making toward becoming an ideal city.

Perhaps we sometimes think that Plainfield can learn a good deal from New Brunswick, but in our more modest moments we are willing to concede that perhaps we can learn a little from Plainfield. Both cities, in their own ways, are striving to make progress. Circumstances have forced them to proceed along somewhat different lines. Our ideals are not the same. But in many things Plainfield sets us an example that we can with advantage follow. In the Horse Show, which will inevitably attract to Plainfield some very desirable persons, one of them?—New Brunswick Home News.

There was a large attendance of friends and old acquaintances. Rev. L. R. Howard, pastor of Hope chapel, officiated. There were a number of beautiful floral tributes.

Gave a Crab Dinner.

Mr. and Mrs. Francis C. Wernig, of 1112 South avenue, entertained a number of friends at their home Saturday night, the affair being announced as the first annual "Crab's Debut," and in the invitations the "lobsters" bidden to the feast were Mr. and Mrs. C. E. Fincke, Mr. and Mrs. T. O. Burdenbach, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Wernig, George Brock, William G. Mangan, of this city; Mrs. A. Bebler, of New York. After the spread there was a fine musical program.

Andrew J. McClintock Resigns.

Andrew J. McClintock, who during the past year has been the tenor soloist of the First Presbyterian church, has tendered his resignation to take effect after next Sunday. The church regrets that Mr. McClintock is to retire, but he is compelled to do so on account of ill health, which may prevent him from singing again. During his service in the church he has made many friends.

Whippany Steeplechase Meet.

Col. T. J. Donohue's "Victory Belle," Wilder up, won the third race at the annual steeplechase meet of the Whippany River Club, at Morristown, on Saturday. Several Plainfield horses were entered but they failed to get a place. The meet was a great success. Nearly all of the horses in that meet will come to Plainfield on Saturday.

D. of A. Entertain Visitors.

Martha Washington Council, No. 23, Daughters of America, entertained seventy-five members and visitors at its class initiation, Saturday night. The degree team did excellent work and was highly commended by the State councilor, Phillip Handschuck. After the business the good and welfare committee served a banquet.

MUSICAL RECITAL AT MISS KARR'S HOME

An enjoyable musical recital was given Saturday afternoon by pupils and friends of Miss Grace P. Karr at her residence on Putnam avenue. The bous was artistically decorated with Japanese roses and other cut flowers of the season. The pupils played without notes and all of them performed creditably to themselves and their instructor. The Misses Brown rendered their respective violin numbers brilliantly and with a sympathetic interpretation, which was pleasing to the audience.

Among those who played were Miss Valborg E. Steuer, Miss Edith M. Little, Miss Helen E. Crane, Miss Dorothy M. Crane, Miss Eleanor Vincent Searing, Miss Marjorie L. Brown, Miss Mildred M. Clark, Miss Esther M. Brownlee, Alfred E. Seidel, Miss Grace P. Karr, Miss Lillian E. Steuer, Miss M. Adelaide Ricketts, Miss Arline Brown, Miss E. Blanche Stout, Miss Dorthy Manning, William Mine Carson, Miss Sarah L. Schuck, Miss Catherine Hodges Stout and Arthur Dudley Stout. After the recital refreshments were served.

LOCAL SYNDICATE IS OPERATING THIS MINE.

Operations were begun this morning on the property of The Plainfield Mining Company, situated at Negley, Virginia. This property comprises one hundred acres of iron pyrites land and the syndicate is owned by business men of this city. Sulphuric acid is manufactured from the pyrites. The work of development will be in charge of Charles Emery, who was formerly superintendent of the Cabin Branch mine, where 250 men are employed. He has had years of practical experience.

Augustus Runyon, of this city, will have charge of the timbering, and if present indications count for anything, the Plainfield Mining Company property will probably develope into a valuable one within a short time.

Veterans to Attend Services.

The members of Winfield Scott Post, No. 73, G. A. R., will attend divine service at the Scotch Plains Baptist church, Sunday afternoon, when Rev. Franklin K. Mathiews, the pastor, will preach a sermon appropriate to the occasion. In the evening the veterans have been invited to attend service at the First M. E. church, Westfield, where the pastor, Rev. Dr. C. M. Anderson, will preach to them. There will be special music.

WOMAN PROPHET NOW HAS CROWDY'S JOB

A new "prophet" has appeared in the ranks of the "Saints," whose membership numbers at least a hundred in Plainfield, and whose leader, William D. Crowdy, known to his flock as Elijah III., disappointed the "Saints" by dying in Philadelphia some six months ago. His mantle has fallen upon the dusky shoulders of Melinda Morris, formerly chief evangelist and presiding genius of the "Church of God Cash Grocery Store," at 82 Livingston street, Newark.

Crowdy's followers have just recovered from the surprise and chagrin caused by his demise. They devoutly believed that he was indeed Elijah III., and that he would live forever. He said so himself. When he was on his deathbed, however, he modified his claims to immortality by declaring that although he was about to die he would shortly return to earth, pick up the thread of his career as prophet and live on forever.

To preserve the church intact during the period of his absence from earth, he appointed Melinda prophetess ad interim. Should he fail to return, he said, within a reasonable time, Melinda is to direct the destinies of the church for all time. The "reasonable time" has expired and Melinda has taken hold of the reins.

Crowdy organized the "Church of God and Saints of Christ" fifteen years ago. He came from Emporia, Kan., announced his identity and started a "tabernacle" in a small town in Maryland. Soon he had 100 names on his church roll. He then started other "tabernacles," which now dot the country from New Jersey to Florida, became prosperous, started a weekly paper in Philadelphia, and planned to invade New York and build a mammoth "tabernacle" there. He was just about to execute his plans when he died.

Crowdy was a negro. His followers are all negroes, with the exception of the bishop of the church, Grove, of Emporia, Kan., who is white.

Special Services at Hope.

The services at Hope chapel on Sunday morning will be of a patriotic character, with appropriate music and a patriotic memorial address by the pastor, Rev. L. R. Howard. In the evening there will be a musical praise service in recognition of the complete payment of the indebtedness on the organ. Mrs. L. R. Howard and the choir will be assisted by other singers and musicians.

P. V. R. VAN WYCK'S NEW $75,000 HOME IN SUMMIT

At Oak Ridge avenue and Roan road, on a site overlooking the picturesque valley of Pelyville and the beautiful mountainous section extending to the Baltusrol Golf Club on the south and affording unobstructed view of the surrounding country for miles in all directions, Philip V. R. Van Wyck, formerly of this city, but who lives in Summit and is in business in Newark, erected what is undoubtedly one of the handsomest and most costly residences in this State. The house is now nearing completion, and is to be occupied by Mr. Van Wyck and his family.

The structure is about 60x100 feet, of Colonial style of architecture and two and one-half, stories in height. The exterior is constructed of hollow terra cotta block with Berkshire cement stucco with a white finish. The roof is of stained shingles in green, and old-fashioned window shutters painted green add to the attractiveness of the building, the exterior woodwork of which is in dead white.

The basement, which is flooded with light and entrance to which is made on a level with Oak Ridge avenue, contains a large "den," billiard and smoking rooms. The first floor contains a reception room eighteen feet square, library 18x24 and dining-room twenty feet square. A hall fourteen feet wide leads from the rear of the building through to the terrace at the front of the structure. The vestibuite is wainscoted with fluted columns and pilasters. Leading from the vestibule or main entrance hall to the second story is a handsome staircase.

The walls of the library to the door heights are in paneled Indiana quartered white oak, while the ceiling is elaborately finished with boxed beams and cornice. In the library and dining-room there are French windows running to the floors, which provide exits to the terrace on the southern exposure.

In the second story there are six rooms arranged en suites, with large bathrooms for each suite. The upper story contains five large rooms and bathroom. On the south side of the house is a large balcony and this is to be fitted up for sleeping quarters.

The construction throughout is fire-proof, the boors being of terra cotta block and reinforced concrete and quartered oak.

The building will cost almost $45,000, while a stable which Mr. Van Wyck has erected on the property cost about $9,000. The stable is of the same exterior finish as Mr. Van Wyck's residence. Near the stable is a large conservatory. In the centre of the broad lawn on the westerly side of Mr. Van Wyck's residence is to be laid out a sunken garden, containing a summer house with a thatched roof.

Mr. Van Wyck will have expended more than $75,000 on his residence, stable and grounds when they are completed. A. L. C. Marsh, of Plainfield, is the architect, and Jilson & Falkenburg, of Summit, have the general contract for the construction of the residence and stable.

WILL NOT ABOLISH ROUNDSMEN'S JOB

The amended police ordinance which provided that the office of "roundsmen" be abolished and that of "sergeants" be created so that Maurice Higgins, who is now a roundsman, might be promoted to a sergeancy, was withdrawn at the adjourned meeting of the Common Council, Monday, in accordance with a resolution offered by Councilman George S. Clay. The matter was then referred back to the police committee. It is the general opinion that the ordinance will not be amended at present.

It was the plan of the police board to make Roundsman Higgins a sergeant, but this could not be done unless the ordinance was amended. Then Chairman Frank DeWitt Randolph of the police board offered the amendment and it was left on the table for further consideration. The supporters of the change claim that if there is another sergeant the efficiency of the force will be measurably increased for the authority of a sergeant is considered much greater than that of roundsman and it would permit the head of the department to delegate that sergeant duty which is not possible now under the present regime.

There is a strong feeling against the change, however, for it is believed that what the department needs is more patrolmen instead of additional officers and that the efficiency of the force will not be improved by creating more officers. The matter possibly may be considered at further length Thursday night, when the Council will meet as a committee of the whole.

SECOND REGIMENT TO MARCH TO SEA GIRT

Permission has been granted the Second Regiment to march to Sea Girt August 8 next. The soldiers, it is planned, will camp two nights on the way and reach their destination in time for dress parade August 10.

According to the plans of Colonel Dungan, to Adjutant John M. Rogers, Companies C, H, T, K and M will mobilize at the Trenton Armory and march at the same time under command of Major Horace M. Reading.

The New Brunswick detachment will bivouac at Jamesburg Sunday evening, and the Trenton detachment will bivouac at Hightstown the same evening. The next day the two detachments will march on Freehold and join near that place. At that point Colonel Dungan will assume command.

On the march the men will be taught "security and information." They will march through the country as though actual warfare was on. The advance guard will be thrown out and the rear will be guarded. The advance guard will be in command of Major John H. McCullough. No one has been assigned to the duty of commanding the rear.

The officers and men of the regiment hail the event as a novelty, which will teach them how to take care of themselves in actual field work should war come, and this is believed to be the precedent which will be adopted in the future by other commands. The expense for taking care of the men this way is about the same as by train.

TAFT WILL BE JERSEY CITY'S GUEST MAY 31

With a parade of 25,000 men reviewed by President Taft and a party of national, State and local officials, followed by open-door ceremonies, Jersey City's celebration this year bids fair to surpass that of every other municipality in the country.

In magnitude and elaborateness the coming occasion will be the greatest celebration ever held by Jersey City. The reviewing party will be one of the most notable assemblages of prominent men in the history of New Jersey. In addition to the 25,000 men in the procession there will be hundreds of thousands of spectators. The navy department will officially recognize the celebration by having two war ships anchored in the river off Jersey City.

Four thousand letter carriers, coming from all parts of the country, will hold their national convention on Saturday, May 29, in Columbus Hall, in Jersey avenue. The letter carriers will, of course, have a prominent place in the parade on Monday.

Such an occasion, it was thought, was quite worthy the attendance of President Taft. The latter has promised to be present unless something unforeseen occurs to detain him in Washington. The reviewing party is also expected to include two members of Mr. Taft's cabinet, Secretary of War Dickinson and Postmaster General Hitchcock. In addition there will be Governor Fort, Senators Kean and Briggs, Representatives Kinkead and Hamill, of the two Hudson county congressional districts; Mayor Wittpenn, who will preside at the principal ceremonies; Mayor Hausaling, of Newark; a majority of the county and municipal officials in Hudson county, while invitations have been sent to the mayors and other officials of New York and nearby places in New Jersey.

Walker five shares and Walter S. Blauvelt one share of the stock.

SCHOOLS NEED $148,290

Of This Amount for Year's Expenses, $62,000 Will be in Local Tax Budget.

STATE CONTRIBUTES MUCH.

For New School $45,000 Will Be Needed and $10,000 For Furnishing Another Building.

The Board of School Estimate met Saturday afternoon to discuss and determine upon the amount needed for the current year to June, 1910, and to fix upon the appropriation for the new eight-room primary school to be erected on West Front street, near Clinton street.

The estimated total amount for all school purposes for the coming year was decided to be $148,290. The amount to be received from the State and including the railroad tax, is $79,681, while in addition there will receive $2,500 from the State for manual training purposes; also $4,000 for tuition from out-of-town pupils, making a total of $86,181 to be received from outside sources.

The board fixed upon $62,000 as the sum to be raised by general tax and $45,000 for the new primary school. At a previous meeting $10,000 was determined upon as necessary for furnishing the new Darrow avenue school, which with the $45,000 for the new building will make a total of $55,000 to be raised through an issue of bonds. This will be arranged for within a short time.

The new building to be erected on West Front street, will be on a lot purchased by the board some time ago. The need for a primary school in that section of the city has been urgent for several years and will meet the demands for sometime to come, while at the same time it will relieve the Irving and Darrow avenue schools. The amounts named above will be incorporated in the tax ordinance.

HEAR A YOUNG MINISTER

Rev. Geo. S. Bosterie Preaches Twice to Trinity Reformed Flock.

HE MAKES AN IMPRESSION.

First Sermon Since Receiving Degree of Bachelor of Divinity at Rutgers.

Coming to his home church for his first sermon as a full-fledged clergyman, Rev. George S. Bolsterie, preached for the first as a bachelor of divinity at Trinity Reformed church Sunday morning; he also delivered the sermon at the evening service. Rev. par Bolsterie, of Watchung avenue, received his degree from the Rutgers College Seminary on Thursday and became a member of the State Classis at Newark Saturday, when he made a highly favorable impression before the clerical body. He has accepted a call to the Reformed church at West Leyden, New York, and he said his wife will shortly make their permanent home at that place.

In introducing the young clergyman to the congregation, Rev. John Y. Brock, pastor of the church, took occasion to speak in the highest terms of the new clergyman's place in the church community and his enviable record during the seminary course.

"There have been many important days in the history of Trinity Reformed church," he said, "but truly this is one of the most important. Today we send one of our own sons into the gospel ministry. He finished his Seminary course at Rutgers College last week, he was examined by the classis at Newark yesterday afternoon, and now he goes to take charge of the Reformed church at West Leyden, New York, and will be ordained as its pastor on June 14. He comes to us today to preach the first sermon after his graduation. We all welcome him and shall ever follow him in his career with our good words and our prayers."

A large congregation, including Rev. Mr. Bolsterie's church friends and associates in the various societies of the church with which he was identified before going to the Seminary was present. He was cordially greeted by the consistory and members of the congregation at the conclusion of the service. Marked by a delivery which is powerful in the earnestness of his tone, Rev. Mr. Bolsterie's sermon is of a type which is perfectly audible to all. He used but few notes and made an impression by his scholarly phraseology, his apt metaphors and his word-pictures.

His text, from Isaiah 54: 7, comprised these words: "For a small moment have I forsaken thee; but with great mercies will I gather thee," and his topic was "God's care of His Church." At the outset, he dwelt on the hardship of being forsaken by God, as shown in the history of nations and churches, and compared such abandonment to being forsaken by man as being more far-reaching in its results.

"But my message today is not one of sorrow," he continued, "but of encouragement. We read that we are to be 'gathered to God.' This means much, for the individual, for the nation and for the church. To the individual this assurance comes as a message of comfort. We think of the Savior as the Good Shepherd and we remember that those who stray from the flock are carried back to the fold in His arms. For a nation, too, these words mean new hope, bringing their message of redemption to a people. In our church life, we are true to our Christ, but do not worship under a single roof. People of all classes and color, the white, the black, the yellow and the red, are joined in the common brotherhood, and the Church is a gathering of individuals from the north, south, east and west. If it seems at any time as if the house of God were being forsaken, remember that God will never forsake us if we remain true to him."

In the evening, Rev. Mr. Bolsterie preached a sermon for young men. His text was from Psalm 116, 12: "What shall I render until the Lord for all his benefits toward me?"

SUMMER PLAYGROUND ASSURED FOR SUMMIT.

Through the generosity of the Summit Horse Land Company and the persistent efforts of a joint committee of the Ladies' Town Improvement Association and the department of social science of the Fortnightly Club, the children of Summit are to have a playground during the summer months.

The children are to have the use of the block of land between Elm street and Summit avenue, Summit, this tract comprising about one-half of the property which it is proposed the city shall acquire for a public park between Park and Railroad avenues, south of the Lackawanna Railroad station.

After the joint committee, which is composed of Mrs. Hamilton W. Mabie, Mrs. Henry B. Twombly, Mrs. Ernest D. North, Miss Anna Cromwell and Miss Louise Connolly, superintendent of the local public schools, secured from Jonathan Bonnel, representing the Home Land Company, permission to use the land for a playground, without cost, the members of the committee began the task of soliciting subscriptions to a fund with which to furnish equipment. During the past few days $465 has been collected. Saturday Miss Connolly, with a number of the pupils in Public School No. 1, spent several hours in laying out the ground for swings and other appropriate apparatus.

Water is to be supplied on the ground free of charge by the Commonwealth Water and Light Company, of which Carroll P. Bassett is secretary and treasurer. Mr. Bassett is chairman of the committee of the Board of Trade, which submitted at the last meeting of the board the report in which it was recommended that the city acquire at a cost of about $110,000, the several tracts of land for a public park and playground, and as sites for public and semi-public buildings in a project for a city beautiful.

The committee which has thus far carried on the work of providing the playground for the children for this summer is to be enlarged by the addition of two or three male members.

Robert J. Muldowney was named as a member of the committee Saturday, and the other men will be selected within a few days. It is planned to have an expert go over the ground next week and ascertain just how much money will be required to fully equip the property. The land is admirably adapted for a playground, and little, if any, expense will be necessary to put the ground in shape. All of the money necessary to procure equipment will be secured by private subscription and, it is expected, the children will be in full possession of the playground within a short time.

MISS WARING TO WED J. HARTLEY MELLICK

Mr. and Mrs. Orville T. Waring, of Park avenue, have issued invitations to the marriage of their daughter, Miss Eleanor Waring, and J. Hartley Mellick, son of Mr. and Mrs. George F. Mellick. The event will be celebrated at the home of the bride's parents on Park avenue, Monday night, June 14. About two hundred invitations have been issued to this ceremony and reception to follow.

Miss Waring is the youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Waring and she has been prominent in the younger society set, where she is a favorite. Mr. Mellick is also popular in the same set. He is a member of the Plainfield Country Club, the Watchung Hunt Club, The Plainfield Riding and Driving Club. He is engaged in the brokerage business in the well-known New York firm of which his father is a partner.

WHAT MY LADY WEARS.

Veils of white figured net are modish.

Narrow suede belts fastening with a small buckle are good. Patent leather belts are also worn this summer.

All the very pale tan and yellowish shades are apparently to be fashionable. Bione, pale ale, "pain bis," champagne, "pain brule," and various names they are called. The popularity of these shades will do much to make natural pongee particularly elect.

Bronze green is modish for the tailored suit, and another fashionable green of the gray quality is known as "dried pea" color.

The short tailored packet is rarely seen this spring. A long hip length, three-quarter fashion, or seven-eighths are the approved lengths.

Foulards are really fashionable. The woman who always has a "little foulard dress" in her wardrobe can this season, rejoice in both its usefulness and its modishness.

Many a fashion is set by the French stage, and just now, because of the vogue of Rostand's play, "Chanticleer," in Paris, a cock's head is appearing on many a French hat.

GOOD EXERCISE MEANS HEALTH FOR WOMEN.

There has been no much said of late regarding a woman and athletics that it behooves us to look it up at least.

There are more athletic girls in this age than there were in the time of our grandmothers. In those days they had more physical exercise in household duties, for these were less luxuries in housekeeping, if the family lived in the country and had little means.

What would grandmother have said to the child who wished to wrestle or throw her brother over her back, and she should manage the double arm lock or the armlock which the policeman has to understand.

There are many opinions on the subject still among women, but grandmother would have been horrified; she knew how to lift the ax to chop wood and how to climb a tree to perfection. She could doubtless jump a fence as well as her brother and she rode a horse better, generally speakeing. Nowadays the girls live sedentary lives and need something more strenuous than walking or playing tennis. To belong to a gymnasium is really a good idea if you do not understand the dumbbells, swinging clubs and exercises that will make you supple and healthy.

It is seldom a woman is called upon to act in self-defense, but she can do herself no harm by understanding these points. It seems unnecessary, when we have protectors with us, but there is never any harm in knowing things, even if we never have to use them.

We are becoming too feminine again, many of us, and the fact makes us very helpless in many ways. Try to take up one hour of each day in learning exercises and practising them so that you can benefit yourself in every particular of health as well as to keep a little knowledge under cover to surprise yourself in time of need, says Diana in the Philadelphia Inquirer. Practise on your friends at home; your girl friends would be surprised to know that you were shorter and slighter and still had a power which does not come of strength alone, but a knowledge of how to use your muscles after they are strengthened and hardened.

Mannish practises of gymnasits are never attractive to any gentle woman, and it is often for that reason the necessary amount of exercise is not indulged in. Make it a point to do something. If you play golf, all right. If you prefer good old tennis, all right again; if you are given to the delights of equestrienne sports, that's a joy unexcelled, to my mind; for you have the pleasure of seeing nature at her best, and a beautiful animal to share this exercise with you, if you care for horses —and most women do.

The dumbbells and calisthenics, which most women practise before breakfast, are good enough, too, for any one if persisted in; but then you can still find more help in a gymnasium if you have a keen zest for this exercise, and it is there you will learn these rules for making yourself a woman of resource in time of trouble.

GERMANY SUPPLANTS US.

United States Third In South African Trade.

The South African Customs' Union has issued from its Cape Town bureau a summary of trade for the past calendar year, a copy of which has been forwarded by Consul-General Julius G. Lay, who comments:

The returns disclose the fact that Germany has ousted the United States from the first place after the United Kingdom among the foreign countries in the South African market. Of the total importations into British South Africa of £24,428,266 ($118,928,821) in 1908, the United Kingdom supplied 56.2 per cent; Germany 8.7 per cent., and the United States 8.3 per cent. The figures for 1907, when the imports were valued at £25,920,278 ($126,141,032), were 57 per cent., 7.6 per cent., and 7.8 per cent., respectively.

While the relative position of the United States may now be lower in the scale of foreign countries supplying this market than it was the previous year, American manufacturers may perhaps feel some consolation from the fact that while the total imports into this country declined nearly $7,500,000 during the year 1908, the percental share of the United States increased from 7.8 per cent. to 8.2 per cent., while those from the United Kingdom, with a preference in duties of 3 per cent., declined from 57 per cent. in 1907 to 56.2 per cent. in 1908.

These figures are accurate as far as they go, but are not given in sufficient detail to explain in what articles the import trade of this country has been effected from one country to another. When the annual import trade returns are available, however, this question will be more exhaustively discussed in the annual report from this office.—Consular Reports.

GOT DOUBLE SENTENCE FOR TELLING COURT LIE

Because he lied to City Judge Runyon at his hearing Saturday morning, William Hackett will go to the colored men caught in the police raid at 214 New street Friday night, was "soaked" double term at his hearing Monday. Hackett will go to the county jail for sixty days, and while he will be a fellow-prisoner with the thirteen others caught in the raid, he will remain in his cell for thirty days longer than they.

At his hearing Saturday morning, Hackett told the court that he was the husband of the woman with whom he was found, having married her at Easton, Pa., four years ago. His attorney, Robert N. Crane, urged him to tell the truth, but the colored man stuck to his story. The woman denied his statements when seen later, and at his hearing this morning, Hackett acknowledged that he had "falsified," but said that the other members of the party had told him to tell the story he did. The Judge gave him short shrift.

REUNION OF MATTISON FAMILY IS HELD HERE

Mrs. Cinderella Mattison, of East Fifth street, entertained her brothers and sisters at a dinner, Saturday night, the occasion being a reunion of all the surviving members of the immediate family, which originally numbered eight children. Two brothers, the youngest and eldest, were called away by death some years ago. Covers were laid for six.

This reunion was the fourth, the first one being held in the "Old Homestead," at Petersburg, N. Y., and the third at the home of a sister in Peekskill, N. Y., last October. The affair was characterized by an old-fashioned turkey dinner, during the course of which many reminiscences of the "old days" were recalled, the former reunions discussed, and matters of family interest talked over. The absent members were not forgotten. There was a spirit of thankfulness for success and happiness and many wishes that there would be frequent gatherings of the kind.

The dinner was served by Mrs. Mattison's two daughters and niece. The prevailing color was yellow as being appropriate to the ripening years of the guests; the favors were the place cards which were decorated with yellow roses. After the seating of the guests, Mrs. Mattison read an original poem of greeting.

The guests were Mrs. Eleanor West, Waverly, N. Y.; Mrs. Cinderella Mattison, Plainfield; Mrs. N. L. Burdick, Ossining, N. Y.; Mrs. George Horton, Peekskill, N. Y.; I. N. Burdick, Orange, and Mrs. Henry A. Tower, North Adams, Mass.

Grocerymen Getting Busy.

A majority of the grocerymen of this city are planning to place an elaborate float in the Charter Day celebration parade on July 5, and promise to make a strong bid for some of the prizes to be offered for the best trimmed float.

AS A TIME SAVER

THE CHAFING DISH WILL BE FOUND OF DISTINCT VALUE.

Especially to Be Appreciated by the Mother to Warm Baby's Milk in a Hurry — Some Dishes Easily Prepared.

The chafing dish is valuable not only as a graceful means of entertaining a few friends of an evening, but as a time-saving device to the mother who has to get up in the night to heat baby's milk, and to the business woman who dreads to go out for her meals in bad weather. Then, too, the chafing dish is invaluable of a Saturday or Sunday morning, when each member of the family comes down at a different time for his eggs and coffee.

Everyone who owns a chafing dish knows how to make Welsh rabbit and fudge, but there are some more novel dishes for the informal little supper. The meal is of course not complete without a dainty little table and a frilly white apron for the hostess; and if she possess the true instinct of hospitality she will allow each guest to have some part in the savory preparations.

Shrimps are good at this time of year. A good way to prepare them is to lay a good-sized can of them in water and let simmer for 20 minutes, then strain, and set the liquor aside for some future soup tureen. Next cut the shrimps in half and chill, making the usual white sauce in the blazer, adding a bay leaf and a blade of mace until it boils, add the shrimps, and when thoroughly heated, serve.

If the shrimps are to be the chief or only hot dish, they may prove more palatable if mixed with an equal quantity of canned French peas, which are added to the white sauce at the same time with the shrimps. It is nice to serve this compound on crackers.

Curried oysters are another great delicacy. These are prepared by browning one tablespoonful each of butter and flour with one teaspoonful of curry powder. Add gradually one-half cup of rich milk and one-half cup of strained liquor juice. Stir this mixture until quite thick and, if desired, add a few drops of lemon juice. Drop in 25 oysters, carefully examined. Cook until they are plump and serve at once.

If one has on hand a respectable remnant of cold chicken or turkey, or even of veal, the appetizing chicken a la McDonald may be produced. Cut the meat into strips, cut firm, cold boiled potato into thin slices, cut one large truffle, if desired, into strips, and place in the blazer with three tablespoonfuls of butter. Now pour on a cup and a half of milk, season with salt and pepper, and serve as soon as hot. Bits of celery add to the flavor of the dish, whether coked with the milk or added raw at the last minute.

Eggs with black butter are another substantial supper dish. The recipe calls for three tablespoonfuls of butter, half a teaspoonful of vinegar, salt and pepper to taste, and three or four eggs as you have room for them in the blazer.

Cook the butter in the blazer until it is a dark brown—almost black. Break in the eggs then, one at a time, carefully, lest they should run, baste with the butter until they are done, adding the vinegar just before you take them up, and sprinkle with pepper and salt.

Tapioca Cream Without Eggs.

Soak in water till soft three rounding tablespoonfuls of pearl tapioca. Put one pint of milk, one-half teaspoonful of salt and the soaked tapioca, with the water in which it soaked, in a double boiler. Stir often until boiling to prevent the tapioca from lumping; then only occasionally till it gets thick. Then add sugar to taste, about one-half cup, and continue boiling till the consistency of heavy cream. This usually takes about two hours. When done remove from the fire, flavor with one teaspoonful of vanilla; stir in a teaspoonful of butter if desired, and serve cold.

Removing Scorch.

An old negro laundress is responsible for the following cure for bad scorched places caused by too hot irons: A half pint of vinegar is put on the stove in a porcelain-lined saucepan. To this is added the juice of a large onion and two ounces of fuller's earth. The mixture is boiled for five minutes, strained, cooled and bottled.

In removing the scorch a little of the mixture is put on a clean white linen rag and rubbed over the scorched place until it disappears. Several applications may be necessary.

Two Suggestions.

Rub bread and meat boards with cut lemons, then wash with cold water. It is much better than scrubbing or scraping.

If the upper part or edge of the saucepan is well buttered you will find that chocolate, milk and other liquids will not boil over.

String Bean Salad.

String and wash one pint string beans. Boil till tender in boiling salted water. Drain and when cold put in a salad bowl, season with salt, pepper and paprika, pour over one teaspoonful salad oil over, also one-half cupful vinegar, and serve.

To Polish Damp Shoes.

However damp boots or shoes may be they can be given a high polish if a drop or two of paraffin oil be added to the blacking. This also prevents the leather from cracking.

¶ It is not only a palatable beverage, but its tonic properties greatly aid the stomach in its work of digestion

Up all his years, steeply, with strain and sigh,
Man climb until he touched the truth; and I,
Even I, am he whom it was destined for."
How should this be? Art thou, then, so much more
Than they who sowed that thou shouldst reap thereby?
Nay, come by hither. From wave-washed mound
Unto the farthest flood-brim look with me;
Then reach on with thy thought till it be drown'd.
Miles and miles distant though the gray line be,
And though thy soul sail leagues and leagues beyond—
Still, leagues beyond those leagues there is more sea.
—Dante Gabriel Rossetti.

Said Love to Loveliness.

Said Love to Loveliness: "Loose down thy hair—
Pluck out the golden comb, the band of pearl,
Set me the prisoned grace of braid and curl,
To fall or ripple as it may, or dare—
Unlace thy straightened girdle, and forswear
Jewel for neck and bosom, waist and hand."
The hidden beauty of thy feet make bare;
Be thy sweet self alone . . . Dost understand
That only so, to Love, shouldst thou be seen
A beggar maid, that he may make thee Queen?"

Then Loveliness uptossed her charming head:
"Why should I stoop to be a beggar maid?
For Love as all men know, since Time began,
Suing to Loveliness, is a beggar man!"

The First Snow.

The clouds had gathered far and wide;
The wind, unshackled free,
Went whirling through the realms of space
In wild, exultant glee.

The oaks, majestic in their strength,
Upon their trumpets played;
The pines, with their solid, measured sounds,
High in the darkness swayed.

Then came a spirit noiselessly,
A radiant, snowy form,
In dancing, rhythmic motion to
The music of the storm.

It danced above the craggy cliffs;
It danced above the sea;
The song of Neptune all upsprung
And joined the revelry.

So passed the night; when morning came
A silence vast and deep
Hung over all, and Nature's soul
Lay wrapt in placid sleep.
—Herbert Randall, in Boston Transcript.

Masks.

We all put off the mask in sleep;
I saw your face last night,
And, left uncovered by disgrace,
It made me know you right.

The countenance at command worn,
The jussus vultus look
No longer seen, your lineaments
Were those of hardened crook.

I came to rob you in the night,
With lantern, dirk and pistol;
I left you in the arms of sleep,
For you are one with me.

Your course of life, my course of life,
Free from suspicion's breath,
Upon our features will be stamped
Indelibly by Death.

And I, the thief, will wear no mask,
And you, no deep disguise;
St. Peter has our photographs,
No rogues in Paradise!
—New York Times.

Bachelor Days.

Ah, our bachelor days,
And our bachelor ways,
What a charm they possessed for us then!
When we thought every girl
Was a peach or a pearl,
And we trusted the friendships of men.

When we lighted our pipe,
And we dreamed half the night,
And we longed—with the longing of men—
For the ships sent to sea
That for you and for me
Have never been sighted since then.

From the smoke of my pipe
Comes a face in the night,
And it brings back the parting of ways;
And my heart is aflame,
For I love her the same
As I did in my bachelor days.
—Adele M. Whitgreave, in Smart Set.

My Love.

Like rain-pools over autumn leaves
My sweet Love's eyes to me;
Like sunlight over golden sheaves
Her wind-blown tresses be;
Like snow upon the mountain's face
The whiteness of her throat;
Her movements are of the languorous grace
Of lilies all afloat.

Her voice is sweet as silver bells
O'er sheets of moonlit snow;
Her mouth, a full ripe flower, where dwells
The sunset's vermeil glow;
Her soul is tender as blue skies
At southern day dawn;
While in her heart all priceless lies
The diamond of her love.
—Alvin Trabor, in Appleton's Magazine.

Importance of Little Things.

There was a time when she included
Him with the bores she chanced to know;
She used to sigh when he intruded;
Her sigh was not a love sigh, though.

Her estimate of him at present
Should serve to make him very glad;
He's sent a birthday present
Upon the last birthday she had.

'Tis strange how little things may often
Be of importance, after all;
The hose that caused her heart to soften
Were silken—and a size too small.
—Chicago Record-Herald.

The Holiest Thing.

O world, I sing of my baby's dream.
Close, close I bent to hear.
I caught it like a diamond's gleam,
A smile and then a tear.

The tiniest ripple of a brook,
One drop of summer mist,
Out of my little baby's heart
From its dainty lips I kissed.

I blow it to world-tired feet;
O wandering hearts,
'Tis sweet! 'tis sweet!
—Gertrude Brooks Hamilton, in House-keeper.

C. E. UNION'S ELECTION

Clarence B. La Rue is Chosen President of Local Endeavorers.

STATE PRESIDENT SPEAKS.

Temple Baptist Wins the Banner—Purdy F. Benedict Makes Address

About two hundred Endeavorers attended the annual mass meeting and business session of the Plainfield Christian Endeavor Union at the Park Avenue Baptist church, Thursday, when reports, election of officers and an address by State President J. T. Sproull were the features. These societies were represented: Park Avenue Baptist, 27 delegates; New Market Baptist, 3; Seventh-Day Baptist, 10; Temple Baptist, 46; Warren chapel, 16; Trinity Reformed, 3; Hope chapel, 22; Congregational, 4; First Presbyterian, 6; Wilson Memorial, 10.

The Temple Baptist church society won the banner for the best attendance, with 80 per cent., having 46 members present out of an active list of 53. Hope chapel was second with 68 per cent. President Sproull presented the banner and Frank T. Stewart made a response for his society. After the singing of a hymn, Rev. A. E. Finn, pastor of the Park Avenue Baptist church, conducted the devotional services.

The report of the secretary of the union was of special interest. It showed that the executive committee had held five meetings, the Congress has had five regular and two special meetings, and the Union has held the three regular mass meetings. There have also been nine meetings of the convention committee, making in all twenty-four for the year. The convention committee is representative of all the societies in the Union and the Epworth Leagues and Young People's Societies of other churches. This committee is now preparing for the entertainment of the State convention here in October.

The report also called attention to the fact that the Union has again put itself on record in favor of local option and protested against the weakening of the existing laws governing Sunday observance. Grateful acknowledgment was made of the courtesy of the Y. M. C. A., also to the local papers for the large amount of space given for announcements.

In reviewing the work of the year it was found that all the efforts has been concentrated upon the preparations for the State convention. William LaTourette, treasurer, reported a balance of fifty-eight cents with a convention fund of $149.05.

Purdy F. Benedict, the newly-elected county president, spoke about raising funds to send the delegate chosen at the Summit meeting to St. Paul, and spoke a few words commendatory of Miss Sara Curry's work at the Netherwood Free Air Home. Greetings were received from Miss Nellie K. Foote, district secretary; the Sussex and Warren county conventions held at Hackettstown; from the Hudson county conference and the Paterson Endeavorers. Greetings were sent to the absent.

The election of officers resulted in the following being chosen unanimously: President, Clarence B. La Rue; vice-president, Frank T. Stewart; treasurer, William LaTourette; secretary, Miss F. Winifred Ham; assistant secretary and chairman press committee, Alexander Galloway; chairman lookout committee, R. C. Burdick; chairman prayer-meeting committee, Allen Snyder. President La Rue made a few remarks thanking the Endeavorers for the honor conferred.

The address of the evening was made by State President J. T. Sproull, whose subject was "Practical Lines of Christian Endeavor Work." Among the excellent thoughts suggested by the speaker were loyalty, knowledge of service and how to serve, spirit of prayer, the prayer-meeting and what it means, the individual work of the Endeavorers and to know Jesus Christ. Rev. A. E. Finn announced the benediction.

Mean Joke on a Parrot.

An ardent golfer, by way of a joke, dropped a golf ball into a nest his ancient pet had built in the corner of its cage. Polly sat with egg, and appeared pretty well heartbroken when the weeks went by and she found herself unrewarded. At last parrot flesh and blood could stand it no longer. A terrible screeching brought her owner downstairs at 3 o'clock one morning.

"What's the matter, Polly?" he asked, as he noticed the bird's beak was chipped trying to get at the egg's interior.

"Matter!" screeched the bird, "Great Scot! I'm bunkered!"—Tit-Bits.

The Romans had just received Paul's epistle.

"Why, he scolds us as if he were a President of the United States and we were nothing but a Congress!" they said.

Consequently they paid no attention to his recommendations.—Chicago Tribune.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Prayer Meeting Topic For the Week Beginning May 30, 1909.

By REV. S. H. DOYLE.

Topic.—Heroes of home missions.—Matt. 8, 7-13.

The first missionary tour of the twelve apostles was strictly a home missionary one. They were sent out to the Jews only, as the day for the offering of the gospel to the gentiles had not yet come. Christ's command to them was, "Into any city of the Samaritans enter ye not, but go rather to the lost sheep of the house of Israel." But of what they did we have little knowledge, but their later lives were heroic in missionary zeal.

America does not want for heroes of home missions. Our country was settled by Christian people who preached the gospel to the native Indians and subsequently to the unevangelized people who have lived within our borders, usually called the exceptional populations, such as the Mormons, Mexicans, mountain whites, colored race and others. In this work the highest kind of heroism was often displayed.

1. John Eliot, "the apostle to the Indians," was the first to enter our home mission heroes. Eliot labored among the Pequots and other tribes in eastern Massachusetts. He began his work in 1646, while pastor of the church at Roxbury. His incessant labors were crowned with success. He gathered his converts into towns and established schools and civilized industries. The towns were known as "Indian praying towns." Eliot made two catechisms for the Indians and translated the Bible into their language in 1658. Two years later he published the first Bible printed on the American continent. How appropriate it was that it should have been in the Indian tongue! Eliot labored among his people for thirty years, often amid great dangers, teaching, preaching and establishing

GAS CUT-OFFS DEMANDED

Ordinance Provides for Safety Device to Be Installed by Gas Concerns.

P. S. C. MAKES OBJECTION.

Measure Is Passed On Second Reading and Is Ordered Advertised Now.

Apropos the suggestion made sometime ago to guard against dangers of fire, Councilman F. L. Holt, chairman of the committee on laws and ordinances, at the adjourned meeting of the Council, Monday, introduced an ordinance which provides that any person or corporation furnishing illuminating or fuel gas in the city, must install "cut-offs" under a penalty of $100 for each violation.

The ordinance was drafted to cover gas pipe an inch and a quarter or more in diameter, and it provides that all gas pipes used or that hereafter may be used to supply gas to school buildings, churches, Sunday-school buildings, hotels, theatres, public assembly rooms, music or concert halls, shall be supplied with "cut-offs," on and after September 1 next. It is not intended that the "cut-offs" be placed in front of every private residence, but only where the supply pipes are located, it being the idea to safe-guard all buildings of a public character.

The ordinance was adopted on the first and second readings and ordered advertised. It will be recalled that sometime ago, when the matter was called to the attention of the Public Service Corporation, it replied that such a requirement would be so expensive as to be practically prohibitive. Chief P. O. Doane, of the fire department, brought the matter to the attention of the Council, believing that such a change is an absolute necessity to protect life and property.

MRS. BARBARA N. FRANCE DIES IN HER 81ST YEAR

Mrs. Barbara Newman, wife of Simon W. France, died suddenly at her home, 1278 Park ave., Monday night. She had been in failing health for a number of years and following a recent illness, owing to advanced age, her recuperative powers were not great. She was taken suddenly worse last night and passed away within a short time.

Mrs. France was born at Canton, Ohio, eighty years ago, and spent her girlhood days and early married life in that city. Later the family moved to Brooklyn, where they resided until seven years ago, when they came to Plainfield. While a resident of Brooklyn, Mrs. France and other members of the family attended Plymouth church, of which Rev. Dr. Lyman Abbott is pastor. She was greatly devoted to her home and all its interests and her hand was always open to the needy and those in trouble, and she had a large circle of friends in Brooklyn and this city who mourn her death.

Beside a husband, who was an active New York business man for many years, Mrs. France is survived by a son, Thomas J. France, of Brooklyn; two daughters, Miss M. E. France, also of Brooklyn, and Mrs. Henry Reed, of Winsor, Vt. The funeral will be held from the late home, Thursday afternoon at 2 o'clock.

STRIP OF TERRITORY NOT IN ANY WARD

The Councilmanic committee on laws and ordinances having discovered that in the territory embracing the First and Second wards there is a certain strip of land that is not included in either ward, Chairman F. L. Holt, presented an amendment to the ordinance to divide the city into wards, at the adjourned meeting of the Common Council, Monday. The amendment was read for information and will be acted upon later.

The proposed amendment provides for the change of section 2 by striking out the word "main tracks" and inserting the words "center line of right of way." The reason for the change is that in the First and Second wards the line dividing the wards is the main railroad tracks, while there is land on either side not included in the wards as defined.

In the Third and Fourth wards the dividing line is Fourth street and the same difficulty is not experienced. There was no opposition to the amendment last night, but the councilmen thought it best to lay the matter over until the next meeting to allow full investigation.

On account of the weather the baseball game scheduled for Saturday between the Watchung Hunt Club and South Orange Field Club, was postponed to another date to be announced later. In fact all local ball games were postponed for the day.

DAN. M'NAMARA BEGINS TO SERVE HIS SENTENCE

Daniel McNamara, formerly employed at the local postoffice as a letter-carrier, convicted on a charge of withholding and tampering with United States mail and sentenced to serve a sentence of nine months, began his "time" on Saturday at the Essex County Penitentiary, Caldwell. Following conviction and sentence, the accused man's counsel took an appeal to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals.

Last week the appeal was dismissed, and on Friday a Government marshall came to Plainfield and took Mr. McNamara to Trenton, where in the United States District Court he was committed to the Essex County Penitentiary.

TO SHUT DOWN PLANT; TO STILL FIRE WHISTLE

It being the intention of the Public Service Corporation to shut down its electric light plant on West Second street, having transferred the power station to Metuchen and Cranford, it communicated with the Common Council, Monday, asking to be relieved of maintaining the fire alarm whistle at that place. E. D. H. Gilmour, assistant counsel for the company, brought the matter to the attention of the Council, and it was referred to the committee on laws and ordinances and finance.

The proposition of being considered is to establish a fire alarm whistle at the Pond Machine Tool Works and another one at the Walter Scott Printing Machine Works and this will probably be done. If it were not for the call-men in the department, the city could abolish the whistle entirely, and this will probably be done in the near future.

WANTS PAY FOR LOSS ON A CITY CONTRACT

The Dunellen Concrete Block Company communicated with the Common Council, Monday, with a view to being reimbursed by the city for money lost on its unfulfilled contract in connection with the South-side sanitary sewer. The company explained that it lost $2,000 on a $5,200 contract, and if the city did not feel like making a settlement on that basis, suggested that it be reimbursed for an amount equal to the benefits derived by the city to date.

The company explained that it was unable to complete its contract because of certain conditions over which it had no control, in that after using every possible method to remove the water from the excavation, it was found an impossibility to do so, even with the use of the fire department steamer. The company contended that it proved its inability to complete the work and believes that it should be reimbursed inasmuch as the city assured it protection. The whole matter was referred to the street committee.

The work referred to by the company in connection with the defaulted contract of Peter Morgan, who was given the entire work and then failed to live up to its provisions.

DR. NOBLE CHOSEN AS COMMENCEMENT SPEAKER

Dr. Eugene Noble, president of the Women's College, Baltimore, Md., will be the speaker at the commencement exercises of the North Plainfield High School at the New Plainfield theatre on June 25.

There are twenty in the graduation class this year. They are Marion Mager, Gertrude Mair, Jennie O. Nelson, Ernestine Richter, Hazel D. Rose, Rae Woodhull, Florence Wyckoff, Margurite Lee, Frances La Port, Elvira Hoerster, Florence F. Fowler, Ruth A. Day, Anna V. Daly, Elsa Brose, Pierson H. Bailey, Gascoigne Hartley, Leslie Powlison, George M. Parsons, Merlin L. Vanderbeek and Wolftone C. Overton.

Miss Weinberger Entertains.

Miss Ruth Weinberger, of Duer street, entertained a social club of Newark, of which she is a member, at her home on Saturday night, the members coming here by trolley. Among the guests were several Plainfielders. The evening was spent in playing games, dancing and enjoying vocal and instrumental music, after which refreshments were served.

Dr. Hughes Much Improved.

The condition of Borough School Physician F. J. Hughes, who is recuperating from overwork at Trudeau, near Saranac Lake, N. Y., shows great improvement. He has been enjoying bungalow life there for the past month, and has gained sixteen pounds. His wife will join him June 1, and he will remain at Trudeau for the summer.

FARMERS DINNER TO FOLLOW STEEPLECHASE

Everything looks bright and promising for the annual steeplechase meet of the Watchung Hunt Club on Saturday afternoon. The meet will be held on the club's own grounds for the first time, an exceptionally fine course having been established there. The entries are coming in rapidly and every class is assured of being filled. A large number of people from the surrounding towns and cities are planning to attend and with good weather the meet should be a gala one for Plainfield and the club.

The members are making an outlay of about $1,000 and all that is needed to make the meet a success is good weather and a big local crowd. The farmer's dinner will be more of a feature than usual, 250 invitations having been issued to the farmers and their families, as a courtesy here on the club to hunt over their lands.

Stages will be run from the North Avenue station to the grounds and arrangements have been made to have the 12 o'clock Reading express, dining car attached, from New York will stop here on that day. The grounds can also be reached by taking the Fourth street trolley car to West Eighth street and Sherman avenue, from which point it is only a few minutes walk to the club.

THREE ELECTION DISTS. FOR THE SECOND WARD

An ordinance introduced by Mr. Holt at the Common Council meeting Monday and read for information only, provided for the establishment of a two election districts in the Second ward, the vote at the last election showing that the ward is entitled to another voting place. According to the proposed amendment the Third district would be included in the territory beginning at the point of Terrill road and the railroad tracks to the city line, to Woodland avenue to Berckman street and Woodland avenue to the right of way of the railroad tracks to point of beginning.

The First district is described as follows: Beginning at the point of Washington street and the railroad, to East Fifth street to Franklin place, to Watchung avenue, to Kensington avenue, to Park avenue to railroad tracks to point of beginning, while the Second district is described as follows: Beginning at Washington street and railroad tracks to East Fifth street to Franklin place, to Watchung avenue, to Kensington avenue, to Park avenue to city line to Woodland avenue to Berckman street to city line and railroad tracks and point of beginning.

CITY FATHERS AWARD STREET CONTRACT WORK

Three bids were received at the adjourned meeting of the Common Council, Monday, for macadamizing four streets decided upon by the street committee, and the one of Mobus & Burke, of this city, being the lowest and most advantageous, was accepted. The bids were offered on the basis of so much per square yard as follows:

Mobus & Burke—Union street, $1.40, $1.55, $1.68; Stelle avenue, $1.71; Madison avenue, $1.48; Darrow avenue, $1.54; Compton avenue, $1.50; Ravine road, $1.70.

Warren B. Travell—Union street, $2.09; Stelle avenue, $2.38; Madison avenue, $1.99; Darrow avenue, $2.27; Compton avenue, $2.29; Ravine road, $2.34.

Weldon Contracting Company, all or none—Union street, $1.88; Stelle avenue, $2.03; Madison avenue, $1.72; Darrow avenue, $1.92; Compton avenue, $1.93; Ravine road, $1.97.

Deposit Boxes in Demand.

The Plainfield Trust Company is today installing an additional supply of safe deposit boxes to meet the rapidly increasing demand for this service. When the company erected its building in 1906 a large safe deposit vault was constructed and equipped with boxes sufficient, as the company then thought, to care for the requirements for some years but so popular has the service proven that it has already been found necessary to increase the facilities. A large number of additional boxes are now being added and unless calculations again miscarry, the present installation will meet the necessities for some time to come.

Early Ideals.

"Arthur, dear, why do you keep that cheap plaster cast of Venus eternally on your mantel?" asked the artist's bride.

"It is to retain my ideals of you, love," answered the artist, "to retain the one impression I had before discovering the proportionate elements of linen handkerchief, excelsior, horse hair and cotton batting in the modern female figure."—Puck.

THE WHEEL OF FORTUNE

By CLINTON DANGERFIELD.

(Copyright, by J. B. Lippincott Co.)

The alarmed echoes caught up the crack of Carshalton's rifle, flinging the sound from rock to rock in the ravine below. A second shot followed the first so quickly that they might have been deemed one, but the effect was twofold, for with the first John Rexford reeled in his saddle, with the second his startled horse came crashing to the ground.

The bursting of a rotten stirrup saved Rexford from being crushed to death, the horse rolling clear of him in its last struggles. As it was, his case was bad enough, his right leg was broken and over him stood Carshalton, seller of all properly unsalable things, who was just now about to close a deal on his well-salted "Lady Lu" silver mine which would make him some fifty thousand dollars richer, and the purchaser as much the poorer for the rest of his life.

To be sure, Col. Wayne, the would-be buyer, had sent Rexford to give an expert opinion on the mine. And just here had arisen a serious difference of opinion between Rexford and Carshalton.

Experience had so far justified Carshalton in the belief that experts were of two kinds; either they were fools who knew nothing about the customary mine ruses, and therefore were easily handled, or else they were wise dogs, who, on the strength of due consideration, saw everything through *rose-colored glasses. Rexford had dis*concerted him by belonging to neither class, and had outraged Carshalton by his outspoken remarks concerning the worthlessness of the "Lady Lu" and by contemptuously refusing the heavy bribe delicately offered him.

The victor now coolly proceeded to help himself to the fallen man's papers, especially a written message of warning which Rexford expected to send by wire the instant he reached the foot of the mountain. By a little work this message could be altered to satisfactory wording, and yet appear to be written in Rexford's hand all the way through, this copy being held for proof later.

Rexford, despite his agony, drew his revolver on the vultured-faced sharper approaching him, but a snap was the only result. Carshalton laughed.

"Didn't reckon I'd leave your pistol in fix to spoil the whole thing, did you? Nothing personal. Come now—quiet with your hands. You can't stop me. All this is your own fault, anyway, you blamed fool!"

Without more ado he went whistling down the steep mountain road to his horse, riding off in haste. Once mounted, he made all speed possible, though the ground was villainously rocky, set with sharp limestone fragments.

For a few seconds Rexford lay still, in exceeding bitterness of soul. Originally the fall would have been bad enough, but to stand well in Col. Wayne's eyes was more than life to Rexford, since the colonel's pretty daughter idolized her father, and the best passport to her favor was the good will of the father and fellow-colonel. Now both father and daughter would despise him, for on the strength of the telegram he knew Carshalton would send at once, in the expert's own name, the deal would be closed and the colonel practically ruined.

He looked around him in frantic desperation. To the right lay his dead horse, to the left the fragments of an old ox-wagon abandoned by some disgusted bark hauler, who had in vain endeavored to use the discarded mountain road.

The wreckage seemed significant of how little hope he might have of passers-by. Rexford groaned aloud, his wound reminding him that he might die there, so far as Carshalton's mercy went.

He shouted at the top of his voice, again and again, but only the echoes *or the shrill cry of frightened wood*peckers answered him. His head dropped on his arms; he abandoned himself to despair for what seemed a century.

Then suddenly the stillness of the mountain woods was broken. Plaintive, sweet, tuned to a monotone, came the voice of a woman.

The melody, dropping like honey of strange sweetness from her lips, was only a wild camp-meeting hymn, but Miss McArthur's thoughts were not on the church. Wrapped in a maiden dream of her own, not less potently glamourous for its primeval qualities, she came on swift, bare feet around the corner, and found herself shocked from her vision of love to a comprehension of tragedy.

"Was that you a-hollerin'?" she cried in quick repentance. "I never 'lowed there was anybody in trouble—jest thought 'twas one o' them valley critters prowlin' in the hills. The lights an' air allers gettin' loited. What's the matter?"

"My leg is broken," said Rexford feverishly. "Look here, girl, there's a man gone ahead of me. He wants to send a message by wire at the station below. I must get in first. Take it there before him, and you shall have $500 of your own."

Her eyes flashed fire, not with lust of the money, but with the thought of how easily it would solve the problem of extreme poverty which had so delayed her wedding.

"That feller who's tryin' to git his ta fast," she returned rapidly, "was be in or gray suit, carryin' er rifle, ridin' a bay?"

"Yes, yes!"

"Too late," said the girl bitterly. "I seed him from the p'int up yender 15 minutes ago. He'd git thar afore me beat I could do!" Then a rich color flooded her face—she laughed out, mellowly, triumphantly. "No, he won't, neither! I'll head him off yet! Quick stranger, gimme your piece er writing."

"I must write it first," gasped Rexford. "But how are you—"

"Don't waste no time talkin'—do it!"

Fired, in spite of his disbelief, with new hope, Rexford, in painful haste, managed to scribble his warning on the back of a torn envelope in pencil.

That finished, he found the girl supporting one of the substantial old wheels of the ox-wagon. She had snatched a long, faded ribbon from her hair, letting down the tumbled masses of black, and now she bound the wreck firmly to the hub of the wheel and then dictated another to the astounded Rexford:

"Mister Agent, send this soon's you clap eyes on it, er don't you never show yourself near Ellen."

She tied and command securely to Rexford's message, observing sagely that he would understand, meaning the operator.

"But surely," cried Rexford, "you are not so mad as to think you can roll that wheel down the side, blocked as it is by a thousand obstacles?"

"Mad?" said the girl, "I don't git mad very often, stranger."

She vanished behind a huge rock, which on the lower side partially out off the view of the valley.

Tormented beyond words by an agony of mind greater than that of his body, Rexford actually rose. He was near the boulder. By clinging to its rough surface he managed to attain the other side.

Then he understood her idea. Fifty feet below began an almost perpendicular tie-chute, or slide, once used for sending white-oak ties to the railroad below. It ran sheer to the track. As far as Rexford could see nothing stood in the way.

The girl having struggled to a good starting point, now stood poising the great wheel. Her long hair blew backward in the wind, her wide eyes were fixed eagerly on the course. Never helmsman looked more anxiously to his ship than she to her wheel of fortune. Her bare feet, seeming the smaller for her lithe and graceful height, were dug desperately into the leaf-mould, for the weight of the wheel was pulling to be free.

At last, after what seemed to Rexford an age, she loosed it. It bounded wildly at first, while she, glancing upward to her companion, clapped her hands joyously.

"It's gwine!" she cried. "It's gwine! It'll go plum to the very kyar-track, plum into Seth's door! Thar it goes—thar! Thar it is!"

In anguished suspense, Rexford clung to the bowlder, while his companion called out the progress his eyes were too dim to follow.

"See how small it's gittin'—no bigger than mammy's ole platter! You'll batter go pretty fast, mister man! Mighty nigh flew in Ed Reed's work ketchin' up with a woman an' a wheel! Thar, clip! hit's on the track. Hooray! Seth's seed hit—he's on ther kyar-line hisself. I'd know that red shirt of him in a thousan'. He's bendin' over it!"

She turned and climbed back toward Rexford, tossing the wind-tangled hair from her forehead with satisfaction as she talked. "Don't ye fret, stranger, hit's all right. I reckon I might as well tell ye—Seth will do anything for me. He's to be my man. I don't allers run ez wild-lookin' ez you ketched me, fer I had jest slipped down here ter peep at ther office from that big rock. You bet he'll send it. You warn't foolin' me 'bout that money—no, siree!"

This query was not answered until later, when she met full assurance of her prize. Rexford had fainted.

Below, the astounded agent had barely secured and promptly dispatched the message so cavalierly hurled at him (he happened to be *lounging on the platform as the im*promptu wheel struck the track) when a horseman galloped up and swung into the narrow office.

"Send that message, instantly!" he said imperatively, flinging a piece of paper on the table. "Mark it 'rush.'"

The operator read it slowly aloud, to make sure he had deciphered it correctly, then as he sat down he said dryly, with the freedom of the privileged:

"Sort of a contrairy-minded fel low! Air you his agent?"

Carshalton nodded. "Why?"

"Oh, nothin'; only I jest sent one from him to the same party sayin' the Lady Lu was but a mine swindle out."

Carshalton went purple.

"You lie! He could not. I left him—that is, I know I got here first."

"I ain't disputin' that," returned the agent coolly, his shrewd mind suddenly grasping an inkling of the truth. "His message is here, but his message has. Thar's the copy of you an don't believe me."

Carshalton snatched up the shakily scrawled message. "How did it get here?" he asked, burning with suppressed rage.

"Come in mist get in first. Take it there before him, and you shall have $500 of your own."

"Damn you—no! How did this come?"

MR. FORT ON GOVERNMENT

the hopeful signs of the time.

"You must realize your responsibility. They talk about bossism, and there is enough of it, God knows, but you are responsible for it. You let the bosses control. Just remember that power always takes on and never casts off, and the bosses will regulate affairs just so long as the people permit them to do so. The people of the country are the country, it is a government of individuals and not a few and any man who fails to do his duty is a traitor.

"What do you stand for as a Board of Trade? Are you ready to stand on the skirmish line of affairs of State? We have a splendid State and in Sussex county you will find as beautiful hills as can be seen in the Berkshires Our schools are the best and our churches are in charge of faithful men of God, standing as sentinels for liberty.

"As to the question of water supply: That should be controlled by the State and I want to see her citizens quicken their interest in this matter before it is too late and the Bergen concern gets it all. The time will soon be here when you will be less than an hour from the city hall in New York and if you are to attract people here you must give them the best possible government in State and local municipalities. New Jersey in the future will be a place of homes and we should do all in our power to make it as attractive as possible and give the best reason for making their homes within our borders."

Frank Bergen, who is the general counsel for the Union Water Company, spoke to the toast, "Virtues and Faults of Corporations," and in the course of his remarks explained that not only Westfield, but the whole State was indebted to corporations for the many improvements enjoyed, such as trolleys, gas, telephone, light, steam railroads. In replying to Governor Fort's reference to corporations, Mr. Bergen called attention to the fact that both are members of the Bar and, of course, must be loyal to their clients.

"I admit what the Governor says is true," said Mr. Bergen, "when he advocates the control of corporations, but not to the extent of dictating unreasonable terms. Westfield has arrived at a critical period of its career, having abandoned its Jeffersonian idea of government for a town government, and it is important that you insist on pressing into service the best men possible. I am not one of those that believe that the voice of the rabble is the voice of God, which the yellow journals have been pandering to our ears. There is one thing that should be stopped and that is the Sunday brass band and auction sale of lots. It is against the law of God and man.

"I do represent corporations, but I reserve the right to express my views whether the corporations like them or not. I promise you that I will not lay a straw in the way of the State controlling the water supply for it will relieve us of much responsibility. I doubt whether the Governor realizes the importance of this question. Within the next few years millions of dollars must be spent or there will be a water famine.

"One thing that is to be commended is that our legislature and the Governor have set their faces against radical legislation. Corporations will not spend millions of dollars on the risk of getting four or five per cent. on their investment and then be subject to the ridicule of a fickle community. It is the duty of the people to uphold corporations and make it possible for them to improve the service which the people are entitled to, and it should be done on a broad, rational public policy. You pool your interests in money and conditions do the same thing. Through the energy of corporations we have the many improvements of the day and the public gets the benefit."

The several Plainfielders attending the banquet were somewhat puzzled over a remark by Mr. Bergen. In his reference to the critical period in the career of Westfield, he said that the Council and Mayor of Plainfield have powers which have never been exerted and they may have a great influence on Westfield's future. Pointing Westfield on the back, Mr. Bergen said that the town has the foundation for a city which will rival Plainfield within the next decade. This statement brought the Westfielders to their feet while they gave three cheers for the speaker and his remarks.

W. G. Besler was the last speaker and his remarks were brief. He praised Westfield and its government and urged the hearty co-operation of the governing body with the railroad in securing needed improvements, such as the abolishment of grade crossings and a new eastbound station. He said that the company he represents has adopted a motto, that a pleased patron is the best advertisement and is striving to maintain it. He believed that patrons are reasonable and fair and hoped for a continuance of good feeling now existing between the people of Westfield and his company.

COMMON COUNCIL'S ROUTINE BUSINESS

Street Commissioner A. J. Gavett informed the Common Council at its adjourned meeting Monday night that he had found a building at 314 Plainfield avenue over the building line and that despite a notice served on the owners, David Steinman, no attention had been paid to it and he asked for instructions as to what he should do. The matter was referred to the street committee, with the understanding that it would consult with Corporation Counsel C. A. Marsh.

The Public Service Corporation reported that three lights were installed on April 27 as ordered. Mayor C. J. Fisk appointed William F. Walters a special policeman and W. H. Kitchen as poundkeeper, and the appointments were confirmed. The home of Mr. Kitchen on Everitt place, was also named as the place where the pound shall be established.

A petition for three electric lights on Gresham road was granted on motion of Councilman T. L. Montgomery, chairman of the light committee. The petitions from the Mutual Land and Improvement Company and Trinity Reformed church, asking for street improvements in the East End of the city, were denied on motion of Councilman Montgomery, the committee having decided that as there is so much street work to be done this year it cannot afford these improvements at present. On motion of Councilman F. E. Mygatt the committee on public affairs was discharged from further consideration of the park association proposition, and it was referred to the Council as a committee of the whole, and the Shade Tree Commission was invited to attend the meeting on Thursday night.

In accordance with a resolution offered by Mr. Buxton and adopted, the city clerk was authorized to advertise for 150 tons of coal to be apportioned among the various city departments, and another resolution by the same member, designated the City National Bank and the First National Bank as the city's depositories.

A communication was received from the City National Bank offering to take the $11,000 issue of street bonds at par and interest, and the offer was accepted. These are three year bonds and are retired as the assessments are received by the city treasurer.

Councilman Buxton's motion that the finance committee be authorized to purchase a safe for the tax collector's office at an expense not to exceed $250 was adopted. The safe will be a second-hand one and is greatly needed in the tax office.

"FIRST AID" LECTURE BEFORE CO. K BOYS

The second of a series of talks on "First Aid to the Injured" was given by Dr. Daniel C. Main at the meeting of Co. K, Monday, and for three-quarters of an hour he held the close attention of the soldier boys. He first began by describing dislocation of the jaws and fingers, explaining the use of the first aid package and the triangular bandage. In giving a practical demonstration he used Sergeant Oliver Pierson to show how sprains of the ankles and wrist should be treated. The doctor then took up the treatment of burns, frost bites, shocks and fright, explaining that there was nothing near actual death than a severe shock or fright. He also referred to fainting, chafing and sore feet, relating experiences he had while a surgeon in Cuba with the regular army. An interesting part of his lecture was that devoted to heat stroke, which he defined as heat prostration and heat exhaustion, going into the details of the treatment of hemorrhages, drowning, fits, resuscitation and the proper methods to be employed.

The talk was concluded with a reference to gun-shot wounds, the making of four, eight and ten tail bandages and how to treat swellings of all kind. The boys were so much pleased that they invited Dr. Main to give another lecture. He promised to do so and said that the next time he would exhibit a skeleton and give further demonstrations.

MARRIES A CLERGYMAN

Miss Caroline Minturn Hall the Bride of Rev. Hugh Birckhead.

BISHOP GREER OFFICIATES.

Groom Is Rector of St. George's, New York, Where the Ceremony Takes Place.

Miss Caroline Minturn Hall, daughter of Mrs. David Prescott Hall, formerly of this city, and grandparents of Mrs. Julia Ward Howe, known to fame as the author of "The Battle Hymn of the Republic," was married this afternoon to Rev. Hugh Birckhead, rector of St. George's church, Stuyvesant Square, New York. The wedding took place in the church of which the groom is rector and was witnessed by a large and fashionable throng of people.

Bishop Greer, assisted by the Rev. Dr. William M. Grosvenor, performed the ceremony. Phillip G. Birckhead, brother of the groom, was the best man, and the ushers were John and Henry M. Hall, Donald McKay Frost, Walter G. Lane, William G. Low, Jr., Dr. Reginald S. Sayre and Frank E. Hagemeyer. Miss Laura Richards and Miss Rosalind Richards, Miss Marion Clark and Miss Louise Clark and Miss Margery Swan and Miss Eleanor Swan were the bride's attendants.

The ceremony was followed by a reception in the Memorial House, adjoining the church, and within a few days the newly-married couple will sail for Europe to spend the summer abroad.

The bride is an artist of distinction, having taken prizes at various foreign exhibitions, notably in Paris. Her painting, "The Oaks," was given a place of prominence in the Paris salon a few years ago.

TO ERECT MANY ARCHES

Charter Day Committee Plans for Building of Six in City and Borough.

THE LIGHTING DECORATIONS.

Public School Pupils to Form Big Chorus for City Park Meeting—Organizations Active.

Aside from ornamental arches to be erected on the principal business *streets of city and borough by fra*ternal organizations for the Charter Day celebration, the decorating committee, at its meeting last night, decided to erect half a dozen arches in the city and residential streets. The locations of these arches has not been decided upon, but these suggestions have been received with approval: At the county line on the bridge at Somerset street; at Fourth street and Watchung avenue, at Watchung avenue and East Front street, in front of F. L. C. Martin's auto garage on Park avenue, at Somerset street and Lincoln place, and at Watchung avenue and East Sixth street. This arch at Watchung avenue and East Sixth street is to be a double one, centered at the northern point of the park lawn in front of the Crescent Avenue church, and spanning Watchung avenue on one side and Crescent avenue on the other.

The erection of a double arch at this point is favorably considered because of the fact that this has been suggested as the starting point for the running races to be held in connection with the athletic meet, the last day of the celebration. Physical Director G. L. Listman, of the Y. M. C. A., who is chairman of the athletic sports committee, has recommended that these games be held "on this side of the brook," because the bicycle races are to start from a point on Watchung avenue in the borough. Should it be decided to have the running races start at this point, the course will be along Watchung avenue, which will be closed for traffic between East Seventh street and Woodland avenue on the afternoon of the contests.

The Public Service corporation has offered to carry out an elaborate scheme of decoration by electric lights in the streets of the business section. Wires bearing many electric lights will be looped along the curbs on both sides of the streets between the trolley poles and the transversal guys which support the feed wires will be dotted with lights. This is the scheme of decorative lighting used at a recent civic celebration in Newark, and was suggested by President McCarter.

Pupils of the public school of city and borough will form a chorus for the rendition of patriotic songs at the open-air meeting to be held in the city Park Monday afternoon, the first day of the celebration. There will be more than a hundred pupils in this big chorus, and the singing will be conducted by Herbert Lloyd, musical instructor in the borough schools. A special platform is to be erected in the park for this chorus, which will be made up of boys and girls. Members of this chorus will ride in a float in the parade to be held in the morning.

Muhlenberg hospital will be represented by a float in the celebration parade the first day, and the float will probably be a representation of a hospital ward, with uniformed nurses in attendance. The Red Cross flag will be used in the decorations, the color scheme for which will be red and white. It has been suggested that this float may be used as an emergency hospital in case of necessity. Local physicians have offered their services during the celebration, as has the S. P. C. A., through its president, Mrs. E. S. Hyatt.

The Plainfield Veteran Exempt Firemen's Association is considering seriously of joining in the parade of the firemen in the coming Charter Day celebration. The firemen's parade is set for Tuesday, July 7, and it is hoped conservatively that event will be a success without the old vamps in line together with their famous silver carriage and the dozen or so silver trumpets as a side attraction. If they do turn out it will be in civilian dress and they will be seventy-five strong. Provisions will be made for those who are unable to walk to accompany the procession in stages. The sentiment is strongly in favor of this turnout among the veterans and a meeting will be held early next week to make a decision and the final arrangements. In any event the $10,000 carriage will be the show piece in the parade.

SEMINARY PERFORMANCE

"The Woodland Princess" Presented by a Cast of Talented Pupils.

A WELL WRITTEN PLAY.

Miss Louise Saunders' Latest Effort Proves Exceptionally Meritorious.

Once upon a time, in the midst of a deep wood, lived a little girl whose name was Elsa. And she was very gentle and good, but not beautiful at all. So when the Prince Mimblepea wished to marry her, the Lord High Bethrothal Maker put his foot down flat. That's where the Fairy came in with her many helpers, the sleepy poppies and saucy dandelions, shy wild roses and prim forget-me-nots, Dindlebender, the dwarf, and his gnomes. All these, under Fairy's orders, changed homely good little Elsa into a beautiful Princess with golden hair from the dandelions, big blue eyes from the forget-me-nots, and pink cheeks from the wild roses. Dindlebender made the little girl's nose straight and when the Lord High Bethrothal Maker saw that he withdrew all objections and they lived happy ever after.

This was the highly satisfactory story of Miss Louise Saunders' little play which the pupils of the Seminary enacted yesterday morning to the great joy of their friends and parents. Harvey Worthington Loomis made the music for the songs in the play and it was very, very, happy. The charming musical verse and the quaint humorous dialogue proclaim Miss Saunders to be a very promising aspirant to the mantle which Robert Louis Stevenson let fall upon the shoulders of Mr. Barrie. Indeed the Woodland Princess does not suffer by comparison with that present day classic Peter Pan.

Playwright and musician were fortunate in the cast and scenery of this "first performance." The stage was a "really wood" and it was hard to feel that the flowers and fairy-folk were not really too. So stiff in her joints was Elderberry, Miss Dorothy Quick, so bright and sunny was Buttercup, Miss Elizabeth Denton. Miss Ruth Timpson was more convincing in her later part as the Beautiful Princess than in the role of a homely little girl. But it was a kind and good little Elsa always. No wonder the Prince, Miss Edith Palmer, was very determined to win such a lively princess in spite of the spirited resistance of the Lord High Betrothal Maker, Miss Marion Rocap. No wonder that even the crusty Dindlebender, Miss Katherine Overton, angry as he was at being called from his underground workshop, was ready to do his artistic best for the gentle girl. The Fairy, Miss Dorothy Leal, was sweet enough to be fairy humans as well as flowers. And the flowers—but one must not praise children and flowers. Only one must be very particularly glad because of the Poppy, Miss Marie Boles, who sang so sweetly and the little Dandelions, Henry Mygatt and Mary Wright, who were bowled over by the breeze.

Baskets and bunches of flowers were showered upon the young artists and Miss Saunders had to reply to persistent cries of "Author." Mrs. Laurens Van Buren, who assisted at the piano and Miss Elvira Kenyon, who designed the arrangement of the stage and managed the play, were both remembered with flowers from the cast.

MAIL THIEF CONFESSES

John Conkling When Arrested by Inspectors Admits the Crime.

PRISONER IS ARRAIGNED.

Assistant Mailing Clerk Made a Specialty of Riffling Special Delivery Letters.

John Conkling, aged 21 years, an assistant mailing clerk at the local postoffice, was arrested at the office yesterday afternoon by Inspectors Gibbins and Butler, charged with violating section 1609 of the postal laws—stealing money from letters. The clerk made a confession before the inspectors and Postmaster E. H. Bird and later was taken to Jersey City, where today he will be arraigned before United States Commissioner Lindsly Rowe. He was detained at the Hudson County Jail, last night, in default of bail.

Although there was some surprise over the arrest of Conkling, it is said that he had been suspected of wrong-doing for the past two months. When he confessed yesterday, he said that he had been engaged in the practice since last Feb*ruary. It is not believed that he* got more than $100 in all. Special delivery letters were his hobby, and many complaints were received from time to time about the non-delivery of such letters or that the contents had been removed.

Conkling was caught yesterday on two "test" letters, one being mailed at the local postoffice at 8.30 o'clock and the other at 9.30 o'clock in the morning. Both were addressed to New York parties. These letters should have been in the mail pouches on the 9:59 and and 12 o'clock trains from Plainfield, but when the inspectors boarded these trains at Westfield and made a search for them they could not be found, indicating that they had not left the postoffice where mailed.

Not finding the two letters the inspectors returned to Plainfield and arranged to have Conkling summoned to Postmaster Bird's office upon his return from dinner. He was accused of taking the letters and then, it is said, made a confession. Both marked letters contained money and this was recovered.

The latter part of May a similar test was made by inspectors, but it just happened that the letters went through all right, but Conkling happened to be off-duty that day. Conkling's method, it is said, was to destory some of the letters after opening them, while in other instances he would remove the contents, seal them again and forward them. Because assistant mailing clerk he helped to handle outgoing and incoming mail, and an investigation showed that most of the missing letters were taken during the morning, when Conkling was left alone for a time.

Conkling was one of the principal witnesses for the Government in the case against former Letter-carrier Daniel McNamara, who was accused and convicted on a similar charge, and it is said that it was chiefly through his testimony that McNamara was convicted. The clerk, it is said, had been under suspicion for two months and it was at the request of Postmaster Bird that inspectors were sent to Plainfield. He took the matter up with inspector J. T. Cortelyou, who has charge of the district included in New York, New Jersey and Pennsylvania and he planned to send In*spectors Gibbins and Butler here.*

Postmaster Bird was first attracted to Conkling as a boy, when he was employed as a special messenger at the office. He was bright and was quick to learn the different lines of work at the office. In October, 1906, he was appointed a substitute clerk and he also served as a substitute carrier for a time. Later he was made assistant mailing clerk, his salary being $900 a year. On July 1 his salary would have been raised to $1,000.

It is said that on his way to Jersey City yesterday, Conkling said that he had spent the money "on girls." He was known to be very popular and had a host of friends. He attracted no little attention, perhaps, through his manner of dress, than in any other way. He was the "Beau Brummel" of the local postoffice staff and was always attired in the height of fashion.

Conkling is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Nathan Conkling, of Pearl street, and has always lived in this city.

In commenting on the case last night, Postmaster Bird said that he wished he could persuade people to use money orders when sending

PROFESSIONAL TALENT FOR BENEFIT SHOW

Through an invitation extended by Manager William J. Counihan, of the New Plainfield theatre, and "Sam" Cunningham, Leo Connelly, a big star among monologuists on the vaudiville stage in this country today, has consented to appear in theolic of the minstrel show to be given for the benefit of "Tom" Muir at the theatre next Friday and Saturday nights. Mr. Connelly, who is a personal friend of the local theatre men, has played all the houses on both the Orpheum and Keith circuits, and has an unusually clever act. Arrangements are also being made for the appearance of several other big-vaudeville acts for the show.

William Crandon-Bevan, who has been busy on the orchestration of the chorus music, now has his work completed and those who have seen the score, arranged for an orchestra of eleven pieces, say he has been unusually successful. The local man, who is well-known in the field of music, has had charge of many of the English pantomines produced in London from year to year, and is now at work on the music for one to be given this year. He is a native of London.

The big minstrel chorus held its second rehearsal at the theatre last night, and there was a big turnout. The rehearsal was in charge of Judge Runyon, and was unusually successful. The chorus will not meet again for practise until Friday night, for tonight and tomorrow night there will be rehearsals of the principals, under the direction of Mr. Runyon.

BURGLARS RANSACKED A BOROUGH BLACKSMITH SHOP

The blacksmith shop of Horace Martin, on Somerset street, was broken into Monday night and the office ransacked. Upon finding no money in the desk the thieves turned everything upside down and when Mr. Martin opened up yesterday morning he found his things strewn all over the office. Investigaion showed that the thieves had entered from the rear. The window in the back door had been broken open and entrance obtained by the help of some empty kegs stood on end.

"It looks to me," said Mr. Martin this morning, "as though it was the work of boys who were looking for loose change. Had they been men they would have stolen a number of horse shoe pads that were in the office."

WAND'S 1909 DIRECTORY A VALUABLE HANDBOOK.

Wand's 1909 directory for Plainfield, North Plainfield, Westfield, Scotch Plains, Dunellen, Fanwood and Mountainside, has been publish*ed and is now being distributed* throughout the different towns. It is, perhaps, one of the best and most complete yet compiled by Mr. Wand, being thoroughly up-to-date and filled with valuable information. In addition to the complete list of names in the several towns covered, there is also an excellent business directory.

Appropriate to the forthcoming Charter Day celebration, Mr. Wand has devoted space to setting forth the advantages of Plainfield and North Plainfield, which will prove of interest to all the residents. The directory is substantially bound and intended to stand plenty of hard wear.

Lawn Festival Postponed.

The lawn festival planned to be held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Winfield S. Angleman on West Front street, today, under the auspices of the Ladies' Auxiliary of Trinity Commandery, No. 17, K. T., has been postponed until tomorrow on account of the weather. Mme. Carnellita, the celebrated palmist, and Signor Alvinbini, famous as a fortune-teller, have been secured as attractions, and in addition there will be a May pole dance.

J. EDMUND SKIFF GIVES FINAL MUSICAL RECITAL

There was a fair sized and sympathetic audience at the First M. E. church last night who listened to some particularly good music under the direction of J. Edmund Skiff, organist of the church. The program as a whole was well rendered, but the choruses are deserving of more than passing notice. Singularly enough the ensemble singing was not applauded notwithstanding it was the best thing on the list, being sung with a shading and expression decidedly pleasing to hear. Of the soloists of the first half of the program Miss Laura A. Geeswein and Alfred C. Keidler were, perhaps, the recipients of the most applause although every number was sung with feeling and good tonal effect. The second half was devoted to a partial rendition of Cowan's "The Rose Maiden," with a chorus of thirty and the following soloists: Miss Bertha van N. Wills, soprano; Miss B. Mae Rodenbaugh, contralto, and Bertram F. Tallamy, barritone. Every part of this cantata was delightfully sung, particularly the duet "The Rose of Love," by Miss Willis and Mr. Tallamy and the trio "Hast Thou Wandered in the Forest." The final "Bridal Chorus" was a treat worth going miles to hear. Mrs. Harry N. Taylor, the accompanist read the score with appreciation of its meaning and contributed much to the success of the concert. Between the two parts a collection was taken up for the benefit of the choir fund which netted a considerable sum.

A Special Service.

Three will be a special service at the Salvation Army, Second street, tomorrow evening at 8 o'clock. The speaker of the evening will be Rev. C. E. Kemble, of the Monroe Avenue M. E. Church. Will Hold Final Meeting.

The Men's Association of the Church of the Heavenly Rest will hold an important meeting tomorrow night, when a new constitution and by-laws will be adopted. This will be the last meeting of the association for the season and a full attendance is desired.

Pastime A. C. Fair.

The Union county May Grand *Jury was discharged yesterday, af*ter returning eighty-eight true bills. There was no presentment.

There was a large and beaautiful display of floral tributes.

Miss Lincoln was a niece of Henry Bedlow, one of the owners of Bedlow's Island, New York, and was noted as a woman of exceptional beauty. She lived in Plainfield as a young woman and for a number of years sang in Grace church. She also gave a number of private musicales, and at when she moved to New York she sang in one of the leading metropolitan churches. AUTO AND BICYCLE IN COLLISION ON FRONT STREET

Struck by an automobile driven by Chester H. The lad was uninjured and there was no damage to the machine.

Briggs, who was alone in the car, was turning from Park avenue into West Front street when the accident happened. McNee, who is employed as delivery boy for a Somerset street fish market, was crossing from Somerset into Front street, and the machine struck the rear wheel of his bicycle. McNee took a sudden tumble and the wheel crumbled up, the frame also being badly bent. Briggs immediately stopped the car and when he found that the boy was uninjured, took the bicycle to a repair shop, where he left orders to have the bill for damages sent to him.

BLOCK NUMBER SYSTEM FOR NORTH PLAINFIELD

Because there have been a lot of complaints about the numbering system used on Watchung avenue, North Plainfield, the borough Council took action at its June meeting last night providing for a new system. Hereafter the numbers will begin at the brook and the system will be by blocks, a hundred to a block.

Upon the motion of Councilman J. J. Stahl, three new callmen were appointed after the fire department. Frank Keller will take the place of Patrick McDonough; Percy Culver will succeed John McCullough, who is now in Chicago, and Albert Camp is to be an extra man. Frank and August Anderson were appointed special police marshals.

There were thirty-seven arrests in North Plainfield during the month of May, according to Borough Recorder Dolliver's report, and the fines totalled $68.25.

The bill sent to the Council by County Clerk A. D. Anderson for the recording of various deeds was held up. Mayor Townsend said that upon checking up the items he found that there was an over-charge of twenty-five cents. The bill was referred to the finance committee for payment with this deduction.

A permit was granted to Dr. Hervey Buchanan for the erection of a garage at his home on Duer street, and J. S. Bartle, of Manning avenue, was granted a permit for the erection of a two-story building on Watchung avenue.

Borough Exempts to Parade.

A delegation of North Plainfield Exempt firemen will parade at Newark Monday, June 14, when forty local men will be in line. The local Exempts plan to take the famous Amity silver hose wagon with them. The parade will mark the cornerstone laying of the new home of the Newark Exempt Firemen's Association and will be the biggest celebration ever held by firemen in the State. There will be eleven divisions in the parade, 10,000 men in line and seventy-five bands. The borough exempts will have a place in the fifth division.

Former Mayor's Talk on "Civic Enterprise and Economy."

BEFORE BOARD OF TRADE.

Following is the address delivered last night by former Mayor L. V. F. Randolph at the Board of Trade meeting, his subject being "Civic Enterprise and Economy:"

Perhaps the first duty of a public speaker is to assort his ideas. Confusion of thought and of expression has not infrequently created confusion and panic in the world. It was, I think, to that distinguished Irish parliamentarian, Sir Boyle Roche, that the speech concerning the proposed new prison at Newgate was attributed; and part of his speech is said to have run somewhat like this:—

"The gintlemin opposite has bin sayin' as how we oughtn't to be burdinin' posirity wid a heavy debt all along of this interprise. Now, Mr. Sphaker, what has posirity ever done for us that we need be so particiular? An' this, I think, will perhaps show that it wu'd be an aisy matther to tear down the ould prisin, and to build a new one on the same sphot, an' wid the same matareals an' as fir th' prisiners, they could remain in the ould prison while the new one was in process of consthruction."

Whether Sir Boyle Roche ever delivered any such speech or not, there is in the story a picture of delicious confusion mixed with a charming optimism.

Now, optimism is not criminal, nor is confusion of mind and speech a crime—though its results may often be worse than crime.

You may well be asking yourselves why your speaker has linked together in his speech two thoughts so distinct as "enterprise" and "economy." The answer is, because they are related, and should ever be regarded as akin. The two questions—and a third proposition (which seems desirable) really practicable? and, How much will it cost to realize it? must ever belong together. Of late, the French scientist, Camille Flammarion, has repeatedly suggested that the volcanic heat (or the heat confined within the earth's crust) should be utilized for great mechanical and industrial purposes. In discussing this subject with other scientific men I find them conceding the proposition that the utilization of it would be most desirable. Some admit, also, that it is possible; but all those able men with whom I have chanced to converse on the subject believe that, even if practicable, the cost of putting into effect such a proposition would be too great to render it available, and that therefore, for the present, at least, the world must content itself with other enterprises of like usefulness but less expensive.

In a certain earlier day it was charged against an eminent teacher that much learning had made him mad. In our day many a man has gone mad from the ambition; and many a community has gone, not only mad but bankrupt, from too much ill-judged "enterprise." Making haste to be big is as foolish as making haste to be rich. Cost and worth must be always considered together. We must work for what we need—not mortgage our future for it.' As writes the poet Holland—

"God gives no value unto men
Unmatched by meed of labor;
And cost of worth has ever been
The nearest neighbor."

Our public representatives would do well to look twice at a dollar before spending it once, and to avoid entirely spending dollars not yet in sight.

In our day the ease with which public indebtedness can be "floated;" or, in other words, the ease with which municipal and other public bonds can be sold, constitutes in a certain sense a temptation to borrow not only at the "cost of posterity," but at the cost of the present day tax-payer. This being the case, it requires a good degree of judgment, courage and restraint on the part of our civic authorities to avoid incurring debt for objects seemingly desirable. Civic enterprise is a fascinating proposition. Who would not like to see progress? What citizen can have a mind so clod-like as to be content with unimproved conditions? And then, the inevitable condition of progress is cost! If the proposed enterprise is to be defeated because of its cost, how aggravating, how humiliating, how retarding is such a policy! And, if the current tax-receipts are insufficient for the enterprise, then why not anticipate the growth of the community and its means by "running in debt" for the improvement! All this seems so reasonable, and so natural!

Civic enterprises are numerous and greatly varied. It often requires great breadth of ability and long experience to know the actual and the relative merits of the suggestions constantly arising for consideration of the public interests and for steps in the direction of advancement. The able administrator of public affairs must not only have clearness of views, so as to avoid confusion of thought and mind, but must have also the ability to compare, and to weigh, and to rate at their relative value, the suggestions looking to public policies. Such questions as these will naturally arise:—Is a given thing to be desired for the actual benefit of the public? Is it a legal and legitimate object of expenditure? How much will it cost? How about its actual importance and value to the public, compared with the actual importance and value of other things which are clearly necessary? What means are available out of the general or specific revenues of the commonalty for this purpose? If no means are available for it out of current revenues, is the proposition of so imperative or commanding a character as to necessitate the issue therefor of public indebtedness, and to justify the placing of such a mortgage upon our prosperity and properties?

Such questions as these might arise also, not only in relation to enterprises entirely new, but, to some extent, in relation to the extension or maintenance of civic institutions already in existence. To be more specific—Even in cities many degrees below the rank of a Metropolis, there might be enterprises large and new (such as consolidation with a neighboring municipality, the creation or enlargement of a great sewer system, the erection of municipal buildings, the erection of a public park) and, on the other hand, in the line of maintenance of existing institutions or departments, there might be the upkeep of the fire department, and of the police department, and of the city highways, or public streets.

Now, I shall hardly be considered too conservative in declaring my view that these last occasions for expenditure ought to be entirely met out of current municipal income, and that no excuse should ever be made or found for "bunching together" a variety of deficits arising out of the expenditures and bonding the city for the excess sum.

Much judgment should be shown in regard to this character of expenditure; avoiding, for example, the tearing up, at much expense, of a good street for the purpose of experimenting with a new kind of pavement of doubtful utility or desirability, and avoiding, also, the enlargement from year to year of the kind of cost whose results add nothing to the permanent property of the city, and little, if anything, to its protection or comfort.

It is by no means the purpose of this address to a tack the good faith or policy of any particular administration, much less of any particular man. Nevertheless, the following more generalities must have but little significance for us fulness; and I will venture to pause just here in my remarks (which have thus far been somewhat of a general character) to say that the two points (one subject which at this moment are somewhat alive and pressing, and to express such views as I have gained by observation and experience on one or two of these matters.

It is fair to say that, throughout our whole history, and down to this day, we have been particularly fortunate in the administration of the department under the control of our street commissioner, and also in the department of municipal justice, presided over by the city judge. No breath of suspicion, no doubt of ability, or of good judgment has, in our city, ever for one moment attached to the gentlemen who have been entrusted with these matters. The moneys duly expended and vouched for by them we all believe that the city has received good value. My time is too short for all that might be said on subjects of general administration for commendations that might be given, and for some reasonable criticisms that might be made. It is at this moment strongly borne in upon my mind that errors of judgment are liable to creep into the conduct of our police department, and that, if we are exposed to such mistakes, they are most likely to lead in the direction of civic economy, nor in the direction of better protection to public and private property. I have been long convinced that our local police scheme is rather a poor and costly imitation of the metropolitan scheme. So far as I can ascertain, the point of departure from which this mistaken course started was the uniforming of the body of police. This, in itself, was probably an innocent procedure, and one intended to promote the public benefit and protection. There is ample room for doubt as to whether the purpose has thus been fairly secured. The results have been fairly costly, and liable to become much more so. I am one of those who believe that neither civic enterprise nor civic economy is promoted by the existing plan, and that it will be still less served by its enlargement. The police force may not said that eight additional patrolmen are desired upon the force. My own opinion is that they are not fairly required, and that it would be much more reasonable to reduce the number of patrolmen than to increase them.

In a great city like New York, or Philadelphia, or Chicago, the requirement for a great number of patrolmen is imperative. Wherever there is activity, or bustle, or danger, or temptation, since the days of many liquor shops, there must be a fair number of strong, able, faithful policemen, and it is better for such purposes that they be in uniform. I would by no means advocate the taking of uniforms from all the policemen of our city; but I am persuaded that a number of them (one half or more) could do better service, and during recent years I have conversed with a number of my fellow-citizens, and also with a number of the policemen of this city, and have found that the latter, as well as the former, have expressed earnest concurrence in my views. Policemen have repeatedly told me that they cannot accomplish certain lines of work whilst wearing their uniforms.

Though, as I have said, patrolling certain exposed, or active, or disorderly localities by uniformed policemen is necessary, the patrolling in uniform of most of the town is, I believe, in very large part a fruitless folly. In this connection it may fairly be remarked that there is but limited thoroughness of protection generally for a patrol—unless it is by policemen on bicycles, or otherwise mounted, to prevent dangerous speeding. On the other hand, there is, every now and then in each quarter of the town, a necessity for careful, thorough, competent and persistent detective work.

Some weeks before leaving here last winter I called upon the police force for some service in this regard in a single instance recommended to my call. He began his service by explaining that he was the only detective, or "plain-clothes man," on the force; that, whilst he would do the best he could, he was necessarily under some disadvantage in such circumstances in trying to answer all the calls upon him. I do not know how conscientiously or how carefully he may have attended to the duty he then undertook. I was at home for some weeks afterward, having been driven from him again. Perhaps he did his best under the existing limitations. I speak of it now to show what I consider to be a fault of the existing system.

I am taking it for granted, in the remarks which I make, that all the policemen are true and honest men. It is no purpose of this address, or of any of it, to bring personal charges against any of them. What I do say is, that I believe that they are laboring under great disadvantages, and that an increase in the patrol force, and their wandering about, or following certain rounds day and night, passing certain corners once in so many hours, ringing up the report of their progress, and all that kind of thing, whether in uniform or not, is largely useless. I do not say that no good has ever come from any of it. It may be said that good has come, from point to point, in the protection or information given, from conversations and personal courage of private citizens. What I do say is that, taking the greater portion of the area covered by this city, there is no more particular importance in a policeman's passing at one point, once in so many hours than there is in the passing of that point by any other reputable person once in the same number of hours. The burglar, or other evil-disposed person, is not likely, upon finding out—as he easily can—the habit of the policeman on his patrol, to commit his crime just at the moment when the policeman is passing and ready to "take him in." The evil-disposed person knows that, after the policeman has once gone on his way for some minutes, he will not have occasion to deal with him in the course of his regular travels for some hours to come, and he can then peacefully pursue his wicked work in the assurance that he will not be disturbed from that quarter. More than three-quarters of our city is no more exposed to depredations from evil-doers than is our neighboring borough, or than is any bit of peaceful countryside where neither burglars nor their crimes are dreaded nor provided against. This whole fashion of walking up and down over town and country in uniform or without it at all hours of the day and night, on paths regular and irregular (and especially on paths regular, such as can be marked and timed) approaches in character and effect to the ludicrous.

It may be that some of my good friends, in or out of the municipal administration, will consider me too narrow and old-fashioned in the declaration of such views. I desire to be liberal and enterprising, and liberal also; but I think that here, as elsewhere, economy should be reasonably fitted to the enterprise, and both of these elements should be joined together under the control of the best and most experienced judgment.

Not very long since, some statistics which were published by one of your city papers indicated that about thirty years ago we had municipal requirements for police protection of a pressing character; that within the space of ten months there were not less than 4,789 cases of vagrancy. In those days I was much interested in public affairs. I cannot confirm positively the statistics given; but I know that arrests were numerous, as they were necessary. The area of our city has not increased, nor has the population, since the days of my own mayoralty. The population has increased. It has doubled. The number of policemen now on the force is more than seven times what it was then. The cost of maintaining the police force is more than twelve times what it was then. The order and good behavior of the city was quite as good then as it is now. These may be facts worth considering. I am not bringing them forward as in any way disparaging to anybody now endeavoring to serve the city; but I say, earnestly and confidently, that a further extension of this mistaken patrolman scheme is neither enterprising nor economic, and that I believe the whole plan of the administration of police matters should be gone over and revised and thoroughly reformed by our civic authorities.

During my absence from home public attention has been at least twice attracted by leading citizens to the practical doubling of our public debt during the year 1908. At the end of the year 1907 our public indebtedness appears to have been something over a quarter of a million dollars. At the end of the year 1908 it was, (as pointed out in an article published in February by Mr. John B. Dumont) $511,500. Amongst the items of increase during the last year appear these:—

Police Station	$25,500
Fire House	15,000
Brick pavement	31,000
Street macadamizing	14,000

Total of these 4 items....$85,500

Towards the end of Mr. Dumont's pithy article he put the pertinent question? "How long can Plainfield stand such increase in debt and maintain her credit?" and he closed with the significant remark: "Excessive bond issues bankrupted nearby city not many years ago."

Former Mayor Stevens, in his interesting address before this Board of Trade delivered on the eleventh of March said: "Twenty years ago no Common Council would have thought of issuing bonds without first submitting the question to the vote of the people."

Eager are those who talk about starting new and expensive sewer systems, buying out waterworks, and entering into other costly plans and contracts as gayly and light-heartedly as if these were the amusements and recreations rather than the responsibilities and burdens of a municipality of moderate dimensions. If we have a public indebtedness, already existing, of half a million dollars, without as yet possessing any public park or city hall, is it not full time that we should call a halt in the matter of indebtedness. Is it not at least reasonable that before another dollar of public indebtedness is issued the taxpaying community should vote the authority to issue bonds? We have had an almost continuous rise for a period of years in the valuation of taxables, and in the amount of money raised by taxation. I am far from saying that all this was wrong at every point, but it has proceeded to such a point as seriously to begin to threaten our welfare and prosperity. I, who am one of the oldest citizens of Plainfield, and as one of the larger tax-payers. I am content to hold the properties I possess, and even to build houses, and otherwise add to my holdings, paying taxes thereupon proportionately, on the basis that the added value of my property is not likely to be destroyed or impaired by excessive taxes. If, on the other hand, taxes are to increase, I shall desire to sell, even at a loss, my own holdings, and hundreds of other property holders in this city will wish to do the same, and will offer their properties for sale. The purpose of your Charter Day movement is, if I understand it aright, to encourage parties to take an interest in Plainfield—those who are already here, and those who may be induced to come here. If the burdens of taxation can be reasonably kept down, your arguments and your advertisements will undoubtedly be successful. Plainfield has many attractions: it is clean, healthy, beautiful, holds a fairly large number of excellent and well-to-do people, can conscientiously say that in the course of many thousands of miles of travel I have found no city more inviting or healthful; but such advantages as it has will be lost to view if any ill-considered course of public administration, and especially by an increase of taxation or public debt.

This subject has been brought home to me of late with renewed force by remarks from a number of private citizens of modest means as well as by the increasing fears and complaints of many larger property holders. Holders of very small properties have said to me that they desired to sell what they had because they felt that they could not afford to pay the increasing taxes; and even citizens who possess no property at all, but who have their homes under rentals, are finding it a hardship to pay the increasing rentals necessitated by the increasing taxation. There is no adequate answer to this difficulty in the statement that certain other cities tax their residents even more severely than does Plainfield. This in no wise touches the merit of the subject, aside from the fact that some of these cities own more in the way of permanent valuable property than does this city. I venture to assert confidently, that it could be known as a certainty that within the next twelve years Plainfield would pay off every cent of her public indebtedness, and would not issue another bond, and would secure the reduction of the entire rate of taxation to one per cent., in that event our vacant lots and outlying lands would be swiftly taken up by new and desirable settlers. All this is entirely possible. Effort should be made in this direction, and no step should be taken in a contrary direction.

With a view, also, to the promotion of confidence in the economy as well as the enterprise of public administration, no backward step should be taken in safeguarding our public expenditure, and the utmost carefulness should be observed at every point. Any proposition, for example, to give the chairman of a council committee power by himself to purchase supplies, or to break down any system of fair and open competition for supplies required by the city, should be entirely discountenanced. "Eternal vigilance" is the price of "safety" as well as of "liberty."

This Board of Trade is entitled to high praise for its desire and efforts to increase our civic prosperity and influence. It has manifested a spirit of enterprise, and has worked with a fair degree of success. Probably certain sorts of advertising are useful, especially those which carry to the minds of desirable persons in other places the advantages offered by our city. I have ventured to wonder in my own mind whether some forms of Charter Day celebration might not be performed in a sufficiently dignified and useful a character to serve the purpose. You gentlemen of the Board of Trade can perhaps judge more correctly than I can in such matters. I have seen carnival frolics in many places in many countries; for example, at New Orleans, in Cuba, in Spain, in Algiers, and in Italy. These carnival frolics appear to succeed best in countries not favored with the higher degrees of education and intelligence. I do not think that ours is a carnival country: I am inclined to hope that it will never be such. I believe in recreation and in fun in its proper place. Our American festal occasions have more significance, I think, than those of other lands, whilst at the same time there is associated with them an abundant element of recreation and joy. Let us hope it may be ever thus; and, when we are celebrating any particular thing, let us put into it a fair measure of thought as well as a good degree of enjoyment. So far as Plainfield is concerned, it may even prosper under conservative management without ever becoming a "boom" town. The Spaniards have a proverb, "Good wine needs no bush." It is better that our progress should even fall of acceleration rather than be subject to reactions, disappointments, and losses.

I think I am known in politics as a fairly consistent Republican. For fifty years I have pretty constantly voted the Republican ticket, but I am free to say that I am sorry that national party lines and principles should dominate our local affairs, and that a habit of "give and take" as a compromise has arisen in politics (municipal, state and national) should sometimes interfere with wise and necessary local management. This danger and difficulty could perhaps be partly overcome with us if there were also an opposite party of civic ambition and ability, able now and then to take the reins of administration and improve upon the record of the party whose administration was not wholly successful. Unfortunately, with us there is no such opposite party. With us the Democratic party does not exist. As yet, the Plainfield Protective Association has not organized an independent movement. When we are dissatisfied, we can only go to the Republican party and take our chances along with those who are already fairly entrenched in a well understood position. Is it too much to hope that members of the Board of Trade, and other public spirited citizens, will in one way or another exercise such watchfulness and well-guided energy as shall secure to our city for the future the best fruits of worthy enterprise combined with the exercise of wholesome economy?

FUNERAL SERVICES OF A BRIGHT YOUNG MAN

The funeral services of N. Douglas Drake, were held Friday afternoon at 3 o'clock from the home of his aunt, Mrs. Dodge, 34 Duer street, and were largely attended by relatives and friends, including a delegation from the Plainfield Bar Association, of which Mr. Drake was a member. There were also a large number of floral tributes, among them one from the bar association. Rev. Dr. J. A. Chambliss, pastor of the First Baptist church, of which Mr. Drake was an earnest and active member, conducted the services.

The burial was in Evergreen cemetery on Plainfield avenue, and the pall-bearers were Asa F. Randolph, J. H. VanWinkle, Jr., Charles M. Dolliver, representing the Plainfield Bar Association, and Fred C. Fountain, Fred Armstrong and Leslie Powlison, co-workers with Mr. Drake in the First Baptist church.

The long sham, whether made of handkerchiefs and put together with bands of insertion, or of a single oblong piece of linen, are less trouble to keep in position on the pillows than the old-fashioned shams in two pieces.

PUPILS ANNUAL RECITAL

Seven Hundred in Appreciative Audience at Miss Whitney's Musicale.

EXCEPTIONAL PERFORMANCE.

Many Interesting Numbers On the Well Varied Program at the Auditorium.

An appreciative audience of nearly seven hundred people attended the annual musicale by pupils of Miss May Vincent Whitney, at the Plainfield High School auditorium, Thursday, and thoroughly enjoyed the program. The pupils were assisted by William N. Searles, Jr., basso cantante, of Newark, who delighted the audience with four numbers, sung in a manner that enthused everyone.

The recital afforded an excellent opportunity for the young pupils to display the careful training by their teacher, and their interpretation of the many difficult numbers, all classical, was quite remarkable. Their technique and expression were all that could be desired and would do credit to older pupils. Their mastery of the most difficult passages showed a thoroughness that was greatly appreciated by music lovers.

Perhaps, the most difficult number and one that called forth the greatest applause, was the "Intermezzo in G," for twelve hands, two pianos. This was rendered by the Misses Elizabeth Martin, Dorothy Stelle, Helen Weseman, Julia Rowley, Mildred Barnett and Grace Hall. Another notable rendition was that by Miss Martin Weeks, who played "Minuet in E," Boccherini-Joseffy, and "Mazurka," by Leschetisky, in a finished manner.

Miss Muriel Collins, one of the older pupils, delighted all with two numbers, "Prelude in A Op. 28, No. 17," Chopin, and "Fantasie from Rigoletto," Verdi-Liszt, in which she displayed unusual talent.

Others who contributed largely to the success of the recital were Miss Martine Weeks, Miss Edith Hamilton, Miss Elizabeth Martin, Miss Julia Rowley and Miss Ellen George. It would be difficult to criticize the work of these young pupils, all was so uniformly good. Those who have followed these young people were impressed with the marked improvement and progress made during the past year.

Interesting numbers for eight hands were Serenade from "Don Giovanni," and "Minuet and Trio from The Symphony in E," Mozart, by Miss Anna Warnock, Miss Ethel Neumann, Russell Conroy and Egbert Fountain, and the rendition of Valse from "Faust Tarantelle," for two pianos, Tschaikowsky, by Miss Muriel Collins and Miss May Vincent Whitney.

In part two, Mr. Searles sang "The Mighty Deep," Jude, and "A Winter Lullaby," Reginald de Koven, his two numbers were "Voices of the Woods," Rubinstein-Watson, and "Vulcan's Song from Philemon et Baucis," Gounod. The program concluded with a selection for eight hands, "Rhapsodie Hungroise No. 2," Liszt, by Miss Muriel Collins, Miss Ellen George, Miss Marguerite Van Zandt and Miss Edith Hamilton. During the evening the pupils were generously remembered with gifts of flowers.

TO INSPECT CANAL FOR CHAMBER OF COMMERCE

Former Mayor William L. Saunders, president of the Ingersoll-Rand Company, is planning another visit to Panama, this time in the interest of the New York Chamber of Commerce, for the purpose of making a thorough inspection of the work and making a report. Originally it was arranged for several members of the New York chamber to make the trip, but for reasons the others who expected to go have given up is impossible, and therefore Mr. Saunders has made up his mind to visit Panama alone. What the chamber desires particularly to be advised on is whether a lock or a sea level canal is preferable.

Although Mr. Saunders is one of the youngest members of the Chamber of Commerce, he has risen rapidly to a position of prominence in the body and is considered today one of the ablest men in that line in the country, and is frequently consulted for an expert opinion on great engineering feats to be undertaken.

Sheridan's Spelling.

The author of "The School for Scandal" had highly original views on the rules of spelling. In his critic days, for instance, a "thing" to Sheridan was always a "think," and never by any chance did he remember that a "which" or a "where" to be really respectable must needs possess an "aitch apiece." This rule Moreover, he scorned the use of a double "m" or a double "s." For example, "blessedness" was always "blesednes."—London Eve. Standard.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Prayer Meeting Topic for the Week Beginning June 12, 1909.

By REV. B. H. DOTTLE.

Topic—The noble life of Frances Willard.—Prov. xxxi. 10; xvii. 22, 25, 29-31.

The temperance cause is making great progress today. State prohibition and local option laws are made great inroads upon the liquor traffic, and in the providence of God it seems doomed. Public sentiment is fast being aroused against this cursed traffic, and in this country the people have what they want if they only want it bad enough to arouse themselves from their lethargy and demand it of those elected by them to make and execute laws for them. This sentiment is rapidly growing against intemperance and the law's relation to it, and more loudly every day the people are saying to the liquor traffic, "Go!" and when the voice of the people becomes loud enough it will go.

At such a time it is pleasant and profitable to recall the great pioneers of the movement against intemperance and especially those who did so much to educate public opinion that is now beginning to manifest itself. One of these leaders, the greatest at least of all the women who have labored for this cause, was Frances E. Willard, for years the president of the Woman's Christian Temperance union and acknowledged as the leader of the temperance forces of the world, so far as women were concerned.

Under the topic "A Heroic Woman" Anson R. Bain has the following to say concerning Miss Willard:

Frances Elizabeth Willard was born in Churchville, N. Y., Sept. 28, 1839. In her childhood the family removed first to Oberlin and then to a pioneer home near Janesville, Wis.

Her education was finished at the Northwestern Female college, Evanston, Ill., where she won a host of friends, displayed great intellectual power and became valedictorian of her class.

Taking up the teacher's vocation after highly successful work in many institutions, she became dean of the Northwestern Female college and professor of aesthetics in the Northwestern university.

Miss Willard was moved to take up temperance work by the women's crusade, that "whirlwind of the Lord which in fifty days swept the liquor traffic out of 250 towns and villages." At great financial cost she became president, in 1874, of the Chicago Woman's Christian Temperance union. In 1879 she became president of the National Woman's Christian Temperance union, until her death, Feb. 17, 1898, being the acknowledged leader of the temperance forces of the United States and the world.

Among the outstanding events of her life are her pioneer work for temperance organization in the west, labors for prohibition constitutional amendments in many states, the editorship of the Union Signal, the writing of an autobiography and other books, heroic work for the Woman's temple, the National Temperance hospital and the Woman's Temperance Publishing association. The polyglot temperance petition addressed to the governments of the world and the World's Woman's Christian Temperance union were her plans. She spoke everywhere, being heard often on Christian Endeavor platforms, for she was a warm friend of our society. Rightly has she been called "the uncrowned queen of America."

Stand by the Boy.

"We must stand by the boy and show the world that we have not cast him aside."

"The boy" was the younger son of an honorable family. He had committed a great wrong, and the question was what to do with regard to him. His brother, a man of high moral integrity, said, "We must stand by the boy."

This attitude was Christian. It suggests a duty to the boy in general, the boy that has gone astray. We have not always even seen the problem. It is being magnified today. We must show the world we must stop the awful waste of lives—we must reach and influence the young people. We must stand by the boy. It is urged against the Christian Endeavor society that it reaches twice as many girls as boys.

The same might be said of Christianity. It is an unmistakable fact that the churches draw far greater numbers of women than men. The reasons are many. But no one ever thinks of questioning Christianity or minimizing its value on this account. The fact is, take it as we will, that Christian Endeavor reaches more girls than boys, just as the churches do.

On the other hand, Christian Endeavor is the best movement to reach and hold the boys too. What is needed is a class of workers that understand the boy and will stand by him. Such workers are rare, yet that is not the fault of Christian Endeavor. The Christian Endeavor movement has trained many workers, and it is capable of training still more. We need men that will study the boy and do something for him. Along with our study of missions and civic righteousness why may there not be committees to study the boy—to find out his needs and the way to meet them? If the boy needs boys' clubs, why may he not have them in Christian Endeavor? A vast field of usefulness is lying fallow here. It is a new country, but it is the natural inheritance of Christian Endeavor. May many hear the call to go forward and conquer "for Christ and the church."—Ripple in Christian Endeavor World.

ASSISTANT PROSECUTOR WINS SIGNAL VICTORY

Deliberating on the evidence but ten minutes, a jury in the case of the State against Joseph Weinstein and son, Harry Weinstein, charged with assaulting Dr. Frederick Zucker, State officer of the S. P. C. A., returned a verdict in the Union county court, Friday afternoon, finding both defendants guilty. Assistant Prosecutor Walter L. Hetfield, Jr., handled the case alone for the State and achieved a notable victory. He had but four witnesses against twenty-two for the defense, represented by former Governor Foster M. Voorhees, John Stamler and Charles Wagner.

Although opposed by brilliant array of counsel, Mr. Hetfield presented the case before the jury in a masterly way. He spoke of the contradictory evidence given by the witnesses for the defense and the witnesses failing to agree on many details.

Dr. Zucker was attacked and badly injured by a mob in Court street, Elizabeth, on March 1, while investigating a case of cruelty to animals. His nose was broken in the fight. The defense claimed that Dr. Zucker was the aggressor, but Mr. Hetfield showed conclusively that the Weinsteins were wholly responsible. Charles Segolosky, one of the men indicted, turned State's evidence, while Joseph Albert, another witness, was excused, it having been shown that he knew nothing about the trouble. There was a large number of interested people in court, including Col. Edwards, one of the State officers of the S. P. C. A.

THE COLOR OF GOWNS.

A writer in the June Delineator says that the value of color is something that a clever dressmaker understands fully. She continues: "Two dresses can be cut alike, line for line, but in different shades of the same silk, and one of them will make a woman look slender, straight and supple, and the other will give her an unaccountably dumpy, round-shouldered, square-cut figure. All women ought to make a careful study of colors. It is especially important for women of small means who have so few gowns that they must live with those of their choice very intimately. A woman who can buy twenty or thirty dresses a year can afford to make an occasional mistake when her fancy for a trying color or a too daring line carries her away for a moment. She can hang an unsuccessful dress in a closet and forget about it, and it does her no harm —helps her, perhaps, in choosing more wisely in the future. She does not suffer from her folly. But a woman of small means who meets with a mishap in her choice of her one new gown must wear it weather or no—a harsh commentary on her vanity, her poor judgment or her bad taste. Yet one can only tell her to choose carefully and buy slowly."

ABOUT THE HOUSE.

A roast of meat which is to be served cold will keep its flavor much better if wrapped in a cloth when set away.

Black silk may be effectually cleaned by rubbing it well with a cloth dipped in hot vinegar.

A little salt sprinkled in the oven under the cake pan will prevent the cake "catching"—at least this is what an excellent cook says.

It is well to scrub a ham with a stiff brush and warm water before boiling it.

Windows and mirrors are perceptibly brightened if a little turpentine is added to the water used in washing them.

THE OBJECTION TO JOHN.

The Gaylords and Nelsons have always been neighbors and intimate friends. So when John Gaylord, at twenty-four, as fine a fellow as ever was, began to see what an altogether charming girl Molly Nelson was, there was, naturally, no opposition, according to Youth's Companion. Indeed, as the "affair" became serious it was evident to all, including John and Molly themselves, that the parents concerned were delighted. As yet there was no formal announcement, but every one knew that it was "understood," and evening after evening John talked to Molly on the front porch, often lingering after the other Nelsons had retired.

The surprise of the two was consequently great when one evening a shuffling step was heard in the hall, and presently Mr. Nelson appeared in slippers and dressing-gown, candle in hand. Quite evidently he had gone to bed and then got up—for some purpose.

"Why, father, what is the matter?"

Molly's cheeks were burning, as her father stood there hesitating and blinking. John closely. John, leaning against the door-post, where he had stood for the last fifteen minutes saying good night to Molly, felt decidedly uncomfortable under Mr. Nelson's gaze.

In fact, it was embarrassing all 'round. But John is a young man who goes straight to the point.

"Is anything wrong, Mr. Nelson?" he began, directly. "Am I to infer that you object to my being here?"

"Well, no, not exactly, John," Mr. Nelson coughed, slightly hesitating. "It's only that mother and I would like to get a little sleep.'

"Father," cried Molly, quite indignant, "we couldn't have been disturbing anyone! John has been talking very low—"

"I don't doubt that, my dear," Mr. Nelson was beginning to enjoy the situation. "It's not that, nor have I any objection to John's talk*ing to you. In fact, I haven't an* objection in the world to John, nor to his conduct, except—"

Mr. Nelson is open to suspicion of having prolonged the matter unnecessarily at this point.

"Except in one thing. Mrs. Nelson wished me to object seriously, my dear John, to the habit you seemed to have this evening of leaning against the bell-push. Our bedroom is next to the kitchen, and this continuous bell-ringing is not conducive to repose."

FEW AUTOMOBILE TRAPS LEFT IN NEW JERSEY.

Traps for automobilists are rapidly disappearing in New Jersey, according to J. B. R. Smith, commissioner of motor vehicles. At the present time there are less than half a dozen in the whole State, and one of those is operated in such a manner that it is welcomed by the department. The operator is now a department agent.

It is located near New Brunswick, and is at the home of Justice of the Peace Carver. The road on which he lives is one the direct route between New York and Philadelphia, and is much used by automobilists. A mile from the 'Squire's home is the beginning of a grade. The stretch is in perfect shape and tourists are apt to increase speed there to see what their machines can do.

As soon as the machine comes in sight it is just a mile from the lookout, and a knowledge of calculus is not necessary to learn whether or not teh owner has exceeded the speed limit.

No attempt is made by the 'Squire to persecute the violators. They are simply dealt with according to the law, and in that way the squire has done much to make that road safe for team drivers.

There are several traps in South Jersey, but they are conducted in such a manner that it has not been found necessary to attempt to break them up.

Taken as a whole, Commissioner Smith has been so successful in wiping out the traps that with one or two exceptions tourists are not making complaints as they did a few years ago.

JOTTINGS ON THE FASHIONS.

Pumps, whether of bronze or patent leather, will be much worn. They are cut low and adorned with a slight bit of silk bow.

Some of the new long silk gloves have a series of tucks beginning just above the wrist.

A smart tailored suit is made of white shantung. A collar and cuffs of velvet finish the coat nattily.

Shades of white lace, braided in the wash soutache, will be worn much this season.

Sleeveless coats, of silk, lace or linen, seem to be increasingly popular as the season advances.

Ready to Vote.

Mr. Bacon—If you women had the privilege of the ballot you wouldn't know how to vote.

Mr. Bacon—Yes, I would, too.

"Well, how would you vote?"

"I'd write my name opposite the candidate's name I wanted to vote for."—Yonkers Statesman.

SOMETHING HE COULD NOT FORGET.

Everything in this story except two names is vouched for as the truth by the publishers of the American Magazine.

The story concerns a rich man whom I will call Ebenezer Openhearth. He is a prosperous manufacturer of steel, well known and highly esteemed. He is said to have an excellent heart, and here and there he has done a notable public service. Since he accumulated his fortune he has been anxious to cultivate some of the graces of life. He has wanted to know people of consequence and have people of consequence know him and respect him.

Well, then, about fifteen years ago a well-known Scotchman came to this country. We will name him for convenience Donald Bannockburn. One bitterly cold day he was on a railway train which stopped at a station in Pennsylvania. The day was so cold that the piston rod of the engine became clogged with ice, and the fireman and engineer had to thaw it out. The Rt. Hon. Donald Bannockburn, M. P., got out of the train to "take the air," and while he was walking up and down the platform thumping his numbed hands against his chest a train of flat cars loaded with slag was pulled into a "siding." A crowd of train hands that gathered at the side of one of the cars attracted the attention of Bannockburn to a sight that chilled his blood more than the bitter wind. On top of a pile of slag lay the mangled body of a man, the very rags and tatters of humanity, so crushed and mangled that it was beyond the mutilating bluntness of human life to see that he lived and was conscious. There he lay, exposed to the withering winds on his pallet of iron cinders till the railway men carried him away.

The Scotchman turned to a train hand and asked: "What has happened to that man?"

"Oh, he got busted up at the mills. It often happens. We call the mills the 'slaughter house.'"

"Why didn't they take him to a nearby hospital?"

"Ain't any. Have to fetch him down here."

"How far are the mills from here?"

"About four miles."

"Do you mean to say that they have sent that poor devil four miles on a day like this?"

"Sure thing."

The Scotchman went on his way homeward and resumed his busy life, but he never could quite shake the horror from his mind. He told me afterward that the vision of the man on the slag train came to him in his dreams for years. Long afterward, when he had become a member of the cabinet and a person of great mark in the kingdom, an English iron master and fellow M. P. came to him in the House of Commons and said: "Come out and see an American who wants very much to meet you." Bannockburn followed his friend into the lobby, where a good-looking, well-cared-for man stepped forward eagerly, thrust out his hand and cried:

"Ebenezer Openhearth is proud to grasp the hand of Donald Bannockburn!"

"Do you know," said the statesman in telling me about it afterward, "for a moment I couldn't see him. At the mention of the name, the scene at the railway station rose before my eyes—the bitter day, and the thing on the slag train. And here before me was the proprietor of the 'slaughter house.' Not for the like of me could I take his hand. I looked him in the eye and said: "But, Donald Bannockburn refuses to grasp the hand of Ebenezer Openhearth.' And I turned away without telling him why. But I explained afterward to my friend, and I expect it was silly. Of course it was childish and theatrical, but I had to do it."

A RANCH QUEEN OF THE "PAN HANDLE."

Everyone in the Texas Panhandle has heard of Pauline Whitman. She is noted as a cattle expert and a ranch manager. Mrs. Whitman was compelled to take charge of the L. S. ranch by the death of her husband, and then became one of the largest stock growers in the world, having over 100,000 acres of stock yards, pastures and her ranch house and a score of other buildings to look after. Her yearly beef crop aggregates train loads of from 10,000 to 20,000 steers sent yearly to Kansas City and Chicago, and she gets some of the best beef experts calls "fancy prices."

Mrs. Whitman knows every point in the business from judging the age of a calf to throwing a steer with a lasso. She is a skilled horsewoman and one has on the ranch frequently visits the different herds, especially at round-up time, when the calves are separated from the older stock and branded. The ranch has doubled its income since she took charge, which shows how well she knows her business, although she finds time to make trips to New York and Europe to buy art treasures for her collection and to go to the opera.—Van Norden Magazine.

JOURNALISTIC OPINIONS

Judge I. P. Runyon.

"So much for this new court and its business but there remains a word to be said as to the new judge.

"It is quite true that he is comparatively a young man—not having a gray beard and a bald head to testify as to his long experience, but he certainly has a certain judicial dignity about him that involuntarily commands respect and forbids any impertinence in his presence.

"He has had some years practice at the bar in which he has shown solid qualities and a broad knowledge of law and withal he seems to have a mind accustomed to analyze legal puzzles and strike at the central merit of the question presented for his consideration, and while his courtesy is shown in his treatment of both counsel and witnesses, his calm judgment is not to be influenced by any other consideration than that of strict enforcement of the law.

"We noted with pleasure that he promptly decided points made by counsel, and by so doing did not lower the dignity which belongs in a peculiar manner to the bench, nor follow the pernicious example of some neophytes on the bench by arguing points with counsel, thus wasting time of counsel, litigants and witnesses as well as juries.

"While a just decision is always to be desired, promptness is of equal importance and he certainly gives satisfactory than any argumentative position the judge may assume.

"In this initial administration of the judicial function we can assert positively that Judge Runyon has given strong promise of a successful career on the bench and it is quite safe to predict that continued action on the line he has so far laid down and followed is building a sure reputation, which in a very few years will warrant his elevation to a still more exalted position.

"That there have been some opposition to the organization of a District court in Somerset county is well known, but if this first day's procedure is to be accepted as a precedent we feel sure that that opposition will soon be changed to unqualified satisfaction with the result, and the District court become indeed the People's Court."—Somerset Democrat.

THE GUEST-ROOM.

From that most helpful exchange of ideas "The Housemother's Problems," in Harper's Bazar, comes the following good suggestion:

Try sleeping in your guest-room for a week. You will probably then discover that the bed is so placed that the first rays of the morning sun fall directly in the eyes of the sleeper, that the bedclothes are too heavy, the bureau stands so that it is impossible to get a good light on the mirror.

For 50 cents the following list can be purchased; items that will be missed in the costliest bedroom if they are lacking, and which will do much to make the plainest room grateful to the guest:

For five cents, enough lavender can be bought to make the bed-linen always deliciously fragrant; for five cents, a package of hairpins; for ten cents, a cube of honey-scented pins; for ten cents, a paper of ordinary pins to fill the pin-cushion; for five cents a cake of really good soap in the special guest room size; for five cents, two coat-hangers; for five cents, a bottle of ink; for five cents, some needles, threaded with black and white white silk and cotton, and stuck in the pin-cushion.

It does not seem worth while to miss so much comfort, when its cost is so trifling. For another fifty cents can be added a pad of writing paper, envelopes, stamps, some ready-stamped souvenir cards of the town, a box of talcum powder, and a plain penholder with some assorted pens.

AMENDING A PICTURE.

An eminent French art collector once bought at the Hotel Drouot a landscape by Corot. "Impressionist," in which he showed, with much pride in his purchase, to an artist friend, relates an exchange:

"But I think," quoth he, "that the picture lacks animation; it wants personages. Now, if you would paint for me a man on that road that runs through the middle of the lanscape it would greatly improve the picture."

"That is easily done," said the artist. So he took off the painting and sent it back in a week or two with the figure of an old peasant woman going to market, with her basket and her red umbrella, introduced great satisfaction of the picture's proprietor. Meeting a shortly after with the "impressionist" who had painted it, the artist remarked:

"I had the audacity to alter a landscape of yours belonging to M. X. the other day. I painted an old peasant woman walking down the road."

"Down the road? I remember no work of mine with a road in it. I should like to see the picture and judge of the effect of your alteration."

So the artist carried him off to M. X.'s, and they speedily stood before the landscape. The "impressionist" turned perfectly green with wrath and horror.

"Miserable man," he shouted, "what have you done? That is not a road that runs through the centre of my work.. It is a river!"

THE STAINLESS BANNER.

Down from the highlands and off the far islands,
Out of Armenia, Finland and Spain,
Celt and Ionian, Semite, Slavonian,
Come to commingle their blood with our strain.

Why, when the Old World begs,
Why shall we take her dregs
Why give them welcome to heart and to vein?

Spawn of the peasant—uncouth and unpleasant,
Son of the pauper and child of the thief;
Bred thorough the ages of dwellers in cages,
Starved of all but starvation and grief—

Why do they grope us?
Do they bear hope to us?
What would they write us on history's leaf?

Here be a haven, but not, for the craven,
Welcome each builder by brain or by hand,
Thus were the sires who lighted our fires—
God found them worthy and gave them the land.

Far will we fare with them,
All will we share with them,
But for our cause must they steadfastly stand.

Brothers, remember to nurture the ember,
Let not the glory of Lexington fade,
Sound on the clarion, honor to Marion
(He who fought starving in morass and glade),

Perry and Decatur and Boone,
And what the Texas moon
Saw when the Alamo's score had been paid.

Theirs were the sorrows, and ours are the morrows;
Into our hands have they given in trust
Stainless the banners that heard their hosannas—
Flag which no heel ever ground in the dust.

They who would share its folds
Gladly must bear its folds,
This is the price they shall pay for their crust.

—Herbert Kaufman in Everybody's Magazine.

WHEN GRANT PROPOSED.

When young Grant reached the banks of the Gratiot he found it a mad, muddy torrent, which had torn trees and bridges from its banks and was carrying them with a roar of waters through the valley to the river. But what was that to daunt a lover? Like the hero of the legend, "he spurred his steed and plunged in." But he plunged in over his head, with his horse under him, writes Mrs. Emma Dent Casey to The Circle Magazine.

It was a startled swain that stood in the presence of his lady-love a few moments afterward. Lieutenant Grant took it all good-humoredly enough, but there was a studyseriousness in his usually twinkling eyes that must have suggested to Julia that the had come on more serious business, for the teasing did not last long. John carried him off to find some dry clothes, and when he returned the usually natty soldier looked scarcely more like himself than he had when he came out of his bath.

Of course, this roused more laughter, which the soldier took in the same good part, but those rosy telltale cheeks of his reddened, as usual with him when the inward state of his feelings did not agree with his outward composure.

I think it shows something of the character of the man that Lieutenant Grant should not have allowed his natural embarrassment at the house of his sweetheart that night to have unsteadied his purpose in coming there. When he left the barracks he had it in his mind to offer the lady his hand and heart. He offered it, although in the world could have prevented him, probably since he had once har it in mind. It was characteristic of the man, as his campaign of after years from Spottsylvania to Appomattox showed. Grant was often most slow and hesitating in his efforts to come to a decision, but when that decision was once made it was irrevocable and acted upon immediately.

It is, perhaps, not necessary to say that Lieutenant Grant rode away from White Haven the morning after, he took with him what he had gone after.

EARS AND EMOTIONS.

"Unlike the eye, which chiefly informs the mind, the ear stirs the emotions," says Dr. William Hanna Thomson, in an article, "As to Ourselves." in Everybody's. "We can see a fish writhing in its death agony without pity, but no one can so listen to an animal's shrieks of pain. This is as it should be, for however wrong the head, the heart should keep right. The ear also is intensely personal. It makes no mistakes about whose voice we hear.

"Once on the deck of a Glasgow steamer I parted from a student friend, and we did not meet again for thirty-three years. I could never have known him then by sight—for time sadly spoils eye memories—but his voice told me who he was the moment he spoke. All such facts reveal why through the ear the profoundest depths of being are revealed; for some persons, indeed, music, instead of being only sounds proceeding from instruments, is the instruments. is the speech itself of the inmost soul. Beethoven composed some of his finest symphonies after he had become stone deaf.

"Nor has that great being who is behind the universe ever failed to remedy the deficiency of the ear more wondrously than those of the eye. I was once told that a gentleman wished to speak to me by long-distance telephone, and on my asking what his name was I was astonished as he said that his child had pneumonia. He and his own physician, who was with him, then spoke alternately; and, though they were hundreds of miles away, I could distinguish their different voices as readily as if we were actually together.

"It was by means of an electrified wire that the ear heard personal voice and tone transmitted a thousand times farther and faster than waves of sound can travel. But what is that marvel compared with wireless telephony? Here is a man bidding that mysterious ether which pervades the entire universe to become a human voice speaking to a human ear!"

LIFEBOATS FOR SUBMARINES.

A new lifeboat for submarines greatly minimizes the dangers of submarine navigation, says Popular Mechanics. A water-tight compartment is situated in the upper portion of the centre of the submarine.

In the upper part of the hull, or deck, of the submarine, just over the centre of this boat, is one or two or doors which open outward. Supported on a suitable frame within the compartment is a lifeboat. The boat is entirely enclosed and water-tight, a small trap-door in the top providing admittance.

If, for any reason, the submarine fails to rise, the crew enter the compartment through a lower hatchway and close it after them. The crew then enter the lifeboat, the last man unscrewing the bolts which lock the hatches leading from the compartment to the open water. He also opens the valves before closing and securely locking the trap-door of the lifeboat.

The flooding of the compartment floats the lifeboat and also overcomes the pressure of the water without. The lifeboat, being filled with air, naturally rises, pushing the hinged hatches upward far enough to permit it to pass freely.

INTERNAL HARMONY.

Assured of worthiness we do not Competitors; we rather give them
hail
And greeting in the lists where we may fail;
Must, if we bear an aim beyond the day
My betters are my masters; purely fed
By their sustainment I likewise shall scale
Some rocky steps between the mount and vale;
Mean while we mark I have and I will wed.

So that I draw the breath of finer air,
Station is naught, nor footways
laurel-strewn,
Nor rivals tightly belted for the race.
Good speed to them! My place is here or there;
My pride is that among them I have place;
And thus I keep this instrument in tune.

Union County Fixes Budget.

The Union county budget of estimated expenses for the coming year as fixed at Elizabeth yesterday, it was decided that $385,000, an increase of $42,000 over last year, would be the total sum needed, and of this amount $50,000 will be necessary to retire to forty-year road bonds: $1,000 for the establishment of a law library under a new act, and the court items was increased from $60,000 to $65,000. The sum of $33,000 was appropriated for roads last year, but this will be omitted this year on account of the plan to issue bonds. The lunacy account was raised $2,000.

DELIGHTFUL MUSICAL AT MRS. PIERRE MALL'S

A delightful musical by the young pupils of Miss Maud Van Boserck was given Monday afternoon at the home of Mrs. Pierre Mall, of East Front street, when a charming program of instrumental music was presented by fifteen of the pupils. There was a large attendance of parents and friends of the young musicians, and the playing was of a high order and showed careful training and conscientious practise.

The opening number was a piano duet by Loechon, played by the Misses Mildred and Margaret Miller with excellent effect. Following this, Master Dale Warren played "The Dance of the Marionettes," (Mrs. Crosby Adams), and this and Reinhold's Russian Dance, by Miss Catherine Glinna, won enthusiastic applause. Miss Margaret Patterson played Leibert's dainty Berceuse and Gavotte with good appreciation, and Misses Katherine Glinna's rendition of Pleyel's Tempo di Minuetto on the violin showed careful practise and appreciation.

Master Martin played Newin's "Love Song" and Miss Aline Lane rendered the dainty "Scarf Dance" from Meyer-Helmund. Master Harry Mall showed careful practice in his playing of "Pirus" and "The Cat," by Florence Maxine, was well rendered by Master Dale Warren, who later played "The Kangaroo," another piece by the same composer. "Sleep, Baby, Sleep," by Liebert, was played with charming expression by Miss Margaret Patterson, and Miss Margaret Miller's rendition of Schumann's Roundelay showed careful practice and was well received. Miss Eva Mall rendered Bach's Gavotte, and Miss Kathryn Yates showed excellent expression in her rendition of Marcarolle by Adolph Fischer. A Gypsy Song from a serenade by Reinhold was especially well played by Miss Helen Irons and Miss Gertrude Mall won applause by her rendition of Mendelssohn's Spring Song. Two dainty selections by Miss Mildred Miller were well received, and Miss Marjory played a dainty Madrigal in pleasing style. The program concluded with an able rendition of Mendelsohn's "Consolation," by Master Jack Stevens.

WORLD'S STRENGTH IS WITH THE WOMAN

"The strength of the world is with woman," said the Rev. Dr. Otis A. Glazebrook in St. John's Episcopal Church at Elizabeth Sunday afternoon in addressing the baccalaureate sermon to the graduating class of the Vail-Deane school. The sermon throughout voiced a glowing tribute to women and the part they have played and can play in the world's work.

The church was filled with the school faculty and friends and relatives of the graduates. Members of the junior class who acted as ushers and led the procession through the body of the church to their seats were the Misses Anna Kempshall, Marjorie Patterson, Helen Grow and Elizabeth Walls.

Dr. Glazebrook's text was Psalm 144, verse 12, "That our daughters may be as corner stones, polished after the similitude of the palace."

"Although I think that woman is the product of Christianity," he said, "I think that her character has done more for her than religion. The ideal of woman should be strength and duty; a strong woman is always safe. Woman is the corner stone of the home and the salvation of society. The glory of the home lies in the gentle wife, the loving obedient daughter and the mother. The strength of the world is with woman, not with man."

CO. K ENJOYS "HIKE" TO WESTFIELD AND SUPPER.

The members of Co. K to the number of fifty-five enjoyed a "hike" to Westfield Monday night. The boys were in charge of Captain H. B. Kitchell and en route they went through the out-post, flank and platoon movements; also did some skirmishing, and when they arrived at Westfield were surprised to find a fine supper awaiting them at Mooney's restaurant. This was furnished by the Westfield members of the company.

These weekly jaunts have been arranged to put the boys in condition for their walk to Sea Girt when they go into camp from August 7-14. The whole Second Regiment will walk to camp this year instead of going by train as formerly.

New York Firm to Start Factory.

Levy & Julius, a New York firm, have rented lofts in the Gavett building, next week and will open a factory for the manufacture of fancy shirt waists. The plant will employ about seventy girls at the start.

SATURDAY'S RESULTS AT THE GOLF CLUBS

Unfavorable weather conditions prevented many golf enthusiasts from indulging in their favorite sport at the Plainfield County Club, Saturday. There were about twenty-five contestants for the Spring Handicap cups, Class A and B. In the former class the honors were divided between Arthur Murphy, who returned a score of 82, 8-74, and C. B. Morgan, who posted an 84, 8-76. The leading scores in Class B were as follows:

Henry L. DeForest, 93, 22-71; T. W. T. Maxwell, 100, 27-73; G. F. Earl, 98, 25-73; R. G. Morse, 94, 13-79; H. J. Cochran, 126, 20-116.

At the Park Golf Club a larger field was out to engage in competition for the various cups. In the second round for the club championship, match play, only two matches were completed, Dr. H. K. Carroll defeating Charles B. Morse, 6 up and 4 to play, and S. St. John McCutchen defeating Alexander Gilbert, 3 up and 2 to play.

Walter C. McNaughton won from J. B. Betts by default, W. B. Faber won from Geo. Kissam by default, R. V. Carpenter won from C. W. McCutchen by default, Rev. C. L. Goodrich won from G. T. Rogers by default, Samuel Townsend won from J. H. Howell by default and W. V. Byard won from G. S. Fisher by defaults.

The point-winners for the President's and golf club cups were as follows:

"MARTY" O'LOUGHLIN MAKES FIRST HOLE IN TWO STROKES

A remarkable achievement in golf was the work of "Marty" O'Loughlin, the professional at the Plainfield Country Club on Thursday of last week, when he made the first hole, a distance of 385 yards in two. This has never been accomplished before and will likely stand as the record for this season, at least. "Marty" is playing a match with George Schoonmaker at the same, and both were putting up an unusually fine game.

O'Loughlin is now about at the top of his game and during his career has never played better. He is playing a match in the championship tournament at Englewood the latter part of the month, where he hopes to finish among the leaders. He is practicing every day on the local course keeping in condition for the tournament.

Germans Led Plainfields.

The Gesang and Turn Verien baseball team of North Plainfield defeated the Plainfield Baseball Club on the Clinton avenue grounds in a four inning game Sunday afternoon by a score of 6 to 2. The battery for the winners was Lutman and Hansen, for the P. B. C. Brown and Townley.

TELLS FLAG'S HISTORY

John M. Whiton Addresses High School Pupils on Country's Emblem.

BETSY ROSS' HANDIWORK.

The American Banner Represents Freedom and Nobler Civilization, Speaker Says.

John M. Whiton, superintendent of the Congregational Sunday-school, delivered an excellent address on "The History of the Flag" in connection with the opening exercises at the Plainfield High School Monday morning. Tracing the history of a National flag from the days of the Roman standards, surmounted by the eagle of Rome, the speaker said that the first cloth flag was the banner carried by William the Conqueror in his invasion of England in 1066. This flag was the red cross, the symbol of St. George, on a white field, and had been blessed by the Pope at the start of the invasion. Mr. Whiton told of the various changes in the English flag made by James I and Queen Anne.

In speaking of the United States, Mr. Whiton said that at first the American colonists did not have a regular flag, but used various emblems, as in the ante-Revolutionary days when the tree and the serpent were used as symbols. A blue flag with a silver crescent was used by General Moultrie's forces in the Revolution. Washington adapted the first striped flag when he took command of the American forces at Cambridge. This had thirteen red and white stripes, and the emblem of St. George in the corner. Admiral John Paul Jones carried the first American flag to be used at sea on his ship in 1812. This was the "pine tree flag."

The present flag, the stars and stripes, was adapted by a committee of prominent men, including George Washington, Roger Sherman and George Ross, in 1777, and was made by Betsy Ross. It had thirteen red and white stripes and thirteen stars on a blue field. The red stood for war, and white for peace and the blue for truth; the stars in a circle were emblematic of the States. "This," said Mr. Whiton, "meant that the endless union of the thirteen States was founded on truth, devoted to peace, but ready to defend itself in war." The flag first flew at Fort Stenwix in 1778, and was victorious.

In concluding his talk Mr. Whiton said: "Our flag represents freedom for the oppressed and a nobler civilization, and there is none other figure on the history or with its mission. It stands for liberty and life and the coming dawn, and you can see written upon it our past and future history and the hopes of our great Republic."

WARREN DIXON MENACED BY HIS WIFE'S THREATS.

Mrs. Eleanor Bentley Dixon, wife of Warren Dixon, corporation counsel of Jersey City, who is being sued for divorce by her husband on statutory grounds, gave out a statement Saturday at Elizabeth in which she makes sinister threats of scandal still to be disclosed. Mrs. Dixon has been living at 350 Clinton street with her parents. Her statement today is the first she has made since the institution of the suit. Mrs. Dixon, who was married some time ago by Mr. Dixon, who had been told that Thomas A. Alton, mentioned as co-respondent in his suit, was there.

Mrs. Dixon asserts that Alton intends to bring a suit against Dixon for $50,000 damages and that she expects to be a witness in Alton's behalf. She also declared a suit would be started by her based on her husband's forcible entry into the children's street house.

"The scandal in this case," she said Saturday, "has not begun to come out yet. I have only begun my fight. As long as I live I will continue to battle against Mr. Dixon. I promise you that there is plenty of scandal yet to come out.

"Mr. Alton, who has been so sorely assailed by Mr. Dixon, and who is absolutely blameless, will next week begin suit for $50,000 for the damage he has sustained, and I will be a witness in the action. Furthermore, I myself will bring suit against Mr. Dixon for unlawful entry of my home."

Mrs. Dixon specifically charged her husband against whom she has a counter suit for divorce, with acts of infidelity.

She told of stories that her sister, Mrs. Eugene Rountree, who now resides in the West, told her. Mrs. Rountree will be a principal witness for Mrs. Dixon. Mrs. Dixon declared that she would name half a dozen co-respondents in her action, some of them well known in New York and other cities.

She declared that her relations with Alton have been entirely proper and denied the charges growing out of the raid on her home here. She gave a vivid description of the raid. She declared that she had called Alton over, so as not to be alone in the house.

Mrs. Dixon would not say where she was going for the summer, but said she will quit the city this afternoon and not return.

DEATH OF TALENTED AND BEAUTIFUL WOMAN

Miss Katherine Rutgers Lincoln, daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Luke Lincoln, of New York, died at 9:20 Sunday night, at the home of her niece, Mrs. A. Clinton Willmerding, on Belvidere avenue, at an advanced age. She had been an invalid for a number of years and her death was not wholly unexpected.

Miss Lincoln was born in Elizabeth, where she spent her girlhood days. Later the family moved to New York and then to Plainfield. During her residence in New York, when a young woman, she was considered the belle of that city and pronounced by many to be the prettiest woman there. She possessed unusually talent as a soprano singer, and was a leader in many private entertainments. For a great many years she sang at Grace Episcopal church, this city, and won many honors as a soloist. She also sang at a number of private musicales. She never appeared as a public singer.

Miss Lincoln was a niece of Henry Bedloe, one of the owners of Bedloe's Island, New York, who is still living, and her mother was a Rutgers for whom Rutgers street, New York, was named. She was of Dutch descent and had a long line of distinguished ancestry. She was a communicant of St. Stephen's church.

She is survived by four nieces and a nephew, Mrs. F. L. Small and Mrs. H. C. Frothingham, of New York; Mrs. J. D. Flack, of East Orange; Mrs. A. Clinton Willmerding and Archibald G. R. Bache, of this city.

P. H. S. LEAD WHEN PINGRY LEFT THE FIELD

Because of a dispute about a decision of G. Stanley Robins, umpire in the Pingry-P. H. S. game at Elizabeth Monday afternoon, the Pingry team left the field in the fourth inning with the score 5 to 2 in favor of the Plainfielders. As four and a half innings had been played at the time the dispute arose, the local schoolboys claim the game.

Robins, who was base umpire, called Snyder safe at the plate when the local captain tried to score on a short hit to left. The Pingry pitcher got the throw in, and swung at the base-runner, striking him with the back of his glove. The local umpire's decision was based on the fact that Snyder did not touch or touch Snyder with the ball. Although the local nine decided to give the out, the Elizabethans refused to continue the game.

The Plainfielders had everything their own way at Elizabeth and had established a safe lead by hard hitting. Van Zandt was in the box, and had good control after the first, when the home team scored four runs. P. H. S. scored two in the second, three in the third and one in the fourth. The splendid local home would have been the sixth run for P. H. S. Lyness and Giddes won the hitting honors, pushing out three-baggers in succession.

MAY'S MANNERS.

Mistress May is cold and chilly,
Mistress May is churlish, too.
Time was when she smiled upon me,
Time was when she let me woo.
Now she freezes me completely,
And her smile is never sunny,
Mistress May, I wonder can it
Be your father's made some money?

Mistress May, I well remember,
Laughing gayly used to come,
Strewing flowers along the roadsides,
And her moods were never glum;
Now she's haughty, cold and distant,
This the thought that comes to me,
Can it be that May has butted
Into high society?

Where are all her ways so winsome?
Why this sneer and why this frown?
Aren't we good enough, I wonder?
Is that why she turns us down?
Mistress May, come, tell us truly
Is your cold and icy stare
Proof to us you're "somebody?"
Have you wed a millionaire?

HARRIGAN.

That's Me for the City's Coal Contract.

Joseph Harrigan's bid to furnish the city with 180 tons of coal for the various departments at $5.40 a ton, was accepted at the June meeting of the Common Council, Monday night, through a resolution offered by Councilman Duncan W. Taylor, chairman of the fire committee. There were four bids in all and Mr. Harrigan's was the lowest.

VanZandt & Voorhees bid $5.50, the Consumers' Coal Company $5.58, while George O. Stevens agreed to furnish the coal at $5.83 per ton. According to the terms of the bids, the coal is to be well screened and delivered as wanted.

JUNE 19 TO BE TAG DAY

Yes, Everybody May Wear a King's Daughters' Badge That Day.

HELPING A WORTHY CAUSE.

Mrs. Edward F. Feickert Chairman of Committee to Manage the Tagging Campaign.

At a meeting Monday of the Tag Day committee of the City Union of The King's Daughters, it was decided to make June 19 a "tag" day for the benefit of its various charities. The committee is composed of the following women:

Mrs. E. F. Feicket, chairman; Mrs. F. W. Butler, Mrs. D. M. Van-Vliet, Mrs. C. Frank French, Miss Dorothy Fleming, Miss Helen Timpson, Mrs. A. M. Mott, Mrs. L. N. Laggren, Mrs. J. A. Peterkin, Mrs. J. C. Peck and Mrs. Frederick Ball.

Everybody in Plainfield is familiar with the work of the King's Daughters in the city alone, who made over 1,700 visits last year to people who had no way of paying for the services of a nurse; The Day Nursery, which cares for an average of over 200 children a month, children who but for this charity would be left on the streets, or shut in their homes, while their mothers are away working during the day; also the camp on the mountain for sick babies, where over 300 small children were cared for during the summer months of last year.

The scope of all these charities could be much increased if the organization was not so handicaped by lack of funds. The Kink's Daughters have therefore decided to adopt the "tag" day method of raising funds, not asking for a great deal from anyone, but a little from every one. It is hoped that everybody in town will wear a King's Daughters' badge before the end of the day on June 19. The tags will be offered for sale by a number of workers for whatever people choose to pay for them. People are requested not to be offended from buying one because they cannot afford to pay much for it, but on the other hand, be as generous as possible in determining how much a tag is worth to them. No one is expected to purchase more than one tag, and if already "tagged" no more tags will be offered to such person.

The following women will act as chaperones at the various clubs on June 19, and will be assisted by committees of young women who will actively engage in the "tagging": The Watchung Hunt Club, Mrs. F. W. Butler; The Plainfield Country Club, Mrs. Frederick W. Yates; the Park Club, Mrs. Frederick Ball; the dog show, Mrs. Henry L. Hall.

Hubbard and Charles P. Titsworth sang "Asleep in Jesus," and "Abide With Me."

Miss Jennie Grady Entertains.

A party was given at the home of Miss Jennie Grady, of this city, Friday night, the evening being spent playing games, while piano selections were rendered by Miss May Beams, of New Haven, Conn.; also the Misses Minnie Hook, Henrietta Giles and Charles Bremmer. Those present were the Misses Minnie Hook, Carry Coon, Jennie Grady, Henrietta Giles, Amanda Terry, Mabel Dunham, Ella Connolly and Clarence and George Hook, Charles Bremmer, John Journey, George Perry, Jerry Griffin, George Wilson, Frank Huff, Frank Mobart, Harry Wilson, John Connolly, George Howe, of Plainfield; Miss Rose Wilson, Miss Helen Bernard, of Dunellen; John McGarrigal, of Lincoln; Miss May Beams, of New Haven, and Mr. and Mrs. Crahin and Mrs. Hook, of this city. Refreshments were served.

Dislikes Retired Life.

When a man devotes fifty-four years of his life to one calling it is not surprising that he does not quickly shake off the habits of a lifetime. Joseph A. Haynes, the veteran station agent of the Jersey Central at Plainfield, although retired recently, is frequently seen about the railroad station, uneasy at the restrains of the inactivity so kindly thrust upon him by the railroad company.—New York Tribune.

VOCAL SOLOISTS FOR CHARTER DAY CONCERTS

"Could You Grow Fond of a Nice Young Blond If You Loved a Sweet Brunette?" That's the title of "Ted" Snyder's latest song, and he's going to sing it at the opening meeting of the Charter Day celebration, to be held in the city park Monday afternoon, July 5. Former Mayor L. V. F. Randolph and "Former-Orator" James E. Martine will speak.

Bandmaster "Ben" Le Vere, of the music committee in charge of the celebration, has arranged for some of the leading popular singers from New York musical houses to come to this city during the celebration and sing at the various meetings and the band concerts. In addition to that "beautiful little two-verse ballad" the title of which forms the first sentence of this story, Snyder will sing "Beautiful Eyes," "Let's Go Back to Babyland," and "Dublin's Irish Skies." The singers already secured include Ernest Ball, David Reed, John J. Nestor, "Eddie" Weston, "Bert" Fitzgibbon, "Jack" Elliott, "Billy" Murray, "Billy" Redmond, and Willman Foster, amade comedienne whose singing will be remembered as features of band concerts in past years.

HUSBAND FARED BADLY TRAPPING WIFE'S SUITOR

Rob't Davis, proprietor of a merry-go-round at Somerset and Middough streets, Somerville, was placed in the Somerset County Jail Monday charged with committing an atrocious assault Sunday night on Mrs. Phillips, of the borough street cleaning department. Phillips declared that he had become suspicious of Davis's attention to his wife. Sunday night he hid under the portico of his home at Somerset and New streets awaiting developments. Phillips said that he was in concealment but a short time, when Davis came around, and in the shadow of the porch proceeded to pay fervant attentions to Mrs. Phillips. Davis, acording to the story told by Phillips, called Mrs. Phillips so many endearing names that it made Phillips furious. He crawled out from his place of concealment and confronted the pair. Phillips says that Davis then attacked him with a club and fled. Phillips displayed a badly battered eye and other injuries about the head in court as an evidence of his encounter.

Davis, when arraigned, told a different story. The prisoner is a good-looking, well-built man, while Phillips is under-sized.

Davis, who claims a residence in Texas, stated that he was not aware that Mrs. Phillips was a married woman. She was at the ticket attendant at his merry-go-round and in that way he had formed her acquaintance. He said he called on her at her residence Sunday night and was seated on the portico with her, when he was attacked by Phillips, who was a stranger to him, with a club. He took the club away from Phillips and used it with telling effect on his assailant. Mrs. Phillips also appeared in court and corroborated the story told by Davis. She said that Davis was a perfect gentleman and that her husband was a brute.

PROGRESS OF THE DAY ALL OVER THE WORLD.

Although it is sixty miles from the sea, Hamburg is the greatest seaport of continental Europe.

The Chinese soya bean has been found to contain from 15 to 16 per cent. of oil suitable for soap making.

In 1899 there were organized in Australia thirty-four joint stock companies, with $15,590,000, about half the 1907 record in number and amount.

Belgian works are getting large orders for steel rails from Brazil, Sweden, the Congo and other countries, also for bolts and metal ties.

The coal fields of Columbia are well placed to take advantage of the markets which will be made available by the Panama Canal. At present they are imperfectly and crudely worked, and the means of transport are inadequate. Both these drawbacks can be remedied. There are twelve short railways, none of them over seventy miles long, all planned without regard to coal export, although several of them traverse coal fields. The navigable rivers are suitable only for vessels of light draught. The lower Magdalena is navigable for about 600 miles, and the upper river at times for about 10 miles. The coal fields are quite numerous. See Consular Report No. 3,461.

Elizabeth's "Lid" Was Down.

Although there were indications Sunday that "the lid" was not down very tight in Elizabeth, the city was very orderly and no arrests were made for excise violations, nor were any drunken men to be seen on the street. The police authorities were satisfied with the way the law was being observed and so was Mayor Mraving.

ENDS LIFE ON BIRTHDAY

While Suffering from Temporary Insanity, Frank H. Coward Kills Himself.

HELD IN HIGH ESTEEM.

Depressed by Business Reverses, Wealthy Man Commits Rash Deed—Wife and Child Survive.

Slashing throat, wrists and legs in a fit of despondency at his home, 77 Sanford avenue, Saturday afternoon at about 5 o'clock, Frank H. Coward, a retired shoe man, fatally wounded himself and died shortly afterward. He ended his life on his fifty-third birthday and it is believed that he was temporarily insane at the time.

To make death absolutely certain, Coward had swallowed iodine before slashing himself with a razor. He inflicted teh fatal wounds while sitting in the bath-tub, gashing his throat from ear to ear and cut both wrists and the calves of both legs. Death was due to loss of blood.

Mr. Coward, who is survived by his second wife and a daughter, Angelina, two years old, spent the early part of the afternoon on the piazza with his family. At about 4 o'clock went into the house, saying that he did not feel well. An hour later he had swallowed a quantity of iodine and going to investigate found her husband in the bath-tub bleeding profusely.

Rushing to the telephone, Mrs. Coward summoned Dr. Edward Rushmore, and afterwards notified police headquarters. Chief Kiely and Drs. Corbusier and Lufburrow arrived with the patrol wagon, before Dr. Rushmore came, and stop*ped the bleeding by stitching up the* wounds. Mr. Coward made repeated efforts to tear off the bandages, but was removed quickly to the hospital, but died before the institution was reached.

Mr. Coward, who owns considerable valuable property in both city and borough, and was held in high esteem here, was a shoe salesman for Powell Brothers & Company, of Dunellen street, New York city, up to about a year ago, when he retired from business. He had planed to start in business as a shoe manufacturer, but a notification from the Coward Shoe Company, it is said, that legal trouble would follow any move to use his name in the shoe manufacturing business had caused him to abandon the project. The matter caused him considerable worry and is said by some of his friends to have been the cause of the nervous breakdown which led to his suicide. Mr. Coward had been a resident at a sanatarium on two different occasions, when he was threatened with a nervous collapse, and left the sanatarium at Wernersville, Pa., a month ago. The funeral will be private.

HEART ATTACK WHEN RUNNING FOR A TRAIN

Attacked with heart trouble while running for a train Saturday afternoon, George Good, a New York architect, staggered into Armstrong's saloon at about 4 o'clock and fell to the floor. The druggist relieved the attack and Dr. T. S. Davis was summoned. The injured man was removed to the hospital, where he is considerably improved today.

Mr. Good, who had been in this city on business, gave his address as 161 West Thirty-sixth street, but inquiry there revealed the fact that he is not known at that address. He is thirty-seven years old. He stopped in this city on his return from Somerville, where he had been on business earlier in the day. Concluding his call here, he had but little time to make his train, and ran up Park avenue toward the station. Pedestrians, seeing him stagger with the attack of anginia pectoris, supported him and led him into the drug store.

HUGHES TO SEE BRIDGE SITES.

Gov. Fort Also Will Inspect Proposed Points on North River.

Gov. Hughes, of New York, and Gov. Fort, of New Jersey, will take the first definite steps looking to the erection of bridges across the North River from Manhattan to New York next Friday, when they will make an official inspection of the sites recommended by engineers. In the yacht Privateer, owned by R. A. C. Smith, of New York, the two Executives will make a close study of the suitability of sites at Forty-eighth street, 125th street, and at Fort Lee.

The inspection party will include the members of the Hudson River Bridge Commissioners of New York and New Jersey, together with the respective consulting and advisory engineers, and the personal staffs of the Governors. Several members of the Senates of New York and New Jersey also have been invited.

TALKS ON GOVERNMENT

Former Mayor Randolph and Mayor Fisk Address the Board of Trade.

THEY DISCUSS CITY'S POLICIES.

Mr. Randolph Sounds a Warning—Mr. Fisk Throws Light On Administration's Work.

Referring to several of the points taken up by Former Mayor L. V. F. Randolph in his speech on "Civic Enterprise and Economy" before the meeting of the Board of Trade last Thursday, Mayor C. J. Fisk, who arrived at the meeting shortly after Mr. Randolph had concluded his remarks and departed, took exception to several of the statements made by the city's former chief executive, and clearly and simply outlined the work, growth and needs of the several municipal departments. Mr. Fisk, who at the outset of his remarks expressed a regret that he had not been present to hear Mr. Randolph's speech, talked for fifty minutes, informally outlining the financial position of the city, and pointing out its steady growth and increasing needs since the period of thirty years ago.

In speaking of the financial condition of the city, a point alluded to by Mr. Randolph, Mayor Fisk went into considerable detail to show that the bond issues of this city are not regrettable, nor do they threaten the financial standing of the city. "The city's bonds," said Mayor Fisk, "amount to $511,600, which may be itemized as follows: Schools, $230,000; sewers, $183,000; police, $25,000; Netherwood fire house, $15,000; roads and road improvements, $31,000, and assessment bonds, $27,000. Of these assessment bonds, $10,000 has been paid off. This entire bond amounts to but 2½ per cent. of the city's real estate valuation, and from my financial experience with municipal bonds, I am able to say that financiers do not consider a city's financial condition at all jeopardized until bonds are issued for 7 per cent. of the real estate valuation, exclusive of water debt. You see, then, Plainfield is well on the safe side."

In alluding to the steady growth of Plainfield, Mayor Fisk took occasion to review the development of the city from the year 1735, when the first frame dwelling was erected Ox earts, he said, were the only vehicles used in Plainfield up to th last quarter of the eighteenth cent ury. In 1770, according to the records, there were but eight dwelling houses and the population ... between thirty-five and forty.

"The growth of the city has been a steady, conservative one, said Mr. Fisk. "Plainfield as never had a boom and we don't want one. We want to have one—what the—of a ... has a sanitary ... effort and safety of its ... we want improvements ... has been a cry- ... the new schools which ... course of construction. ... the fine protection in the ... wood section, where some of the most valuable property holdings ... the city are to be found. Then there is the constant necessity of refurnishing the supplies of the city departments; more horses, new apparatus, more men and new locations for the fire department have all been found absolutely necessary, and have been provided. All these things cost money. The building up of the Board of Health to its present state of efficiency has been a definite step in municipal advancement, as has been the improvement of the police system and the construction of adequate police headquarters to house the men who are protecting the citizens from those who are a detriment to a city. The city needed new roads, new sidewalks, a system of drainage to carry off the water from the streets and prevent the flooding of cellars. All these things have been done since I first went into the Council in 1892."

The Mayor then spoke of the need for a larger police force, brought about by the petition of the patrolmen for shorter hours. "The men now work on the average twelve hours a day," said Mr. Fisk, "and it is to remedy this condition that it is planned to increase the force."

"Chief of Police Kiely," continued the speaker, "has come in for a lot of unjust criticism in connection with the police department, and I want to say that if there are things to be criticised, he is not to blame. As Mayor of this city, I am at the head of the municipal departments and any complaints or criticisms about the management of any of these departments should come to me."

Former Mayor Randolph's address is reproduced in full in another column. He was introduced by President H. W. Marshall of the Board, and his remarks were listened to with great interest. Professor Tucker, of Mount St. Mary's College, gave an interesting talk on the scope of the work at the institution. In her introductory remarks, the speaker declared that the prevalent idea that the college is strictly a Catholic institution is an incorrect one, and she said that there is no compulsion about the religious training of any of the students, although instruction in the Catholic faith is given those who may elect it. Professor Tucker told of the growth of the college and extended a cordial invitation to the members of the Board of Trade to attend the Bon Great plays to be presented on the campus in the near future, distributing admission tickets.

The meeting last night was largely attended, members of the various men's clubs of the local churches being included in the gathering.

FIVE FAIR GRADUATES

Dr. Talcott Williams Makes Address at Hartridge Commencement.

HOLD RECEPTION AND DANCE.

Many From Out-of-Town Among the Large Audience at the Exercises.

Five young women were graduated at the commencement exercises of the Hartridge School, held at 5 o'clock Friday afternoon at the school auditorium. They are Miss Helen Besler, Miss Carita Doggett, Miss Helen McGee Joy, Miss Alice Ross and Miss Dorothy Stiles. All but one of the graduates will go to college next year, Miss Besler, Miss Joy and Miss Ross going to Wellsley and Miss Doggett to Vassar.

The exercises were attended by a large number of friends of the school and the graduates. The address was made by Dr. Talcott Williams, of Philadelphia. His subject was "Letters and Being," and he emphasized the importance of reading as an indispensable part of everyone's education. Dr. Williams held the close attention of his audience and delivered his usual inspiring eloquence. In introducing the speaker, Miss Hartridge referred to his remarkable fund of information on every known topic, and he was given a hearty reception by the audience.

The opening prayer was made by Rev. E. Vicars Steven on, rector of Grace church. After the address Miss Hartridge presented the diplomas to the graduates. The hall was decorated with massive screens of daisies and blossoms and ropes of white snowballs. In the evening at 8:30, Miss Hartridge and the seniors gave a dance to their friends, there being about two hundred guests. TO INCORPORATE BUS CO. WITH $50,000 CAPITAL

Fifteen men who are interested in the formation of The Plainfield Auto Bus Company met at the store of F. A. Duttenhofer on East Front street, last night, and took important steps toward completing an organization. Judge William Newcorn, who has been engaged as attorney for the company, presided. He will draft immediately the papers of incorporation, which will be filed soon. The capital stock of the company is $50,000, the par value of each share being $1. It is expected that the auto buses will be put in operation between this city and Metuchen within four weeks.

There will be a meeting of stockholders on Friday night, June 11, at Mr. Duttenhofer's store to complete the organization and elect officers, and decide upon to make and style of auto bus to be used for the service. It is proposed to operate the cars between this city and Metuchen by the way of South Plainfield.

MISS SMITH, P. H. S. TEACHER, DECLINES A REAPPOINTMENT

Miss Gertrude Hunter, a graduate of the Plainfield High School and a student at Barnard, is taking Miss Laura H. Smith's classes at the high school. Miss Smith, who teaches Latin an Endglish at the school, has resigned on account of ill health, and has gone to her home in Massachusetts.

Although recommended for reappointment for next year, Miss Smith, who joined the teaching staff at the local school at the beginning of the school year last fall, has positively declined a reappointment.

As to Buttonholes.

When putting buttonholes in the box plaits of a shirtwaist, always work them crosswise. Then they will not pull out of shape when any strain is put upon them. If the shirtwaist studs are used, see that the buttonholes on the two flaps are reversed. It is well to put the crosswise ones on the right hand side, and the vertical ones on the left, so that when the garment is buttoned the buttonholes will not be directly opposite each other. Then the studs will not be likely to pull out.

MISS M'CUTCHEON WEDS

Daughter of Robert H. McCutcheon Marries Lewis A. Williams, Jr.

SOCIETY ATTENDS CEREMONY.

The Bishop of Michigan and Rector Officiate—At Grace Episcopal Church.

Miss Marion Hills McCutcheon, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Homer McCutcheon, of Plainfield avenue, and Lewis Alfred Williams, Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Lewis Alfred Williams, of E. Seventh street, were married at Grace Episcopal church at 4:30 Saturday afternoon in the presence of a large and fashionable assemblage of relatives and friends from this city and distant points. Bishop Charles D. Williams, of Michigan, uncle of the groom, assisted by the Rev. E. Vicars Stevenson, rector of the church, officiated.

The bride had for her attendants, Miss Verna H. McCutcheon, her sister, as maid-of-honor; Miss Augustus Granger Porter, of Niagara Falls, as matron-of-honor, and the Misses Katherine McCutcheon, Dorothy McCutcheon, sisters of the bride; Natala Bishop, of Bridgeport, Conn., and Gladys Clark, of New York, as bridesmaids. Miss Hayward Mason Butler, of this city, was the flower girl.

The best man was Morton Atwater, of Poughkeepsie, N. Y., and the ushers were Victor H. McCutcheon, Gurth Williams, Henry E. Butler, Harold Fisk, Owen H. Fleming and Gilbert B. Brower, of Plainfield; Walter Stevens, of Scranton, Pa., and A. Wilder Browne, of New York.

The bride's costume was of ivory satin crepe, embroidered and trimmed with Cavac-ma-Cross lace, with a veil of Brussels lace held with orange blossoms. The maid-of-honor's gown was of pale pink cloth, painted in white lilacs and wore a white lace straw hat, trimmed with white and pink lilacs and pale violet bow. The costume of the matron of honor was of pale green chiffon cloth, painted in white lilacs, and wore a white lace straw hat trimmed with white lilacs and pale green velvet bow.

The gowns of Miss Natala Bishop and Miss Dorothy H. McCutcheon, bridesmaids, were of pale yellow chiffon cloth, painted in white lilacs, and wore white lace straw hats, trimmed with yellow and white lilacs and bows of pale yellow velvet. The other two bridesmaids, Miss Gladys Clark and Miss Katherine McCutcheon, wore gowns of pale lavendar chiffon cloth, painted in white lilacs and wore white lace straw hats, trimmed with white and lavendar lilacs and lavendar velvet bows.

The bridal party entered the church preceded by the ushers, the flower girl, matron-of-honor, maid-of-honor, the bridesmaids and the bride, accompanied by her father, who gave her in marriage. At the chancel they met the groom and best man. S. Frederick Smith presided at the organ, rendering the wedding marches and other selections of a classical character.

The church was elaborately decorated for the affair, there being a profusion of dogwood and white lilacs banked about the chancel. At the house, where a large reception followed, decorations consisted chiefly of pink and white roses. A novel feature in connection with the reception was the out-of-door arrangement, refreshments being served in a marquis on the spacious grounds. An orchestra furnished music during the reception. Later Mr. and Mrs. Williams left on an extended wedding journey and they will be at home after October 1, at "Oakwood Lodge," the home of the bride's parents.

Both Mr. and Mrs. Williams have been prominent in social affairs of the city and borough, especially among the younger set at the Park Club, and they are favorites in a large circle of friends. Mr. Williams is a graduate of Yale '03, and his best man, Morton Atwater, was a classmate. The bride was the recipient of a wealth of wedding gifts of great value. Mr. Williams is engaged in business in New York as a stock broker.

Declared Member Out of Order.

Just before the Common Council meeting adjourned last night, Councilman Bexton announced that a carnival is being held in the Fourth Ward, and all the members were invited to attend and take plenty of money. President Tolles declared the member out of order, adding that the carnival has nothing to do with the City Council.

Mending Lace.

A clever way of mending a piece of lace is to sew a piece of paper under the rent. Then insert the lace in the sewing machine and stitch back and forth till the paper is quite covered. Take out of the machine, remove the paper and the hole will have disappeared.

NEED LIBRARY BUILDING

Present Structure too Small and Antiquated for the Growing Demands.

ANNUAL CIRCULATION 62,670.

Year's Visitors Number 70,246—The Library Contains 38,248 Volumes.

The Plainfield Library directors' annual report is about ready for transmission in regular course to the Common Council. A largely increased usefulness is growing out of better means and earnest effort, the directors will say. The reading room is more frequented, and the books owned by the institution, it is shown, are much more widely read. It must be evident to every friend of public education in Plainfield, says the directors, that the growing usefulness of the library will soon render absolutely necessary a new, properly constructed, fire-proof building. Already its shelves are crowded and overburdened, but its books must and should increase. This requirement cannot be met by taxation, but must be met by our generous and public-spirited citizens.

A year ago, the library had a larger circulation than ever before. It was then 53,005 for the year ending May 31, 1908. For the year closing, May 31, 1909, the circulation is 62,670. During the past year 70,426 visitors are recorded, of which 2,219 were Sunday visitors. The character of the circulation is also increasing in excellence. While fiction books lead the record, the circulation of books of biography, philosophy, religion, sociology, philology, natural science, useful arts, fine arts, literature, description, travel and history aggregates for the year 19,069 volumes.

The additions to the library during the year just closed comprised 3,237, exclusive of 246 volumes bought and 113 volumes bound in the Babcock collection, and exclusive also of seventy-five volumes added through the Mason W. Tyler fund. The splendid bequest under Col. Tyler's will is coming into active usefulness and used for the acquirement of a high class of books. The library has now, of good, serviceable books, 38,248 volumes.

Among the important donations of the past year to the library should be counted the valuable medical periodicals received from Dr. A. E. M. Purdy, of New York, and the gift of music by Lewis G. Geary, of Belvidere avenue, comprising compositions and arrangements of the classical symphonies, in all about 800 music titles.

The "financial budget" adopted a year ago by the library trustees has been conscientiously followed and is found to be admirably adapted to the needs of the institution. A similar budget, in relation to the general fund, has now been adopted by the board for the year to come, as follows:

Receipts.
Income from City	$7,500
Income from Petty Cash	500
Total	$8,000

Disbursements.
Salaries	$3,000
Subscriptions to periodicals and binding	800
Stationery and printing	300
Fuel	300
Lights	250
Repairs, insurance and library fittings	600
Books	2,500
Sundries	250
Total	$8,000

HITS SECRET SESSIONS

State Superintendent Barker Opposes Star Chamber Board Meetings.

EXPRESSES VIEWS CLEARLY.

Executive Sessions Should Be Exceptional Rather Than the Usual Thing.

The agitation in Morristown resulting from the practise of the local Board of Education in holding secret sessions has resulted in a further expression of views on the subject by State Superintendent Charles J. Baxter. He declares with positiveness that a Board of Education making all its meetings private is exercising its discretion unwisely.

When first asked concerning the propriety of secret sessions, Mr. Baxter, in a letter to Morris County Superintendent J. H. Hulshart, made the following reply: "The meetings of the Board of Education may in accordance with its discretion, be either public or private. Whenever a board shall deem it advisable to hold an executive session no one outside of its membership is warranted in claiming admission."

Mr. Baxter believes that any Board of Education while makes a practise of transacting its business in secret, fails in its conception of the relations between it and the public. At the same time he holds that there are certain matters principally relating to discipline and of a personal character, which may properly be discussed in executive and behind closed doors.

In defining his attitude upon the question of secret sessions, Mr. Baxter supplemented his original decision with the following statement:

"Only the executive session is a private meeting and the inference seems to me entirely clear that it is to be regarded as the exceptional rather than the usual meeting. The public is vitally interested in certain items of business and these should be transacted at public meetings. It would, however, be a grave error of judgment to discuss in open session some of the details of school administration, particularly those into which the personal element enters.

"I have known educational sentiment to be corrupted and communities to be disrupted by sucr errors of judgment. You have not, I am sure, have your Board of Education consider at a public meeting the respective merits of the several candidates for the city superintendency or one of the perplexities connected with school discipline. A few of the meetings of a Board of Education are necessarily private and it is quite as often necessary to emphasize this as the more patent fact that the majority of said meetings should be public."

It is the discretion of a Board of Education to make all of its meetings private, then such discretion is not wisely exercised and if public sentiment in any municipality shall demand that they all be public then public sentiment is equally at fault. Some of the meetings of a Board of Education should be public, others should be private, and the power to determine the character of each of said meetings is necessarily vested in the board.

WANT CAMP INDEPENDENT

Anti-Tuberculosis League Members are Against Hospital Supervision.

PRESIDENT STEVENSON'S VIEWS

Committee to Consider Site For Tuberculosis Camp Appointed at League Meeting.

Declaring that the proposed local tuberculosis camp, sites for which are now under consideration by the Plainfield Anti-Tuberculosis League, should not be under the control of the hospital directors, nor too closely identified with that institution, Rev. E. Vicar Stevenson, president of the League, spoke in favor of an independent camp to be controlled by the league at the meeting of the anti-tuberculosis organization held Wednesday at Grace church parish house. This idea, which is not a new one, was endorsed in remarks by Walter Nolting, Leighton Calkins, F. D. Lounsbury, R. Henry Depew and several physicians. The reason is primarily one of simplification of the work for it is believed that as much as the agitation for the camp has been made through the League, it will be easier to raise money for the construction of the camp and secure financial endorsement for its suport if it is an independent institution. Many local people are interested in the establishment of such a tuberculosis camp, and an officer of the League has stated that offers of funds for its construction and maintainance have been made, with the condition that it be an independent institution.

While the plans for this camp are as yet but incomplete, it is probable that it will include tuberculosis pavilions and it is the desire of the League officers to secure the cooperation of Muhlenberg Hospital by the use of the operating room for the surgical cases and perhaps the services of some of the pupil nurses. The interest of several local lodges and fraternal orders has been aroused by the League's agitation of the need of such a tuberculosis camp and one such organization has agreed to supply a pavilion if the camp is maintained independent of the hospital. Similar provisional subscriptions have been promised, both by organizations and individuals.

The question of a site for the camp was discussed informally at last night's meeting, and the consensus of opinion seemed to be in favor of a location somewhere near the hospital. A site on the Watchung mountains is also under consideration and President Stevenson appointed a committee to consider this question of location and report at the next meeting of the League, to be held within two weeks. The committee is headed by Duncan W. Taylor, and serving with him are State Senator Garret A. Hobart, Sherman, Dr. W. H. Murray, Dr. B. Van D. Hodges, William Dutcher and R. Henry Depew.

The membership committee reported twenty-two new members to the League. Dr. W. H. Murray, who has been a member of the League since the resignation of Health Officer Leon Thurlow, resigned the office, and his brother, James P. Murray was elected.

AROUSED FROM SLUMBER BY A HUNGRY ITALIAN

Entering the house of Marvin De Witt Rae, of Berkeley avenue, at about 1 Saturday morning, Desquale de Domanio, an Italian who says his home is at Germantown, Philadelphia, climbed the stairs to the bedroom where Donald C. Rae, Mr. Rae's father, was sleeping, and waking him, asked for food. Mr. Rae got the man some crackers and held him until the arrival of the police, summoned by telephone by Mrs. Rae.

At his hearing before City Judge Runyon today Domanio, through an interpreter, told the court that he was lost, wet and hungry, and went to the house to ask for food. He said that he was on his way to Germantown, but had lost his ticket and was put off the train at Fanwood. He wandered around, lost, for several hours, falling into bogs and getting soaked to the skin. He entered the house through the front door, which had been left unlocked. He seems simple-minded, and carried no weapons. According to Mr. Rae's story, he asked him for money to pay the fare to Germantown. He does not seem like a desperate man, but is held at police headquarters until tomorrow morning when Mrs. M. D. Rae will be in court to tell her story of the early morning visit.

The best man was John Cockley, of Garwood, a nephew of the bride, and the ushers were Clarence Waldron and John Sharp, of Flatbush.

The church was elaborately decorated for the affair with cut flowers, palms and smilax. The home where the reception was held was also decorated attractively. Mr. and Mrs. Hughes were the recipient of a large number of handsome gifts. They left at 11 o'clock last night on an extended trip through New York State and upon their return they will reside in Plainfield. Following the reception, the couple departed on a wedding trip. Upon their return they will reside in their newly-furnished home in the borough.

At the annualmeeting of the Sunday-school of the First M. E. church Thursday, these officers for the ensuing year were elected: Superintendent, Dr. James R. Joy; secretary, Arthur Humble; treasurer, Arthur Crone; librarian, Leslie Leland; president of the Sunday-school Missionary Society, M. H. McGrath; secretary and treasurer, Arthur Crone.

During the past year the total amount collected in the school was $615.98, and the disbursements $400.76, leaving a balance of $215.26. BEN GREET PLAYERS AT MOUNT ST. MARY'S

On the afternoon and evening of June 18, the people of Plainfield and vicinity are cordially invited to embrace the rare opportunity of seeing that world famous company, the Ben Greet Woodland Players, on the Campus of Mount Saint Mary's College. The charm and delight of the comedies, played under the spreading branches of the great trees have been widely heralded throughout America. One San Francisco critic says, "Nay, but pen and ink is but poor stuff to paint a Taming of the Shrew,' like yesterday's. Shakespeare himself must have joyed in it; one hoped he was there, behind the waving elms that flower the lawns where the Ben Greet players walked. Mozart, only, in the morning of his genius could have caught the freshness, the fine simplicity, the delicate, frolicsome humor of the thing. It was the very spring time of comedy—comedy in its clear-eyed joyous youth, played blythesomely by a company of gay lads and lassies."

They will present "The Taming of the Shrew" at 3 in the afternoon and "A Midsummer Night's Dream" at 8 in the evening. The afternoon performance played in the brilliant sunlight, with its green forest background, the evening performance under stars, the beautiful light effects, and both performances accompanied by the songs of the birds, will be occasions long remembered by the people of this city.

The company includes such distinguished artists as Miss Edith Wynne Matthison, Frank Gillmore, Arthur de Brensk, Jack O'Brien, Charles Stone, Stanley Drewitt, Mark T. Wilson, Edmund Mortimer, Walter Robinson, Leona Shepherd, Percy Waram, Frederick Macklyn, G. Breneghi Hale.

This is the first dramatic performance under the auspices of the College of Mount Saint Mary. Let us *hope that so many people will at*tend that the scholarship fund will be greatly increased.

DEVOE PROPHESIES A TORRID JULY 4.

Hackensack Weather Seer Says Next Day Will Be Thunderstormy, Too.

Weather Prophet A. T. Devoe, of Hackensack, stakes his reputation on the statement that this month of June will be noted for its torridity. He says that this section of the country will be visited by a succession of hot waves, while he predicts a season of floods in the Western States. Incidentally, Devoe says that July 4 will be very hot and that July 5, the day which will generally be observed as the Fourth, because of the holiday falling on Sunday, will be remarkable for heavy thunderstorms.

Devoe, after sending forth his prediction for June, was asked to give a reliable line on the weather for the Fourth.

In a very brief time the Hackensack prophet made the announcement of a hot day, with thunderstorms on the 5th.

So that those who are already laying plans for the Glorious Fourth may not place too much faith in Prophet Devoe's forecast, it may be well to say that he was way off the mark in his May prediction, being correct, or nearly correct, only eight times out of thirty-one.

ALLEN H. VANDERHOEF WEDS MISS EDNA LEWIS

Miss Edna Antoinette Lewis, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Israel Lewis, and Allen Holmes Vanderhoef, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. V. E. Vanderhoef, of Prospect place, were married Saturday at the home of the bride's parents on Somerset street. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Dr. J. A. Chambliss, pastor of the First Baptist church.

The home was prettily decorated with daisies, sweet syringa, Southern smilax and oak leaves. In a corner of the parlor, where the ceremony took place, a large wedding bell was suspended under which the young couple stood. The bride wore a gown of crepe de-chine over silk trimmed with old lace and satin appliqué. Her traveling gown was of silk pongee, with hat and gloves to match. The maid of honor, Miss Anna Lewis, wore a gown of pink messaline and carried a bouquet of pink roses. There were no bridesmaids or ushers. Henry Clerking, of New York, was best man. The music was furnished by Prof. William Holt, of New York.

A dinner followed the ceremony, after which Mr. and Mrs. Vanderhoef left for an extended wedding trip.

The young couple received many handsome presents, among them was a check for $100, a gift from the Colgate Co., the firm with which Mr. Vanderhoef is employed.

CITY TROUNCES BOROUGH

Plainfield High Defeats North Plainfield High on Crescent Oval.

THE SCORE IS SIX TO TWO.

Smith, in the Box, Gets Poor Support—Lyness Makes a Two Bagger.

Had the North Plainfield High School team supported their pitcher, Carlton Smith, in the game against the Plainfield High School, at Crescent Oval, Wednesday afternoon, the score of 6 to 2 would never have been registered against him. As it was, Smith's teammates put up a somewhat ragged exhibition of baseball behind him, making in all ten errors. Bailey, the short stop, made two in the first inning that let in two runs. Smith pitched a great game despite the fact of his poor support. He allowed but two scattered hits, one a two bagger by Lyness, passed but two batters and struck out ten men. On the other side "Wiggy" VanZandt couldn't have received much better support, his team making but five errors, which were in no way costly. It must be said the blond haired twirler of the P. H. S. was also in fine condition, by allowing the boroughites but one clean hit, he passed but one man and made seven batters shatter the atmosphere.

Snyder put up a good game for the city boys. The fast second baseman handled some wild heaves, that had they passed would have made the score much closer. Giddes at short and Clark at third did some good stick work. Conroy was the only player for the N. P. H. S. to connect safely with "Wiggy's" slants, but it did him no good.

The P. H. S. team went to bat first, with Giddes up. After lookfield, with Giddes up. After looking over Smith's variety of shoots, he swatted a stiff one that proved too hot for Bailey to handle. Clark seeing short was a weak place followed suit and in less than five min*utes Mr. Bailey had two errors* against him, which netted two runs. Lidgate and VanZandt struck out and Snyder made a pop fly that retired the side. Smith showed his real ability in the fourth, after two errors that both netted runs, he retired the side practically alone by fanning three batters in succession. The Plainfield High School made two more in the fifth on Lyness' two bagger, he advanced by two more errors to short and Lidgate's single. After that the borough team pulled together and shut off the run-getting.

It was easily seen the N. P. H.S. team outside of Smith and Conroy are not of the same class with the boys from this side of the brook. Lidgate, Snyder, Clark and Giddes make a strong combination to support Van Zandt. The score:

NAME CAMP IN HONOR OF ENSIGN BAGELEY

The local camp of Spanish-American war veterans met Thursday at headquarters in the City National Bank building, and State Inspector George Spittlehouse, of Elizabeth, mustered in thirty-three charter members. The newly-elected officers were confirmed, but the installation was postponed until the next meeting when the department commander will be present.

Several names were suggested as a suitable one for the camp and finally all voted in favor of the following: "Bageley Camp, No. 21, United Spanish War Veterans." The name is in honor of Ensign Bageley, the first man from the army to be killed in the Spanish-American War. The camp also includes in its membership those who served in the war in China.

The veterans are planning several "stunts," and it is possible that the members will take part in the Charter Day parade on July 5, provided the complete equipment can be secured in time. The camp will also be represented at the annual State encampment to be held at Bayonne in the near future.

ANNOUNCE ENGAGEMENTS OF THEIR 2 DAUGHTERS

Rev. Dr. and Mrs. Arthur H. Goodenough, of Bristol, Conn., announced the engagement of their two daughters at their home, this week, which is of more than ordinary interest here. Announcement of the engagement of their daughter, Miss Florence Sara, to Arthur Case Wadley, son of Mr. and Mrs. Albert Wadley, of Central avenue, this city, was followed by that of their other daughter, Miss Marjorie Alice Goodenough, to William Ken*neth Sessions, youngest son of Mr.* and Mrs. William E. Sessions, of Bristol. In honor of the double event, Mr. and Mrs. William E. Sessions gave a dinner party at their home this week for a number of friends.

While no date has been fixed for the wedding, it is planned to have a double event in the fall, possibly October. Arthur Case Wadley, who is engaged in the coal business here, has for his partner Arthur T. Goodenough, the son of Rev. Dr. and Mrs. Arthur H. Goodenough, of Bristol, who five years ago married Mr. Goodenough's sister at New Rochelle, N. Y.

Goodenough is pastor of the Prospect Avenue M. E. church, Bristol, and is one of the most prominent members of the New York East Conference. Mr. Sessions is engaged with his father in the foundry business at Bristol.

MRS. S. W. VAN HOESEN DIES IN HER 75TH YEAR

Mrs. Sophena Wilcox Van Hoesen, aged 74 years, died Thursday night at her home, 417 West Sixth street, following a long illness from a cancerous growth. Mrs. Van Hoesen was born at Syracuse, N. Y., and had been a resident of this city about twenty-five years. She lived with her mother, Mrs. F. Wilcox, who still survives, and who is ninety-nine years of age, and considering her advanced years is remarkably well preserved. The latter was born in 1810.

Mrs. Van Hoesen was the mother of twin daughters, one of whom was the first wife of Arthur L. Titsworth, and the other wife of his brother, the late George Titsworth. Beside a mother, Mrs. Van Hoesen is survived by one brother, who conducts a hotel in the Catskills. She was an attendant at the Seventh-Day Baptist church. The funeral was held from the late residence Sunday afternoon at 3 o'clock.

KING'S DAUGHTERS NET $150. AT A LAWN FETE

Under the auspices of the Benevolent Band, of The King's Daughters, a successful lawn festival and sale was held Thursday afternoon at the home of Mrs. Stephen A. Glana on Watchung avenue. The spacious lawn was attractive in its own decoration, while the numerous booths and tables added to the picturesque scene.

There were offered for sale, fancy and useful articles, aprons, cake, candy, ice cream and lemonade. The heads of the various committees were as follows: Fancy, Mrs. L. R. Hopton; useful articles, Mrs. L. V. F. Jones; apron, Mrs. H. J. Cochran; ice cream, Mrs. W. L. C. Glenney; candy, Mrs. E. E. Parvin; cake, Mrs. E. S. Craft; flower, Mrs. Geo. A. Benton and Mrs. H. C. Irons. Mrs. F. S. Martin as president of the band, had general supervision of the affair, and the other members assisted at the tables and booths. In the decorative scheme, the organization color, violet, was used.

There was a large attendance at the affair and the patronage was liberal. The band will net about $150 with which to meet its pledge to the city union.

FOUR HUNDRED ATTEND STRAWBERRY FESTIVAL

Marked by an attendance of more than 400, the third annual ice cream and strawberry festival of the Epworth League of the Monroe Avenue church, Thursday night, proved one of the most successful social events in the history of the church. Ice cream and berries were served at prettily decorated tables, presided over by members of the League as waitresses. Practically every member of the church society had a part in the arrangement of the affair.

The special feature of the affair was the novel decoration of the church parlors. In the centre of the room was a large representation of the Atlantic City lighthouse, about twelve feet in height, and covered with red and white bunting. The foot of it was massed with large ferns, giving the effect of waves, and surmounting the large Japanese umbrella which served as a roof, electric lights had been fixed to throw forth streams of light. Direct*ly above this "light-house" hung* the Maltese cross emblem of the Epworth League, executed in bunting, and suspended by streamers of bunting from the ceiling. Those who acted as waitresses were dressed in white and red costumes.

John McCormack acted as general chairman of the committee in charge of the festival, and was assisted by N. Mansfield Smith, Miss Anna Matthews, Miss Olive Bodine and Miss Phoebe Snow. John W. Daub and John P. Reed acted as ushers, and Herbert Hand rendered several piano selections. These were the other committees: Strawberry committee, Mrs. Harry Gardener, heading a committee of eleven; decorating, John McCormack, with eleven assistants; cake, Mrs. John W. Daub with a committee of four; candy, Miss Minnie Gunzleman and committee of four; ice cream, Miss Olive Bodine and committee of four; the short-cake committee, Mrs. N. Mansfield Smith and committee of six; tickets, Lloyd Van Middlesworth and committee of twelve; Orangeade committee, Mrs. E. H. Beekman and committee of three; equipment, C. K. David and committee of twelve.

FATHER BRENNAN BURIED

Sixty Guests Attend Requiem Mass for Mount Saint Mary's Chaplain.

IN ST. PATRICK'S CATHEDRAL.

Bishop McFaul and Four Monsignors Take Part in Solemn Service.

Nearly sixty clergymen from all parts of the State were in attendance at the mass of requiem celebrated for the repose of the soul of the Rev. Michael Brennan, chaplain of Mount St. Mary's College, North Plainfield, in St. Patrick's Cathedral, Newark Wednesday morning.

The body was brought to the cathedral at 9 o'clock Wednesday morning, followed by coaches containing relatives and friends. Half an hour later the chanting of the divine office for the dead was begun by a score of priests. The funeral arrangements were in charge of the Rev. Dr. James A. McFaul, bishop of the Trenton diocese, to which diocese Father Brennan belonged.

It was after 10 o'clock when the solemn high mass of requiem was begun. The Rev. William Miller, rector of St. Joseph's church, North Plainfield, with whom Father Brennan lived, sang the mass. Very Rev. John F. Mackin, of Madison, was deacon and the Rev. D. J. Duggan, of Bordentown, sub-deacon. The Rev. Dr. E. C. Griffin, of Trenton, secretary of Bishop McFaul, was master of ceremonies. The quartet of the cathedral choir sang the music of the mass.

The Rt. Rev. John J. O'Connor, bishop of the diocese of Newark, was seated in the sanctuary on his throne. Bishop McFaul was opposite him. Four monsignors from the Trenton diocese were in the sanctuary. They were Mgr. John F. Brady, Asbury Amboy; Mgr. John A. O'Grady, New Brunswick; Mgr. P. F. Connolly, Phillipsburg, and Mgr. A. Pozzi, Trenton.

Among those at the mass who studied with Father Brennan at Seton Hall College or in the Seminary of the Immaculate Conception there were Monsignor Brady, the Rev. Maurice P. O'Connor, of Holy Cross church, Harrison; the Rev. Isaac P. Whelan, rector of St. Patrick's Cathedral, Newark, and the Rev. John Callaghan, of East Orange.

In pews reserved for them in the body of the church were priests of the diocese of Trenton and the diocese of Newark. All wore white surplices.

The interment was made in St. John's cemetery, Orange, where the parents of Father Brennan were buried in the Brennan plot.

Father Brennan was curate of St. Patrick's Cathedral under the late Monsignor Doone thirty-three years ago and served as chaplain of St. Michael's Hospital.

Among the clergy from the Trenton diocese present besides the four monsignors named above and the Very Rev. Dean Bernard J. Mulligan were the Rev. William P. Cantwell, Long Branch; Father Lyons, Spring Lake; the Rev. P. J. Petri, Atlantic City; the Rev. William F. Mittrich, Bound Brook; the Rev. Jos. J. Zimmer, Raritan; the Rev. Martin A. Bogaard, Somerville; the Rev. Michael C. O'Donnell, Keyport; the Rev. Dennis J. Duggan, Bordentown; the Rev. William H. Miller, North Plainfield; the Rev. John B. McCloskey, Atlantic City.

There was not a *large representa*tion of priests of the Newark diocese, as many of the associates of Father Brennan years ago are dead. Among those in the cathedral were the Rev. Eugene P. Carroll, rector of St. Bridget's church, Newark; the Rev. M. J. Donnelly of St. James' church, Newark; the Rev. John P. Callaghan, rector of the Church of Our Lady Help of Christians, East Orange; the Rev. Maurice P. O'Connor, rector of the Church of the Holy Cross, Harrison; the Rev. Isaac P. Whelan, rector, and the Rev. William P. Brennan and the Rev. John E. Kiernan, assistants, of St. Patrick's Cathedral; the Rev. Francis A. Foy, of Nutley.

JOHN M. WHITON SHOWS FINE VIEWS OF JAPAN

Sharing with the members of the Congregational Sunday-school some of the pleasures of a tour of Japan from which he has but recently returned, Superintendent John M. Whiton showed about seventy beautiful stereopticon slides of "Cherry*tanthemum Land" at the church last* Friday, and told some interesting facts about the geography and the habits and customs of the people.

Mr. and Mrs. Whiton toured Japan at the height of the chrysanthemum season last fall, and their pictures appeared several times in the gardens and street scenes. The affair was primarily for the mem*bers of the Sunday-school,* for whom special seats were reserved, and there was a large attendance. Thos. Hyland operated the lantern.

ALL EMPIRE MODES

NOTHING ELSE CAN BE CONSIDERED IN STYLE.

The Latest Ideas in Bridal Costumes —Suggestion for Dainty and Inexpensive Bordering for Sleeve and Low-Cut Neck.

One point is everywhere demonstrated by the prettiest things, and that is that to be really captivating, as well as stylish, the bride of to-day will need to bend to a large extent to empire modes. For if the wedding gown is not in the shirt-waisted style, which it commonly is, three out of four evening frocks, and two out of three reception dresses will be sure to reflect it.

Everything really graceful, really suited to youth and the enchantment of the wearer's attractions, is empire. One must often forget the serious consideration of age to be in the swim, for these light-hearted and coquettish models pervade even the sacred niche of the middle-aged.

The most dainty of the empire wedding models show trimming on the bodice, and either a perfectly plain skirt or else one ornamented with a long square stole, swinging back and forth from the bodice. The superb embroideries of the waist deck these Greece-like draperies, which may start from the neck or start from the shoulder and bust.

The skirt of the empire gown being a skimpy affair, and covering at most only a slip as scant of thin silk, or a chemise made in the same way, there are often trains, made separately, and interlined for weight, which go with such a wedding frock. The low necks and short-sleeved bodices are filled in with long-sleeved gamps of tucked net lace or tulle, the popular veil being also in the last airy textile.

Never by any possibility does good taste allow the flesh of the neck and arms to show outright, but the gamps are to a great extent transparent, which adds to looks, especially when everything is overhung by the misty veil.

There are no absolute rules for wearing the veil. It may either be draped at the back of the head from a half-wreath of orange blossoms or tiny white roses, or be allowed to fall over the face in the usual way.

A smart walking, traveling or informal visiting dress could be made after our illustration. Plain cloth, striped suitings, or Scotch suitings are correct stuffs, with braid or velvet trimmings. Seven wards of material 27 inches wide may achieve this dapper and useful dress, but with wide materials, of course, less would be needed. Tan cloth in a soft almost yellow shade, or in gray or mauve, are all good selections.

With the tan dress have the broad hat a mushroom shape, if this popular style is becoming, and trim it with black velvet and violet flowers. The headgear of the smart bride is either one thing or the other—a bewildering shape very simply trimmed, or else a bed of posies. Some imported shapes in superbly tinted straw Panama have the brims faced with black.

Collar Bag.

A collar bag for a young girl is useful. Use pink linen for the top and bottom, and for the band which goes between cream-colored linen embroidered with running design of pink roses buds and leaves. The design may be tinted and outlined or worked solid, using three shades of green and two of pink. The cardboard base is covered on both sides with pink linen and should be about seven inches in diameter. The embroidered linen band is also lined and whipped to this. The top of the bag is turned in about two inches and the casing finished with a row of feather-stitching on both sides.

Bronze Stockings.

If you are wearing bronze slippers be sure to get the right shade of stocking. The shops now make a specialty of the bronze stocking. It is always wiser to get silk ones for evening slippers, especially when they can now be had at such reasonable prices.

IT isn't any one thing, but all things combined that makes for

WHEN HASTE MAKES WASTE.

Great Mistake to Skimp Time Needed for Proper Dressing.

Some women boast they can dress in ten minutes. They may be clothed in that time; they won't be dressed. In nothing more than in dressing does great haste make little speed.

The girl who respects her appearance never makes the attempt to do stunts in her dressing. The five-minute habit is shunned as are all half-way measures.

If only the boaster of swiftness could read the thoughts about her of the careful dresser she would cease to flaunt her celerity. "You look fit!" thinks the other woman, or: "You can't be clean clear through," or: "Your room must resemble a pig pen."

One cannot give the attention to bathing, hairdressing and careful adjusting of clothes that is required in less than half an hour. The woman who says she does, either stops her clock or shirks important toilet duties.

Apart from looks, the woman who dresses in ten minutes is putting her nerves to an unnecessary strain. There is nothing so trying as dressing in a hurry. The flurry gets into pins, buttons, laces and gloves; what does not prick or break willfully rides itself.

Hurried dressing usually means looking one's worst instead of one's best. Ten minutes leave no allowance for a careful inspection with a hand-glass or for accurate adjusting of belts and ties, Psyche angles, and hair nets.

The girl who boasts of whirlwind dressing generally looks as if she had just come through one. Straggly locks, a gaping placket, and misfit stock show her shoed, while her mad haste makes for a red countenance that is not a beautifier.

One need not be such a slow dresser that some one is always on waiting orders; there is a difference between dawdling and careless haste. The ten minutes dressing habit, except in an emergency, verges closely on uncleanliness.

ADAPTED FOR THE EVENING.

Charming Costume Best Made Up in Shell-Pink Silk Voile.

Shell-pink silk voile makes up a charming dress in this style. Our model has a panel of the material finely tucked up front of skirt; at each side is a band of pearl embroidered insertion. The voile has a tucked front, and bretelles of the insertion edged with lace, and sleeves composed of two frills of lace. A band of the insertion edges the front and back.

Materials required: Nine yards, 44 inches wide, about 5¼ yards insertion, 7 yards lace, 1¼ yards silk for bodice lining.

Boots and Shoes and Slipper.

Among well-dressed women of quiet tastes there is nothing more popular for wear with an afternoon costume than the patent leather boots with very high cloth tops.

These are black velvet shoes as well as black velvet slippers to wear with the many modish black toilettes.

For women who cannot afford to match their different gowns, slippers of patent leather, with rhinestone buckles, are a good investment.

Bronze slippers make the daintiest foot covering imaginable, especially when finished with a metal buckle and worn with silk stockings to match.

Bronze is more charming than sensible, however, and should be worn with all sorts of house gowns, as can the black slipper, and is likely to peel if it gets scuffed.

Bordered Silks.

There is a charming new fabric for elaborate spring frocks which is a combination of opalescent gauze with a wide border done in lovely colors. It will be used to make tunics over the one-piece slips of mesaline or the silk cashmere, which is now as soft as crepe de chine.

Sewing Room Hint.

In basting the goods on the lining of jackets and waists full the lining a trifle at the waistline. Then when basting the waist together stretch the goods until the fullness in the lining is gone. This will make a snug fit and there will never be any wrinkles at the waistline.

To Protect Flowers.

Cover window plants with papers. If it is necessary to cover a stand of flowers more closely, push a heavy reed into several crocks and throw a woolen shawl over them to make a tent. Burn lamps near by and Jack Frost will not get your flowers.

OUR CHIEF TO BE THERE

Mr. Kiely to Commune with Other Heads of Police at Convention.

TO ADVERTISE PLAINFIELD.

Will Let Him Off at Buffalo—$100 "and," Appropriated for "Helpful" Sojourn.

Chief of Police Kiely will attend the annual convention of the International Association of Police Chiefs to be held at Buffalo, June 16-19, the Common Council Monday appropriating $100 for the trip, but that body also attached a string to the appropriation and Chief Kiely on his return will be required to make a detailed report to the convention to the police board; also an itemized statement of his expenses.

The question of sending Chief Kiely to Buffalo came before the Council through a resolution offered by Councilman Frank Randolph, chairman of the police board, calling for an appropriation of $100 for the trip.

Immediately afterward, Mr. Buxton took exception to the proposed action, saying, "There goes another $100 added to the expenses of the city, while the Mayor wants additional officers in the police department." Mr. Buxton said that he would like to hear from Mr. Randolph on the subject.

The chairman of the police board explained that for the past nine years the city has been sending its chief of police to such conventions and he believed that much good to the department resulted through acquaintanceship with the chiefs of other cities and when any matter comes up of interest to Plainfield, the assistance of the police in other cities is always secured. Mr. Randolph said that perhaps it was not so much what a chief is likely to learn at these conventions as the friendships made that count.

"I use to think that these trips were mere excursions for the chiefs," said Mr. Montgomery, "but my views were changed after an experience I had at Schnectady, N. Y. While there I met the chief of the fire department; learned that he had been to a firemen's convention, met Chief Doane and knew about the advantages of Plainfield. I now believe that such trips are as much of an advertisement to Plainfield as the chiefs and that the expenditure of money is a right one."

At this point Mr. Holt moved to amend the resolution to read that the expenditure of the $100 be under the direction of the police committee, and this led Mr. Mygatt to inquire how this could be done. Mr. Gloak suggested that it might mean that the whole police committee should take in the trip. Mr. Holt said that he did not object so much to the appropriation of the $100, but he believed that there should be a report of the convention and some accounting of the money.

Chairman Randolph of the police board wanted to know whether the Council desired an itemized accounting of the trip. This question was followed by another amendment offered by Mr. Buxton providing that $100 or so much as may be necessary be appropriated for the trip, Mr. Buxton said that if the trip is a good thing for the chief he was willing to vote for the appropriation, but he desired to give notice that if the appropriation was made he would ask for one for Chief Doane to attend a firemen's convention.

Mr. Gloak supported the resolution stating that he thought it to be a wise expenditure of money. President Tolles was one of those taking exception to the proposed action. He said that since he had been in the Council an appropriation of from $100 to $150 had been made each year for the chief's trops, and he thought it would be a good idea to cut them all out this year and see whether Plainfield suffers or not.

Another amendment to the original resolution was then offered by Mr. Clay, providing that Chief Kiely make a report to the council of the proceedings of the convention.

In speaking against the resolution, Mr. Mygatt said that the Mayor had been urging the importance of appointing more policemen, that the city is not properly protected, and he thought it would be a greater loss to have the chief out of the city for a week. If the convention was to be held nearer home it would not make so much difference, but he will be a great ways from the city for a week. He suggested that inasmuch as there had been no marked results from these annual trops it might be well to "cut out" the jaunt this year.

Speaking again on the subject, Mr. Holt said that he had heard considerable criticism about these jaunts without a full report to the council.

Chairman Frank Randolph added that Chief Kiely's stationery all has the stamp of "I. A. P. C." International Association of Police Chiefs, and this carries weight when doing police business with other departments. This led Mr. Mygatt to ask whether it was necessary for Chief Kiely to attend the conventions to be a member. Mr. Randolph thought not.

Referring to Mayor Fisk's request for additional policemen, Mr. Montgomery said that this would take time, but he did not think the city so poor that it could not afford to appropriate $100 to send Chief Kiely to Buffalo.

In the opinion of Charles C. Randolph, the heads of all departments would be entitled to the annual excursion, if Chief Kiely is extended the privilege. He referred to Street Commissioner Gavett, who he said should be sent to a convention. He then moved to lay the resolution of Councilman Randolph on the table and Mr. Mygatt seconded the motion. On the roll call this was lost, Councilman Mygatt, C. C. Randolph, and President Tolles voting in the affirmative and Councilmen Buxton, Gloak, Holt, Montgomery, Frank Randolph, Taylor and Wilson in the negative.

Another amendment was then offered by Mr. Holt which was adopted by a vote of eight to three. This provides that the sum of $100 or so much as may be necessary be appropriated to send Chief Kiely to the convention of police chiefs in Buffalo, June 16-19, the chief to make a detailed report of the convention and his expenses to the police board.

A. E. BARLOW TO REVISE BUILDING ORDINANCES

The city building ordinance is to be revised and re-written by Alfred E. Barlow, an expert architect in such matters and the Common Council at its meeting Monday, appropriated $500, Mr. Barlow's bid for doing the work. The changes are to be made under the supervision of the fire and building committee, of which Mr. Taylor is the chairman, and it was he who offered the resolution calling for the appropriation.

Many important changes are needed in the ordinance, especially to provide for the use of concrete in construction work, which was not known when the ordinance was originally drafted. Other changes are demanded to conform to the modern method of building. Mr. Barlow was largely instrumental in drafting original ordinance and was for that reason his services are desired to make the changes.

CITY FATHERS APPROVE PUBLIC PARK SCHEME

The Common Council at its June meeting, Monday night, put itself on record as favorable to the proposition to establish a public park in the West End of the city, as proposed by the Plainfield Park Association. The matter was discussed during a long recess, and afterward Mr. Mygatt, chairman of the public affairs committee, presented the map of the proposed park, together with the offer of the association to deed certain land for a park, free of incumbrance, and that the city agree to open up and lay out Albert street through this tract and pay one-half of the cost for macadamizing. The matter was laid on the table, simply being read for information. Each member will receive a copy of the resolution. Last night's action does not bind the city to the proposition.

Mr. Montgomery objected to the action, because he explained it would mean that the city would be paying to open up a road in North Plainfield which he did not think it had a right to do. It so happens that a portion of Albert street, which it is proposed to open up is in North Plainfield, although it was explained that it would belong to the city and be under its jurisdiction and subject to its control. There will be further consideration of the matter before a final vote is taken.

PUBLISH BIOGRAPHY OF THE LATE DR. LEWIS.

Rev. Dr. T. L. Gardiner, editor of The Sabbath Recorder and successor to the late Rev. Dr. A. H. Lewis, has in preparation an interesting biographical sketch of Dr. Lewis, which has been dedicated "to his afflicted wife who shared his burdens for more than fifty years, and to his children who found in him an ideal father."

In the preface of the volume, Dr. Gardiner says that the material for the biography was gathered from notes and memoranda left by Dr. Lewis and from such data as could be found in the files of the denominational literature.

The story includes the childhood of Dr. Lewis, his home in Wisconsin, his college life, beginning his life work, hard work and broken health, teacher, pastor and reformer, the war opening, hopeful labors at home, studies abroad, the new church, secretary and editor and "Crossing the Bar."

The book contains 166 pages, is handsomely gotten up in convenient size and also has a fine portrait of Dr. Lewis, making it of special interest to all the friends of this leader of the Seventh-Day Baptist church.

MORE COPS ARE WANTED

Mayor in Special Message Shows That Increased Force is Urgent Need.

SHORTER HOURS ARE ASKED.

He Also Suggests Again the Substitution of Sergeants for Roundsmen.

Reviewing the needs of the city relative to increased police protection, and also urging that the office of roundsman be abolished, Mayor C. J. Fisk sent the following message to the Common Council, Monday night. No action was taken, it being decided to lay the matter over for a week:

"The city has been growing steadily and the population increasing every year. Many new dwellings have been built and new sections opened up. According to the statistics of the Board of Health the city now has a population of from 21,000 to 22,000. During the past year the records of the building department show 285 permits issued for new buildings and improvements to buildings, estimated at $854,000. The built-up section has been extended east, west and south, so that the force required to be policed has been very much extended.

"In order to properly protect the citizens and property it is absolutely necessary to increase the police force. At present we have twenty patrolmen, sixteen at night and four in the daytime.

"The most important part of the city has been divided into sixteen sections or police beats. Six of the districts each, have nearly seven miles of streets, and there are other parts of the city opened up and occupied during the last few years that are not patroled and have no regular police protection. This is the fact in the Netherwod section, east of Belvidere avenue. All sections south of Randolph road and west of Grant avenue, and the sections east of Richmond street, south of Ninth street and west of Plainfield avenue are only partially protected, as the police beats, as explained above, cover too large a territory.

"For this reason I have asked your honorable body to authorize an increase in the force, so that there will be twenty-one men available for night duty, and seven for day duty.

"At the present time there are over eighty-five miles of streets, seventy-five of which should be patroled. Another reason for asking for the increase is, that the men now are over-worked, being called upon to do from ten to twelve and fourteen hours duty at one time.

"Although a policeman is always on duty in the city, a day if called upon, it is not right, and you cannot expect good duty if you give a man more than eight or nine hours straight duty at one time. I, therefore, request you to pass a resolution authorizing an increase of the force by adding eight additional men.

"I also ask, in order to better protect the system, that the office of Roundsman be dispensed with, and that the ordinance be amended so as to provide for three sergeants and one detective sergeant. This is asked and recommended as it has been found in places with a small force that it is much better for the service to have these men all of one rank.

"Should the above recommendations be concurred in, as I sincerely trust they will be, the force will then consist of the following: chief, captain, three sergeants, one detective sergeant, one driver of patrol, one doorman, and twenty-eight patrolmen, thirty-six men in all; and I feel confident I can then more fully and satisfactorily protect and patrol the city.

"The men now on the force are loyal, active, and not only ready to perform their full regular duty, but such extra or special duty as they may be called upon to do. I feel a personal responsibility to the citizens in this matter, as, while the Common Council, by resolution, fix the number of men, salaries, etc., as provided by the city charter, the mayor is the responsible executive head of this department, and, as such, is looked to, to see that the citizens and property are protected."

CITY GRAMMER SCHOOLS TO GRADUATE 102 PUPILS

The grammar school graduating class this year will be the biggest in the history of the Plainfield schools, for 102 pupils will receive their diplomas at the graduation exercises, to be held at the Plainfield High School auditorium, Wednesday afternoon, June 22. The class last year numbered eighty-two. The pupils all attend the Stillman School.

Rev. Dr. C. M. Anderson, pastor of the First M. E. church, will deliver the commencement address to the graduates, and the pupils will receive their diplomas from President Leander N. Lovell of the Board of Education. Various prizes are to be presented.

CITY APPROPRIATES $1,000 FOR CELEBRATION

The question of appropriating money for the forthcoming celebration on July 5 was discussed at the June meeting of the Common Council, Monday, following the receipt of communications from the finance committee of the general committee in charge of the celebration. The Council was previously informed by Corporation Counsel C. A. Marsh that it could appropriate such an amount as thought wise for the observance of July 4, and it was under this advice that the sum of $1,000 was set aside for the affair, that amount being requested by the finance committee, through the chairman, E. M. Lum.

There was a division of opinion among the councilmen as to the wisdom or right of doing this and President Tolles and Councilman Mygatt voted against the resolution, the latter explaining that he opposed the measure because it was not intended as a celebrate July 5 but another occasion. In response to a question as to how the appropriation is to be expended, Mr. Clay was informed that the resolution provided that it is to be done under the direction of the Mayor and finance committee of the Common Council.

Councilman C. C. Randolph in stating that he would vote for the resolution said that he believed the people of the city would approve of such action; that the people; had shown by their willingness to subscribe to a popular fund that they are heartily in favor of the celebration. The communications from the Fourth of July and Charter Day committee were referred to the laws and ordinance committee and later reported back by Chairman Holt.

CHANGES IN MEN'S APPAREL.

Men change the style of their dress slowly, their tendency being to develop the useful and convenient. Whether it be the robes of the church or law or civic dignataries is very largely the survival of what was once the every-day fashions for men, says the London Queen.

The tendency is not entirely to do away with the mode of dress that has become inconvenient for ordinary occasions, but to give it a sort of superlative or best-clothes place.

The usual dress for a football match is a short frock coat and a high hat, and high hats are always seen in engravings of ancient cricket matches. The competitors also in the Oxford and Cambridge boat race used to row in high hats! As early as 1820 days no one who was any one wore a frock coat on quite ordinary occasions, and West End cheese-mongers wore high hats behind the counter.

Utility has now said that the frock coat is too cumbersome for knock-about wear. For all that, the frock coat's star is in the ascendant. The twentieth century Bachelors' Book says that "correct dress for weddings, receptions, afternoon calls and dinners is a frock coat and a high hat; the same applies to Sundays." Evidently the frock coat is being promoted to strictly best wear, but, although no gentleman can dispense with it, it is worn far less than it used to be.

And although the frock coat is so sacred a garment, yet for certain wear it is not good enough. There are occasions when the swallowtail coat is more esteemed still. The swallow-tail coat has not only an older origin than the frock coat, but a more utilitarian one, for it is a survival of the every-day coat worn by men in the time of the Georges, and it is certainly less in the way than a "frock" for general use.

Thus it comes to pass that in one day a man often wears the fashions of three periods, and the more of state there is in the occasion the further he looks back to find the appropriate dress. He goes to his office in the top hat worn during a morning or perhaps a lounge coat; he makes a call on a lady in the afternoon properly attired in his nineteenth century frock coat. When he goes out to dinner he dons his eighteenth century evening clothes, and if he were attending a levee his knee breeches and silk stockings would be very reminiscent of the every-day dress of gentlemen of the Stuart period.

The wig, which is now associated entirely with legal state dress, was in Stuart times the ordinary wear of gentlemen. Gradually changes came, and the wig became less and less worn, until it was reserved entirely for judges, barristers and other legal dignitaries.

Mayoral robes have their origin in the ordinary styles worn in Tudor days. Ecclesiastical robes have certainly more ancient history than any other ceremonial dress, yet even these may be traced back to the usual dress worn in the very early centuries.

A HEART SONG.

Had I the voice I would sing,
Had I the touch I would play.
And oh! the beautiful world would ring
With music all the day!

Had I the gift I would write—
I would paint, had I the skill—
A world so fair and full of light
That none should know its ill!

SAFE AND SANE FOURTH

City Decides to End the Chinese Mode of Celebration.

THE ORDINANCE IS DRAFTED.

Mayor Supports Innovation Which Will Prevent Fires and Personal Injuries.

With the idea of insuring a safe and sane Fourth of July and rendering less likely the possibility of accidents, Mayor Charles J. Fisk requested the Common Council at its meeting Monday night to pass an ordinance prohibiting the discharge of fire-arms, cannons, and other mighty explosive things on the public streets on that occasion, which this year will be July 5. The ordinance, which was passed on two reading and ordered advertised, does not prohibit the discharge of fireworks, cannons, sky-rockets, etc., on private property, nor the use of blank cartridges, pistols or any celebration by military organizations, which will probably be a part of the Charter Day celebration. The ordinance carries with it a fine of $20 for each offense.

In this connection Mayor Fisk asked for permission to swear in twenty special policemen for duty during the three days celebration; also the privilege of issuing free licenses to Plainfielders who may wish to engage in the vending business at that time, and the right to charge non-residents a day fee, a license fee to sell anything here during the three days set apart for the celebration. The permission was granted.

The ordinance regulating the discharge of fireworks was drafted by Corporation Counsel C. A. Marsh at the request of the Mayor, and the former stated that he believed it would answer every purpose and accomplish the desired result. Mr. Marsh aded that some people might consider the ordinance unpatriotic and unreasonable, but he did not believe it to be either.

BRUTUS, THE FELINE HERO.

Twelve years is a long time for a cat to live, unapreciated, but Brutus never seemed to mind, says Youth's Companion. The tenor of his life had run smoothly, in spite of constant gibes and jeers from the man of the house, who had no liking for a cat that loved asparagus above all things, and refused to show the least interest in a live mouse.

"If you will insist on calling him 'brute,' I shall have to name him Brutus," the gentle mistress had remarked to her husband one day, while the peace-loving cat was still a kitten; so Brutus he was from that hour, a queer, big, unoffending creature, that not only declined to catch mice, but utterly disdained meat of all kinds, dining contentedly every noontime on a plain cold boiled potato, with perhaps a bit of lettuce or on special feast-days a dish of asparagus.

For years he was a neighboring joke, a harmless, amusing oddity, until one morning a terrible commotion called the mistress of the house to the kitchen where she found that the small kitten belonging to the neighbor on the north had scaled her fence, and the fierce little bulldog belonging to the neighbor on the south had crept under his, and now the two were met in unequal combat by the gentle Brutus, who had so long held peaceful away.

"Call your dog off! Get him away, quick!" the neighbro behind the north fence was demanding excitedly, while the neighbor behind the south fence was wringing her hands in helpless anguish. That dog would not mind, and he would surely kill the kitten, and what in the world could they do!

Just at this point twelve-year-old vegetarian Brutus, the cat without spirit, roused from a peaceful snooze on top of a barrel, and giving a mighty leap into the midst of the fray, furnished that bulldog with a surprise.

It was a snarling, clawing, merciless surprise; it shed blood and caused howls of pain, but it was thoroughly effective, and in less than two minutes it sent the bulldog whipped, slinking home to his own back yard, while Brutus calmly picked up the frightened kitten by the nape of the neck and carried it straight to its mistress.

This done, he resumed the barrel-top, an appreciated cat, and since that moment no silk cushion in the neighborhood has been too fine to hold Brutus, the hero.

Raw Cherry Pie

Wife Tries Hard to Please.

"Then make it yourself, if you know more than anyone else about it," said Mrs. Adams, coldly.

Mr. Adams wagged his head sorrowfully.

"Nobody," he said, slowly, with an irritated eye upon his boss, "can discuss anything with you, Minnie. The moment I mention that pie you rush ahead as usual, and jump all the hurdles before you get to 'em. What I said was that a cherry pie would be—"

"And because I try to please you and tell Gussie to fix one you insult me!" cried his wife.

Both members of the Adams family tightened their lips and drew in their breath through distended nostrils. Gussie, the cook, cannily observing these signs, withdrew hurriedly.

Mr. Adams suddenly relaxed his features and smiled wearily.

"Let the thermal gas go," he said.

Mrs. Adams sighed.

"Why should it be let go?" she demanded. "For goodness' sake, what ails you? Upon my word, I cannot understand the processes of your mind, Frank. Only you can kindly know more about cooking than I do, you know. If you mean that your mother made pies with raw cherries, I have only to say that there are pies and pies."

"My maternal parent," retorted Mr. Adams, "made no pies. The servants made 'em. You told Gussie to cook the cherries. Well, I may be a fool, but, by gosh! you don't cook 'em, madam. They're not fit to eat—raw!"

Mrs. Adams smiled this time. She made it an indulgent smile that would prickle and hurt him.

"All right, dearest," she said, soothingly. "Certainly they shall be raw."

She uttered the sentence in the tone she would employ when addressing a weeping infant or a fretful idiot.

"Gussie!" she called.

The cook appeared and saluted.

"Mr. Adams doesn't wish cooked cherries in his pie," she said. "He wants them raw."

Gussie bowed with dignity.

"Yessum," she answered.

"She'll have that pie for dinner, Frank," said Mrs. Adams.

Watched by the eyes of the ladies of the household, Mr. Adams hastily disposed of the substantial but important portion of his dinner, and happily announced that he was ready for pie.

He tried it.

"Well?" queried his wife. Despite her well-put-on air of unconcern, it was only too evident that she did care a little about his opinion.

"Can I have a word to say about feelings?" he asked. "Well, this pie's soggy. And I tell you, Minnie, the cherries ain't right. They were cooked."

The meal was finished in a dreary silence.

In the kitchen only the smash of crockery sounded. Gussie was angered. "I thought it was a very nice pie," said Mrs. Adams, an hour later.

Mr. Adams yawned.

"Why, George, I could make a pie myself!" he ejaculated. "You fix the crust and I'll tend to Mister Pie. You cook the fruit too long."

"The crust," shouted his wife and Gussie, "that's the main part."

"Not in our pies," said he, stubbornly. "The cherries soak up. Now, honest, haven't you been kidding me? These pies had cooked cherries in 'em, sure."

Mrs. Adams protested.

"It's the oven, then," she decided. "It doesn't heat right."

"Get a pound of cherries, stone 'em and throw 'em in with some sugar," said he, authoritatively. "The pie'll come out as it should."

Two more pies did the household make, and each time the cherries were massed in red profusion, as he had directed. When the last sample was pronounced unfit for consumption, Mrs. Adams went to the kitchen and consulted with Gussie. They awaited Mr. Adams' departure, then went into the bedroom and there, giggling, they took a box from a closet and began snipping at what it held.

"That's plenty," said Gussie.

At dinner the cherry pie came on.

"These haven't been cooked so much," said Mr. Adams, cheerfully.

The pastry lattice work showed the ripe, shiny cherries beneath it.

"There," said Mr. Adams. "At last. That pie's right. Gimme a big piece. I'd stake my life you've had it, and you ought to have, I told you."

He began to eat.

At the first bite his mien became thoughtful.

"See; we should have cooked 'em," reproached his wife. "You don't like it."

"Yes, I do," said he, fiercely.

One large slice was downed.

"I—guess that'll be enough," he murmured, faintly.

"It's the way you said to make it," cried Mrs. Adams, accusingly.

"And it's a blamed good pie," his manner was valiant; "best I ever had. But I'm tired of pie. Those cherries were bully. Where'd you get 'em?"

His pale face excited no compassion in Mrs. Adams, for she knew he was lying, and theirs was a home where cherry pie would never be made to suit all parties.

"From my spring hat," she said.—New York Telegraph.

ASK FOR APPROPRIATIONS

For Schools $107,000 is Desired and for Health "Extras" $2,734.

COMMON COUNCIL ROUTINE.

Petitions, Resignations, Resolutions and Reports are Filed.

Some Minor Matters Considered.

The Board of School Estimate certified to the Common Council, at its meeting, Monday, that it had determined that $45,000 would be needed to build the new primary schol on West Front street, near Clinton avenue, and that $62,000 would be necessary for general school purposes for the coming year. Later Mr. Buxton offered resolutions, which were adopted, accepting the certification and the amounts will be incorporated in the annual tax budget. The Board of Health communicated with the Common Council relative to the expenses incurred by the recent outbreak of smallpox here and requested that $2,734.84 be appropriated to cover the same. The matter was referred to the finance committee and will be reported upon at another meeting.

Residents of Clinton avenue and West Front streets petitioned to have the latter street but to grade as far as the city line, explaining that new houses are constantly being erected in that section and street improvements are desired. The matter was referred to the street committee.

The annual report of the Board of Directors of the Public Library and Reading Room, as published in The Daily Press on Saturday, was presented and filed.

The resignation of Patrolman John Kelly was presented and accepted. The action was a little belated, as Kelly left the force several weeks ago. Horace G. Adams, clerk of the District court, reported receipts for the past month of $156.90 and $40.15 was disbursed. The report was filed.

Mayor C. J. Fisk appointed William Christoffersen as a special policeman and the appointment was confirmed. Building Inspector T. O. Doane reported that thirty permits were granted during the past month, and Street Commissioner A. J. Gavett that fifty-three permits were granted during the same time.

Overseer-of-the-Poor A. D. Ayres reported alms house expenses for the past month to be $364.65 and the outside expenses were $159.35, making the total amount $524.

The contract and bond of Mobus & Burke, whose bid was accepted for furnishing the city with crushed stone during the coming year, were presented to the Common Council, by Chairman Gloak of the street committee, and they were referred to the corporation counsel for his approval.

A resolution offered by Mr. Buxton and adopted, authorized the transfer of $2,500 from the general fund to the fire fund.

Mr. Gloak reported back the communication of the Dunellen Concrete Block Company respecting bids, an opinion from Corporation Counsel C. A. Marsh, which stated that the city legally has no right to reimburse the company for money lost on its sewer contract here, as requested. On his motion the clerk was instructed to inform the company to that effect.

The petition of the Highland Park Realty Company to vacate Raymond avenue, was denied on motion of Mr. Gloak, and when he called up the ordinance on third reading, it was killed which finally disposes of the matter.

Mr. Gloak reported back the petition of Street Commsioner Gavett regarding his inability to prevent the owner of the property at 314-316 Plainfield avenue from erecting a building outside of the building line, and on his motion Corporation Counsel C. A. Marsh was instructed to institute ejectment proceedings against the property-owner. Mr. Mygatt moved that when council adjourn it be to meet on Monday night, June 14, when in accordance with the motion of Mr. Holt, a public hearing will be had on the ordinance providing for the installation of "cut-offs" in gas pipes, and notices will be sent to the Public Service Corporation and the Union, Middlesex and Somerset Lighting Company, who are directly interested in the ordinance.

HEAR REPORT ON THE EAST END FIRE HOUSE.

Councilman Duncan W. Taylor, who is chairman of the fire and building committee, presented a brief report to the Common Council, Monday, relative to the progress on the new East End fire house. He said that it had been found that $2,906.00 is the balance left after providing for the cost of the building and purchase of apparatus, which it is proposed to expend for equipment, such as hose, beds, bedding, etc., and he offered a resolution that such disposition be made of the balance. The resolution was adopted.

CHARTER DAY IS NEAR

The City is in Gala Attire for the Three Days Celebration.

MORE MONEY IS RECEIVED.

The Catalogues Ready Tomorrow—Firemen's Committee Meeting Tonight.

The Charter Day contributions still continue to arrive, forty-five dollars being added to the big total today. The metamorphosis which is taking place in the streets of the city is inciting the wonder and admiration of everybody who comes into the city. At Grant avenue columns similar to those on Park avenue are being erected and painted and nearly every building on West Front from Grand avenue east is decorated. Somerset street, Park avenue and the adjoining streets along the line of march are gradually assuming a gala-day appearance.

The catalogues containing the lists of events, races, prizes and other information are due to arrive this afternoon or tomorrow moning and will be put on sale for ten cents each.

The committee on parades will hold a meeting tonight to decide on the line of march for the firemen's parade on Wednesday. It is possible that the line may be changed somewhat.

In addition to the elaborate street illumination provided by the Public Service Corporation, special transportation facilities are being arranged for by Superintendent George Lahr. Mr. Lahr said today that during the three days of the celebration the terminal of the Fourth street and Netherwod lines will be at Grant avenue and West Front street, instead of at Front and Somerset streets. He has asked for some large open cars to use on these lines to handle the patrons of the east and south ends of town, and announced that the main line trolleys will be run on a ten minute schedule in order to facilitate travel for those coming from out of town.

These additional contributions were received today:

Grand Union Tea Co.	$10.00
Walter Apgar	10.00
E. T. Barrows	10.00
W. H. Olmstead	5.00
Alfred DeNise	5.00
George Conover & Sons	5.00

PATRIOTIC SERVICE AT PARK AVENUE BAPTIST.

Following the suggestion of the Charter Day committee, Rev. A. E. Finn will preach a special Independence Day sermon at the morning service in the First Baptist church on Sunday, and there will be a program of special patriotic music by the choir. The pastor's topic will be "The Legacy Our Fathers Left Us."

The music will include a soprano solo, sung by Mrs. R. E. Humpston as an offertory. The song will be Schnecker's "Still With Thee." R. E. Humpston, organist of the church, will render William Adrian Smith's "A Musical Journey" as an organ prelude, and the selections by the choir will include Excell's "Awake the Song of Jubilee" and Gabriel's "Auspicious Morning, Hail." "God Bless Our Native Land" and "My Country 'Tis of Thee" will be the hymns sung by the congregation.

LOWERS ASSESSMENTS ON P. S. C. BY $248,605.

The State Board of Equalization of Taxes yesterday reduced from $1,575,000 to $1,321,295, the assessments levied against the property of the Public Service Corporation in New Jersey. The announcement of the decision was accompanied by a brief memorandum stating that the case had been very ably and exhaustively tried by both the Public Service Corporation and Jersey City.

From the evidence the board said it was constrained to the opinion that the proper valuation was the smaller sum, which in its judgment was the market value of the property in question on May 20. The company in its appeal asked that the valuation on its 226 cars, overhead wires and equipments in Jersey City be reduced from $1,575,000 to $1,042,775.

AUTO WRECK VICTIM TO BE BURIED HERE

Edward Cooley, who was killed in an automobile accident on Morris avenue, between Elizabeth and Springfield, yesterday morning, will be buried in St. Mary's cemetery in this city tomorrow. The other members of the party who were injured are reported to be doing well at the General Hospital in Elizabeth where they were taken immediately after the accident.

Another accident in which Essex county people were involved at Eastern boulevard and Pelham Parkway, the Bronx, at the same time as the Elizabeth accident. Those injured were Jonathan Moore, a builder, of 328 Ridgewood avenue, Glen Ridge, and Edgar Lethbridge, of 161 Cleveland street, Orange. Moore sustained a compound fracture of the hip and Lethbridge was found to be suffering from a compound fracture of the right leg.

Two women who accompanied the men in the ride were thrown out but did not sustain any injury beyond a few scratches and a general shaking up. They gave their names as Mrs. Alice Howland, of 242 West Forty-ninth street, and Miss Lillian Webster, of 230 West Fiftieth street, Manhattan.

The cause of the latter accident was the wet pavement on which the car skidded. The car took an erratic curve landing on a side path and ran into a tree. The machine turned turtle and was badly wrecked.

NINE SCARLET FEVER CASES IN THE CITY

The mild outbreak of several cases of scarlet fever in the West End of the city has given rise to rumors that it had reached an epidemic. Inquiry at the office of the Board of Health today brought forth the information that there have been nine cases in all, chiefly among children, and that the quarantine will be lifted on six this week, leaving but three cases under quarantine in the West End and one in the East End. Two young sons of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Boss and Harold Fink, on Crook st. Grant avenue, are ill with the disease in the contagious ward at the hospital, while a young son of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Weed, of West Front street, is being treated at home.

All of the cases have been unusually light. In numerous instances the children were ill only for a few hours or a day and the parents believing it to be measles did not keep the children at home. They were discovered in a peeling condition and physicians promptly diagnosed the disease that of scarlet fever. Many of the boys taken ill, it was learned, had been congregating at a swimming pool in the West End and at the request of the Board of Health the police closed the pool yesterday and no further trouble is anticipated in that direction. Other than the above, there are very few cases of contagious diseases in the city, health conditions being good.

DEFENDED CINCINNATI IN 1862; IS JUST PAID.

Theodore W. Marsh, a cigar dealer, of 15 Bridge street, Paterson, has just received a check from the State of Ohio for services performed in defense of Cincinnati during the Civil War, at which time Mr. Marsh was a lad of twelve years. Like many more of the younger generation living in the State at the time, he took up arms and joined the 25,000 or so of boys and men who hurried to the front in response to urgent appeals for the defense of the endangered city forty-seven years ago.

The State authorities announced that the recruits, who were called "squirrel hunters," were to serve one week, for which they were to receive one month's pay—$13. At the end of the week the Union army had arrived and forced the Confederates back into Tennessee and the danger was over.

The home unaccountable reason the "squirrel hunters" army failed to receive the pay promised for several years. The Ohio Legislature eventually made an appropriation for the purpose, but this was soon exhausted. Recently the legislature made a second appropriation, and it was from this account that Mr. Marsh a few days ago received his check for $13.

MISS JUBILEE RAWLEY HAS A BIRTHDAY PARTY.

In honor of her twelfth birthday anniversary, Mrs. Frank Rowley gave a delightful party yesterday afternoon for her daughter, Miss Jubilee Rowley. There were about a dozen guests who spent a pleasant afternoon with Miss Rowley and took occasion to congratulate her and wish her many happy returns of the day. She also received a number of fine gifts, including a check for a substantial amount.

The home was appropriately decorated for the occasion with flowers, and the young people thoroughly enjoyed the playing of all sorts of games on the spacious verands and lawn. Later refreshments were served. While the party was announced from 3 to 6, it was nearly 8 o'clock when the young folks departed.

Those present were Miss Dorothy Lyon, Miss Marion Lyon, Miss Mildred Burnet, Miss Mariel Dunham, Miss Madeline Blair, Miss Marion Blair, Miss Marguerite Barkalew, Miss Florence Small, Miss Katherine Day, Miss Jubilee Rowley, Franklin Rowley and the Misses Ruth and Jessie Thompson, of Bloomfield.

Samuel Rothberg Chosen President.

At a special meeting of the Young Men's Hebrew Association, last night, Samuel Rothberg was unanimously chosen president by the members, the other candidate withdrawing from the race. HOLTON WILL CONTEST

Hearing to Take Place Before Judge Schenck on Friday, July 30.

THREE CAVEATS ARE FILED.

Estate Valued at Between $30,000 and $50,000—Heirs Fight for It.

William A. Coddington, representing the Miss Mary G. Holton estate, has made application before Surrogate Dalzell at Somerville, for the probate of Miss Holton's will. The matter was referred to Judge Schenck and July 30 was fixed as the date for the hearing. In the meantime all interested parties are being notified of the date of the hearing.

Thus far caveats against the admission of the will to probate have been filed by Charles H. Rand, represented by W. S. Angleman; Mrs. J. K. Arnold and Mrs. Phoebe Marsh who are represented by Beekman & Wessells, of Somerville.

A few years ago Miss Holt was estimated to be worth about $203,000, but since that time she gave away various amounts to charitable and other objects and now the estate is variously estimated to be worth between $30,000 and $50,000. In her will she left a bulk of her estate to the First Baptist church and to Baptist missions, and left little to her relatives.

SINGER PLANT TO CLOSE FOR NEXT THREE WEEKS.

Concern over their own welfare is being expressed by thousands of employes of the Singer factory at Elizabeth because the annual summer vacation this year will be much longer than usual. The factory will close down today at 4 p. m. and will not open until Monday, July 26. The employes will receive a pay on Saturday and again on July 10. They will not receive any money after that until the second week in August.

"Trade depression" the employes of the plant give as a reason for the long shutdown. The vacation is the longest vacation the employes of the big plant have ever had. It means that many of the workers will have little or no money after the middle of next month.

Most of the employes were satisfied last year when they were given two weeks vacation in July. Even this was longer than any other vacation they ever received during the summer. The week of 4 has always been the regular summer vacation. Some years the vacation did not last longer than four days.

Not only are the employes of the big plant a bit worried but the merchants and tradespeople of the city are fearful the long shutdown of the big plant, because they realize that there will be a decided falling off in business while the thousands of employes of the Singer factory are out of work.

MIXED FOURSOME ON COUNTRY CLUB COURSE

An event of considerable interest at the Plainfield Country Club this afternoon will be a mixed foursome in which seven couples will take part. The women are evincing more than the usual interest in the game, and as a result others are encouraged to play. Recently there was a competition for a cup offered by Mrs. Arthur Wellington Opp and another for a cup offered by the club. Mrs. Opp won the latter trophy with a low score.

This afternoon the couples will pair up as follows:

Mrs. Arthur Wellington Opp and Henry D. Hibbard, Mr. and Mrs. H. Reeve Stockton, Miss Margaret Goddard and W. Lester Gleaney, Miss Maude Van Boskerck and Arthur Murphy, Miss Alice Titus and Garthwaite Carman, Miss Martha Robey and C. B. Morgan, Miss Louise Craig and E. T. Willson.

On Monday, July 5, there will be a clock golf competition for women, in which a large number are expected to take part, and on July 9 there will be a match tournament for women, with suitable prizes for the winners. There is a possibility that last season's arrangement will be adopted for July and August, that is the club allow the women to take part in the men's competitions. This proved a great success before and it will tend to hold the interest of the women until fall, when several events have been scheduled for them.

TROLLEY AND AUTO CRASH BUT NO ONE IS HURT.

A large touring car, in which were three women and two men all from Passaic, and a Fourth street trolley car collided at Fourth street and Plainfield avenue, this morning, and both were damaged to same extent. None of the occupants of the auto or the car were injured.

The running board of the cra was shatered and the front axle of the auto was twisted. However, it was possible for the machine to proceed to Martin's garage on Park avenue for repairs.

Who was to blame for the collision is a matter of dispute. The motorman claimed that the driver of the machine was at fault and vice versa. Later in the day a conference was held with the trolley officials with a view to settling the matter. In the meantime the damaged auto is being repaired.

Montclair's Fourth.

One of the features of the Fourth of July celebration at Montclair will be the explosion of 20,000 fire crackers which will be strung from the top of a tall flagstaff near the Upper Montclair postoffice. Six hundred children will sing national songs at the exercises in the Central part of the town.

Enmity Towards Farmer's Wife, Prisoner 's Testimony Shows as the Cause.

Leonard Martine, the aged Cuban who was arrested shortly after the barns of W. E. Van Court, of Oak Tree, were destroyed by fire last fall, charged with incendiarism, was convicted of arson at his second trial, held at the Middlesex county court, New Brunswick, yesterday. The jury was only out fifteen minutes. Martine will be sentenced on Friday.

The Cuban was indicted on two charges, one of setting fire to Mr. Van Court's barn on September 17, and the other of attempting to set fire to the Van Court home a few weeks later. He was arrested after this second attempt, when peach baskets, which had been filled with oil-soaked papers, were found in the cellar on a shelf. The testimony was about the same as that which developed in the first trial, when the jury could not agree. Witnesses for the State included Mr. and Mrs. Van Court, W. H. Randolph, George Angelinger, Georgiana M. Rhodes, Joseph Wale, Samuel Webb and Edward Dunham.

Martine's testimony developed the fact that he had a grudge against Mrs. Van Court, but he said that he was from a relations Army home in Brooklyn the night of the fire. Martine was arrested in February by the local police and was held a prisoner in a city court cell until taken to New Brunswick by the Middlesex county authorities.

MR. AND MRS. GROGAN AGAIN APPEAR IN COURT.

Mrs. William Grogan, of East Front street, caused the arrest of her husband at her home last night, and Patrolman McCarthy locked the man up. In court today, the woman preferred charges of non support and asked that the court rule that her husband keep away from her. J. Henry Crane, her lawyer, withdrew the complaint, which was incorrect for the specific case, the testimony showing that Grogan had not threatened or abused the woman last night, but was arrested because he refused to leave the house.

Grogan told City Judge Runyon that he would give his wife a wide berth in future, and was granted permission to visit the house for the purpose of getting his clothes. The two were separated for nine years up to about five months ago. Mrs. Grogan testified that her husband was continually asking her for money. The woman is self-supporting and declares that her husband frequently comes home drunk and assaults her.

DISORDERLY PASSENGER FINED IN POLICE COURT

Hailing a passing automobile as Niles Risberg, of Arlington avenue attacked the conductor on the back end of his car, Motorman Charles Brant left the main line trolley car he was running on Front street near Plainfield avenue, and sped westward along the street until he found Patrolman Dobson, whom he brought back to the car in the automobile, and who arrested the scrapping passenger. George Schlick, the conductor, got some stiff jolts in the jaw and body, and preferred charges at the city court today, when Risberg was fined $10 by City Judge Runyon.

The scrap which took place at about 6 o'clock last night arose in the rear of the car, when Risberg, who boarded the car near Lincoln, refused to pay a second fare, demanding a transfer with his first nickel, which he paid after much delay it is said. According to the conductor's story, Risberg had some liquor in him when he boarded the car. He started sorting over a big roll of bills when asked for his fare and took lots of time getting his nickel. He asked for a transfer, but as another fare was due before it could be issued, the conductor refused to issue it. Risberg got grouchy and finally went out on the back platform and started to pick a quarrel with Schlick, striking him several blows.

Seeing the trouble, the motorman stopped the car and went for an officer. Risberg was taken to the trolley stand under arrest on the trolley car.

MAYOR HITS AT PARTY BOSSES

Mayor W. E. Florance, of New Brunswick, sent sharp veto to New Brunswick Common Council Monday night, upon the awarding of four city street-paving contracts, amounting to several thousand dollars, to Thomas H. Riddle, of New Brunswick, for "Clymer" brick. The Mayor declared the award "savors of favortism" and that if only local bidders are to be favored they had better insert in their next advertisement "local bidders preferred."

The veto was read and laid on the table for action at the next regular meeting, in July. This is the usual proceeding under the rules. The award of these bids has created no little criticism.

BLOW AT TRAFFIC REFORM.

Engine Driver Who Refused to Move Train Set Free in Trenton.

Efforts of the city of Trenton to prevent delay of traffic at railroad crossings came to naught in a police court there yesterday when Daniel Barry, a Pennsylvania engineer driver, who was under arrest, declared that he would not move his train against signals under any consideration, not "if trolley cars were blocked from one end of the town to the other."

Counsel for the railroad declared that to move a train against signals might result in a serious loss of life. Judge Harris dismissed the case.

UNION COUNTY TRUST TO ERECT MARBLE BLDG.

The Union County Trust Company, of Elizabeth, which has for the past seven years occupied the old First National Bank building, corner of Broad and West Grand streets, in that city, has found its quarters far too small to meet the demands of increasing business, and has decided to put up a new structure of modern style, with all the latest equipments, and one that will be a credit to the city. The new building will be one story in height, fifty feet front by 150 deep, and the banking-room will be about 47x100, with ceiling thirty-two feet high and surmounted by a large skylight.

The material will be of white marble from Congressman Fowler's Vermont quarries. The interior will be furnished to correspond and will have a safe deposit vault with 500 boxes to begin with and capable of being extended to 1,500. The Hedden Construction Company, of Newark has the contract for the building, and the Herring, Hall, Marven Company for the vault. There will be a three-story annex to the West Grand street side of the new building, which the Fidelity Trust Company of Newark will occupy in part as its Union County branch office. The new building will cost about $15,000.

The Union County Trust Company took over the First National Bank of Elizabeth, in 1902, and at that time had a business of about $900,000. At the last meeting of the directors the business reported was not far from $3,500,000. The tearing down of the old bank building will be commenced about September 1, when the trust company will move to temporary quarters in the Edwards & King building, Broad street and Central Railroad. The new building will be completed in about a year.

WON DAILY PRESS PRIZE

Essay of George Stanley Robbins on "Municipal Playgrounds."

MRS. TIFFANY WAS JUDGE

Washington McIntyre's Paper on the Subject Accorded Honorable Mention.

George Stanley Robbins won the gold prize offered by The Daily Press to the senior of the Plainfield High School, submitting the best essay on "Municipal Playgrounds." Mrs. Dexter Tiffany was the judge, she having kindly consented to decide which of the papers submitted showed the highest degree of merit. Honorable mention was awarded by her to Washington McIntyre.

Mr. Robins' paper follows:

The guardianship of a municipality over its population may be properly compared with that which is exercised by the head of a household. Each has responsibilities, moral and economic, and these are allied, one with the other, as closely in the conduct of a city government as in the provision for and care of a family.

Considering the municipality as a large family, it must be seen that the forces, working on the one hand toward moral development, and on the other toward the administration of economy, should be co-operative. As city's activities toward the betterment of morals, the preservation of peace, and the enforcement of measures conducive to right living, may well be considered as a worthy end in themselves rather than as a means to economy; yet it is evident that the former is a cause and the latter an effect.

As a city protects itself from lawlessness, it protects itself from poverty.

In preventing its citizens from becoming criminals, it keeps them from being a tax upon the community; in shielding them from pestilence and disease, it economizes in its health department appropriation; in providing for the children, resulting with its borders, insuring them of a healthful and upright environment in which to grow, it establishes a generation of men and women, strong morally and physically, capable to take their place in the building of the commonwealth and to administer its affairs with integrity.

And this is the function of the municipal playground.

The most effective sociological reforms of recent years have dealt with the youth of the community. The old theory that "an ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure," has proved a valuable axiom in the study of criminology. People are beginning to realize that education is cheaper than reformation.

It is upon this principle that Judge Ben Lindsey's Juvenile Court was organized in Denver, and the spirit, which has actuated this man's remarkable work, has spread into many departments of justice in many quarters of the globe.

To save the child from becoming contaminated by the evil influences and unsavory environments is to build aright the foundation of his life, and to fit him for his place in the community. This is the work that Judge Lindsey assigns to the public playground, when he says.

"We cannot overdraw the picture of the increase in weakness and crime among the youth in the cities of this republic. It is not their fault; it is ours. It is not only due to their environment, to that condition that we have created. Cities and states are false to their duty to this child unless they furnish the best remedies for relief against the monsters that attack it. It is not pretended that any one remedy will suffice, but no one remedy proposed can be more serviceable than the public playground.

"We do an injury to these little ones; just so far as by lack of interest we compel our school boards to put fifty children in a room where there shouldn't be over twenty, deny a trade school to equip for industrial efficiency and a playground to equip the child for the advantages of the school and for life beyond. It is no longer questioned that such agencies do more to prevent crime than jails, courts, and policeman.

"In Colorado the parent who shirks duty is punished. Justice demands that this responsibility be extended to all persons who might properly share it. We might become guilty just so far as we fail to strengthen those whom we have burdened with this responsibility. That strength depends upon our support of these agencies, such as school boards, park boards, etc., to provide the equipment necessary to give the child a square deal through the public playground and the school.

"One obstacle to the public playground has been the cost. If the average citizen, if the average business man, if you please, would only wake to the fact that the most economic scheme for handling the problem of crime is that which prevents rather than that which at a fearful expense is merely the engine to convict and punish after crime has become an established fact, we would make progress faster."

So much for the subject from a general standpoint.

In the city of Plainfield we have to be thankful for an unusually clean atmosphere, free from many of the bad influences existing in larger cities, where congestion, unsanitary quarters, and lack of educational facilities, present problems difficult to solve. Plainfield is under going, however, a rapid industrial as well as residential growth, and, as the years advance, we must be prepared to cope with the conditions which in larger communities are the breeding places of crime and lawlessness. Already we have within the city many children, who, by cumstances of birth, are deprived of those advantages which stimulate healthful moral character.

And it is not only for this class that the municipal playground would be of value, but many wise and prudent parents, in good circumstances and capable of providing their children with every necessity, appreciate the need of a suitable place where their boys and girls may reap the benefits of mingling with others of their age under proper supervision. It may be, from a physical standpoint that these children need the healthful activity of the systematically conducted playground; it may be that discipline, outside of that administered in the home, is an essential requirement in the development of the child; or it may be that the youngster would profit by the broadening of character, absorbed from such democratic surroundings—there are countless reasons which would profit the Plainfield parent to cordially support a municipal playground.

As the school season nears its close and every praent realizes what the lack of the customary school playground will mean, the question becomes timely as to whether a public playground is not simply justify its existence at such a period.

We have strived to treat the subject from the civic standpoint rather than from a consideration of the individual effect of the public playground, as it must be realized that any action tending toward the establishment of such an institution in this city, would involve municipal jurisdiction. Volumes could be written, tracing the child's develop*ment in character under the influ*ence of the public playground, but we will leave this for future advocates of the project in the Halls of Council. It has been our purpose merely to point out, from a social and economic standpoint, the paramount advantage of the municipal playground.

N. Y. AMUSEMENTS.

"GOING SOME."

Last Monday evening marked the premiere performance of a new comedy entitled "Going Some," presented by the Messrs. Shubert, at the Belasco theatre. The new play scored an instant success and will no doubt fill David Belasco's 42d street playhouse with amused and enthusiastic audiences throughout the spring and summer months.

[NEW YORK HERALD.]

"Going Some' is comedy on the jump. Brisk moving play at the *Belasco delights a first-night audi*ence. After the fall of the final curtain the large and enthusiastic audience was glad the authors had come from the West, glad because they have written a wholesome, clever comedy that is a winner."

[NEW YORK AMERICAN.]

"'Going Some' starts well on opening night. A new farce comedy entitled 'Going Some' was presented at the Belasco theatre last night before a tremendous audience. The play scored a triumph from the very outset."

"PAULINE."

Pauline—Dr. Pauline, the celebrated French hypnotist and greatest of psychological demonstrators—the man whose legitimate and truly wonderful demonstrations of mind over matters are now the most sensational feature of vaudeville, has hitched his star to the William Morris band-wagon, and commencing on Monday, June 21, he will open for a fortnight's engagement at the American Music Hall.

Pauline, who has proven the greatest drawing card ever played at *the Hammerstein or Percy G. Wil*liams houses and his popularity has grown to such an extent (and the demand for his services in equal proportion) that his salary has been stripled in less than six weeks.

Last week Pauline was drawing $1,500 as the top-line feature in an opposition house in Brooklyn. In a week his salary has leaped to the surprising altitude of $2,500 and to-morrow the figure for three weeks, then graduating down to $750 for the summer months, only to soar again to the $2,000 mark, where it will remain stationary for next season under the William Morris management. This is the high*est salary ever paid for a perform*ance of the kind, but then, Pauline's marvelous demonstrations surpass those of all the Kennedy's, Svengalis and the great army of imitators.

INTERESTING FACTS OF P. H. S. CLASS OF 1909.

For the second time within three years the valedictory address of the city high school has been on the same topic, Joan of Arc. It was first given by Miss Agnes Hunt in 1906. Another peculiar feature of the graduation last evening, is the fact that the boys outnumber the girl graduates—and this by 7. Fur*ther, for the first time in many years* a boy, Harold Schenck, has completed the preparatory course in three years, and has been awarded a diploma. Two girls did this last year. Though there were more boys than girls in the class, girls carried off both the valedictory and salutatory honors for the first time since 1906. 1909 was the first class to be graduated from the Baptist church since 1907, and the last class to have Principal Ira Travell.

Of the girls of the class of 1909, 7 will pursue a higher education: Five will go to Smith college. Of the boys, 15 will pursue a higher education, five will go into business and five are "undecided." So far as is known no member of the class of 1909 is engaged, but two announcements are expected soon.

THE HELPLESS ONES.

I have to weep o'er stories that they print in magazines,
So full am I of sympathy with all those woeful scenes
In which the authors mix the folks
—poor souls!—that they put through
Such dreadful complications full of misery and rue.

In real life you can help a man, no matter what his pain,
'Tis possible to lift him up onto his feet again.
If he does wrong there's hope ahead, if sorrow points the way,
Or if he's plunged in darkness, you can lead him to the day.

But in the magazines, alas! there's no escape at all,
Once printed, bound and published and spread out upon a stall,
Their fate is sealed forevermore, and of their bitter cup
They drink, and drink, and drink, and drink, till someone burns them up.

TWO HUNDRED ATTEND P. H. S. ALUMNI DANCE

Regardless of the intense heat, about 200 alumni and friends of the graduates of the Plainfield High School attended the graduation *dance held at the high school audi*torium Thursday after the exercises at the First Baptist church. The affair was declared the most successful social in the histor yof the school dances, and it is now a practical certainty that in years to come the dance will be held at the school.

The decorations brought enthus*iastic* praise from the dancers, for the auditorium was strung with college flags, and the few red-shaded electric lights gave a cool and pleasing effect. Suhr's Imperial orchestra of ten pieces furnished the dance music, and the musicians were on the auditorium platform, which was banked with wild ferns and palms. Upstairs the library had been transformed into a cozy corner, lighted with red shaded lights and furnished with easy chairs and rugs.

The card included twenty dances, and supper, furnished by B. W. Evans, was served at midnight. C. Bertram Taggart was the head of the general committee in charge of the dance, and was assisted by Miss Florence Emily Prior, Miss Sara Bernhardt Sanderson. Miss Elsa Mae Cook, Arthur Titsworth, F. LAWS EFFECTIVE JULY 4

Anti-Saloon Sign Measure One of Many to Become Operative Then.

"JOY" RIDES ARE CRIMINAL.

All Vehicles to Carry Lights—Inheritance Tax and Primary Law Changes—Other New Laws.

Besides the law requiring brewery and other liquor signs to be taken from saloons, there are several im*portant statutes enacted by the* 1909 Legislature that will become effective on July 4. Where the act itself fixes no date upon which it shall become effective, the Constitution provides that Independence Day shall mark the beginning of its operation. While the New Jersey State Brewers' Association is in fa*vor of the Eppinger* anti-liquor law, Philadelphia brewers have taken steps to contest it, and will make some move in the courts before July 4. Violation of this constitutes a misdemeanor.

One of the laws to become operative on the nation's birthday was put through by Colonel Austen Colgate, Essex Assemblyman. It requires that every horse-drawn vehicle shall carry a light or lights from one hour after sunset to one hour before sunrise, the light to be visible from front and rear for a distance of at least 250 feet. Penalty for failure to live up to this law is $1 fine. It does not in any way affect motor vehicle legislation.

The anti-"joy-ride" law is another that will go into effect next month. This act makes it a misdemeanor to drive a motor vehicle for any wager for the purpose of breaking any speed record, or for any person to drive such vehicle while in an intoxicated condition, or without the positive consent of the owner thereof, or after his license shall willfully fail to display proper registration marks.

On the date mentioned the act amending the primary election law will become operative. This act provides a more definite record for voting at the primary elections to prevent the voters of one party from voting in the ballot box of the opposite party, thereby "packing" the primary in the interest of certain nominations. In the new act the prohibition against voting in a primary box instead of putting opposite the name of each voter on the registry list the initial of his party, such as "R" for Republican or "D" for Democrat, the new law provides that there shall be, in addition to the registry lists, two books or lists, one for each political party, "which shall be called and labeled Republican primary book and Democratic primary book, or as the case may be."

The Board of Registry and Election is required to write the name of each voter in ink in the primary book of the party in whose box he deposits his ballot. These books must be signed by the members of the election board and preserved until the next primary election for reference then as to how each voter cast his ballot the year previous.

The new 5 per cent. inheritance tax is another one which takes effect July 4. Religious bequests and transfers and bequests to immediate relatives are exempted. The tax is to be levied upon the transfer of property, real or personal, of the value of $500 or over, and is made a lien upon the property until paid.

The other new laws in this class are the following: Providing for competitive examinations the first Friday and Saturday in June, each year, for the free scholarships at the State Agricultural College at New Brunswick; amending the Monmouth county act for the purchase of armories in third class counties in this State by making it apply to all the counties in the State; to the *playground act, providing that play*ground commissions may provide for outdoor exhibitions, games and contests and charge a reasonable admission thereto, provided that the commission shall not employ any player or team for any such purpose for more than eight days in any week, and no admission shall be charged children under 12 years of age.

The Ackerman employers' liability act and the teachers' tenure of office act both take effect September 1, 1909. The new act relating to the certification of births and deaths takes effect October 1, 1909. The act incorporating the First Judicial District of Hudson county takes effect January 1, 1910.

The last section of the laws for this year will be delivered by the printer in a few days and then the completed volume will be distributed. The State law requires that the statutes shall be ready for distribution by July 4.

The volume will contain the complete code giving the State standard for the purity of food.

Others Will Be.

FORTY-FOUR GIVEN DIPLOMAS AT PLAINFIELD HIGH SCHOOL COMMENCEMENT

Former Governor George H. Utter, of Rhode Island, Delivers Address; Leander N. Lovell, President of Board, Presents Diplomas and Charles F. Abbott Awards the Prizes.

Receiving their diplomas from Leander N. Lovell, president of the Board of Education, at the commencement exercises held at the First Baptist church Thursday forty-four pupils were graduated and a large audience heard the address of the occasion by Former Governor George H. Utter, of Rhode Island. Twenty-six of the graduates were boys, and this predominance over the girls is unusual, never having been the case in the local schools before. The occasion marked the last appearance at a commencement of Principal Ira W. Travell, who has resigned to become superintendent of the public schools at Morristown. Lindsey Best, head of the science department, will enter upon the duties of the principalship next fall.

The intense heat had but little effect on the attendance, and special interest was felt in the address of the evening and in the prize awards. At shortly after 8 o'clock, the members of the graduating class filed up the church aisles and took seats on the platform. Seated there were Superintendent of Schools Henry M. Maxson, former Governor Utter, of Rhode Island, Principal Ira W. Travell, Rev. John Y. Brook, pastor of Trinity Reformed church, who delivered the invocation, and Vice-president Charles F. Abbott, who presented the prizes to various pupils of the school.

Suhr's Imperail orchestra of ten pieces was placed in the gallery, and after the rediton of the march by which the graduates entered, the invocation was pronounced by Rev. John Y. Brock. After an orchestral selection came the salutatory address, by Miss Agnes Marguerite Van Norden.

Miss Van Norden's salutatory in part follows:

"We who love so dearly our Alma Mater, and the joys and opportunities that it has brought to us, feel most grateful toward all of you, our friends, who have labored to make our school life both profitable and happy. To the Board of Education, who have worked so hard that our schools might give the best advantages; to Dr. Maxson, who has watched over us from the time we first entered school with almost a father's care and devotion; to Mr. Travell, who has been our friend and adviser throughout the four years of our High School life; and, finally, to the citizens of Plainfield, who have helped us by their support;—to you all we would express our sincere gratitude and welcome you most heartily to our commencement exercises.

"Tonight as we look forward to the new experiences that we are about to begin, I want to tell you about a man, the story of whose happy, self-sacrificing life has been to me a source of help and inspiration.

"Few people have heard of Bishop Patterson, an English missionary, who gave all of his energy, and his full manhood, and finally his life itself to uplifting the poor, ignorant savages of the islands around Australia."

The speech of former Governor Utter, of Rhode Island, was listened to with the keenest interest, and was interrupted by frequent applause. Mr. Utter's speech follows:

"I feel tempted to address this graduating class as 'fellow-alumni,' because I feel that I might well have been one of the graduates of the Plainfield High School. You see, I am not a stranger here, because I was born in the city of Plainfield—over here on Second street. I have come back feeling in a measure as though I've come home to stay.

"Every life has its anniversaries —events by which one can mark time, climaxes in life from which one can look forward and back. Such a time is a graduation time. It is a time when you realize that you have completed a course of study that will tend to develop you in this community.

"The system of education has been made over since I left the little Massachusetts college where I had your superintendent of schools, Dr. Maxson here, as my room-mate. In my time, 'going to college' used to be a solemn event, accompanied by prayers and almost fasting at the time of the farewell, when the son was sent to an institution to be fitted for the ministry, or to get 'general culture.' Nowadays it's all different. There's no fasting when the boy goes away, and there's feasting for the boy when he gets to his college.

"The original aim of a college was to impart a broad culture, but in these days there are many so-called optional courses, and the student may specialize in one phase of learning more and more. If I had my way all college courses would be 'required courses.' My idea of a college is rather as a place for culture and general training than as a place for specializing and training for a definite end. The tendency in our colleges today is to seek for efficiency, and the fact that our college presidents are no longer chosen universally from the ministry is a proof that this thing is broad in its scope. Now when a principle begins to show itself in the college, it also shows itself in the high school and in the grammar school. The trend in college is following the trend in the business life. It is toward the individual today, it is the corporation. All are seeking for efficiency in some one thing.

"You graduates are products of our public schools, and you sit here tonight in testimonial of what the Plainfield public has done for you in giving you an excellent education in the city's schools. You have been given something of inspiration toward efficiency in your school training here, and it is that which you will carry with you through life—not the book-learning you have acquired. To be really efficient there are some things that you must do. First, it is necessary for you to protect your physique, young fellows. If you know that there is anything that is creeping into your lives and habits which tends to mar your physique, cut it out, tonight.

"Then there is another thing. Americans, I feel, have come to consider the dollar as the grade of success in life. The real standard of success in character consists in doing the best you can. Every man or woman knows whether the best use has been made of opportunity. This sort of success you owe to the community which has educated you. Sometimes no one knows that you have attained it except the individual.

"Then to you all there is the danger of admiration for the idle. So many people take educational training solely so that they may have an easier time. I tell you a high school education will never enable you to remain idle; it will only fit you for harder work. The spirit of the times should not be toward idleness, it should be toward labor, inspiring a desire to work hard.

"Now I hope none of you think that because his course of study is completed, he is complete. No one is more to be pitied than the 'finished' man or woman. 'Look at me,' they say, 'I'm done.' And they generally are done. Don't be that way. Keep reading. Read good literature, read Shakespeare, Dickens, Tennyson and Eugene Field, and remember what you read.

"And so finally, members of the graduating class, when you finish your study and get out in the world, whether it be in the home, the college, the office, do your best. If you've done your best, you can face your conscience."

The presentation of rewards, which followed, was by Charles F. Abbott. These are the awards:

Following the presentation of prizes, came the valedictory essay and address, "Joan of Arc," by Miss Sarah Anne Brower.

Miss Brouwer's valedictory in part follows:

"Classmates, I have touched but feebly on the life of this nearly perfect woman, but I have touched lovingly. To me she is an example of a beautiful life, made beautiful not so much by what she did, though she did greatly, as by what she meant to do—the purpose which she took and held and which she never let herself forget. It was her devotion to purpose that made her victorious even in death, a conqueror in death.

"Now, as we meet for the last time as Seniors of Plainfield High School, stirred by the example of a true and noble life, let us resolve to see our purpose clearly as she did, and in a radiant light. Let us never falter on the steep, bright pathway, but climb up, to be sidetracked by nothing, though tempting voices may call, as perhaps they called Joan in the remembered sheep bells of Domremy, and the peasant lispings of her home.

"But—'vestigia nulla retrorsum'—our own motto—'no footsteps backward.' And—there is nothing more. When our feelings are the strongest it is most hard to speak. This is our last night together. Before us throng our hopes and behind us our precious memories; and there is only one thing to say—a simple, hard good-by."

The diplomas were presented by President Leander N. Lovell, of the Board of Education. There were fifteen ushers at the church, in charge of Charles B. Morse. These are the graduates:

GAVE A TALK ON ITALY

Former Mayor L. V. F. Randolph Illustrated His Remarks at Y.M.C.A.

PICTURES OF EARTHQUAKE.

Lecture For Benefit of the Local Protestant Italian Mission.

Under the auspices of the religious work department of the Y. M. C. A. having charge of the Italian Mission work here, L. V. F. Randolph gave an interesting illustrated lecture at the association hall, Friday night. He displayed a large number of views taken by himself in Italy, following the great earthquake, and related numerous interesting incidents in connection with his recent travels through that country.

Mr. Randolph spoke in praise of the Italian and of the prominent position that people occupy today in the world's affairs. His views showed in part the awful results of the earthquake in Italy, but explained that the natives are struggling bravely against great odds in their efforts to rebuild and recover from their fearful loss.

The pictures shown first and then Mr. Randolph gave his lecture. Rev. Lewis Bond, who is chairman of the committee in charge of the Italian work here, presided and introduced Mr. Randolph. He forward Dominic Borretti, the Italian who is in charge of the work among Italians here, made a few remarks, showing the progress being made. He said that there is an average attendance of about forty Italians at the Sunday-evening gospel service and about twenty-five at the Sunday-school. A class in English started for the Italians, which meets Wednesday night, has an attendance of about twenty-five. This work is supported by the young people's societies of the local churches, and the annual expense is about $600.

Mr. Borretti is the protege of Rev. Charles Stelvie, of New York, and was a former student at the Bible Teachers' Training School, New York. He is thoroughly competent for this work and has met with remarkable success during the short time he has been in Plainfield. At the close of the lecture a collection was received for the Italian work here.

EDUCATION FROM 2 POINTS

Miss Mary Lawrence La-Porte's Salutatory at N. P. H. S. Commencement.

Miss Mary La Porte delivered the salutatory at the North Plainfield High School commencement exercises at the New Plainfield theatre Friday night. Her remarks follow.

Education is an all comprehensive subject. It began with the dawn of creation, whether we accept the origin of life as set forth in the scriptures or pin our faith to the theories wrought out by later day scientists.

If, as life had a beginning it also has an end, as a few think, then education reaches out to that end. If on the other hand, there is no end to life, as most people think, then education reaches forward to a boundless and endless eternity. Consequently, we can with emphasis say that education in life, in all of its meanings, and just as it is difficult to adequately define life in its various phases, so really education defies definition and admits only a description and analysis. It is true, however, that many definitions have been advanced and some of them are worthy of consideration for they have served their day and generation well. But, since it is not the purpose of this paper to define education, this education that embraces our home, our school, our churches, our State, and our nation, let us consider briefly two aspects of education, which bear a most vital relation to every one of us, in that these aspects involve the whole essence of life. First, let us consider education from the view point of getting a living and then let us contrast with that education from the idea of living.

At once when we think of education from the standpoint of getting a living we realize that the great majority of us belong under this heading. For self preservation is the first law of life. We are all primarily bread winners, or if by favor of fortune we are not, they ought to be. For a man who fails to earn his living is a burden to society.

And now since we see that this class is so large, we may well ask, "What is the nature of the education which this great host in rank and file possess?" It is hard to determine the exact time its members have spent in school. But it is most certainly true that their school days have been far from few. It is also true that they are for the most part in their condition before they have neglected to improve the wonderful opportunities offered by our public school systems and state colleges. It is a sad fact, indeed as most a tragedy that out of the great numbers graduating from our grammar schools this year, a vast proportion either do not enter the high school at all or drop out after the first year. Only those who graduate from the high school how few ever enter the university!

Why this wreckless disregard for college training on the part of so many? Is it because a higher education, being in the dim distance in the eyes of the youth or are our younger generations, blinded by lack of foresight, listening to the call of the Coin?

Because of this tendency of the youth to drop out of school, many modern educational theorists have advanced splendid schemes for trade schools and industrial institutions, all very good in their sphere, but no boy or girl who has the ability to obtain an education of greater breadth should be content to enter such schools. These theorists would make a machinist or a cook out of every pupil supported by public moneys. But a matter of fact human race they would rear when they hold up before the eyes of youth the all mighty dollar and say, "Struggle for that!" Our young people before entering upon any course whatsoever, at the present, ask the following questions: "How much money am I going to get?" "What is the position?" and "How soon am I to get it?"

In this mad commercial world of the present day, into which our youths enter, many young men who might have been, under right direction, leaders in the world of affairs, and their spheres, have been reduced to mere machines and have no more influence on their surroundings than the adding machine in the bank in which they labor beneath an electric light or the pen with which they dash off the daily correspondence of their employers. We would not depreciate their services, but we would lament a system of education which so cramps their entire life until it has made them but machines to be fed and renders life for them nothing more than food and raiment. Since they have become machines they too often are treated by the big captains of industry as such. Just as when their typewriting machines wear out they purchase another, so when their clerks break down, soon find others to take their places.

Doubtless many would say, "but look at the money that a captalist has heaped up," and he had not a cent to start with. But we must not measure any system of education purely from the amount of cash that it will produce. It is true that there are a great many men in this class which views life from the standpoint of getting a living, who are very wealthy, but as rich as they are, they are not really living. How often we have heard them lament the fact that they have never had the advantages of a liberal education. They have a winter home here and a summer home there, both of which are filled with works of art that to their narrow minds is an ornament, not an inspiration; they have libraries, embracing the best literature of the world, upon which they gaze with admiration, but into which they can never look without misgivings. They envy the youth who has a trained mind and a skilled hand, they would give gladly of their millions for the privilege of entering into that life which is hidden from them. They have labored under the system which trained them to get a living and to accumulate dollars and cents, and when they come down to their last days, realizing that all that is material avails not, they most generously contribute their means for the founding and endowment of those institutions which will give in a way the opportunity to rising generations of being reared under an educational system which educates not from the standpoint of getting a living, but from the view point of living.

But many say at this point, every body must have bread to live. It is indeed true that everyone must have bread to exist but not to live. To live means more than daily bread. We live when a grander and nobler motive enters into our lives, a conception that lifts us above temporal necessities and awakens the drudgery of daily existence, wrought out by dire necessity. This conception was set forth by the world's greatest teacher many centuries ago and has come down through the ages with no uncertain though too often neglected tongue, "Man shall not live by bread alone," but by every word that proceedeth out of the mouth of God."

What are we to understand by every word that proceedeth out of the mouth of God? That would be determined to some extent by the nature of God. We are probably of that God be the gilded image of molten gold, then there is but one message, materialistic and metallistic in its ring. If on the other hand our God is the God of all knowledge, then the message embraces all that is contained in a broad and liberal education, whether we be initiated into that education through the medium of our high schools and colleges or through self-directed methods depending upon that one Source and Emanation of all Knowledge.

There are certain words, every word a world in its self, which come from the mouth of God with no uncertain sound. "The proper study of mankind is man." Most of us here tonight have studied some portion of the world's history, not realizing that we were investigating our own selves, nor feeling that we were listening to the voice of God. For each one of us it is true that he is a stranger to nothing human. There is no one study which is so valuable to us as history in its various forms, as it reveals to us the rise and fall of nations and gives us the power of judging the past, of understanding the present and of glancing into the dim future. Surely this is one of the words and one of the worlds and so full of meaning. Have we listened to its sound?

But our ears are capable of at least catching the other words and as we glance about us and behold the rising sun bringing light and sustaining life; the lightenings flash spreading terror, yet the key that has unlocked so many modern improvements; the forces of nature whose fury, controlled, yields to our comfort; the growing herb breathing out the very quintessence of life. It comes home to us with great force, that if we would know the world in which we live, we must study physics and chemistry and all natural sciences. This is one of the farthest reaching words. Has its sound come to our ears?

Do we pause to listen to strains of sweet music? Do we linger in the presence of sublime works of art? Are we cheered and comforted by the flowers of yonder valley? If so, we are listening to words of no mistakable meaning, which put us in touch with living worlds.

Our ears with studious zeal and attentive ear have caught these wonderful words and have handed the meaning they derive down to us in the beautiful gems of literature, not written in one language but set forth in many tongues. If we have interpreted this word then we have in a measure caught their inspiration, and ought we not by the aid of first hand knowledge strive to understand these words for ourselves and then perchance generations to come shall be benefited and the world shall, once more produce men of literary genius.

God speaks then through history, through natural sciences, through art, and through literature. Have we inclined our ears? If so we will endeavor to lay a foundation in our education which will permit us not to merely exist but to live.

We must not be left under the impression that an education of the nature we have been talking about requires a large income for its support. Any person receiving a living wage may and ought to be included in this class which views life and education on from this broader standpoint, whether he has passed through a school system conducted by others or has created his own school system.

We doubtless shall forget much of what we have learned from books unless we are so situated as to live out in actual experience the ideas we have received in school. It is not, however, so much what we learn in school that profiteth us, but it is the effort we have put forth in acquiring the knowledge and the methods by which we have trained our minds. A very good attempt to define education is certainly advanced as as follows: "Education is that training of the mind which renders the individual competent to adapt himself to his environment." But a far better definition is this: "Education is that training of the mind which renders the individual competent to adjust himself to a changing environment."

Cicero struck the keynote when he said that the great men of Rome so adjusted their plans as to meet new and unexpected situations with new plans. There is nothing stationary or stupid in that statement, but it bristles with progress, growth and development. Such is the value dated to live and their fame has so endured that for hundreds of years one of England's most gifted sons paid them this tribute:

"Surely it is no exaggeration to say that no external advantage is to be compared with that purification of the intellectual eye which gives us to contemplate in infinitive wealth of the mental world, all the hoarded treasures of primeval dynasties, all the shapeless ore of her yet unemployed mines. This is the gift of Athens to man. Her freedom and her power have for more than twenty centuries been annihilated. Her people have degenerated into feeble slaves; her language into a barbarous Jargon; her temples have been given over to the successive depredations of Romans, Turks, and Scotchmen, but her intellectual empire is imperishable. When those who have rivalled her greatness shall have shared her fate, when civilization and knowledge shall have fixed their abode in some distant quarter of the globe, when the sculptured marbles of Pentelicus shall have passed away from England, when perhaps travellers from some distant region shall in vain labor to decipher on some mouldering pedestal the name of our proudest chief, when his countless armies shall have trampled to some misshapen idol over the ruined dome of our proudest temple, shall see a single naked fisherman wash his nets in that river of ten thousands masts, her influence and her glory will still survive. Like eternal youth, exempt from mutability and decay, immortal as the intellectual principles from which they derive their origin and over which they exercise their control."

HOLY CROSS CHOIR GIVES ANNUAL CONCERT

Only a few score people braved the heat to attend the fourth annual concert given by the choir of Holy Cross church at the parish house Friday night, but there was a large sale of tickets and a good sum has been realized. The money will be used for choir music.

Features of the program were the solos by Karl Ball and Frederick J. Pope, who deserved the applause of a larger audience. The chorus work, by the full choir of the church, was excellent, the singers showing the result of careful training by the church organist and choirmaster, Theodore Beach, who furnished the piano accompaniment for the singing. The men's choruses, "A Catastrophe" and "Little Tommy Went A-fishing," won merited applause, and a feature of the chorus singing was the rendition of "The Clickety-Click March," for which there was an accompaniment of clappers.

At the conclusion of the concert, there was a reception in addition under the auspices of the women's guild of the parish, and ice cream was served. The singers were George Ball, Ashley Burner, Russell Brakeley, Loren Gliddes, Walter Kenyon, Carl Noble, Martin Ryan, Clarence Hendrick, Charles Schneegas, Evan Stevens, William Taylor, Ericson Van Norden, Charles Wakefield, Edward Waldron, Herbert E. Harrold, Frederick J. Pope, Edwin M. Schorb, Russell Ball, Thomas Ball, Grant Boos, Allen Diman, Clarence Higgins, Frederick Noble, Raymond Mosher, Howard Riley, Paul Skenk, Carroll Taylor, Walter Thomas, Frederick Van Norden, Edmond Wakefield, Karl Ball, Charles Kregar, Herbert Stine, Ira Vail, Chester D. Western and George A. Westervelt.

AFTER TICKET SCALPERS

Jersey Central Seeks to Enjoin Plainfielders Engaged in Traffic.

THE LOSS $4,500 ANNUALLY.

Five Are Named as Defendants to Appear on Tuesday, July 6—Others Too.

Tony Lusardi, Alexander Lusardi, Samuel Rothberg, William Brummel Feiring and Joseph Cadmus, all of this city, have been summoned to appear before Vice-Chancellor Garrison at Jersey City, on Tuesday, July 6, to show cause why they should not be enjoined for ticket scalping. Vice-Chancellor Garrison signed the order today.

The New Jersey Central, complainants, claim that these defendants have made a business of purchasing commutation tickets between Plainfield and New York and selling two rides for fifty cents. Up-ward of ninety instances of this alleged unlawful use of tickets have been discovered since January first last, it is said. The company declares that it is losing not less than $4,500 by this scalping process.

There has been no particular secret as to the practice here, although it has not been carried on openly. It has often been the custom of regular commuters to loan or hire their tickets out over Sunday or on Saturday, when not in use, and in fact this is done all along the line of the railroad. The fact that the New Jersey Central has taken steps to stop the practice has aroused great interest not only here but in other suburban towns and the outcome will be closely watched.

EARLY CLOSING MOVEMENT AMONG LOCAL MERCHANTS.

The early closing movement among the merchants of the city is being agitated, and the following have decided to close at noon on Saturdays during July and August, and keep open Friday night: Powlison & Jones, J. P. Hansen, Shirley & Johnston, Harold Hansen, Woolston & Buckle, J. Gavett, and it is expected that the hardware merchants will follow the example.

President A. E. Force, of the Merchants' Association, has spent considerable time in an effort to get the dry goods merchants to keep open Friday night and close at noon Saturday. Several leading dry goods merchants have promised to close and they are now waiting for some of the smaller stores to fall in line.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Prayer Meeting Topic For the Week Beginning July 4, 1903.

By REV. R. H. BOYLE.

Topic—Patriotism that counts.—Neh. iv, 4, 5-15.

In Nehemiah we have one of the most inspiring patriots in ancient history. He was one of the number of the Jews who remained in Babylon after the return of many in the reign of Cyrus. He held a high position under Artaxerxes, being a cupbearer of the king in Shushan, the winter residence of the king of Persia. While thus situated visitors from Jerusalem told him the story of the sad condition of the people and city of Jerusalem. He became and sorrowful in appearance, which led the king to ask him the cause of his trouble, and when it was explained the king allowed him to return to Jerusalem. On doing so he aroused the people from their lethargy and, overcoming various difficulties, finished his task. He ruled for twelve years, restoring the temple and the ancient law, which was found in the ruins of the temple, and dealing out justice and equity to all. Nothing is known of him except what is contained in his book, which should be read at this time by every Endeavorer. It is intensely interesting from beginning to end and gives us a complete picture of the patriotism of a man, which counted.

1. Patriotism that counts is an inborn, inherent patriotism. True love of country cannot be manufactured. It cannot be made to order. It must be born into the man and be a natural part of his being. The patriot is born, not made. It was so with Nehemiah. No sooner did Nehemiah hear that his country was in distress than he "sat down and wept and mourned certain days and fasted and prayed before the God of heaven." No such results could have been produced by a pretense of patriotism. Nothing but an inborn love of country could have produced them. His sincerity could not be doubted, because his feelings were manifested in his appearance. True patriotism is always of such a character, and we may thank God that no nation exceeds our own in this kind of patriots.

2. Patriotism that counts must be self-sacrificing. The man who says "I love my country" and then when it is in distress refuses to deny himself for it belies his words. Nehemiah was no such a patriot. Once he left a position of ease and luxury, returned to his native land and, amid great privations and dangers, gave all his powers for the restoration of his people. The patriotism that counts must not consider self. It does not weigh personal pleasure and ease against privation, sacrifice and danger.

3. Patriotism that counts must be exercised in peace as well as war. Nehemiah's sacrifice was not that of his life, though it may at times have been in danger. His patriotism existed in living, though at great sacrifice, for his country. Times of peace often require higher standards of patriotism than times of war. Nations are free from danger when they withsides allen armies. Indeed, most great nations die as a result of inward iniquity rather than by conquering armies. To crush out evil, to uphold righteousness, is a patriotism that counts. But many who would shoulder a gun at the approach of an enemy calmly sit by and allow national, social and personal sins to eat out the vital life of the nation. Our own country is fast approaching the point where we shall need more living patriots than dying ones. The presence of social luxury, which breeds idleness and sin and arouses the anger of the toiling masses, and the undeniable corruption in high places in our commercial and political life are signs of the times that need to arouse the attention of every true patriot in our land and lead him to stand firmly against these things, which are as deadly to a nation's life as leprosy and cancer are to the human and belching guns. "Righteousness (and righteousness alone) exalteth a nation" and preserves it.

BIBLE READINGS.

Ezra vi. 8-10; Neh. ii. 1-5; Ps. xxxiii. 12; cxivii. 20; Prov. xiv. 23; Jer. xxix. 7; Matt. xxii. 24-27; xxii. 15-21; xxiii. 37; Heb. xi. 10, 13-16.

Made by Its Atmosphere.

No one claims that Christian Endeavor has already attained or is nearing perfection, and the following, developing movement, not a dead method or stereotyped form of words, and it can be adapted to the needs of any church. Like all other departments of church life, it depends for its success largely upon the atmosphere that surrounds it. If that atmosphere is worldly, indifferent, selfish or critical the society will probably be weak and inefficient. Whenever you hear the question asked, "What is the matter with the Christian Endeavor society?" you will usually find equal reason for asking, "What is the matter with the church, the Sunday school and the minister?" Some recent criticisms of Christian Endeavor seem to hold the little company of young people who are trying to stem the tide of worldliness that is sweeping so many from their moorings exclusively responsible for the success of the church prayer meeting and the Sunday evening service. If the society is enterprising enough to attract a company of young people to its meeting, but not strong enough to compel them all to go to the second service, then, instead of commending it for what it has accomplished, the advice is given, "Disband it." "Dynamite it." —General Secretary William Shaw.

MILK COMMISSION WORK

Veterinary and a Bacteriologist are Appointed by the Board.

DR. DUNDON IS PRESIDENT.

Dr. Butler Secretary—George E. Clark's Experiments Are Interesting.

The Milk Commission of Union and Middlesex counties, comprising five physicians, Dr. Donahue, Dr. Butler, of New Brunswick; Dr. Fisher and Dr. Church, of Bound Brook, and Dr. A. H. Dundon, of North Plainfield, met Monday afternoon at the home of George E. Clark, proprietor of the Clarkhurst Farm, and organized by electing Dr. Dundon president and Dr. Butler secretary. Among those attending the meeting was State Senator Geo. Silzer, through whose efforts the commission was appointed, and he *spoke in the interest of the move*ment.

The chief purpose of the commission is to insure a certain standard of milk supply, guaranteeing purity. The members will meet once a month. While not a member of the commission, Dr. Voorhees, of Somerville, has been retained as the veterinary, and Dr. Thompson, of Rutgers College, is the bacteriologist for the body.

The commission was greatly interested in some experiments being conducted by Mr. Clark, tending to di prove the theory that while Holstein cattle give large quantities of milk it is lacking in quality. These experiments have proved that the richest butter can be made from milk obtained from Holstein cattle. Experts from Rutgers College have become greatly interested in these experiments and others of a similar character will be conducted from time to time.

ENTERTAINS MINSTRELS ON HIS 21ST BIRTHDAY

George D. Wilson entertained the Franklin Minstrel troue at his home, 426 Madison avenue, Monday night. In the reception of the members Mr. Wilson was assisted by his mother and two sisters. The occasion was the twenty-first birthday of Mr. Wilson and it was taken advantage of by his friends to surprise him. There were about 40 present which included all the members of the troupe excepting Edward J. Harding, who is ill and at the hospital. The lawn about the house was decorated and of course the wives and sweethearts of the members were present to help make the event an enjoyable one. Dancing and singing were enjoyed, the following singers rendering solos: Geo. D. Wilson, Thomas Connolly, George Rittenhouse, George Smith, William Tunison, William J. Fitzgerald add William H. Anderson. James E. Moore contributed a monologue and with the refreshments that were served a jolly good time was spent.

The surprise of the evening came when W. J. Firstbrook, in a neat little speech, presented Mr. Wilson with a silver shaving set, which Mr. Tunison carried in with all the dignity of a feudal retainer. Mr. Wilson's response was lost in the general hand-clapping which followed the presentation, but the boys are sure it was sensible and appreciative.

This reception marked the close of the season for the troupe and according to Mr. Firstbrook it has been a successful one. The net proceeds added to the treasury amounted to $283.85. Next year the troupe will have entirely new costumes and expect to do much better than during the season just closed.

SIXTEEN LOCAL ELKS TO GO TO LOS ANGELES

Sixteen Plainfielders are planning to go to Los Angeles, California, on Monday, at which place the Elks Convention is to be held about July 12. Those expecting to take the journey are Clarence E. Teel, the delegate from Plainfield Lodge, No. 885; A. D. Findlay, Mr. and Mrs. Edward A. Laing, Miss Ethel Laing, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Sandford, Mr. and Mrs. Walter Apgar, Mr. and Mrs. H. G. Black, Miss Black, Miss Dorothy Bull, Mr. and Mrs. R. C. Westcott and Miss Catherine Fingerwere planning to go, but the illness of Mrs. Westcott may prevent it. Two Brooklyn women will also join the Plainfield party.

The Plainfielders will go with the Jersey City Lodge, leaving that place on a special train Monday morning over the Leigh Valley Railroad. They will go to Buffalo, St. Louis and Kansas City and then go over the Atkinson, Topeka and Santa Fe route. The party will make a stop to visit the Grand Canyon in Arizona. After the convention of Elks, the party will attend the Alaska Yukon Exposition at Seattle, returning by the Northern Pacific Railroad to Salt Lake City and then will visit Yellowstone Park, after which they will return home. The entire trip will cover thirty days.

The Plainfielders have secured about 200 gold Elk emblems, which they will exchange for souvenirs en route and at Los Angeles with other member of the order.

EMERGENCY HOSPITAL FOR THE CHARTER DAYS

For the dispensation of "first aid to the injured," and as a retiring and rest room for those effected by heat and weariness, the court-room at city police headquarters is to be transformed into an emergency hospital for the three days of the Charter Day celebration next week. Mayor C. J. Hahn has requested Coroner Kiely and City Physician C. B. Lufburrow to complete the arrangements for the equipment of the court-room as such an emergency hospital.

Cots are to be set up in the courtroom and it is probable that a nurse will be in charge. Various local physicians have offered their services in short tours, and will be relieved periodically day and night. "First aid" remedies will be at hand at all times, the "hospital" being especially for those overcome by the heat or attacked by sickness on the street.

The City Union of King's Daughters is negotiating for a West Front street store in which to establish a similar emergency hospital, which will be in charge of members of the Union during the celebration. The establishment of such emergency hospitals, it is believed, will be a means of simplifying the duties of those at Muhlenberg Hospital, for the petty cases will be attended to at these places.

MANLY TRAINING OF GIRLS.

Our training of girls approaches close to the idiotic, claims Katherine Eggleston in Woman's Home Companion for June. The average girl, from the minute she leaves her dolls to go to kindergarten, till she matriculates at college, is told about boys and men's affairs, and not about women. The kindergarten song and tales are about Lincoln and Washington—and even the pictures of animals show the lion and forget the lioness. In older childhood she is taught to build sand forts instead of mud-pie houses, and to add up even the sums in arithmetic dwell on "Billy's" marbles and "John's" apples, to the total neglect of his sister.

Later still she goes to high school and learns history with all its feats of brave men—and here again the woman's share of quiet courage is completely overshadowed. She learns carpentering, although she cannot cook an egg or sew a seam. And finally, her education finished, she knows all about higher mathematics and is short-changed by the butcher. She learns political econ*omy, but doesn't know who are the* members of her own school board. Miss Eggleston's bright article concludes:

"If your boy wanted to be a lawyer, and your neighbor told you to put him to work in a carpenter's shop by way of preparation, you would think your daughter, who is *to be a wife and mother (and noth*ing can get away from the grim statistics that a majority do, in spite economic independence, the higher education and all other arguments in favor of coeducation), precisely as you trai your son, who will enter some profession or trade, there to first earn his own living, and then to provide for a family of his unborn. The one to bear the family and to rear it, the other to provide shelter and comfort for the mother of that family, and yet both trained precisely in the same way."

He (pointing on field)—That's Green over there. In a few weeks he will be our best man.

She—Oh, Charlie, this is so sudden!—Princeton Tiger.

SCOTCH PLAINS WINS BY A SCORE OF 6 TO 2

The Scotch Plains baseball team outplayed the McKiernan A. C. in the game at the Plains Saturday afternoon, defeating the visitors by a score of 6 to 2. The down the line team got busy in the first inning and found Byers' delivery for two singles. This and some daring baserunning put the visitors in the air and when the smoke cleared the game was well in hand. To make a sure thing of it the home team scored again in the second and third and again in the eighth.

The visitors could do nothing with Montross, only two hits being secured off his delivery. In the second, Shott, first man up, put a clean three-bagger in centre field, but the next three men up could not help him across the plate. In their half of the ninth the home team became too confident and began throwing the ball around and two runs came in on a bad throw to second base. The score:

THE OLD CLASS.

"Why, Father, is it really you?
I ain't saw you since '82—
Or was it June of '83?
Eh? Surely you remember me!"
The Bishop questioningly scans
With kindly eyes teh ragged man's
Rude aspect, and assays to trace
Some look familiar in his face.
"No?" says the man, and his bleared eyes
Wear something of a pained surprise;
"We went to school together then—
Eh? Yes, you've got me now! I'm Ben.
How things have changed since then the old days,
The old boys scattered different ways—
Who? Me? Oh, yes, I'm doin' fine;
Though things is quiet in my line,
I've got a little scheme in sight
That's certain sure to pan out right
The other boys? They—tell the truth—
Ain't filled the promises o' their youth.
Most of the fellows in our class
Has proved nearly gone to grass,
Bill had h isfather's store, but failed,
And Johnny Brown's in Texas—jailed;'
Jack White was workin' in a store,
But I don't see him much no more—
Jim's got a ranch with all the fixin's,
Good fellows, chances of the best,
And yet they couldn't stand the test,
In fact, when all is said and done,
Not one of our old class, not one
Of all them boys that once we knew
Amounts to much but me and you!"

TRINITY REFORMED NINE DEFEATED BY GRCAE M. E.

The Grace M. . E. baseball team defeated the Trinity Reformed team on the former's grounds Saturday afternoon by a score of 13 to 7 in a loosely played game. The outcome never was in doubt after the first inning, the Grace boys getting on to Scofield's shoots in great style. Ira Vall relieved Scofield in the sixth and held his opponents down to three hits. No one run for the last three innings.

The Trinity team, like many others which played in the terrific heat, were unable to put up their usual clever game.

Following is the score by innings:

P. S. C. LINEMAN KILLED

Paul Wood's Death Follows Fall from a 35 Foot Pole.

LIVE WIRE WAS THE CAUSE.

The Shock Loosens His Hold and Man is Fatally Injured—Wife at Death Bed.

Paul Wood, a P. S. C. lineman, was thrown to the street and fatally injured late Sunday night while engaged in repairing the damage caused by the lightning in the morning. Wood was at work at the top of a thirty-five foot pole at Clinton avenue and South Second street and in reaching for his safety belt seized a live wire carrying 2,500 volts.

The shock loosened his hold and he fell to the ground striking the curb which crushed in two of his ribs, one of which pierced his lungs and was the immediate cause of death. James Ellis, another lineman, was in Wood's company, but owing to the darkness did not observe the accident until Wood fell to the street.

Wood was removed to the hospital at once with City Physician Lufburrow in attendance. At the hospital an examination showed that Wood's injuries were fatal and his wife was summoned and remained with her husband till the end.

GOLF SCORES RETURNED AT THE PARK CLUB

There was an unusually large field out at the Park Golf Club on Saturday, when several interesting events were scheduled. The club championship was decided, Dr. H. K. Carroll defeating Rev. C. L. Goodrich, 5 up and 4 to play in the final round. This match was close throughout.

In the play for the President's golf club and Summer cups, several low scores were posted. As a result of the play, Charles B. Morse now leads for the President's and Summer cups. He went out Saturday in 42 and came home in 47, fine playing, considering that course has been made even more difficult. At times he was playing equal to bogie. Dr. Carroll is second for these two cups, W. R. Faber third and R. B. Titsworth fourth.

There is a great revival of interest in golf at the club, thirty new members have been elected recently. The course was never in better condition and it is crowded every Saturday with players. An added feature is the accommodations at the clubhouse, where luncheons and dinners are being given frequently.

The leading scores for the President's, golf club and Summer cups, were as follows:

C. B. Morse, 89, 17-72; W. E. Lough, 96, 21-75; Dr. H. K. Carroll, 90, 10-80; W. C. McNaughton, 98, 11-87.

Mrs. F. W. Jones won the women's handicap competition, nine holes, with a net score of 50. The best scores:

Mrs. F. W. Jones, 62, 12-50; Miss Harriet Shreve, 63, 12-51; Miss May Shreve, 65, 12-53; Miss Grace Tenyck, 70, 15-55.

ELEVEN TO ELEVEN AT END OF 11TH INNING

With the temperature hovering around the century mark, and the sun sending forth its hottest rays, the baseball teams of the Watchung Hunt Club and the Plainfield Country Club struggled for eleven long innings Saturday afternoon, each hoping for victory. Ordinarily nine innings would have been sufficient, but eleven stanzas were played and the contest was called with the score a tie, 11 to 11. If the players recover another game will be played on July 10.

Duncan Bulkley was in the box for the hunt club, while Robert Abbott was the pitcher for the country club aggregation. The former was not up to his usual form, and was hit hard throughout the contest, while Abbott seemed to have better curves and control. In the sixth inning the score was 5 to 4 in favor of the hunt club, and then the opposing nine got five runs over the rubber, making the tally to 9. In the next inning the hunt club got busy and tied the score, 9 to 9, and tallied one run in the seventh and another in the eighth.

This spurred the country club fellows to greater things and they tied the score in the ninth. The score then stood 11 to 11 up to the end of the eleventh inning when the game was called. Some of the players were "all in down and out" as a result of the intense heat, and of the contest had not been called in the eleventh inning, it would doubtless have been necessary to call the ambulance and a corps of physicians. While the game was not played strictly along scientific lines, it furnished no end of fun for the spectators. Both Morris Dumont and Henry DePorest caught well and tried hard for victory.

Mylie Goodwin and J. Hartley Mellick umpired, and they were kept busy deciding the plays, many of them being very close. Several times they were threatened with annihilation by fans' decisions, but they were immovable. The teams lined up as follows:

Watchung Hunt Club—A. L. Otterson, 1b; W. L. Righter, 2b; Stuart Johnston, ss; Wylie Brown, 3b; Gilbert Fletcher, cf; Henry L. Ackley; f; Duncan Bulkley, p; Morris J. Dumont, c; Ford Johnston, W. B. Tyler, lf.

Plainfield Country Club—W. R. Rushmore, 1b; T. W. Wallace, 2b; H. L. Eaton, lf; Henry Cochran, ss; Robert Abbott, p; Henry DePorest, c; Arthur Lovell, 3b; Amos Brooks, rf; F. D. Warren, cf.

Stages will meet all trolley cars for the accommodation of patrons of the race meet, and special arrangements have been completed for band music, during the races.

Buys Taylor Building.

W. A. Clark, president of the Borough National Bank, has purchased the Taylor building, at Park and North avenues, as an investment. Mr. Clark, whose home is in Elizabeth, has not announced his plans concerning the building, but it is reported that there will be alterations in the near future. The former owner of the building was Mrs. J. P. Taylor, of West Seventh street. The consideration could not be learned.

DISCUSS CITY'S WELFARE

Plainfield Protective Association Holds Its Annual Meeting.

RE-ELECT R. HENRY DEPEW.

Mayor Fisk, Former Mayor Randolph and Others Make Addresses—President's Report.

The meeting of the Plainfield Protective Association held Monday in the office of George W. V. Moy, was attended by sixteen members with president R. Henry Depew in the chair. In the absence of secretary Henry C. White, Champlin M. Riley was elected secretary pro tem The president's report, which is printed below, gave the members the topics for the evening's discussion and they were thoroughly threshed out, although no decisive action was taken on any one of them. Mayor Charles J. Fisk spoke at length on the Sewerage Disposal, Water Contract, Police and Public Park, and former Mayor Randolph, A. H. Atterbury and others presented their views on the same subjects. The report of Treasurer Moy showed a balance of $1,686.13 in the treasury.

The following officers were elected for the ensuing year: President, R. Henry Depew; vice-president, G. H. Rogers; secretary, Champlin M. Riley and treasurer, E. W. Bulkley. Executive committee: Albert H. Atterbury, Henry C. White, C. W. McCutcheon, David E. Titsworth, Thos. M. Day, Jr., George W. V. Moy, D. M. Vliet and Henry C. Deknatel.

Mayor Fisk in speaking of the water contract said that there were two things that could be done, acquire the water works either by purchase or through condemnation proceedings, or make a contract for the supply. The first would involve the getting of a value on both the plant and the franchise, which at present could not be done accurately, because the company withholds the information regarding their revenue and expenses. After making an estimate of the cost of a city water works the Public Affairs Committee had come to the conclusion that a city water works would be inadvisable.

Referring to sewerage disposal Mayor Fisk said that the whole State is agitated over this question. The present sewerage bed will be sufficient for some time, but the present tanks will have to be added to within a few years according to the growth of the city. The matter has been taken up with other municipalities and the subject of a trunk system was found to be too expensive at the present time. He also said that sooner or later Plainfield would have to take care of the sewerage from Fanwood, and suggested that a meeting of citizens be called to specially consider the sewerage question.

In the matter of a public park the Mayor said that he believed there ought to be such a park, but that the city ought to own it without any strings attached to it such as the reality people wanted to burden it with, i. e., helping them to enhance their holdings by cutting their street through for them.

Police matters have been laid over for the present as far as the Mayor is concerned, but he said that an increased force would become imperative some day in the not too distant future. The Mayor also explained his reasons for his action in voteing certain street improvements which was on the ground of unequal assessments. At present experiments are being made on the different streets of the city in order to determine what will be the best material for road and street paving. As a peroration his Honor said: "The Common Council and Mayor are simply a corporation of which the people are the stockholders and as such are entitled to their perogative of voteing their say in the administration of the affairs of their city."

Former Mayor Randolph took a fall out of the police system saying that at present there are more patrolmen than it is wise to have and suggested the substitution of "plain clothesmen" whose services would be more effective in the prevention of crime and the detection of criminals. The expenditure of $6,000 to $8,000 more per annum for additional policemen would be unwise, Mr. Randolph also said that as Plainfield is not at the mercy of any water company and the people ought to own the water supply.

Secretary Riley spoke along the same lines and added that such a proposition would be a fine education for citizenship.

Mr. Atterbury referred to the series of burglaries committed several years ago and commented upon the incompetence of the police in those cases and the inefficiency of the present system.

A motion to refer the different subjects to the executive committee with power to appoint sub-committees to look into them was carried and the meeting adjourned.

The annual report of President Depew follows:

In carrying out a suggestion contained in my last annual report a plan of co-operation was arranged with the city authorities and in August the Borough Council passed a resolution which was communicated to us by the Mayor asking our interest and co-operation in the work of the borough government.

The following are some of the important matters taken up:

Veto of Macadamizing Ordinance.

In April or May, 1908, an ordinance to macadamize certain streets was vetoed by the Mayor. As it was understood that the ordinance would be passed over the veto we were asked to obtain an expression of opinion upon the subject. This Association felt that the ordinance should not be passed, and the signatures to petitions and postal cards overwhelmingly endorsed this position. The ordinance was passed but the expression of opinion of the tax payers will tend to induce greater care in future.

Streets—Care and Repair.

In June, 1908, the care and repair of the streets was taken up and during a period of severa lmonths a number of inspections were made and the attention of the authorities called to:

Gross negligence on the part of contractors in not properly protecting streets which had been excavated;

The lumping of heavy cracked stone on streets, particularly along trolley tracks and leaving same without rolling or rolling and wrong methods used in replacing macadam over excavations.

The first complaint was corrected and improvement made in the others, but upon finding that the old method was being used this year the question was again taken up. The attention of Mr. Thomas, of the Street Committee was called to the absurdity of arresting and penalizing a driver of a wagon who permitted any stone to drop in the streets, while the authorities themselves had large sections of streets covered with cracked stone and left without dressing or rolling.

It is unfair to owners of rubber tired vehicles, and particularly to owners of automobiles, to subject them to the loss from damage caused by the carelessness. Efforts to improve the methods have been promised but complaints of such conditions whenever discovered by owners of automobiles and carriages will no doubt assist materially in securing better methods. As there is a specific tax on automobiles the the revenue derived therefrom might be set apart to keep the streets properly surfaced.

Sewage.

On July 6th, 1908, a special meeting of the Association was held to consider the proposed arrangement for Plainfield to care for the sewage from North Plainfield. After an able discussion, the sense of the meeting was favorable to the project under a proper form of contract. Since then a new plan has been proposed involving an expense of about $400,000 of which the city's share would be about $240,000 to $280,000 less amount to be realized from sale of land on which the present plant stands. It is stated that the new plan would involve a reduction of $1,500 or $1,600 a year to Plainfield in cost of maintenance, and there would be additional revenue from increased valuations of surrounding property if plant were removed, and that retention of present plant will necessitate an expenditure of $5,000 or $6,000 within a year and about $50,000 within two or three years.

Netherwood Fire House and Street Opening.

When the new fire house was located at Netherwood, a proposition to extend either Johnson or Madison avenue under the railroad to South avenue, seemed to be favorably considered by the Council. The chief reason advanced by those favoring the project was the necessity of giving quick access to the north side of the city. Upon finding that the city's share of the expense would be from $25,000 to $30,000 we urged a change in location of fire house rather than the assumption of this additional expense. As the Council were strongly against changing location of engine house demonstrated that loss of time from use of present streets was so slight as not to justify the great expense of opening another street and we believe that this was largely instrumental in the project being dropped.

Lights.

In September last the street lights were again in very bad condition, owing to insufficient and irregular voltage and serious neglect of renewal of lamps. Many complaints as to conditions in houses were also received. The matter was taken up with the Public Service Corporation and a series of joint investigations made with the result that all lamps were changed throughout the city and borough and a better system inaugurated. A number of defects in wiring and apparatus were also corrected, resulting in greatly improved service. We are now able to follow up renewals as the company have furnished us with a card cabinet, and lamp renewal slips are sent to us daily. The connecting of the Cranford plant with Plainfield has produced a great improvement in service, but a very serious question arose in connection therewith. The company proposed to carry their high potential wires on poles through North avenue to Richmond street, and from there to their Plainfield plant through a conduit. Owing to the very serious menace of life and property from these wires, the city authorities strongly objected to the overhead method but were advised by the Corporation Counsel that they could not prevent it. At a conference with city officials, we stated that the carrying out of this plan would be absolutely against our arrangement for friendly co-operation and at our suggestion a meeting with Public Service representatives was arranged at which the matter was discussed from this standpoint. As a result of this conference they extended their conduit to Leland avenue beyond which is the water company's park. This minimizes the danger, and we feel that the result does credit both to the Protective Association and the Public Service Corporation. At this meeting we called attention to the very dangerous condition under the bridge at Netherwood where 11,000 of high voltage wires dropping down within reach of all pedestrians. As many of these wires carried 2,200 volts, and as 1,200 volts will kill a man, the danger from defective insulation is apparent. A request to Grover Neville to notice was refused on the ground that in eight or ten days they would be carried over the railroad tracks. The city authorities had the power and should have compelled immediate removal of this danger, but three or four weeks later they were still in the same condition. We then took the matter up with the Council and urged immediate action and the wires were lifted beyond reach on receipt of our communication.

Trolley Service.

Assistance was rendered in bettering the trolley service but an urgent request to the city authorities to compel the company to furnish new cars as agreed remains without action. The city authorities appear to have been lax in their failure to incorporate in provisions in the written franchise or agreement and in allowing a year and a half to elapse without compelling fulfillment of the verbal agreement. Failure to compel the Public Service Corporation to live up to their agreement will be quite inexcusable and had to be shot. This animal ran fully a half-mile after breaking its neck before it dropped.

Failure to compel the Public Service Corporation to live up to their agreement will be quite inexcusable comment and it is to be hoped that no further delay will be allowed. With the aid of the Corporation Counsel no great difficulty should be experienced in compelling the company to live up to its word and the withholding of all further payments on account of public lighting and, if necessary, the removal of the second track would probably be an effective means of bringing the matter to a satisfactory conclusion.

Various other questions have been considered from time to time. Complaints have been received and assistance rendered in securing *improved service and correction of ex*cessive bills. An investigation of the character of persons moving furniture shows, with the intention of quietly securing the elimination of objectionable ones, was being made when action by the Mayor made further action unnecessary. The water question has been considered, but no conclusion reached.

In my last annual report I called attention to the rapid increase in municipal expenses and bond issues and the resulting increase in taxes. Since then other citizens have written and spoken upon the subject, but no concerted action has been taken to find a solution of the question which I presented, namely: "Is it advisable for Plainfield to go on piling up a debt and increasing its expenses, and thereby continually increasing taxes, or to apply the brakes and go a little slowly in our effort to change from a suburban city of homes into a metropolis?" That the warning was more than justified is borne out by the fact that the tax rate will be tax rate from 160 to 165.

Consider for a moment the following gtable:

	Assessed Valuations.	Tax Rate.	Taxes Raised.
1905	$17,240,128	1.45	$250,779
1906	20,895,619	1.35	288,043
1907	21,886,433	1.40	306,409
1908	22,687,789	1.40	324,217
1909	23,000,000	160 to 165	Estimated.

In 1906 the total assessed valuation was more than doubled, therefore this year's rate, on the basis used in 1905 will be up to 320, an increase of from 72 to 82 points or 30% to 33 1-3%—surely an extraordinary increase. The increased amount raise dover that in 1905 will be about $120,000 or about 46 2-3 cents valued at $1,000 in 1905 paid a tax of $248. This year the tax will be $320 to $330. If the taxpayers do not wish to allow these conditions to continue and to stand the further increases which must follow the present extraordinary increases beginning in 1906, indicate erroneous assessments, necessary increase of expenses or extravagance in administration.

The happy-go-lucky way in which we have gone on making improvements and piling up of expenses regardless of consequences should no longer continue. If assessments are wrong let them be corrected. If the increase of our County tax since 1905 from $45,604 to $65,711 and of our State School tax from $117,409 to $147,844 is due to inequality of assessments throughout the county and State, action should be taken to secure a proper readjustment. If increased expenses are necessary we must accept the fact, but any increase due in whole or in part to extravagance should be promptly checked. And in order that the development of Plainfield may go along the best lines, progressive and yet conservative, sufficiently liberal to promote the best interests but not extravagant to result in disaster and having in mind the interests of the small taxpayers as well as the large, I would suggest that an invitation be extended to all taxpayers to join this association. That a general committee, divided into sub-committees be formed to carefully investigate all of the different questions in Plainfield, including schools, police, fire, water supply, parks, streets, sewerage, trolleys, lights, assessments, taxes and finance, and in conjunction with the city authorities, endeavor to work out a general plan of harmonious development for the future. Sufficient time should be taken to make careful investigation of, and to give thought to all sides of the various questions and in the meantime all unnecessary expense should be eliminated. A movement of this kind should accomplish immense good both by arousing the interest of all citizens in public affairs, and by securing a broad and liberal and enduring foundation on which to build, and if this plan is approved, I would suggest steps be taken to put it in effect as soon as practicable.

RUFUS C. FINCH HURT, HE LOSES FINE HORSE

Rufus C. Finch is detained at his home with severe injuries, the result of a mishap which occurred in the steeplechase meet of the Monmouth County Hunt Club, Saturday. He was mounted on Fletcher Harper's horse, Gendarme, and the animal crowded the rider into a fence twisting the ligaments, until it was thought that the leg was broken. Mr. Finch was found on the course by his brother, Harry Finch, who assisted him to an automobile and brought him home. He will be detained to his bed for several weeks. Today it was learned that no bones were broken.

The many sore spots from which Mr. Finch is suffernig do not compare with his great loss in the death of his fine horse, Lady Potentate, which fell and broke its leg in the same meet and had to be shot. Mr. Finch has hunted with this horse all season and he valued teh animal highly. Earlier in the season at Cedarhurst, Mr. Finch lost another horse in a neck being broken and had to be shot. This animal ran fully a half-mile after breaking its neck before it dropped.

BRIDGE WHIST PARTY FOR CHILDREN'S CAMP

For the purpose of raising funds for the summer children's camp near Riverton, Conn., in which they are interested, Miss Jessie Goddard and Miss Mattie Merrill, of this city, gave a bridge whist party Monday afternoon at the Cedarcroft on Park avenue. There were thirteen tables and the play was greatly enjoyed. Five prizes were presented for the affair and after the play it was announced that Miss Josephine Lapsley received first honors, Mrs. W. A. Conner second, Mrs. Harry Lovell third, Mrs. Grandi Wilson fourth and Mrs. Reeve Mockton fifth. Refreshments were served.

This summer work for New York children is established on a large farm at Riverton, owned by Miles Roberts, of this city, and is conducted by the Union Settlement, of New York. Miss Goddard and Miss Merrill became interested in the work last year and they will have charge of the camp during Agust this year. Twelve children from New York are allowed to remain at the camp for one week, or nearly fifty children a month. Yesterday's affair was a success and as a result $35.00 was realized for the charity.

THE PARISIAN ACTRESS.

A very prevalent idea about the Parisian actress, says M. Raphael in the Lyre Illustrated, and she is in the main a lay figure on which to hang pretty clothes. But this is anything but true. An American or Englishman in speaking of the Paris stage and of the actresses upon it, will mention Sarah Bernhardt, Jane. Bartet and then stop. "And, of course, there are lots of charming little actresses," he probably will add. Now, this is all wrong. The great fault of the average visitor to Paris is that eleven times out of seventeen, his French does not enough for him to order dinner in a restaurant where the head waiter learned some English in Margate, but is entirely insufficiently to enable him to appreciate the French play. In consequence he does not try to, forgere, where he admires Mlle. Marville as Queen Victoria; his second at the Olympia, his third at Barrasford's Alhambra, his fourth at the Moulin Rouge, and so on. In all these places the chief attraction is not the acting. There is acting in all of them, of course, and good acting, too; but the shows are arranged to suit the taste of foreigners as much as, or more than, that of Parisians.

"A PENCIL PISTOL."

There is never complete freedom from danger of some kind or another, but there are some dangers that might be minimized in result were a capable means of self-defense at hand. A mad dog, a highwayman, and many other "scares" which be*set us in everyday life may come* when we are in a state of unpreparedness. Armed with a little ingenious device, such as the "pencil pistol," a new invention, many such predicaments might assume less dangerous aspects.

The "pencil pistol," which can be carried in a vest pocket or in a lady's handbag, is a very simple contrivance, consisting of only three parts—a barrel, a trigger spring and the stock. It fires .25 calibre short cartridges, and with sufficient power to penetrate at thirty feet a two-inch plank. There is this point about all such weapons. They are dangerous in the hands of the mischievous and inexpert, and they should be in the hands of responsible adults only.—William R. Carpenter, in the June Van Norden.

O'Leary, Brooklyn; "The Healing of the Branch," Allen D. Cloke, Rahway, first scientific honor.

President W. H. S. Demarest announced that the college trustees had conferred the honorary degree of Doctor of Laws upon Governor Fort, in recognition of his ability and success in the law, his service as a justice of the Supreme Court of New Jersey, and his attainment to the office of Chief Executive of the State.

He announced also that the trustees had conferred the honorary degree of Doctor of Laws in absentia upon George William Hill, of New York, on his fiftieth anniversary of his graduation.

The other honorary degrees conferred were: Electrical engineer, Charles E. Pattison, New York, '84; master of arts, Dr. William Carr, New York; Rev. Dr. Charles Burroughs, Kinderhook, N. Y.; doctor of divinity, the Rev. James L. Kittell, of Albany, N. Y.; the Rev. George L. Curtis, Bloomfield.

Governor Fort received a great reception at the banquet of the Rutgers College Alumni Association yesterday afternoon, where he was one of the speakers. He followed President W. H. S. Demarest, who had referred to the need of a memorial building and hinted that the State of New Jersey might build it for the college.

The Governor said in opening that if it were possible for him to vote on the question of the State supplying such a building he would vote affirmatively. "The State of New Jersey owes very much to Rutgers College," he continued. "The history of this State could be written from the memoirs of the men who have come from this college to take their places in the administration of the affairs of the State. The list of famous men who have gone from Rutgers is a long and wide one. The names we can remember have brought honor not only to the State and college, but to the entire nation.

"The college man is the man of the hour. A man without the advantages of a college education may do much, but the college man leads to make for better government and civic righteousness. If you go on without doing something for the betterment of conditions you have not done your duty. If you do not help to further the cause of better government and better conditions you help defeat the purpose of this republic. The man who does not do all in his power for the betterment of conditions is just as guilty by nonaction as the man who by wrongdoing helps to defeat improvements. Failure to do anything is dangerous."

INVESTIGATED WOOD CASE

American Institute for Scientific Research Studies Strange Murder.

"THE LITTLE BLACK MAN."

Psychological Phenomena Interests Scientists Who Complete Investigation.

The American Institute for Scientific Research has just returned to Codington & Swackhamer the evidence taken in the George Wood murder case, which was tried in 1905. This was probably one of the most interesting cases of the kind in recent years. George Williams, a well-to-do grocer, residing at Watchung, was murdered on the Warrenville road one day, while visiting his customers.

The dead body was found in a sleigh by neighbors, and the search for the murderer continued for several days, finally leading to New York, where George Wood was arrested and after a sensational trial, was found guilty of the charge of murder. The trial was remarkable in many ways, one peculiar feature being that the defense claimed that Wood had been mysteriously accompanied through all his strange wanderings by a "Little Black Man," who directed his movements and never for a moment quitted him.

The introduction of the "Little Black Man" to the public resulted in the enormous sale of little black men all over the country. S. S. Swackhamer, who was assigned by the Supreme Court to defend Wood, was associated with Attorney George Bird.

The record of the evidence was obtained by Dr. James H. Hyslop, of this institute, some time ago for the purpose of psychic research, the case showing some extraordinary psychological features. During the progress of the trial sixteen newspaper reporters were in constant attendance and over 32,000 words were telegraphed to the local and New York and Philadelphia papers, it is stated.

The case excited a wide interest and during its continuance defendant's counsel received communications concerning it from scientific men in various parts of the country. Five eminent physicians in New York city volunteered their services, and working with Dr. Hall, Wood's New York family physician, and Dr. Lufburrow, of this city, devoted weeks to the preparation and maintenance of the defense, and though the State produced thirty-five witnesses against the defendant he was kept from the electric chair and was given a sentence that will confine him for twenty years in State prison at Trenton, where he is now serving his time.

In opening the defense to the jury Mr. Swackhamer stated that Wood had been mysteriously accompanied through all his strange wanderings by a little Black Man, who directed all his movements and never for a moment quitted him. This little black man, Dr. Parker demominated the Psychic Aura. This Psychic Aura or little black man was afterwards put into concrete form by some enterprising manufacturer of New York city and little black men sold along the streets. Mr. Swackhamer, who was assigned by the Supreme Court to defend Wood, was associated with Lawyer George Bird in the trial, and a short time ago both counsel visited the defendant at the State prison where they found him in much the same condition which he had shown during the trial.

Decorated Dishes.

Ices and creams look most attractive when put into individual glasses, with perhaps a cherry or a bit of candied mint or a strawberry on top; but a home-made cream which is turned directly from the cylindrical freezer on to the dish may have a few split ladyfingers pressed around the edge and a handful of cherries and citron leaves arranged on top, which at once it becomes quite an elaborate dessert. Fresh strawberries arranged with their leaves around a plain brick of cream also transform it at once into a festival dish.—Harper's Bazar.

Sprinkling Clothes.

If clothes are to be ironed soon after being sprinkled it is well to use warm water for sprinkling. Warm water spreads more quickly than sold, and so the moisture becomes evenly distributed in a shorter time than if cold water were used.

RECEIVE DIPLOMAS

Grammar Schools' Graduates Addressed by Rev. Dr. Anderson.

THE YALE CUP IS AWARDED.

Interesting Exercises at High School Auditorium—Dr. H. M. Maxson Speaks.

More than five hundred attended the commencement exercises of the city grammar schools, held at the Plainfield High School auditorium Wednesday afternoon, when the graduates, 102 in number, received their diplomas from President Leander N. Lovell, of the Board of Education. Because of the extreme heat, the exercises were short, the brief address of Rev. Dr. Charles M. Anderson, of the First M. E. church, being followed by remarks to the graduates by Superintendent Henry M. Maxson of the city schools.

In the course of his remarks, which were of an informal nature, Dr. Anderson said that the two great systems most admired in society today are the public school system and the universal church of Jesus Christ. He added that the two go hand in hand, and are the sources of all the benefits and advantages that come to young and old. The part of his address was on the topic "What the school may do for us," and he spoke of the opportunities for character development in the daily school life. "The school life," said the speaker, "teaches us to form the proper kind of habits. If we can form good habits, we are fortunate, for a person must form habits, and if we do not form good habits, we will form bad habits." The address concluded with the citation of various Bible passages which the speaker said would form a guide to right living.

Dr. Maxson's talk, which followed, was patriotism. "It is just as noble to live for one's country as it used to be considered to die for one's country. Few men are privileged to die for our country, but it is within the range of all of us to live for our own country. We must all live right, for the best interests of our community and our country. To live right does not mean only not to do wrong, but to live positively. We need boys and girls and men and women who shall do right things strongly and efficiently. To live this kind of a life we must train our judgment. To be the best sort of patriots, we must have good judgment of right and wrong, the power to think quickly, and discernment. In other words, we must have education. Thus you see that by going to school, you are performing a patriotic duty, and increasing your efficiency to this land of ours. The boy or girl who neglects this opportunity is a greater foe than a traitor to the United States."

Three of the graduates gave recitations in connection with the graduation exercises. These were Miss Mary Gwendolyn Stanton, Miss Maude Ivy and McAfee and Stanley Williams Burke. Their reciting won merited applause. The musical program included choruses by the class, which was seated in tiered seats on the platform, and two soprano solos by Mrs. Guy Bender. The invocation was by Rev. Charles L. Goodrich. The ushers were F. Clyde Doane, G. Stanley Robbins, Charles Prior, Jr., and Guion H. Fountain.

OF THOSE WHO WALK ALONE.

Women there are on earth, most sweet and high,
Who lose their own, and walk bereft and lonely,
Loving that one long heart until they die,
Loving it only.

And so they never see beside them grow
Children, whose coming is like breath of flowers;
Consoled by subtler loves the angels know
Through childless hours.

Good deeds they do; they comfort and they bless
In duties others put off till the morrow;
Their look is balm, their touch is tenderness
To all in sorrow.

Betimes the world smiles at them, as 'twere shame,
This maiden guise, long after youth's departed;
But in God's book they bear another name—
"The faithful-hearted."

Faithful in life, and faithful unto death,
Such souls, in sooth, illume with luster splendid
That glimpsed, glad land wherein the vision saith,
Earth's wrongs are ended.

CITY FATHERS' SESSION

Public Hearing on Gas Stop Cocks Develops Little Opposition.

THE FIRE WORKS ORDINANCE.

Sane Fourth of July Measure Passes on Third Reading—Other Matters.

The public hearing granted by the Common Council June 23, on the proposed ordinance compelling the installation of gas "cut-offs" was a tame affair, contrary to expectations. It was believed that the representatives of the Public Service Corporation would make a vigorous fight against the adoption of the ordinance.

L. D. H. Gilmour, assistant counsel for the company was present and he simply requested the Council to amend the ordinance so as to provide that "cut-offs" be installed on gas pipes of 1¼ inch and over, instead of 1¼ inch pipe. He explained that the company is not putting in pipe of the latter size, but is installing "cut-offs" on all pipe of 1¼ inch and over.

This suggestion seemed to meet with the approval of the Council and at the next regular meeting the ordinance will doubtless be amended and adopted. By this proposed action the company will be relieved of the duty of installing "cut-offs" all over the city wherever an 1¼ inch pipe is run into a dwelling.

The ordinance providing for the regulating of the discharge of fireworks, fireworks, etc., and prohibiting such display on the public streets, was called up by Mr. Holt and adopted on third and final reading, and ordered engrossed and advertised. This will become effective before July 4.

R. A. Meeker, S. P. T. Wilbur and H. B. MacDonald, sewer commissioners, appointed to assess benefits and damages in connection with work done during the past two years, asked for an extension of time to make a final report. A resolution offered by Mr. Buxton and adopted, extended the time to August 16, 1909. The total estimated cost for this sewer work has been determined to be $74,683.24, and the commissioners are required to assess the cost of same equitably upon the affected property-owners.

MISS DEWEY'S PUPILS IN PIANO MUSICALE

Pupils of Miss Carrie C. Dewey pleased an attentive audience at the parlors of the Crescent Avenue church Friday afternoon, when they showed considerable ability in the rendition of a program of piano music. The young players were at their best, and the various selections were rendered with confidence, technique and expression rarely equalled in pupil recitals. There were seventeen pupils who took part in the program, which included a trio by the Misses Helen Newman, Edith Lowrie and Ruth Voorhees and duetts by the Misses Virginia and Jocelyn Nolting, and Elmer and Laurence French.

The program follows: "Slumber Songs," duetts by Miss Virginia and Miss Jocelyn Nolting; Farandole, (Schmoll), Chester Alpaugh; trio, Waltz in G, (Streabbog), the Misses Helyn Newman, Edith Lowrie, and Ruth Voorhees; "The Hunter's Horn," (Schmoll), Louie Starkweather; "Away to the Woods," (Heins), Helyn Newman; Melody in, F (Rubenstein), and "Momen Musicale," (Schubert), Philip Phillips; Polonaise, (Mildenbarg), Miss Ruth Voorhees; Polonaise, (Schmoll), Miss Katherine Bingham; Melody, (Bingham), Miss Edith Schwartz; Gavotte, (Ambrose), Elmer French; "Pilgrim's Chorus," (Wagner) and Polka, (Spindler), Miss Jane Brower; "Spring Song," (Merkel), Miss Hannah Bingamin; Sonata, (Reinecke), Miss Helyn Newman; Romance in C, "Le Contes d'Hoffman," Laurence French; "Spring Dawn," (Mason), Miss Edith Richards; Prelude in D flat, (Chopin), a Melody, (Lichner), Miss Martha Camp; Masourka, (Meyer-Helmund), Miss Constance Pitts; "Country Dance," (Nevin), Elmer and Laurence French.

PRINCIPAL GETS GIFTS

Mr. Travell, Who Goes to Morristown, Receives Many Tokens of Esteem.

TEACHERS REMEMBER HIM.

So Do Faculty and Pupils—Miss Lena Bass Praises Retiring Principal.

Gifts from the faculty, from the students and from the class of 1908 of the City High School were presented to Principal Fra Travell at the final assembly exercises of the school year, Thursday. A gold signet ring was the gift from the faculty. It was presented by Miss S. Lena Bass, who said:

"Only we who have labored side by side with you can realize what fidelity means to you longer have your kindly advice, your loyal sympathy in our perplexities, and your encouragement in our success. Our heartiest good wishes go with you in your new field of work and you may rest assured that you will always have a large share in our thoughts and affections. We hope that you will wear this ring and that it will be a continual reminder to you of our loyalty and devotion."

Immediately after this a party of boys brought forth from a store room a handsome mission library table, morris chair and waste basket, all of which were presented on behalf of the student body by Walter Knowlton, president of the senior class. Mr. Travell responded to the presentation speeches in a few well chosen words in which he reiterated the pleasure that he had had in his work here, because of the hearty co-operation and sympathy of the student body and teachers. Just as the exercises came to a close he perceived a large bunch of red and white carnations, the gift of the class of 1908. This was not formally presented but a small card went with it on which was written a message of appreciation and regret from the class of 1908 by Miss Sara Sanderson, the vice-president.

Following this, President Edward Stevenson, of the Yale Club, presented Allen Snyder with a large silver loving cup, the award to the P. H. S. boy who had shown in his course the best record in scholarship and athletics. The exercises were concluded by the presentation of ribbons to the winners in the annual field meet, and by the singing of the school song.

SUPERINTENDENT'S PRAISE FOR PRINCIPAL TRAVELL

Appreciation of Principal Travell's service in the Plainfield schools was the keynote of Superintendent Maxson's annual address to the graduating class of the city high school Thursday morning. He said:

"Sixteen years ago I brought to the P. H. S. a young man full of energy and promise. I have watched him grow from year to year with satisfaction and pleasure, just as I noted you boys and girls grow. I have seen him grow in breadth of outlook, in sympathy, in warmth of devotion to the interests of my boys and girls. I have seen him grow in power to read the individual pupil with his helpful strengthening influence and no one knows as I do how many pupils have sought individual help and encouragement, not only in their studies but in other interests of life. I have seen this school grow into the whole some, strong, happy family that it is. I have seen the man grow into the best high school principal that I know.

"As we have worked side by side our lives have grown together; he has helped me, I have tried to help him, our lives have become one in our efforts to serve you.

"I cannot tell you what it means to me to have him go to another field to work. It leaves me bereft indeed, but even while I feel the smart of the personal loss, for the love I bear him I can only rejoice in his future. I see him at the head of

COMMERCIAL EDUCATION

The Subject of Miss Hazel DeForest Rose's Valedictory Address.

"The Need of a Commercial Education" was the subject of Miss Hazel De Forest Rose as valedictorian at the North Plainfield High School commencement exercises Friday night at the new Plainfield theatre. Miss Rose's address follows:

At present time the question as to whether we are in need of greater facilities for a good commercial education is being given more attention than ever before. Our country is expanding, the struggle for control of new markets is becoming sharp, and there is great need of a thorough understanding of the laws of trade and the manner of doing business. This need has for half a century been recognized in European countries which found themselves outdistanced in commercial pursuits, called upon by the conditions of their national life to enter upon new methods. It has resulted in the founding of several schools for commercial education of different grades, which have already become distinguished in the establishing of some phases of commercial education which are new and important.

In this country the movement has attracted sufficient attention for the universities of Pennsylvania, California and Chicago, as well as Columbia, to announce special courses of instruction in commercial subjects, but it seems to have gained little genuine recognition, for even these courses seem to have been established more for the benefit of the local institutions than from any conviction that the need in a general sense exists. This is shown by an article in the "Independent" by President Irving, of the Western Reserve University, in which he writes deprecatingly of the movement, implying that a good education in law or in the counting house is all that is necessary for the special training of a merchant and that the ordinary business college is sufficient for all other needs.

This opinion, however, is founded on a complete misunderstanding of the situation and is void of knowledge as to the actual demands of our present business world. It is not a question of what constitutes the quickest way for those who have to support themselves to enter into a successful business career, for this question is answered by the ordinary business college. It is a larger question and one which the answer, "something just as good," will not serve. The rapid development of the business life of our country and the wide diffusion of wealth have given us a number of young men, successors of fathers who have developed large and successful enterprises in the business world. Now, the question is how can these young men best fit themselves not only to carry on their business successfully but to be able to compete in the world's markets and take charge of some of the largest trusts that have ever been known?

This is the larger side of the question, and one which does not appeal to all. But it does in the end mean a good, practical, commercial education. Many graduates from high schools know a great deal of history and can answer all sorts of abstract questions, but these are not practical when their business career. They cannot figure compound interest or keep a good set of books and they cannot do many of the things necessary in the ordinary business routine. From this it may be plainly seen that the demands for practical all round commercial graduates who can fill more than office boy positions and will be a pride to the school that graduated them.

This may not be true in cases in which a living needs not be earned; but how many of those who have to earn their own livelihood go out into the world poorly equipped for the difficulties they will encounter! They must spend all their lives trying to do something better, but not succeeding because thousands who have had a better education than they, are far ahead of them. Of course, it is possible to work one's way to a high place in spite of the lack of a commercial education; but how many weary months of toil and learning by hard experience might have been saved! A boy who has to earn his own living has a great advantage if, before attempting to battle with the world, he is armed with the powers which a commercial education can give him. Starting out with good equipment for success, one-half of the battle is already won. On the other hand, take a boy or a girl with no commercial education who must earn his own living. He must start from the bottom of the ladder and only by unremitting toil can he climb higher. Of course, if he is bright, energetic and able, he may learn from observation; but the drawbacks thus presented are obvious. A person with a good education along the commercial line would rather have a young man or a young woman who understands what is required of him, who can perform his duties faithfully and well. Such a one has all the essentials at his fingertips and his mind is more fully developed to assimilate the fine points of the business.

A business education teaches young men and young women the best methods of conducting business. Business men look with more favor on commercial schools than they did ten years ago. They have found that graduates are well trained, and are able to do what is expected of them. The value of a commercial education is recognized in the rapidity with which commercial courses are being established in all of the leading high schools.

Long before it became an important factor in the courses of our high schools, its value was recognized in the establishment of business. The number of business colleges in the United States in 1907 was 445, with 2,856 instructors, and 137,564 students. This shows something of the importance of the place the business college has taken in the educational field. However, since commercial subjects have been so widely introduced into the high school, there has been a visible decrease in the number of pupils at the business colleges. Many institutions soon recognized the importance of doing more advanced work. They saw that if they did not raise their standards they must necessarily die out, since a much higher grade of work was taught in the high schools. In order then, to keep up their line of work, the business colleges were forced to increase their requirements considerably, and as a result, they stand much higher than a few years ago.

The increasing demand for a commercial education, as shown by the larger number of colleges and schools which have taken up the subject, is, therefore, partly due to the changed conditions of things at the present time from conditions years ago. The commercial life is taking a larger place in the world than ever before, whereas formerly a young man was urged to become a professional man, now he goes into business for a successful career. When the commercial relations of a nation extend throughout all continents, when its mercantile and naval marine is equipped for the very best service, and its flag waves over many continents, it has come to be a country of intelligence, financiers of wisdom, and inventive and enterprising organizers.

Then too, the changed condition surrounding women cannot be forgotten. Commercial education has opened up a field of work for women than has anything else. Stenography and typewriting are the "open sesame" through which women may pass to the industrial world. Now women may enter all lines of profession save the army and navy. A few years ago according to Harriet Martineau, only seven occupations were open to women—teaching, needle-work, keeping boarders, cotton mill work, book binding, typesetting and household service. From 1890 to 1900 the increase in workers in eighty-six occupations can be traced in a large measure to the commercial training.

The evolution of business training may be divided into three well marked stages. First, the business college stage, then the adoption of some branches of business subjects by the high schools, and lastly the separate commercial high school. From this it may be plainly seen that the business college was the first evidence of the recognition of the importance of a commercial education by the universally book-keeping crept into the high schools and then stenography, until at last the entire commercial course was adopted.

Our advance in civilization, which is through the growth of our commerce and other things related to the business world demands a commercial education. We must remember that at the highest point of civilization in other countries business was at a high mark. Take Venice, for example. When its commercial pursuits were at their highest its civilization had also reached its zenith, and upon the decline of business, civilization began to fall.

It has been aptly said that when a system has come abreast of the times the question is "what next!" and if our educational system started with Harvard and came down to the present, will not the commercial high school come next?

It is true that we do not care for an education that has for its only ideal a high salary. However powerful this argument may be, we still want an education that gives us good citizens, who are patriotic, and who will prove they country to the best advantage. But does not the commercial education do this just as much as any other line of training?

It is of great importance also to remember that a commercial education furnishes mental training and development similar to that of any other education. Of course, the commercial course has no languages or at least not more than one, but we must remember that the object of the study of the languages is culture and it can train the mind and more to solve the problems of life than can the study of shorthand and typewriting. The commercial course is a training of the hands as well as the mind, but that does not give it an inferior place beside the other courses. After a pupil has taken four years of history, four years of English, and at least one language, besides the commercial subjects, is he not entitled to just as great credit as one who has graduated from another course? His mind must necessarily be developed to the same degree as one who has graduated from a classical course. That education is most valuable which enables its possessor to meet the greatest number of problems that are likely to present themselves, and does not the commercial course do this for one who anticipates a business career? The commercial course, to a high degree, cultivates disciplined habits of thought and this is one of the general aims of all education. A commercial education of a general kind, including all the subjects contained in a high school commercial course is what we need, not the study of only a few commercial subjects such as shorthand and typewriting. The result of specialization is a narrow training along one line which may prove of no value to the possessor. But, in general, a student who has mastered the parts in the commercial course shows just as much aptitude in mastering the subjects of the classical course as the student of the classical course shows in taking up commercial subjects. This indicates that he is just as fully developed and ready to assimilate new lines of thought.

Now, for a moment, let us look at the results of the demand for business training in Europe. In Germany large universities and academies have been established. In these there are now three thousand commercial students, three hundred and ninety of whom are foreigners from countries where no provision is made for that kind of training. The Berlin and Leipzig universities are the most important of these. In Switzerland commercial education is on a higher plane than anywhere else, due to the peculiar conditions of the commercial class. Owing to their thorough knowledge, Swiss business men have acquired a high reputation in the business world and Swiss clerks have won prominent positions in foreign firms. In Great Britain too, efforts are made in behalf of commercial education of the higher kind. An experiment was recently made at Victoria University of Manchester.

The subject has also received attention in France since 1870. The government has organized no schools of this kind, but it has encouraged the work of the Chambers of Commerce in this direction. In Belgium there are several institutions in which only commercial branches are taught. The Commercial Institute in Antwerp was founded in 1852 by the joint efforts of the government and the municipal authorities.

Now, for a moment, let us look at our own commercial department. It was organized in the fall of 1898. There were no commercial graduates this first year, but many of the graduates of 1898 took positions after completing the law or commercial department. The class of 1900 had several commercial graduates, all of whom completed the three years' course in two years. From the following classes there were many three-year commercial graduates who obtained good positions soon after graduation and who have been able to compete successfully with graduates from other schools. In 1905 the commercial course was changed from three to four years so as to have no commercial graduates in 1907. This year there are five students graduating from the four year commercial course, and many of those graduating from other courses have taken many commercial subjects.

The success of the pupils' success in business is that they learn to do things without being told to do them. We have been taught to do things our own way so long as we violated no principle and were neat, accurate, and rapid. We have studied each subject well, but also many other things in our high school commercial course which all count for success in life. With an ever increasing field of business opportunity, with free courses of study of our commercial and with earnest pupils to pursue these courses, the business world will be the gainer by receiving from our high schools graduates trained to do the work with intelligence and fidelity.

Now, members of the faculty, and fellow students of the class of 1909, the time has come for us to say farewell. These four long years we have striven side by side to obtain all that our high school could give us, we have developed our souls and bodies together, till now at last we have come to a parting of the paths. We have come to the cross-roads and each dear fellow student must take a separate path. No more will we strive to aid each other in our joys and sorrows. But in the vista of years stretching before many of us we shall never forget our relations with each other; these past four years will always be a spot of bright light though all the rest of our lives be filled with sunshine and shadow.

Our teachers and friends have watched over us faithfully and now that we are about to go out into the world to fight the battles of life let us always be a credit to the dear school that graduated us and the kind instructors who have taught us so carefully. Let us prove to them that they have not labored in vain and that we appreciate their earnest efforts in our behalf.

Also, may each one of us be a good citizen of our glorious union, always remembering the flag of our country that we first learned to love in our school days. Let us always carry in our hearts our beautiful class motto, "Truth conquers all things."

To all those who have been associated with us in the past four years and who have helped to make them the brightest of our lives we extend our heartfelt thanks, and I am sure that I may echo the thoughts of each member of the class when I say that all of their kind acts will always be gratefully remembered.

One more, to the members of the Board of Education, to our Superintendent, to each member of the faculty, and lastly to each dear member of the class we say, "Farewell!"

D. A. R. PRIZE ESSAY

Miss Frances E. Richter Wins $5. Prize From Local Society.

Among the prizes awarded in connection with the graduation exercises of the North Plainfield High School at the New Plainfield theatre Friday was a five dollar gold piece, presented to Miss Frances E. Richter. The prize was offered by the D. A. R. Miss Richter's essay, "The Period of Reconstruction," follows:

One of the greatest wrongs in our history was the period of Reconstruction. That a nation which boasts of liberty and freedom could have gone systematically to work to impose upon an intelligent people such a short-sighted, uncivilized, repressive, policy showed that in their eagerness a great liberty loving nation may err in bestowing freedom and that was what it did when it gave the negroes suffrage.

Immediately after the war the attitude of Congress was far avor of a more lenient course. The Congress passed, it is true, the fourteenth amendment which provided for the citizenship and suffrage of the negroes and disenfranchised all persons who had taken part in the rebellion or who "had given aid to the same." But this with the thirteenth amendment which prohibited the disposing forever of the question which had torn the country asunder.

Then the perversity of President Johnson in vetoing almost all Congressional acts. Congress became more consolidated and determined the President's veto. While in this frame of mind Thaddeus Stevens presented to the House for consideration his unwise, severe plan of Reconstruction known as "thorough" which was passed through both houses after much heated discussion.

The South brought the system upon herself. When she saw the antagonistic spirit of Johnson, she should not, as she did, when it was proper for her to flatly reject the fourteenth amendment. This attitude of the South caused the North to think more harshly of the South and to rigidly enforce Stevens' system of "Thorough."

This repressive policy was one of a fanatic on the wrongs committed against the negroes, one who in protecting negro rights, forgot the rights of his own race. By Stevens' system the South was divided into five military districts over which the general of the army, Grant, should place commandants to keep peace and order. It also provided for the calling of conventions so as to elect members for a new legislature who would frame the new State constitution based on negro suffrage. All male citizens, "of whatever race, color or previous condition," except those who had taken part in the rebellion, were allowed to vote. The provisional laws were to be accepted by each State before it could reenter the Union. By 1868 all the States except Texas had taken the necessary step and had accepted the constitutions based on negro suffrage.

It is quite apparent that the North was short-sighted in imposing military rule on a section of its own people, when they prided themselves on wise judgment in serious, political cases. The North need never have feared for the welfare of the negroes, the South would have in the end been perfectly just. But the worst part was the enfranchisement of the ignorant negroes and the disenfranchisement of the intelligent whites. The negroes in the legislatures were nothing but tools in the hands of the rascally carpetbaggers; they developed a surprising aptness for theft, fraud and tyrannical taxation and never left any impression on the legislation of the time. After a few years of supremacy the shrewd conniving of the edicated white brought the negro to the plane from which he should have started.

During the period of military reconstruction the South was terrorized by an organization known as the Klu-Klux-Klan. It was composed of poor whites and scoundrels who, as their criminal reputation grew, were joined by other desperadoes. The real purpose of the organization was to prevent by intimidation the negroes from voting. The latter became such a serious one that the government was obliged to help in stamping it out.

Congress now passed several important measures which they thought were necessary to insure the permanency to past acts and to insure the public peace and order at election. The most important, "The Fifteenth Amendment," which reads like this: "The right of citizens of the United States to vote shall not be denied or abridged by the United States or by any State on account of race, color or previous conditions of servitude," was carried through Congress to make certain the negro suffrage. All through the military rule at the South there had always been riots and confusion at elections. Congress now carried through the "Force Bill" that gave the President the power to suspend the beabus corpus in the most turbulent States, Louisiana, Arkansas, Mississippi and Alabama, if any trouble occurred in those States.

The reconstruction policy was a failure. The negro in public offices had accomplished nothing and only rolled up enormous debts for the States, the Republican aim to build up their party in the South came to nothing; instead of protecting the old Whigs which would have been the nucleus of the party at the South, they drove them to consolidate with the Southern Democrats through their repressive measure. Reconstruction left the bitter imprint in the minds of Southerners which has only gradually been removed since the withdrawal of the troops of Hayes in 1870.

NINETEEN ARE GRADUATED

Rev. Dr. Noble, President of Women's College, Makes the Address.

THE YALE CUP WAS AWARDED.

William D. Murray Answers Bishop McFaul at N. P. H. S. Commencement.

In contra-distinction to the City High School graduating class, the class of 1909 of the North Plainfield High School was composed of thirteen young women and six of the opposite sex and they made a picture not to be forgotten as they sat in a semi-circle on the stage of the New Plainfield theatre Friday night. The stage itself was a picture in its handsome floral decorations, giving a distinctive tone to the proceedings. The house was full and comparatively cool.

The exercises opened with an invocation by Rev. J. O. McKelvey and was followed by the Salutatory, read by Miss Mary Frances La Porte, the text of which will be found on another page of this paper. The songs from Gaul's "Joan of Arc" were sung by the High School chorus under the direction of Herbert Lloyd and they were very well rendered. The valedictory which followed, and which is printed on another page, written by Miss Hazel De Forest Rose, was repeated from memory by Miss Jennie Olive Nelson, who received long continued applause for her effort.

After the address by Rev. Eugene Allen Noble, D. D., LL. D., a synopsis of which is below, the chorus rendered two more songs and were heatrily applauded.

President Eugene A. Noble, of the Women's College of Baltimore, conveyed the greetings of his institution to the high school at Plainfield, and then delivered an address on "The Highest Form of Greatness." He said that it was not possible to define the word "great," or the word "greatness" in any exact way. When either word is correctly used, people commonly recognize its appropriateness. A recognition of real greatness comes from the principles of the universals of human judgment. He then stated that it would be impossible to make up a complete list of those whom the world honored as great. He referred to various lists that have been made in publications as the "Dictionary of National Biography" in Great Britain, "The American Cyclopedia of Biography" in this country, and the various volumes of "Who's Who." Greatness, as related to human personality, is too extensive to be confined within the bindings of books in a library. The next point he made was that it was easily possible to classify the persons who have been considered as really great.

Attention was called to certain books that classify greatness as related to personality. Plutarch's "Lives of Illustrious Men," Emerson's "Representative Men," Carlyle's "Heroes and Hero-Worship" undertake to classify great persons along very simple lines. President Noble declared that if correct definition were given to the terms of classification, all human greatness would fall into three classes. Men and women are great, he said, in only three ways, provided that the terms used are rightly defined. They are great as poets, as statesmen, and as prophets. His definition of the word "poet" was derived from a Greek word and meant a person who did an original thing that was of advantage to other people. A new conception of poetry is made possible by thinking in the terms of the Greek verb, instead of in the terms of the abused English word. Poets, rightly conceived, are pioneers. They stake out the new ground to be occupied by humanity. All brave souls that repudiate traditions, conventionalities, and prudential limitations, and go forward in new ways, are the poets of poetry.

Dr. Noble defined statesmen as those who determined the regulations and laws, which obtain in society. He defined prophets as those who give meaning in terms of morals to the efforts which affect human welfare. The poets are the world's pioneers, the statesmen are the world's adjusters, the prophets are the world's interpreters. On the basis of these definitions, greatness is recognized and *acknowledged. He then called at*tention to a surprising statement made in the New Testament concerning John the Baptist, where it is said that he is the greatest man born of woman, but as if that statement were not surprising enough, it is followed up by another one that says, "He that is least in the Kingdom of God is greater than he."

President Noble then undertook to show what was meant by being least in the Kingdm of God. He pointed out certain defects in the life of John the Baptist. One defect was that his thinking was incorrect. He had low views and wrong views concerning life in its relations and its obligations. The trouble with this man, and the trouble with a great many other men is that in reference to the highest ranges of human thinking, they are governed by prejudice, bias and sleifishness. Granting to this great prophet, who was a statesman and a poet, the highest measure of recognition and praise, it is nevertheless true that he was a poor thinker. The principles of his personal philosophy were determined by prepossession and angularity of vision. He did not know how to think straight in reference to the highest matters of all, clear thought. The second defect, which he pointed out in the life of John the Baptist, was related to the work he tried to do for the betterment of human society. He did not live and work among men, one of them, but was isolated—a recluse, a hermit, an ascetic. His attitude toward society was that of condescension. He stooped to speak a word of warning. He uttered an exclamation that was rather startling, and then withdrew.

President Noble made it clear that the man whose service to society is helpful is the man who stoops to share, who lives with and is part of all human-kind, who does not simply speak in the way of sustaining sympathy, but goes under human burdens and tries to lift. This introduces a new sort of human greatness, worthier than the greatness of poet, or statesman, or prophet. The person who is able to think clearly in the world, to serve humbly on the terms of the New Testament ranks above all others who are recognized as great. The purpose of the schools is to train to think. The obligation upon thinkers is to serve society. The principles of Christ, those governing principles that have controlled the life of the Oriental nations, are principles of profound philosophy, of persistent seeking and correct thinking. The peculiarity of the Western nations is their ability to do, their practical skill in lines of desirable activity. The greatest sort of greatness depends upon a combination of persistent Oriental philosophy and aggressive Occidental service.

W. D. Murray, of the Yale Club, then presented the cup offered by the club, to George M. Parsons, president of the class, and in his preliminary remarks paid his compliments to a prelate of the Roman Catholic church who has recently put his influence and weight against the great educational institutions of this country on the ground that they *failed in their purpose of right edu*cation. Mr. Murray said that as an alumnus of the great institution at New Haven he was ready to believe that there was no better place for a young man to spend the early years of his life and that to thus wantonly destroy the faith of the country in these great institutions of learning was to take away the underpinning of our life purposes.

Mr. Parsons thanked the donors of the cup for the honor conferred upon him. A surprised young woman was then called to the centre of the stage and was presented with a prize given by the D. A. R. for the best essay on a subject of American history. This young woman, Miss Frances Ernestine Richter, received a five-dollar gold piece for her essay on "The Period of Reconstruction," amid great applause. The essay is printed elsewhere in this issue.

After the presentation of diplomas the benediction was pronounced by the Rev. Mr. McKelvey.

JOHN DOE TO ANSWER FOR THEFT OF A COW

With stubborn taciturnity, neither affirming nor denying the accusations brought against him, a neatly dressed stranger, known only to the police as "John Doe," was given a hearing at city police court before Judge William N. Runyon, Monday, when George R. Carter, colored, charged him with having stolen his cow, and was remanded to the county jail in default of $50 bail, imposed by the magistrate. The prisoner's stubborn manner and his varying stories of defense told since his arrest and commitment to the Somerville jail by a Millstone justice of the peace Thursday, have baffled the police, who believe the man is mentally deficient.

Carter, who chased the cow thief and caught him Thursday afternoon near John Dowling's farm, in the vicinity of Millstone, told a highly dramatic story of the robbery and pursuit of the thief, which, when he was finished, were "John Doe" asked for a hearing. The cow is a black and white animal, he said, and was staked out to pasture in a meadow with another cow, on West Eighth Street, belonging to William A. Pinto. Carter missed the animal Thursday, when he returned to Mr. Pinto's place from work in the afternoon. He soon found the footprints of the bovine, and started in pursuit, thinking that she had strayed away. Persons whom he met told him that they had seen the cow, which was being led by a well-dressed man, wearing a light suit and a straw hat. Trailing his cow through the south end of the city, the colored man finally traced the footprints to John Dowling's farm. Within a short distance from this, he saw his cow, drinking at the horse trough, while the stranger stood near by.

"It was then that I paused for the first, your Honor," said Carter, "for I thought to myself, 'Ah, perhaps this man has a wee-pon.' I paused, I say, but my mind told me 'you'd better go right to him; then, at all events, you and he must die together.'"

It wasn't as bad as all that, however, for "John" put up no fight, and willingisly went with the colored man and Mr. Dowling to Millstone, where was given a hearing and committed to the Somerville jail. The prisoner said today that he had found the cow and had taken it to Mr. Dowling's farm to claim the reward offered.

Carter told the court that this was the second time this same man had tried to get away with his black and white cow. About three weeks ago, he said, he was working as gardner in the south end of the city when the stranger walked by, trailing the bovine by its rope. It had been pastured at the same place, but the man said at that time that he had found it on the highway and learning that Carter was employed where he was seen, had brought the animal to him, hoping for a reward. There was no charge against him at that time.

"John Doe," who is known by sight to some of the police, refused to talk about the theft of the cow after he was led back to his cell. Questioned by Chief Kiely, he would only repeat that he had nothing to say, and positively refused to reveal his identity.

Co. K, under the direction of Captain H. B. Kitchell, had a short drill Monday night. The captain explained the method of forming for shelter tents. During a business session the members equipped themselves with tan shoes, same as worn in the regular army. A vote of thanks was given the Westfield members of the company for recent entertainment; also to Corporal Manning of South Plainfield, and the women of that place for a fine "spread" on June 21. It was decided to take a "hike" to Smalleytown, Saturday, July 17. The start will be made at 2 o'clock in the afternoon and the company will camp over night at Smalleytown, returning home Sunday. If stormy the trip will be postponed to July 24. Major Martin paid an official visit to the company last night.

AN OIL STOVE BLAZE CAUSES ABOUT $200 LOSS.

An oil stove blazed up in a closet on the second floor of the premises at 332 Somerset street, occupied by Miss Anna Miles, yesterday afternoon about 2:30 and ignited the clothing hanging in the closet which set fire to the woodwork and in a few minutes a lively blaze was in progress.

The fire-alarm system having been put out of commission by the lightning early in the morning, caused some delay in summoning the department by telephone, and in the meantime the fire had eaten its way to the roof. Two extinguishers and two chemical tanks were emptied in the effort to put out the blaze and considerable of the woodwork had to be chopped away to get at it.

The firemen were somewhat hindered in their work by Miss Miles and had to do heroic work to accomplish what they did. Several of the men had their clothes spoiled and a section of the ceiling fell, parts of which struck Miss Miles, scratching her face and arms slightly.

The damage to the building amounted to about $200.

Mrs. J. A. Staats Injured.

Mrs. J. A. Staats, of North Plainfield, who has been visiting her father-in-law, J. H. Staats, at Littleyork, Hunterdon county, slipped and fell on Saturday and sustained a fracture of the leg; also severe bruises, which will confine her to her room for sometime. She is in charge of a physician and a trained nurse.

UNBELIEVERS INCREASING

People's Pulpit Editor Declares 1,200,000,000 are Unsaved.

MUST STUDY THE BIBLE.

After Twenty Centuries the World Is Further Than Ever From Jesus Christ.

Rev. P. E. Thomson, editor of the Peoples' Pulpit, a Brooklyn periodical devoted to the study of the Bible, spoke in Jr. U. A. M. hall Sunday afternoon to a fairly large audience, and left with them the impression that while the outlook for the salvation of the 1,200,000,000 non-Christians known of today seemed hopeless, it is not really so. Notwithstanding that during the last century the number of unbelievers has doubled, Mr. Thomson held that this is only history repeating itself, as after the end of 1655 years, or at the time of the Deluge, God found only eight people worthy of salvation (Noah and his family) in all the people on earth whom he considered worthy of salvation. Mr. Thomson continued:

"After nearly twenty centuries of Christian teaching we appear to be further away from the Christianizing of the world which we are all looking for, but that is no reason for discouragement, the reason a greater work has not been accomplished is simply because God has not willed it. The desired result will come in God's own time. God's promise to Abraham has not yet been fulfilled, so there is something in the future for God to carry out. The Jews have not yet had their Temple rebuilt, and until the fulness of the selection of the Gentiles shall have come to pass the Tabernacle of David will not be restored. That is the plan of God according to the Gospel.

"Those who die out of the faith, the buried millions, all are to have the opportunity of seeking after the truth. Revelation tells us that. There will be a period of a thousand years when the power of the Evil One will be cut off and at that time those who have not seen the truth will have the opportunity to learn of it and enter into the joy of the Lord."

Mr. Thomson urged his hearers to study the scriptures for confirmation of his statements.

CONKLING PLEADS GUILTY

Assistant Mail Clerk Confesses to Stealing Money at Local P. O.

TO BE SENTENCED MONDAY.

Others had Gotten Justice When Stealers Here, But Conkling Disregarded Fact.

John Conklin, assistant mailing clerk at the local postoffice, who was indicted by the United States Grand Jury on a charge of stealing money from the mails, was arraigned before Judge Cross at Trenton, Sunday. He pleaded guilty and it was announced that he would be sentenced next Monday.

Conkling, who was employed at the postoffice for several years, first as a special messenger, and then as assistant mailing clerk, had a hobby for tampering with special delivery letters. Many complaints were received by Postmaster Bird about the non-delivery of such letters or that the contents had been removed.

At the request of Mr. Bird, two inspectors were sent here and Conkling was caught through tow "test" letters bearing special delivery stamps. Conkling confessed after being arrested. He was taken to Jersey City and held in $1,200 bail. He was later taken to Newark, where he was held pending his arraignment at Trenton. After being taken to Jersey City, Conkling, it is said, admitted that he had spent his money "on girls."

ESCAPES SAD FATE OF A FELLOW ENGINEER

Engineer George Weller in charge of the Reading Express, leaving Plainfield at 7:09 Saturday night for New York, narrowly escaped the death of Engineer Fred De Groff, of this city, who was killed on the Reading road a few months ago by the breaking of a driving rod.

The accident happened at a point between "Netherwood" and Fanwood, when the train was getting well underway. At the instant the driving rod snapped, Weller shut off his lever and jumped into the tender. More than half the cab on the engineer's side was torn away and the engine ran on for a considerable distance. That the engine was not derailed was remarkable. There were several Plainfielders aboard, including J. Henry Crane, and all were given a severe shaking up.

The train was stalled until the 7:14 Blue Line Express came along. The passengers were then transferred and the disabled train sidetracked. Had the train been going at full speed, the engineer would doubtless have been killed.

REV. ALBERTUS BROEK IN TRINITY'S PULPIT

Rev. Dr. Albertus T. Broek, pas*tor of the Clinton Avenue Reformed* church, Sunday at both services, er's pulpit at Trinity Reformed church yesterday at both services. There were large congregations morning and night considering the intense heat. In the morning the preacher's text was Exodus 16, part of seventh verse: "The murmurings of the Israelites for want of bread; or, the tragedy in the wilderness." It was a helpful and impressive discourse delivered extemporaneously.

In the evening the text was James 4, part of fourteenth verse: "*What is your life—it is even a va*por." There was special music by the choir under the leadership of Oraganist Arthur L. Titsworth, which was very plessing to the large congregation present.

Dr. Broek is a man of commanding appearance, a profound student and is magnetic as a preacher. His brother, John W. Broek, occupied the Newark church pulpit both morning and evening.

The most welcome thunder storm which visited Plainfield early yesterday morning brought great relief to those suffering from the intense heat. The temperature dropped from 95 degrees before the shower to 66 degrees afterward.

The table of temperatures for the past week is as follows:

THE REPORT OF LOSSES.

Holy Cross Church Twice Hit During the Storm Yesterday Morning.

The lightning which accompanied the early morning shower Sunday did some damage in city and borough, striking Holy Cross church and several residences of city and borough. The bolts did emocial damage in the west and south ends of the city, where the electric light and telephone services were crippled the worst. At police headquarters, a bolt played havoc with the patrol box switch board, and the box service was out of commission for several hours in the early morning.

The damage at Holy Cross church was caused by two bolts, for lightning struck an electric light pole on Mercer avenue near the edifice, tore the heavy iron lead from transformer box and dashed it to the street. From the box, the bolt bounded to the roof of the church, shattering the cross which surmounts the bell tower. A second bolt struck the northwest gable of the edifice, tearing off metal sheathing and several slates. Inside the church, it blew the door off the switch-board box which contains the chancel lighting switches, knocked one of the cased globes from its position in the chancel arch, and scorched the plaster, knocking several pieces down. It traveled across the chancel and passed out through the roof over the organ, tearing off several slates. The instrument was undamaged, but the electric light service in the chancel was put out of commission for the morning service. The damage is entirely covered by insurance.

Lightning struck the residence of Isaac S. Randolph, 1125 West Front street, at about 6 o'clock Sunday morning, entering by the electric light wires. It shattered the meter in the cellar and the gas meter, igniting the gas and starting a fire which swept up the front of the house between the partitions, and caused the firemen a hard fight for nearly two hours. The loss is $400, fully covered by insurance.

L. V. Tallamy, sleeping in a front room of the house, was stunned by the bolt, which also dazed his wife. The two smelled smoke and discovered that the burning gas had set fire to the wood-work between the petitions. Mr. Tallamy, assisted by E. D. Young and Samuel Beekman, got out the garden hose and fought the flames until the fire department arrived. A general alarm sent from box 48 failed to sound, and the department was summoned by telephone. Chief Doane told the garden hose brigade that their prompt action had undoubtedly saved the building.

A bolt traveled into the house of Norman Gray, across the street from the Randolph residence and crippled the meter. There was no fire.

Lightning played peculiar tricks at the home of John Mottley, at East Third street and Richmond streets, during the storm. A bolt tore the cover off a can of kerosene in the kitchen, but did not ignite the oil. Skipping to the store, the bolt tore the ears off of one of the hams of ham on a shelf, and set fire to some pipe wrappings. The lightning then bounded to the attic and tore a large hole in the roof. Mrs. Mottley was stunned by the bolt. The fire was easily extinguished and the damage will reach $50.

At Dunellen the fluid struck the bed in which Mrs. I. B. Stites was asleep, but did not harm her; it also bent and twisted the gas pipe in the room and passed out apparently through the window without breaking the glass or doing any further damage.

N. W. Apgar, a neighbor who saw the flash, said that the house looked as if it were in flames inside which accounted for the calling out of the firemen. Mrs. Stites while much frightened is apparently none the worse for her experience.

The bunches of asparagus, when cooking, should be in the water on end, so that the green tips are above the water. Then the tops will not become too soft.

PLAINFIELD'S NINE WON

Local Team Defeated "Dave" Driscoll's New Brunswick Team.

BY A SCORE OF SEVEN TO SIX.

Ortlieb Pitches a Fine Game—Another Game Will Be Played Next Saturday.

The Plainfield Baseball Club went gunning for big game Saturday, and succeeded in defeating "Dave" Driscoll's famous New Brunswick team by a score of 7 to 6, in one of the most sensational contests of the season at New Brunswick. The importance of the victory can be realized when it is known that it is the second defeat New Brunswick has received this year. The first defeat was at the hands of the Philadelphia Giants. Yesterday, New Brunswick fenced up matters by defeating the colored team by a score of 5 to 4.

Ortlieb pitched a fine game for Plainfield Saturday, holding his opponents safe all the way. He was opposed by Langstaff, a crack twirler, saved for the game. He held Plainfield without a run or hit for seven innings and then the locals got to him for four singles, a three bagger and two free passes, netting five runs. The eighth again brought luck, when two singles and a three bagger netted two runs, sufficient to win the contest.

New Brunswick tallied three runs in the third inning, one in the eighth and two in the ninth, when they nearly won the game. Jack Martin, who was playing against his old team mates, had a chance to win the game, but Ortlieb fanned him in the ninth and thereby dashed the hopes of the home team. Next Saturday the same teams will meet on Crescent Oval and there should be a record breaking attendance to see the old favorites. The score:

ABOUT THE HOUSE.

If a soup is salty, either cook a few pieces of potato in it, to counteract the extra seasoning, or add a little brown sugar.

One need not hesitate to put the rag and fiber rugs which need cleaning in the wash tub and give them a thorough scrubbing.

Cabbage cut up in shreds and creamed makes a delicate and tasty dish. Serve as one does creamed celery or creamed cauliflower.

When next baked custard is part of the meal, serve on each a little caramel syrup. It is delicious.

Tomatoes stuffed with asparagus tips and tipped with a generous amount of mayonnaise dressing make delicious salad. Serve on hearts of lettuce leaves.

Preserved ginger on a little currant jelly with tea crackers, passed with the cup of tea, is a happy though.

Oftentimes the burned part of a cake may be removed by scraping it with a grater when the cake is quite cold.

UNKNOWN AUTO HITS HIM; O'BRIEN BADLY HURT.

Patrick O'Brien, 33, of Laramie road, was struck by an automobile on Crescent avenue about 6 o'clock Saturday night and was severely hurt, his injuries consisting of contusions and abrasions on the body. He was taken to Muhlenberg hospital where his wounds were dressed and he was sent home.

The name of the owner of the automobile or its driver were unobtainable this morning.

PLANS PUBLIC MARKET

Quoin Investment Company Arranging for Market Place.

SITUATED IN CITY'S CENTRE.

Property Occupied by Cab Company to Be Used for the Purpose.

Plans are being made it is reported for a public market place for Plainfield, the Quoin Investment Company, owner of the property, having already determined upon the site and only awaiting a report from an architect before going ahead. The plans are that it is proposed to build a public market similar to those to be seen in Philadelphia and many southern cities in the business property long occupied by the Plainfield Cab Company fronting on North avenue, near Park avenue, and running through to East Second street.

It is considered an ideal location and it is said that the expense of renovations including the installation of stalls and other figures would be comparatively small. There would be the advantage of two large entrances and unlimited space in the very heart of the business section.

Space will be let by the month or by the year to farmers, dairymen, truckmen, poultry and produce dealers as well as butchers and an extra advantage to patrons according to the plans is said to be the proposition to open the place at day-light.

A public market, it is said, by local business men who heartily favor the scheme, would bring considerable trade in the local shops, inasmuch as the farmers and others coming here to dispose of their produce and the like would buy their wearing apparel, notions, groceries, household goods and other things at the local store.

The Plainfield Cab Company's lease on the property does not expire until November when it plans to take possession of a building in East Second street now being erected by Woolston & Buckle.

THEIR LAWN FETE NETS THIRTY-FIVE DOLLARS.

Under the auspices of the Y. P. S. C. E. of Trinity Reformed church, a delightful lawn fete was held at the home of Mrs. A. E. Lorton, at Watchung avenue and Second street Saturday night, when about $35 was realized from the furtherance of the work of the society. The lawn was beautifully decorated for the affair, numerous Japanese lanterns, strung from tree to tree, furnishing the illumination. A large American flag floated between two trees, and other flags were effectively used at the various booths.

Various members of the society were in charge of booths where lemonade, ice cream, cake and candy were sold and where there were several lawn games. A feature of the fair was the rainbow grab bag, in charge of Miss Lucie Coriell and Miss Anna Randall. Here the tale of the pot of gold at the end of the rainbow was graphically worked out and the prizes were selected from a daintily decorated grab bag. The target game was in charge of Elmer Gayle and Harold Schenck, and proved highly popular.

The intense heat did not keep people away, but those who thronged the grounds during the entire evening were especially attracted by the cooling refreshments, daintily served at tables. The lemonade well was in charge of Miss Emma Ryno and Miss Helen Crane, and the Misses Edna Diltz and Edna Cole were in charge of the candy table. The ice cream was served up by the Misses Clara Allen, Anna Sock and Grace Debele, and passed at the tables by various members of the society. Miss May Randolph was in charge at the cake table and Arthur Gaskell was the ticket-taker and was stationed at the gate.

The committee in charge of the affair was headed by Miss Harriet C. Randall, president of the society, and included the officers of the society and the members of its social committee. These were Fred Soper, first vice-president; LeRoy Leighton, second vice-president; Cornelius Schenck, treasurer; Russell Doeringer, recording secretary, and Miss May Randolph, corresponding secretary. The social committee comprised the Misses Edna Cole, Edna Diltz, Myra Dunawan, and Elmer Gayle, Arthur Gaskell, Russell Doeringer, and Harold Schenck.

Mrs. Betts Buried.

The funeral services at Mrs. J. B. Betts were held at Holy Cross church Saturday afternoon at 2:30, the Rev. George A. Warner officiating. The interment was in Hillside cemetery.

W. D. Murray Going Abroad.

William D. Murray, of West Ninth street, will leave Saturday on the Steamship Philadelphia, of the American line, to attend the triennial conference of the World's Christian Student Federation at Oxford in July and the World's Convention of the Y. M. C. A. at Barmen Elberfeld, Germany, in August.

TEMPORARY BOND ISSUE

City Fathers Provide for $11,000 Issue for Street Improvement.

APPROPRIATION OF $2,734.84.

For Smallpox Work—School Appropriation Reconsidered—Other Matters Acted On.

Originally planning to hold a short session to pass the bills and then adjourn for a week, the members of the Common Council changed their minds last night and after wasting a half hour or more with trivial matters, decided to have the minutes read and go through with the regular order of business. Councilman Buxton was largely responsible for this, because he had some pet measures that he was very anxious to dispose of at this time.

Through a resolution offered by Mr. Buxton and adopted, steps were taken to issue eleven $1,000 street improvement bonds to date from July 1, 1909; to mature not more than one year and accrued interest. It is provided that one issue of $11,000 may be made if the purchaser desires.

Mr. Holt called up on their reading the two ordinances, one providing for the re-districting of the Second ward, making a third district, and the other which defines the dividing line between the First and Second wards and they were adopted.

In accordance with a resolution offered by Mr. Buxton, $5,000 was transferred from the general to the fire fund and $1,500 from the general to the poor fund.

Residents of Denmark road, between Dixie lane and Ravine road, asked the Council to accept that thoroughfare so that it may be improved. The matter was referred to the street and sewer committee. Fred Lancaster applied for an auctioneer's license and the matter was referred to the license committee.

On motion of Mr. Buxton, the resolution of June 7, regarding the appropriation of $62,000 for school purposes for the coming year, was reconsidered, it having been learned that not all of the members of the Board of Education signed the petition. Another resolution was then offered by the same member and the supplment to the tax ordinance was adopted. Later Mr. Buxton offered the matter in the form of an ordinance and it was adopted on first and second readings and ordered advertised as required.

In compliance with a request from the Board of Health, Mr. Buxton offered a resolution, which was adopted, appropriating $2,734.84, in addition to the regular amount, to provide for the expense of taking care of the smallpox cases. Another resolution by the same member, also adopted, ratified an agreement between the city and Mrs. Elizabeth Lindsey, regarding a sewer pipe, and L. Moraller & Son, jewelers and watchmakers, was given the contract to take care of the town clock for the coming year for $30, a resolution to that effect being offered by Mr. Buxton.

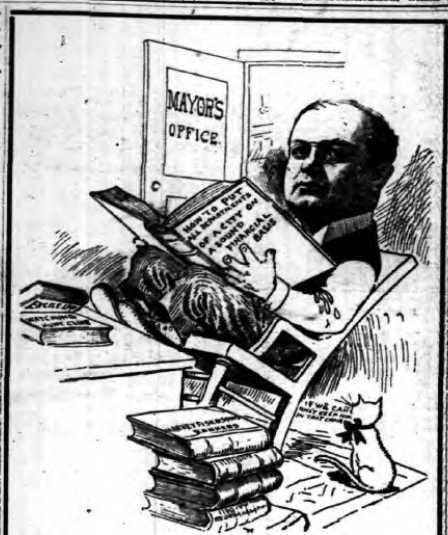
Clerk Horace G. Adams of the District court, reported receipts of $118.60 for the past month and expenditures of $30.90, leaving a balance of $87.70. Chief T. O. Doane reported that twenty-five building permits were granted during the month and Overseer of the Poor A. D. Ayers reported expenditures of $264.30 for the month.

The ordinance providing for gas cut-offs was called up by Mr. Holt and put back on second reading for an amendment. It was changed to provide that "cut-offs" shall hereafter be installed on pipes more than 1¼ inch, instead of those including pipe of that diameter. The change met with the approval of the P. S. C. and the ordinance was then adopted on second reading and ordered advertised.

Herbert Henry and others petitioned to have some crosswalks laid in the vicinity of Berkeley, Leland avenues and Park Terrace. This was referred to the street and sewer committee.

The report of the sanitary sewer commissioners, S. P. T. Wilbur, H. B. MacDonald and R. A. Meeker, was presented at the July meeting of the Common Council last night. A portion of it was read and then ordered filed. The total cost of the work, which has been completed, is $74,052.34, of which the city's portion is $41,840, while the balance, $32,242.91, has been assessed on property-owners affected by the improvement.

After filing the report, Mr. Buxton offered a resolution fixing Monday night, August 2, as the time when a public hearing will be granted. Those affected will then have an opportunity to express their opinions before the report is finally adopted.



To spell "Success" with letters four is not the old time way,
But citizens of Plainfield do it thus—F-I-S-K.
As fireman, councilman and mayor, he's always led the van,
And Plainfield's more than lucky in possessing such a man.

FIRE FIGHTERS' BIG PAGEANT

CHARTER DAYS' CLOSING SCENES MARKED BY JERSEY FIREMEN'S DEMONSTRATION.

Eclipsing in splendor the recent demonstration of firemen held in Newark, the firemen's parade started promptly at 2:30 this afternoon with Chiefs T. O. Doane and Howard Woolston directing the maneuvers. Firemen from various parts of the State came to do honor to Plainfield and the men and apparatus in line excelled by far the most sanguine expectations.

In the matter of interest the parade was said to have exceeded anything ever before held in New Jersey. After the review at the Eighth street stand the fire chiefs were entertained at a banquet prepared by Host Windham of the Washington Hotel. After the dinner the visiting firemen were taken for automobile rides about the town. Many of the men had never seen the outlying streets of the city and were loud in their praises of our beautiful streets.

Following out the pre-arranged program the firemen were received by Chief Doane, of Plainfield, and Chief Woolston, of North Plainfield, and the committee of citizens. The visiting chiefs were presented with special badges which they will retain as souvenirs of Charter Day.

Tonight the firemen will attend the exhibition of fireworks and the band concert in a body. The awarding of prizes will be done by Judges selected from among the visiting chiefs and the awards will be published tomorrow.

The Union Engine Company, 50 strong, accompanied by the Lambertville band, drew forth the cheers of the crowd as they marched and counter-marched and performed their evolutions with stately precision. This company was closely followed by Junction company from Hampton Junction, with a handsome team of horses. The Roosevelt Hose Co., with 50 men and a band, also came in for favorable criticism as did the Washington Hose Company from Perth Amboy. The line of march was as follows:

Form on East Front street, right resting on Watchung avenue. Front to Grove, to Linden, to Somerset, to Fairview, to Watchung, to Pearl, to Somerset, to Front, to Park avenue, to West Fifth, to Liberty, to West Eighth, to Crescent, to Seventh, to Madison, to Fourth, to Watchung and disband.

The North Plainfield exempts and their Plainfield brethren made a fine appearance.

Of course, Plainfield and North Plainfield showed up favorably among the others and the people ought to feel proud of the home department for their fine showing.

Chiefs Doane and Woolston selected as judges to award the prizes in the parade, parade chief Kiesstein and Chief Astley, of Newark, and Chief Allen, of Trenton.

Following is the way the companies formed:

Union Engine Company, Lambertville, band, 50 men, one team.

AUTO TURNED TURTLE; HILL-CLIMBERS HURT

George Weldon and William Bolen, of Rahway, are lying in the hospital this afternoon with slight injuries; the result of being thrown out of a car that they were driving in the hill climbing contest at Johnston's Drive yesterday, when it plunged over the embankment, turned two somersaults and ended its flight after a fifty foot fall, against a tree. The car was making the last turn up the hill, within one hundred yards of the finish when it struck two wooden culverts situated in the sharp bend. The impact of going over these caused the driver to lose control of the car, which was then making record time for that section of the course, and the machine careened for thirty yards, grazed a tree and then tumbled, throwing both men out.

When the drivers were assisted out it was found that Weldon was suffering from scalp and facial wounds and Bolen sustained a fractured shoulder. As it was feared that there might be serious internal injuries, they were taken to Muhlenberg Hospital under the direction of Chief of Police Kiely. George Babcock, of West Eighth street, loaned his limousine for the occasion.

The car, a National, was damaged slightly. The radiator was knocked out of shape, guards were broken, the steering gear was disarranged, and other mechanism was bent but not injured. One rear wheel was broken, and the other kept revolving rapidly until the power was turned off. At 7:30 o'clock last evening mechanics got the machine on the course again. A new wheel was put on, the steering gear readred, and the machine made the trip to a local garage unassisted. Here the minor repairs were made. Both of the injured men will be discharged from the hospital shortly. Both are suffering more from shock than from actual injuries.

Chief T. O. Doane.

American Flag Stolen.

Charles Kiederling, of 258 East Front street, is today mourning the loss of a handsome American flag, which he displayed in front of his residence. Sometime last night thieves took Old Glory and no clew can be found. Mr. Kiederling had the flag suspended between his house and a tree, twenty feet in the air. He says that if the person who took it will call he will give them the tree.

CITY TO SEND DOANE TO FIRE CHIEFS MEET

Chief T. O. Doane will attend the fire chiefs' convention to be held at Grand Rapids, Michigan, for the Common Council at its July meeting last night, appropriated $150 for the trip. Like Chief P. S. Kiely, who attended the police chiefs' convention in Buffalo, he will be required to make a detailed statement of his expenses and a full report of the convention to the fire committee.

When Councilman Buxton offered a resolution appropriating the $150, and the vote was taken, there was some question as to whether it was adopted. The vote was five to two in favor of the measure. The question arose whether it required a majority or two-thirds vote. After searching the ordinances and rules and failing to find anything there that would enlighten the members, President Holley declared that the resolution was adopted.

He Had No License.

John Mallone, of Elizabeth, was arrested yesterday afternoon by Special Officer McKeon for peddling court-plaster and postal cards without a license. Sentence was suspended by City Judge Runyon at court today on condition that Mallone leave town immediately.

AUTO HILL-CLIMBERS TIE

Young Tuxedo Park Millionaire Covers Course in 1:28.

RANKIN EQUALS HIS TIME.

Robertson, Lescault and Bissell Compete at the Johnson's Drive Course.

John M. Rutherford, a twenty-two year old millionaire, from Tuxedo Park, New York, the "millionaires' colony," who laconically sent in an application to compete in the hill-climbing contest on the Johnston's drive against George Robertson, winner of the Vanderbilt cup race last year, and other such professional drivers as Lescault and Bissell, carried off first honors all around for the best time made, 1 minute and 28 seconds. The course is seventh-tenths of a mile long and has nine difficult turns while the grade runs from 8% to 22% or an average of 15%. According to Robertson, the Vanderbilt Cup Race winner, it is the best hill climbing course he has ever seen. Not only did young Rutherford take the course in the best time, but he showed his pluck in doing so on the second gear all the way up. When the winners' class came, when Rutherford had another opportunity to win another gold medal, he declined to enter the event.

"I'm an amateur driver," he said, "my time is the best so far; I have nothing at stake. Those other drivers are driving for a company and it means something for them if they can carry off a first so I guess I'll let them get any honors that are coming to them, if they can beat my time. I didn't plan to compete here today. My friend and I were on our way to Coney Island for a swim, but decided to come to Plainfield where we read about the hill-climb in a New York paper this morning.

Rutherford's time was not beaten, but it was equalled by the Palmer-Detroit in the last event. When Rutherford received his gold medal from Chairman Fred Titus, he was as proud as a boy who puts on his first pair of long trousers. "It's my first medal," he chuckled, "and it's going to be the charm of a brand new gold watch—one of the best that I can buy." He then pulled out a handsome gold watch, gazed at it scornfully a moment, then turned on his power and drove out of town slowly.

Early in the afternoon a large crowd gathered from this city and nearby towns; many came in automobiles. People lined the course all the way up. These were kept in order and the course was kept clear by a cordon of city and borough police.

Several noted professional drivers were in the contest. Among these were: F. Lescault, George Robertson, winner of the Vanderbilt Cup Race last year, and Fred Bissell, who won several notable races at Ormond Beach, Florida. The latter was disfigured slightly owing to a car turning turtle on him there. He showed his pluck, however, yesterday when he won second place, making the course on wheels of 140-inch bases. Most of the time the machine skidded. The Herreschoff car showed up well under the driving of George Robertson. The machine used was a stock car untrimmed for the race. The principal officials of the course were: Marshall, Alexander Milne; referee, Dr. Frank C. Ard; Judge, Dr. P. J. Zeglio; starter, Charles W. Smith; timers, Dr. D. C. Adams, A. L. C. Marsh, and George Tobin; manager, Fred W. Titus.

The automobile committee in charge of the affair was: Alexander

Hill Climbing to be Annual Event.

Owing to the complete success of the automobile hill climbing contest, the Plainfield Motor Club has decided to make it an annual affair. The course up Johnston's drive is one of the best for the purpose, and will be kept in repair. Crushed stone was put in hollow places about the course yesterday; but this will be eliminated next year when the course will be rolled.

Plainfielders Away.

While the city has been filling up with visitors from all over the State the actual population has been falling off at the rate of fifty or more a day. According to station agent Stein, the number of tickets sold for Point Pleasant, Asbury Park and other sea-shore resorts show an increase over last week and the exodus goes merrily on.

CITY SCHOOL FATHERS GIVE OUT SOME BIDS

Bids for school improvements and equipment were opened at the July meeting of the city Board of Education held last night at the Plainfield High School. The successful bidders were John Abbott, D. J. Galbraith and J. A. Greene. Bids for laying out of the grounds of the Darrow Avenue school were ordered advertised, and will be opened at the next meeting of the Board, to be held at the high school July 20.

Bids for toilets in the Irving School, opened at the meeting, were as follows: Rimmer, Apgar and Cuzen, $2,894; John Abbott & Son, $2,790; D. W. Littell, $1,973; D. J. Galbraith, $1,750; James Harper, $2,309; George J. Tobin, $2,175. These bids were referred to the building committee, and the contract was awarded to John Abbott and Sons for the general contract, and D. J. Galbraith for the plumbing.

Bids for shades for the Darrow Avenue School were presented by three firms. They were as follows: J. A. Greene, $240; S. H. Whitney, $269, and Frank G. Wikoff, $277.45. The contract was awarded to J. A. Greene after consideration by the building committee.

Several prices were submitted for a piano for the Darrow Avenue School and among the firms bidding were John Wanamaker, The Ivers & Pond Co., Sohmer & Co., William Knabe., The Aeolian Company. The building committee announced no decision.

The report of Tax Collector William R. Townsend showed that during the month of June $444.82 of school moneys had been collected. The custodian reported a balance of $50,139.73 on hand June 30.

Mrs. Ira Pangborn's Funeral.

Funeral services for Mrs. Ira Pangborn, who died in Mount Vernon, N. Y., last Sunday, were held last night at 8 o'clock at the residence of William N. Pangborn, Linden avenue, North Plainfield, Rev. Ora J. Shoop of Grace M. E. church, officiating. Mrs. John Manley sang "Abide with Me," and "Draw Me Nearer," with much feeling and expression. The interment took place this morning in the family plot in North Plainfield cemetery. Mrs. Pangborn leaves a two-year-old son and her husband to mourn her loss.

First Excursion to the Shore.

The first excursion from Plainfield to Asbury Park will leave tomorrow morning, under the auspices of the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church and numerous other Sunday-schools. After the strenuous three-days' celebration this will afford an agreeable relaxation.

Many Elks Firemen.

Among the out-of-town firemen who took part in the parade today were about five hundred Elks, who were entertained and dined at the Elks' large club rooms on East Second street, before and after the parade.

AUTOMOBILE PARADE YESTERDAY AFTERNOON

The automobile parade yesterday afternoon was somewhat of a disappointment so far as the number of cars in the line is concerned, there having been only 51 machines where 200 were expected. This was partly accounted for by the fact that the parade did not follow the line of march as originally mapped out, and many cars which were awaiting to join at different points failed to connect.

However, what was lacking numbers was more than made up in the handsome decorations of those that were in line. John P. Emmons, who won the first prize, had his car covered in a bower of Wistaria artistically draped with flags. Harry Marshall's car, which was a huge canopy of roses and flags won the second prize, and Lester Harris won third with decorations similar to those of Mr. Emmons, but not quite so elaborate.

Flags were given as special prizes to Isaac Schwed, Joseph Kingston of Trenton, and Allen Laing. Mr. Kingston's Mercer car had as a special decoration over the hood an American flag, perfect in design, made up of red and white roses with forget-me-nots for the jack. It was as handsome piece of work as has been seen any time during the three days.

One car driven by a woman and who had three women companions, all four dressed alike—linen with brown trimming—was given a white flag for the neatness of the turnout. The womens' dresses harmonized with the color of the car. Unfortunately they got away before their names could be ascertained.

Early Arrivals in the Borough.

There was a stirring time at the North Plainfield fire headquarters this morning when the Lambertville contingent, under Chief Thomas, marched into the house accompanied by the Lambertville drum corps and the Boonton firemen with Mayor Kopp at their head and Freeholder Harvey Hopler as aid. They were received by Chief Howard Woolston and his men with a hearty cheer. The fire-house rang with the cheers of the visitors and the playing of the drum corps. The visitors appeared to be out for a prize in their spick and span uniforms. There were about a hundred men in the two companies.

Y., at a price which yields an income of nearly 5 per cent. to the investor. Descriptive circulars are given on application.

TUBERCULOSIS PAVILLION

White Plague Hospital to Be Erected Here at Once.

THE PLANS FOR CONSTRUCTION

A Finance Committee is Appointed by the Local Society—

Building Will Cost Approximately $1,700.

By the middle of next month the tuberculosis pavillion to be jointly conducted by the local Society for the Prevention and Relief of Tuberculosis and Muhlenberg hospital, will be ready to receive patients, and the work of its construction on Randolph road, near the hospital, is to be commenced at once. At the meeting of the society held Friday at Grace church parish house, final plans for the construction of the pavillion and its maintainance were discussed.

The new pavillion, which will accommodate eight patients, is to cost $1,700. It will front on Randolph road and will be fifty-six feet in length. The main building will be divided into three rooms, a central living room and dormitories on either side. The living room will be entirely walled in, although it will have several large windows, but the dormitories will be open to the air on three sides. Awnings for protection from sun and rain may, however, be lowered to form an outer wall. At the front of the building will be a broad piazza, extending its entire length.

In the rear of the pavillion, and connected with it by a passage-way will be another building, where will be kitchen and bath-rooms. This structure is to be formed of a small building already on the grounds, which will be moved into position. Miss Mamie Leahy, the city tuberculosis nurse, will be in charge of the pavillion, and will be assisted by several of the pupil nurses from the hospital, in the care of the patients. Hospital physicians will be in attendance.

The pavillion is to be constructed from modified plans of various similar pavillions constructed in other cities, and will be up to date in every particular. A. L. C. Marsh is to be the supervising architect, and last night was appointed a member of the building committee, headed by William B. Dutcher. Other members of this committee are Rev. E. Vicar Stevenson, Charles Holstein and Dr. B. Van D. Hedges.

Although the society has sufficient funds for the construction of the pavillion, between $1,500 and $2,000 is needed for its maintainance, and R. E. Melcher was last night named to head a finance committee, which comprises Duncan W. Taylor, William S. Tyler, Paul Nolting, Augustus V. Heely, Harry J. Cochran, Howard Tracy, George Holstein and Dr. W. H. Murray. This committee will hold a meeting next week to decide upon ways and means to raise the necessary fund.

MASTER OF THE TRAIFF.

One of the secrets of Aldrich's strength is his ability to charm and convince men at close range. It is an art which he has been practicing ever since upon graduating, says Robert Wickliffe Woolley in the July Van Norden Magazine, from an academy in East Greenwich, R. I., fifty years ago. He started on his business career as a grocery clerk in Providence. He is now in his 68th year and has announced that he will retire at the expiration of his present term, March, 4, 1911. Yet his eye is bright, his cheeks as ruddy and his step as springy as when he entered the Senate in 1881, successor of the late Senator Ambrose E. Burnside. His knowledge of statecraft is superb and his insight into human character was never so keen.

A fellow Senator may enter his committe room with all the avowed intention in the world to browbeat or bulldoze him, and Aldrich unhorses him with good humor before he has uttered three sentences. He may persist in a half-hearted way and even harangue for an hour or so, but that only helps in piercing him through and through, and he realizes all the while he has failed utterly in his mission. The cultured and courteous chairman of the powerful committee on finance is sizing him up for future reference—it matters not whether he be Democrat or Republican. If the visitor be of either the La Follette or the Rayner type, Mr. Aldrich simply smiles, tells a good story or so and is politeness personified, but he realizes also that man will be of little or no use to him. He can't be persuaded or convinced against his will. Let it be any one of a score of other Democrats or Republicans and the time of the Rhode Island Senator is most profitably spent, without dropping the slightest hint of the fact to his guest.

G. A. R. HEADQUARTERS AT THE STATE HOUSE

New Jersey veterans who served in the departments of the Union Army representing this State during the Civil War are to have permanent headquarters in room No. 26, on the second floor of the State House, Trenton. These accommodations have been obtained largely through the attention given the matter by Governor Fort, who was interested in the need of some permanent headquarters for the New Jersey departments, Grand Army of the Republic, by the present department commander, James F. Connelly, recently elected at the annual encampment.

The different State departments, Grand Army of the Republic, have been assigned permanent headquarters in the capitols or State Houses, in a very large number of the States in fact, in nearly all outside of the South.

For the last twenty years the Department of New Jersey, Grand Army of the Republic, has been seeking for headquarters in the State House at Trenton, and the most they received heretofore has been permission to send the valuable papers and books not in current use to the State House for storage in its cellars.

Latterly the reason assigned for non-compliance with the request of the Grand Army of the Republic has been that the State House was overcrowded.

Department Commander James F. Connelly, immediately after the encampment at Atlantic City, took up this very important matter with Governor John Franklin Fort, who has during the last winter done all in his power to bring to successful conclusion important Grand Army matters pending, in and out of the Legislature.

After two or three weeks of conference with the State House Commission Commander Connelly received last week advice from Governor Fort that at last he had been successful in obtaining a permanent home or headquarters for the Grand Army of the Republic, Department of New Jersey, in the State House, and that Room No. 26, on the second floor of that building, would hereafter be known as said headquarters.

While commenting on this matter the other day Commander Connelly said that he considered this of the highest importance to the Department of New Jersey, Grand Army of the Republic. Having had no permanent headquarters for the last forty-three years, and the department commander being chosen annually from different sections of the State, the vital records, which are necessarily turned over from one year to the other, have been mislaid in a large measure, lost or destroyed.

When these facts, were presented to Governor Fort, recognizing their importance, as in a few years the Grand Army will be an institution of the past, and the archives belonging to it will be of the highest value, he obtained the necessary headquarters, and to the Governor the members of the Grand Army are today throughout New Jersey expressing their best thanks and gratitude.

The importance of having some one place in New Jersey for the State's G. A. R. headquarters is apparent to all persons who realize the difficulty and trouble that veterans are often caused when verifying their records for a pension. Moreover, it is imperative that the records be kept in good condition.

The only complete copy of the annual reports, so far as known, is owned by the New Jersey Historical Society. As the G. A. R. was considered part of the military establishment of this State, the Legislature, some years ago, passed a law appropriating funds for printing annual reports, especially that of the encampment list of members and mortality list. It was planned for a full line of these yearly reports to be kept in the Adjutant General's office. But that office is short twelve complete sets, the copies covering the first twelve years of the G. A. R.'s existence.

The rapidity with which the ranks of the Civil War veterans are being decimated is another reason for affording them permanent place as headquarters. It is estimated that there are remaining today between 16,000 and 17,000 veterans of the War of the Rebellion in New Jersey.

THE WORLD'S FINEST STATUTES

The eminent French master, M. Auguste Rodin, thus writes: "It is very difficult to designate for you a single one or even three chefs-d'oeuvre as being the finest of all sculpture. To tell you the truth, I see rather three epochs, each of which is full of masterpieces. Amongst these masterpieces it hardly seems to me possible to choose one rather than another.

"All the antique is admirable and all the gothic and all the renaissance also; and in all countries and down to the nineteenth century inclusive.

"After that, save some rare exceptions of recent date, it is even more difficult to select anything as best."

CLERGYMEN'S VACATIONS

As the season for summer vacations approaches ministers of the local churches, who are just as human as the rest of us, are looking forward to their periods of recreation with anticipatory pleasure. Some of them will cross the briny deep and seek the cooling influences of the hills and vales of bonnie Scotland and the sterner atmosphere of Albion's sturdy isle, while others will invade the fastnesses of Canada's forests and the ever inviting beauties of the noble St. Lawrence.

Rev. E. V. Stevenson, of Grace P. E. church will leave next Saturday for Scotland and will be gone for two months. Rev. C. L. Goodrich, pastor of the Congregational church, expects to leave on the Teutonic of the White Star Line on August 14, and will return about September 11. On the trip he will visit the lakes in and about North Devon and will also take a trip through Scotland stopping at the various places in interest.

Rev. L. R. Howard, pastor of Hope chapel, will go to Ohio and spend about four weeks among friends. Rev. O. J. Shoop, of Grace M. E. church, will not absent himself for any length of time taking his vacation in days between Sundays, exchanging pulpits with fellow pastors. Rev. Dr. C. M. Anderson, of the First M. E. church, will leave for Stanhope, near Lake Hopatcong, about August 1, and will be gone a month and Rev. Dr. J. S. Zelie, pastor of the Crescent Avenue church, will go to Mount Desert, Maine, August 2, returning on September 15.

Rev. Dr. J. A. Chambliss, pastor of the First Baptist church is uncertain as to the date of his vacation, but expects to be away for a month or about August 1, and Rev. J. O. McKelvey, of Hope chapel, expects to leave during the first week in August for the St. Lawrence River and Canada, and will be away about four weeks. Rev. John Y. Brook will probably leave at the end of July and visit his mother in Grand Rapids, Michigan, being away until the end of August.

Rev. George A. Warner, of Holy Cross church, is now enjoying himself at Shute Island, and about July 8 will open up the boys' summer camp at Shusan, N. Y., which will remain open during July and August. Others of the ministers have no definite plans, but will take their vacations as the opportunity presents itself.

JOURNALISTIC OPINIONS

Succeeding Honestly.

In spite of Bishop McFaul's condemnation of American colleges, and especially of Princeton, Yale, Harvard and the University of Pennsylvania, those institutions will continue to live and and annually to do great good they have been doing for years.

The bishop says that the newspapers gave the color of sensationalism to his remarks at the commencement exercises of the College of St. Francis Xavier, and it is reasonable to suppose that this is the fact, because we would not expect a man of Bishop McFaul's knowledge to make the sweeping and manifestly incorrect statements that were credited to him.

There is no power great enough in this world to tear down the American colleges and universities referred to by the reverend gentleman. They are all teaching the basic principles of honesty and right living. Some instructors may have broad views. They may not be willing to accept the teachings of the orthodox church. They may feel safe in turning away from creeds and dogmas, but there is no evidence to prove that their teachings and their influence are weakening the moral fibre of the world.

Princeton, Yale, Harvard and the University of Pennsylvania are institutions of learning that have fitted thousands upon thousands of young men for the battle of life. They are institutions that have stood for years, and grown stronger as they have grown older. When the editor of the Cosmopolitan Magazine who appears to be an authority from the Bishop McFaul's point of view, declares that the hundreds of young men in the great colleges of the country it is being daily taught that the decalogue is no more sacred than a syllabus, that the home as an institution is doomed, that there are no absolute evils, that immorality is simply a contravention of socially accepted standards, that moral precepts are passing shibboleths, and that conceptions of right and wrong are as unstable as styles of dress, he may himself open to the reasonable suspicion evil that he is juggling the truth.

The home as an institution is not doomed. No reason ably can be given that it is doomed. It is a stronger institution today in this country than ever before. We doubt that there is a teacher in one of the four great educational institutions with the courage to stand up in a class room and declare that there are no absolute evils.

The American colleges are today doing men for the ministry and every other profession. They are sending men into every branch of commercial and industrial activity, and they are succeeding honestly.—Trenton State Gazette.

TO DEDICATE DUTCH REFORMED CHURCH'S NEW EAST END CHAPEL

Dutch Reformed Church.

The new Netherwod Reformed church, now erected at the corner of Midway and Leland avenues, one block east of East Second street, is the result of a decision reached only three months ago. Rev. John Y. Brook, of Trinity church, perceived both the need and the possibilities of this field, and immediately agitated the question of starting a congregation in that section of the city.

The idea met with unanimous approval and loyal support of the Classis of Newark, of which Trinity church is a member. Generous contributions were forthcoming. The North Refromed church of Newark, pledged $1,000; Clinton avenue, Newark, $500; Trinity Reformed church, of this city, $500; Reformed church of East Orange, $200, and Christ Reformed church, Newark, $100, and many smaller churches in proportion, until a sum was raised sufficiently large to purchase two large lots and the church building. The lots were purchased immediately, and an order placed with the Doerer Company, of New York, for one of their newly designed church buildings, of which they make a specialty.

Rev. Royal A. Stout.

It is original in design, a gem of modern architecture. Though a frame structure, and simple in erection, its stability is impressive, and its interior, with exposed rafters and natural wood finish is most inviting. Though apparently small, the building will comfortably seat 200.

The furnishings, through the timely and appropriate gifts of many friends, are in accord with the most refined taste. The furniture is dark oak, and the floor is to be carpeted in green. While there is no system of lighting as yet, the electric light will be used as soon as a feed wire is brought to the building. Neither pains nor money will be spared to make this a most attractive and appropriate place of worship.

During the summer, the main services will be on Sunday morning. Sunday school will convene at 9:45, and church will begin at 11 and close promptly at 12. All are welcome.

Rev. Royal A. Stout, who is active pastor of the church, is a graduate of Rutger College, and a senior in the Theological Seminary at New Brunswick. He has had much experience in establishing churches, having recently worked in similar enterprises in Oklahoma. He is a young man of much promise, and possesses the necessary push and enthusiasm essential for starting new enterprises. He will have charge of the work during the summer months and will continue in the some capacity during the winter. Already he has met with most encouraging success, and the prospects for a most flourishing work are exceedingly bright.

The Classis of Newark has decided to hold the dedication exercises of this chapel on Thursday evening, July 14, at 8 o'clock. The Classis will meet in special session and will attend the exercises in a body, thus having a most representative assemblage of ministers and elders present on this occasion. Ernest Saure, of Linden, N. J., president of the Classis, will preside. Rev. Albert von Schleider, of Montclair Heights, will read the scriptures. The prayer of dedication will be made by Rev. John Y. Brook. The sermon will be preached by Rev. James I. Vance, D. D., of the North Reformed church, Newark. Short addresses of congratulation will be made by Rev. J. Brownlee Voorhees, secretary of the Board of Domestic Missions; by Mrs. J. S. Allen, of the Women's Executive Committee, Elder Joseph S. Mundy, of the Clinton Avenue Rferomed church, Newark.

After the dedication exercises an informal reception and social will be held and refreshments will be served.

HALL CAINE AND THE PUBLISHER.

When Hall Caine went up to London to become Rossetti's housemate, he brought with his the MS. of a collection of lecturers which he had written while living in Liverpool, says Appleton's Magazine. Shortly after the poet's death, when ways and means had begun to present serious problems, somebody recommended that he should submit this *MS. to a certain great publishing-*house. He gives the following account of his first experience with a publisher:

At the door of the office I was told to write my own name, and the name of the person I wished to see, and to state my business. I did so, and the boy who took my message brought back word that I might leave my manuscript for consideration.

After waiting three torturing weks for the decision of the publishers, I made bold to call again. At the same little box at the door of the office I had once more to fill up the same little document. The boy took it in, and I was left to sit on his table, to look at the desk which he had been whittling away with his penknife, to wait, and to tremble. After a while I heard a footstep returning. I thought it might be the publisher or the editor of the house. It was the boy back again. He had a pile of loose sheets of white paper in his hands. They were the sheets of my book.

"The editor's compliments, sir, and—thank you," said the boy, and my manuscript went sprawling over the table. I gathered it up, tucked it as deep as possible into the darkness, under the wings of my Inverness cape, and went down-stairs, ashamed, humiliated, crushed and broken-spirited.
